The purpose of the act in the matter of appeals from the court of appeals of the District was to make a substantial change and to do away with them except in classes of cases of which this is not one. There seems to be little if any more reason for preserving a further appeal in cases then before the court of appeals than there is in those in which no writ had been sued out, but the cause of action had accrued before January 1, 1912, which is nothing at all. It must appear clearly, therefore, that this case is saved, or it will fall under the general rule. We find no clear expression of such intent. The general provision that the repeal shall not affect any right or suit is ambiguous, and is qualified and explained by the words, "including those pending on appeal," etc., which suggest that but for them appeals already taken would have fallen. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398, 25 L. ed. 231. If express words were thought necessary to save pending appeals, a fortiori such words were needed to save appeals not yet taken, and no such words were used. The first part of the section, declaring what shall not happen, is elucidated by the antithetical statement, in the last part, of what shall take place. We gather from that that all suits upon causes of action that arose before January 1 stand alike. We cannot suppose that a suit not yet begun can be taken to this court on the ground that a sum of more than $5,000 is involved, and we are of opinion that the applicant makes no better case. We agree with the court of appeals that the act saves jurisdiction when an appeal has been taken, but does not save an appeal for all suits in causes of action accrued before this year.

Leave to appeal and writ of error denied.

491] *AMERICAN SECURITY & TRUST COMPANY et al.,
v.
COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 491-495.)

Appeal — from District of Columbia courts — construction of Federal law.

Congressional enactments having general application throughout the United States, and not the purely local laws of the District of Columbia, are what are meant by the provision of the Federal Judicial Code, of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1087, chap. 231), § 250, for the appellate review in the Federal Supreme Court of judgments and decrees of the court of appeals of the District in cases in which the construction of "any law of the United States" is drawn in question by the defendant.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. —.]

Submitted April 15, 1912. Decided April 29, 1912.

PETITION for a Writ of Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, confirming an assessment in a street extension proceeding. Denied.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 32.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Johnson submitted the cause for the American Security & Trust Company et al.:

The words "any law of the United States" embrace the statutes the construction of which was drawn in question in this case.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts—see note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 51 L. ed. U. S. 269.

Century Dict. "Any;" United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 631, 4 L. ed. 471, 477; The Collector v. Hubbard (Brainard v. Hubbard) 12 Wall. 1, 15, 20 L. ed. 272, 276.

The distinction made by the court of appeals in its opinion, between general and local statutes, is, moreover, opposed to the decision of this court.

Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an application for a writ of error to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia under the new Judicial Code. Act of March 3, 1911, chap. 231. 36 Stat. at L. 1087, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128. The court of appeals denied the writ. Thereupon application was made to the Chief Justice. He referred it to the court. Briefs were called for and one was submitted by the applicants. It now is to be decided whether the writ should be allowed.

By § 250 of the Code any final judgment or decree of the court of appeals may be re-examined "in the following cases: . . . Sixth. In cases in which the construction of any law of the United States is drawn in question by the defendant." This is the clause relied upon. The case was a suit for the condemnation of land, brought by the commissioners under a special act of February 6, 1909, chap. 75, 35 Stat. [494 at L. 597, for the extension of New York avenue. By that act the procedure was to follow subchapter 1 of chapter 15 of the District Code, which provides, among other things, for the separate assessment of benefits. Act of March 3, 1901, chap. 854. 31 Stat. at L. 1189, 1266. The jury were instructed that, by the extension of the avenue, they were to understand its establishment, laying out, and completion for all the ordinary uses of a public thoroughfare. The applicants contended that, as there was no present provision for grading, paving, laying water mains or sewers, or otherwise opening the avenue to traffic, any advantage that would accrue from such improvements, if made, must be disregarded; and so they say that they drew the construction of the special act and perhaps of the Code in question, and that these were laws of the United States.

We do not stop to consider whether any question of construction properly can be said to have been raised, rather than a question of general law in the application of words that were colorless so far as the point in controversy was concerned. It might not be just to assume that the general averment of the application was not justified by exceptions more clearly turning on the construction of the local laws than the example given in the brief. The ground on which the writ was refused by the court of appeals was that the words quoted from § 250 should not be construed to apply to the purely local laws of the District, and with that view we agree.

Of course there is no doubt that the special act of Congress was, in one sense, a law of the United States. It well may be that it would fall within the meaning of the same words in the third clause of the same section: "Cases involving the constitutionality of any law of the United States." Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521. But it needs no authority to show that the same phrase may have different meanings in different connections. 495] *Some reasons for strict construction apply here. We are entirely convinced that Congress intended to effect a substantial relief to this court from indiscriminate appeals where a sum above $5,000 was involved, and to that end repealed the former act. See Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 179, 37 L. ed. 1041, 1043, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Cochran v. Montgomery County, 199 U. S. 260, 272, 273, 50 L. ed. 182, 188, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58, 4 Ann. Cas. 451. But all cases in the District arise under acts of Congress, and probably it would require little ingenuity to raise a question of construction in almost any one of them. If, then, the words have the meaning given them by the applicants, the appellate jurisdiction of this court has been largely and irrationally increased. We believe Congress meant no such result.

A well-known example of construing a statute not to include a case that indisputably was within its literal meaning, but was believed not to be within the aim of Congress, is Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 227, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; we may refer further to Cochran v. Montgomery County, ubi supra. In the case at bar, if the words "construction of any law of the United States" are confined to the construction of laws having general application throughout the United States, the jurisdiction given to this court by § 250 is confined to what naturally and properly belongs to it. If they are construed the other way, it would have been less arbitrary to provide that every question of law could be taken up. That they were not to be understood as the applicants contend is to be inferred not only from the sense of the thing, but from clause first: "In cases where the jurisdiction of the trial court is in issue," with provision for certifying that question alone. It is difficult to imagine a case in which the jurisdiction of the trial court is in issue where the construction of a special law of the United States would not be drawn in question.

Writ of error denied.

—
*HERNDON-CARTER COMPANY, [496
Appt.,
v.

JAMES N. NORRIS, SON & COMPANY

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 496-503.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below — service of process.

1. A decree of a Federal circuit court sustaining a plea to the jurisdiction may be brought to the Federal Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, by direct appeal, where the question presented involves issues of fact as to whether the corporate defendant was doing business in the state, and whether the person attempted to be served as agent was such at that time.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 908-911, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below — certificate.

2. A decree showing dismissal for want of jurisdiction only takes the place of the certificate required by the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, governing a direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of decrees of the circuit courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 919-937, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court — time.

3. A direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court in a case in which the lack of a certificate of jurisdiction is supplied by the decree which shows dismissal for want of jurisdiction only may be perfected after the term, if

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333; and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, post, 894.

On practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

As to service of process upon foreign corporations—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. 23 L.R.A. 490; Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 3; and Cella Commission Co. v. Bohlinger, 78 C. C. A. 473.

As to who is managing agent of foreign corporation for purposes of service of process—see note to Federal Betterment Co. v. Reeves, 4 L.R.A. (N.S.) 460.

within two years from the entry of the decree.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2545-2558, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Writ and process — service on foreign corporation — local agent.

4. Service of process upon a foreign corporation should not be quashed on the theory that when the attempted service was made the person served was not the corporation's agent, where the decided preponderance of the testimony is to the effect that, notwithstanding the prior formation of a partnership between him and certain of the officers of the corporation, which is claimed to have terminated his agency, he still remained the corporation's local managing agent, and continued doing business for it in the state.

[For other cases, see Writ and Process, 58-66, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 923.]

Submitted April 1, 1912. Decided April 29, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree sustaining a plea to the jurisdiction in a suit against a foreign corporation. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Helm Bruce submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. John H. Chandler and William B. Fleming submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case a suit was brought by the Herndon-Carter Company, a corporation of the state of Kentucky, against James N. Norris, Son & Company, a corporation of the state of New York. The bill of complaint sought an accounting and settlement of transactions between the parties, growing out of shipments of poultry from the Kentucky corporation to the New York Corporation, sold by the latter on commission. A subpoena was issued and served on March 10, 1911, upon James N. Norris, Son & Company by delivering a copy to W. J. Adams, as manager and chief agent, and the highest officer of the company in the district. The defendant company entered a special appearance, and filed an objection and plea to the jurisdiction, setting up that it was a corporation of the state of New York; that since December, 1904, it had not had any place of business in the state of Kentucky, and had not conducted any business in that state; that since that time it had had no agent in the state of Kentucky; and that W. J. Adams was not, at the time of the service of the writ, the manager and officer or agent of the defendant. The defendant averred further that for a little more than two years before the 1st of January, 1905, Adams was employed by it, and acted as its agent in Kentucky in the purchase and shipment of poultry and produce, but that, at the end of the year 1904, he severed his connection with defendant, and ceased to be its agent for any purpose whatever; that on January 1, 1905, Adams, James N. Norris, and William H. Norris formed a partnership, in which Adams had an one-half interest and James N. *Norris and William H. [498 Norris each a one-quarter interest, and that since the 1st of January, 1905, the partnership had conducted the business of buyers and shippers of poultry, butter, and eggs in Louisville and other parts of Kentucky.

Upon testimony, to be hereinafter referred to, the circuit court heard the parties upon the issues made by the plea to the jurisdiction and replication thereto, and concluded that Adams was not the agent at the time of the attempted service upon him as such, and that James N. Norris, Son & Company was not then doing business in the state of Kentucky.

The case is brought directly here under § 5 of the circuit court of appeals act of March 3, 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.] It is evident from a statement of the question made that it only involves issues of fact as to whether the defendant company was doing business in Kentucky, and whether Adams was its agent at the time of the attempted service. It is well settled that a question of this character may be brought to this court by direct appeal under the circuit court of appeals act. Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Commercial Mut. Acci. Co. v. Davis, 213 U. S. 245, 256, 53 L. ed. 782, 787, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

The appellee objects that the statutory requirement that the question of jurisdiction only shall be certified to this court was not complied with, and therefore the case should be dismissed. The record, however, discloses that the case was dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, and for that reason only. Where the decree of dismissal is in such form, it is sufficient to take the place of a certificate, within the requirements of the act. Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

It is further objected that, if the decree could be held to take the place of a certificate, the present appeal was not taken at the term during which the case was decided and *the decree of dismissal entered. The record shows that an appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals from the decree of dismissal entered at the March term, 1911, of the circuit court. It was there dismissed, and at the October term, 1911, another appeal was allowed from the circuit court directly to this court. This court has held that the jurisdictional certificate must be issued during the term at which the question is decided. Colvin v. Jacksonville, 158 U. S. 456, 39 L. ed. 1053, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 866; The Bayonne, 159 U. S. 687, 40 L. ed. 306, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185. It has also been held that the certificate being supplied by a decree in due form, showing dismissal for want of jurisdiction only, the appeal may be perfected subsequently, within two years, as are other appeals. Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. supra.

The appellee further contends that the record shows two decrees or orders,—an order quashing the service of summons, and, separately, a decree of dismissal for want of jurisdiction,—and this is said to be shown because the opinion of the court, sent up with the record, states the decision upon the question of quashing service of summons to have been first made. An inspection of the record shows but one final order or decree, which, at the same time, quashes the service of summons and dismisses the case for want of jurisdiction, and that is the decree appealed from, and which brings to this court the question of jurisdiction of the defendant.

It has frequently been held in this court that a foreign corporation, in order to be subject to the jurisdiction of a court, must be doing business within the state of the court's jurisdiction, and service must there be made upon some duly authorized officer or agent. St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Goldrey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 841, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513. We are therefore brought to review the correctness of the decision of the circuit court, holding that James N. Norris, Son & Company was not doing business in the 500] *state of Kentucky, and that Adams was not its agent at the time of the attempted service.

The substance of the plea to the jurisdiction, already indicated, is that, while Adams had previously been the agent of the defendant, he ceased to be such on the 1st of January, 1905, when the copartnership was formed between James N. Norris and

William H. Norris, officers of the defendant company, and Adams, and that thereafter he ceased to represent the corporation in Kentucky, and it ceased to do business in that state. To support this plea the defendant offered the affidavits of James N. Norris and William H. Norris to the effect that after January 1, 1905, the corporation did no business in Kentucky, and that the partnership then formed thereafter carried on the business in that state under the name of James N. Norris, Son & Company. The testimony of the bookkeeper was taken. She testified that she had been in the employ of James N. Norris, Son & Company for some time prior to January 1, 1905, and that at that date a change was made owing to the formation of the partnership. She further testified that the profits were divided on the books, but no settlements were made while she was with the firm; that she drew no checks for the distribution of the profits, and that there was no such distribution while she was with the firm, which was until December, 1908; that the books did not show the individual accounts of the various members of the firm; that Mr. Adams had an individual account, but she, the bookkeeper, did not keep it, Mr. Adams keeping it himself; that Mr. Adams was paid a salary, and that statements were sent to New York, giving the condition of the business. Mr. Adams was called as a witness and testified that he worked for the New York corporation prior to January 1, 1905, when the partnership was formed, and that since that time he had no connection with the New York company in any way, and was not, on the 9th of *March, 1911, its agent. Upon cross-[501 examination he testified that after January 1, 1905, and until the date of his examination as a witness, his relations to the house of James N. Norris, Son & Company had been the same, and that his relations to the New York corporation had not changed in any way since February, 1905.

To meet this testimony the complainant offered testimony tending to show that James N. Norris, Son & Company was sued in the Jefferson circuit court of Kentucky as a corporation of the state of New Jersey. The corporation appeared and answered that it was organized under the laws of New York, admitted that it executed and delivered a certain letter attached to plaintiff's petition, and marked "Exhibit A," dated June 25, 1907, the letter being written from Louisville, Kentucky, signed James N. Norris, Son & Company, by W. J. Adams, manager. In that action an affidavit for a continuance was filed on April 17, 1908, in which Adams deposed that the defendant, James N. Norris, Son & Company, was a corporation of New York, and that deponent was the manager of its Louisville office. On April 23, 1903, an amended answer was filed, which Adams verified, making oath that he was the local manager of James N. Norris, Son & Company. In the course of the action defendant took and filed a deposition in which the witness testified that he was the manager of James N. Norris, Son & Company at Bryan, Ohio; that in 1907 he lived in Louisville, Kentucky, and that Adams was then the manager of the Louisville district.

In another suit against James N. Norris, Son & Company, Inc., an answer was filed by W. J. Adams on December 12, 1905, and in verifying which Adams made oath that he was then, and at the time mentioned in the answer had been, the agent of the defendant in Kentucky, and had sole charge of its business in Jefferson county.

In an action brought by the corporation 502] in a magistrate's *court in Kentucky, certain dray tickets on a printed form were introduced in evidence, which showed them to be the tickets of James N. Norris, Son & Company, 135 E. Jefferson Street, Louisville, Kentucky, and that J. N. Norris was president, W. H. Norris, vice president and treasurer, and W. J. Adams, manager, the tickets being dated November 20, 1908, and January 1 and 4, 1909.

Letters were introduced in evidence in which the defendant company referred the plaintiff company to Mr. Adams for a settlement of differences. On July 7, 1909, the defendant company wrote to the plaintiff company as follows:

The Herndon-Carter Company, Louisville, Ky.

Gentlemen:—

I am just in receipt of your several letters in which you call attention to the unpleasantness you are having with our house in Louisville.

Now, I would like to make myself plain in this matter. As I have always stated to you and everyone else, there is never any good in fighting, but, on the contrary, lots of money lost and harm done. Our Mr. Adams, who runs our house in Louisville, has a certain interest in the profits, and it would be pretty hard for me to say that he shouldn't do this or that, which, in his judgment, curtails his profits.

Examining and considering the evidence tending to show that Adams, after the formation of the alleged partnership on January 1, 1905, continued to represent the defendant company in Louisville, we are forced to the conclusion that the decided preponderance of the evidence supports the complainant's contention that Adams was the authorized managing agent of the defendant company in Kentucky, and doing business for it in that state.

The learned judge of the circuit court reached the contrary conclusion, and his opinion is justly entitled to great weight; but it seems to proceed upon the theory that the testimony did not show the continuance of the *agency down to March[503 10, 1911, the time of the service of the subpoena. We think the testimony clearly shows that the relation of Adams to the defendant company was the same at that time as it had been when the various transactions, to which we have referred, were taking place in the years 1905 and the following. There could hardly be stronger testimony than the defendant's own letter of July 7, 1909, in which it is distinctly stated that "Mr. Adams, who runs our house in Louisville, has a certain interest in the profits," etc.

Reaching this conclusion, we are constrained to hold that the court below erred in quashing the return to the subpoena and in dismissing the case, and therefore the judgment must be reversed and the case remanded, with directions to overrule the order quashing the return and to set aside the decree denying the jurisdiction of the court.

Reversed.

GULF, COLORADO, & SANTA FE RAIL-WAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

W. R. DENNIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 503-509.)

Error to state court — scope of review — non-Federal question — changed condition.

1. The exercise of the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts extends to the inquiry whether, by some intervening event, the Federal questions presented have ceased to be material to the right disposition of the cause, and to the disposition of the cause in the light of that event.

[Scope of review on error to state courts, see Appeal and Error, 2070-2256, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — non-Federal question — changed condition.

2. The rule which ordinarily would confine the scope of review in the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error to an inferior state court, presenting questions of the validity, under the Federal Constitution, of a state statute under which an attorneys' fee was awarded to the successful plaintiff below, to the consideration and determination of the Federal question, does not preclude it from recognizing the changed situation produced by a decision of the highest state court pending the writ of error, by which the statute was adjudged invalid because the subject was not sufficiently expressed in the title, and from reversing the judgment so that the inferior state court may apply the decision of the highest state court by awarding a new judgment in conformity therewith.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Doekery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

[Scope of review on error to state courts, see Appeal and Error, 2070-2256, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 203.]

Submitted March 6, 1912. Decided April 29, 1912.

IN ERROR to the County Court of Milam County, State of Texas, to review a judgment awarding an attorneys' fee to the successful plaintiff in an action to recover damages for the killing of live stock by a railway company. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. W. Terry, Gardiner Lathrop, A. H. Culwell, A. B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action to recover damages from a railway company for the killing of a cow by one of its trains in Milam county, Texas. The case originated in a justice's court, and was carried by appeal to the county court, where the plaintiff obtained a judgment for $75 as damages and $20 as attorneys' fee. The attorneys' fee was awarded under a statute of the state (Laws of 1909, chap. 47) which the company insisted was repugnant to the due process of law and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The insistence was overruled and the company sued out this writ of error, the county court being the highest court in the state to which the case could be carried, considering the amount involved.

505] *Since the case was brought here the statute under which the attorneys' fee was awarded has been adjudged invalid under the state Constitution, by the highest court of the state, because the subject to which it relates is not sufficiently expressed in its title. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Loyd, 56 L. ed.

— Tex. Civ. App. —, 132 S. W. 899. Thus, the judgment of the county court and the later decision of the highest court of the state are not in accord. The former proceeds upon the theory that the statute is valid under the state Constitution, while the latter conclusively establishes that it is invalid. In these circumstances, what is the duty of this court respecting this matter of local law? Must we proceed upon the same theory as did the county court, or must we give effect to the later decision of the highest court of the state? If we take the latter course, and reverse the judgment for the attorneys' fee, the question of the validity of the statute under the 14th Amendment need not be considered; otherwise, it must be. The intervening decision does not in itself annul the judgment for the fee or prevent its enforcement, and so does not render the Federal question a moot one, unless it operates to place upon us the duty of reversing the judgment without regard to the merits of that question.

The case is still pending. The right to the attorneys' fee is still sub judice. It depends entirely upon the statute, and the highest court of the state has pronounced the statute invalid under the state Constitution. How, then, can we sustain the right or give effect to the statute? Should we not in this situation apply the settled rule, that the decision of the highest court of a state, declaring a statute of the state valid or invalid under the state Constitution, must be accepted by this court? If this were a criminal case wherein the accused had been convicted of a violation of a state statute, alleged to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, would we not give effect to an intervening decision of the highest court of the state, declaring the [506] statute invalid under the state Constitution? These questions may not be directly answered by the prior decisions of this court, but their right solution is more than suggested by the well-recognized rule of decision that when, during the pendency in an appellate court of an action for a penalty, civil or criminal, the statute prescribing the penalty is repealed, without any saving clause, the appellate court must dispose of the case under the law in force when its decision is given, even although to do so requires the reversal of a judgment which was right when rendered. United States v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103, 110, 2 L. ed. 49, 51; Yeaton v. United States, 5 Cranch, 281, 3 L. ed. 101; The Rachel v. United States, 6 Cranch, 329, 3 L. ed. 239; Vance v. Rankin, 194 Ill. 625, 88 Am. St. Rep. 173, 62 N. E. 807; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; Musgrove v. Vicksburg & N. R. Co. 50 Miss. 677; Montague v. State, 54

Md. 481; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Crawford, 11 Colo. 598; 19 Pac. 673; Sheppard v. State, 1 Tex. App. 522, 28 Am. Rep. 422; Kenyon v. State, 31 Tex. Crim. Rep. 13, 23 S. W. 191; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 469; 2 Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed § 286. In the first of the cases cited it was said by Chief Justice Marshall:

"It is in the general true that the province of an appellate court is only to inquire whether a judgment when rendered was erroneous or not. But if, subsequent to the judgment, and before the decision of the appellate court, a law intervenes and positively changes the rule which governs, the law must be obeyed, or its obligation denied. . . . In such a case the court must decide according to existing laws; and if it be necessary to set aside a judgment, rightful when rendered, but which cannot be affirmed but in violation of law, the judgment must be set aside."

We think what was there said is, in principle, applicable here. For while, on a writ of error to a state court, our province ordinarily is only to inquire whether that court has erred in the decision of some Federal question, it does not follow that where, pending the writ, a statute of the state or a decision of its highest judicial tribunal intervenes and put an end to the right which the judgment sustains, we should ignore the changed situation, and affirm or reverse the judgment with sole regard to the Federal question. On the contrary, we are of opinion that in such a case it becomes our duty to recognize the changed situation, and either to apply the intervening law or decision, or to set aside the judgment and remand the case so that the state court may do so. To do this is not to review, in any proper sense of the term, the decision of that court upon a non-Federal question, but only to give effect to a matter arising since its judgment, and bearing directly upon the right disposition of the case.

This view of the subject received practical recognition in the case of Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805. It was an action in a California court to recover half-pilotage fees allowed by a law of that state to a licensed port pilot whose services were tendered and declined. Objections of a Federal nature were interposed, but judgment was given for the plaintiff, and the case was then brought here. During its pendency in this court the legislature of the state passed a new statute, embodying the provisions of the prior law, with some modifications, and also in terms repealing it. The point was then made that the repealing clause terminated the right to recover, and therefore that the action could no longer be maintained. And while the question whether the simultaneous reenactment and repeal of the prior law interrupted its continuity was a question of local law, it was fully considered, and the conclusion was reached that in practical operation and effect there was no repeal, but only a continuance of the prior law, with modifications not there material, thus leaving the right to recover and the Federal questions unaffected. The latter were then considered, and, being found untenable, the judgment was affirmed. In a dissenting opinion, having the approval of three members of the court, it was maintained that the new act abrogated the prior law, thereby putting an end to the right to recover, and that in consequence the judgment should be reversed, with a direction to dismiss the action. Thus, the entire court proceeded upon the theory that it was necessary to inquire whether the intervening statute put an end to the right to the fees in question, and, if so, to give effect to the statute accordingly.

Almost from the beginning it has been the settled rule in this court that when, pending a writ of error to a lower Federal court, and without the fault of the defendant in error, an event occurs which renders it impossible, if the case was decided in favor of the plaintiff in error, to grant him any effectual relief whatever, the court will not proceed to a formal judgment, but will dismiss the writ. And in Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 43 L. ed. 932, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639, it became necessary to consider whether this rule was applicable to a case brought here on a writ of error to a state court. The question was resolved in the affirmative, and it was said:

"From the necessity of the case, this court is compelled, as all other courts are, to allow facts which affect its right and its duty to proceed in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, but which do not appear upon the record before it, to be proved by extrinsic evidence. Dakota County v. Glidden, 113 U. S. 222, 225, 226, 28 L. ed. 981, 982, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 653, 40 L. ed. 293, 294, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132. The reasons are quite as strong, to say the least, for applying the rule to a writ of error to a state court, on which the jurisdiction of this court is limited to Federal questions only, as to a writ of error to a circuit court of the United States, on which the jurisdiction of this court extends to the whole case."

We conclude that in the exercise of our appellate jurisdiction over the courts of the several states we are not absolutely confined to the consideration and decision of the Federal questions presented, but, as a necessary incident of that jurisdiction, are authorized to inquire whether, by some intervening event, those questions have ceased to be material to the right disposition of any particular case, and to dispose of it in the light of that event.

The present case is not one in which the writ should be dismissed, because that would leave the judgment to be enforced as rendered, which the intervening decision shows ought not to be done. Instead of being an obstacle to granting any effectual relief to the plaintiff in error, that decision constitutes in itself an all-sufficient ground for relieving it from the attorneys' fee, independently of the Federal question presented on the record; and for the reasons before stated we think it becomes our duty to vacate the judgment, so that the state court may apply the decision by awarding a new judgment in conformity therewith.

The judgment is accordingly reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

510] *STATE OF WASHINGTON EX REL. OREGON RAILROAD & NAVIGATION COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

H. A. FAIRCHILD, John C. Lawrence, and Jesse S. Jones, Railroad Commissioners of the State of Washington.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 510-533.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing — compulsory trackage connection.

1. An adequate opportunity to defend will not sustain, as affording due process of law, an order of a state railroad commission requiring trackage connections between competing railway companies for the interchange of business, if the order was arbitrary or unreasonable, and not justified by any public necessity.

[For other cases see Constitutional Law, 764-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — hearing — scope of judicial review.

2. Confining the scope of the judicial review of the reasonableness of an order of the state railroad commission requiring trackage connections between railway companies for the interchange of business to the testimony which has been submitted to the commission, as is done by Wash. Laws 1907, chap. 226, does not take the property of the carriers without due process of law, where the statute provides for a "full hearing" before the commission, at which the carriers may show that the order asked for, if granted, will be unreasonable.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 696-724, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — review of facts.

3. Whether or not as a matter of law, the facts proved show the existence of such a public necessity for trackage connections between competing railway companies for the interchange of business as authorizes a taking of property, is a question for consideration in the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court, in a case in which the order of a state railway commission requiring such connections is attacked as denying due process of law.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — compulsory trackage connections.

4. The places and persons interested, the volume of business to be affected, and the saving in time and expense to the shipper, as against the cost and loss to the carrier, must be considered in determining the reasonableness of, and the public necessity for, an order of a state railroad commission requiring trackage connections at certain points between competing railway companies for the interchange of business, which is attacked as taking property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — compulsory trackage connections.

5. No public necessity is shown which will justify, under the due process of law clause of the Federal Constitution, an order of a state railroad commission requiring trackage connections at certain points between competing railway companies for the interchange of business, where the commission acted without any evidence of inadequate service, with no proof of public complaint or of a public demand, with no testimony that any freight had been offered in the past for shipment between those points, or that any such freight would be offered in the future, and with no proof as to the volume of business at any of these points, nor the amount of freight that would be routed over the track connections

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to 56 L. ed.

Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

if they were constructed, and with no testimony as to the probable revenue that would be derived from the use of the track connections, or of the saving in freight or otherwise that would result to the shippers. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — compulsory trackage connections.

6. The insufficiency of the evidence before the state railroad commission to sustain, on the ground of public necessity, under the due process of law clause of the Federal Constitution, its order requiring trackage connections between competing railway companies at certain points for the interchange of business, cannot be supplied on judicial review by a presumption arising from the failure of the carrier to produce its records to disprove what had not been established, where the statute under which the commission acted confines the scope of the judicial review of the reasonableness of the order to the testimony which has been submitted to the commission. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 118.]

Argued December 18, 1911. Decided April 29, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Thurston County, in that state, dismissing a petition for the review of an order of the state railroad commission, requiring trackage connections between competing railway companies at certain points for the interchange of business. Reversed without prejudice to the institution of new proceedings.

See same case below, 52 Wash. 17, 100 Pac. 179.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

A statute of the state of Washington authorizes the railroad commission, upon complaint made, or on inquiry upon its own motion "after a full hearing . . . to order that additional trackage or sidings be constructed . . . and that additional connections be made."

In pursuance of this act, and by direction of the commission, the attorney general filed a complaint against the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, chartered under the laws of Oregon, the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Spokane & Inland Railroad, praying for an order requiring them to connect their tracks at Pullman, Colfax, Garfield, Oakesdale, Rosalia, Waverly, Thorton, Farmington, Connell, and Palouse. The complaint averred that four of these towns were important shipping points, and that at all of them there was a demand that cars should be transferred from one line to the *oth-[512 er, and a public necessity that track connection should be made between the roads at all these points. The Oregon Company filed an answer in which it denied that the towns named were important shipping points; denied that there was, or had ever been, any public demand for the interchange of business at any of the places, or that there was any public necessity for the connection.

At the hearing, evidence was introduced showing that the Spokane & Inland was an electric road not yet completed; that all the roads had the same gauge; that in three of the towns they crossed at grade; that in the others the tracks were generally on the same level, and separated by distances varying from a few feet up to 600 feet; that the connecting tracks would generally be on the right of way of the carriers, though in some instances it would be necessary to acquire other property by purchase or condemnation. There was evidence as to the price of switches and the cost per lineal foot of laying a track with two necessary connecting switches.

The principal witness on behalf of the state was an inspector of the commission, who testified that the three roads were competitors, and ran from Spokane through each of the towns named in the complaint; that wheat was the principal product of the country, and that it was shipped to Spokane or Portland, reached by each of the roads or their connections; that the main business of the towns named in the complaint was with Spokane; and that the business between local stations was small. From his testimony and a map it appears that, with the exception of Connell, all of the towns named lay in a strip about 50 miles long and 15 miles wide, one road on each side, with the Spokane running about half way between the other two; that the roads were generally parallel to each other, but by curves and branch lines reached these towns. In answer to specific inquiries he gave the route a car would take if shipped from named stations on one *line to named stations on another,[513 under present conditions; and said that if the connections were made and cars took that route, the distance would be shortened; and that if wheat, cattle, or other property was thus shipped to and from such stations there would be a saving in time and distance. He testified that he had no knowledge as to the amount of business done at any of the towns named, or that such shipments had been offered or would be made. He and the other witnesses on behalf of the commission testified that every purpose would be served if there was a connection between the various roads at one of the points named, some of them thinking Garfield the best point and others that it should be at Oakesdale, from which, it was said, the tracks radiated like the spokes of a wheel. It appeared that the Oregon already connected with the Northern Pacific at Garfield. The inspector and other witnesses were not asked specifically as to all points, but in answer to inquiries testified, without contradiction, that there was no necessity for connecting the tracks at Farnington, Thornton, Colfax, Waverly, nor at Garfield or Oakesdale except as indicated above.

The witnesses for the carrier testified that a connection at Garfield would accommodate all transfers that might be offered; that there had been no demand at any of the towns for such transfers in the past, and that there was no necessity for making them.

Only one shipper was called as a witness. He testified that a connection at Oakesdale would serve all purposes, but gave no information as to the amount of his freight business, nor the saving that would result to him or others if the connection was put in. No merchants or shippers from any of the towns named in the complaint, or referred to in the evidence, were called. There was no proof as to the volume of business at any of these places, nor as to the amount of freight that would be routed over these track connections if they were constructed. 514] Nor was there any *testimony as to the probable revenue that would be derived from the use of the track connections, or of the saving in freight or otherwise that would result to shippers. The inspector of the commission testified that these connections would develop very little business.

After the conclusion of the evidence, the commission dismissed the complaint as to Rosalia and Palouse, where the crossings were not at grade, and made an order in which it found that the roads crossed at grade at two points and ran in close proximity to each other through all the other places; that there was a public necessity for track connection, the cost of which, at each point, was stated, varying from $316 to $1,460, and aggregating about $7,000. It thereupon ordered that the companies should agree among themselves as to the particular places in said towns where the tracks should be laid, and how the expense should be divided, in default of which the commission would make a supplemental order designating the particular places where the connections should be made and the proportion in which the expense should be borne by each company.

The Oregon Company, being dissatisfied with this order, filed in the superior court of Thurston county a petition for review, alleging the unconstitutionality of the statute under which the order had been made, and also attacking its reasonableness on the ground that "there was no evidence showing or tending to show that there was any public demand or public necessity for such track connection, or for the interchange of freight at either of said points in carload lots . . . or that any public convenience would be subserved;" but, on the contrary, that the only evidence offered tended to show that there was no public necessity, and that it would be obliged to acquire additional property, and to incur large expense to make the connection, without any public necessity, and be thereby deprived of its property without compensation *and without due process of law, in[515 violation of the Constitution of the United States.

This method of attacking the order by petition for review was in compliance with the provisions of the Washington statute which declared that "the order of the commission shall, of its own force, take effect and become operative twenty days after notice thereof has been given. . . . And any railroad or express company affected by the order of the commission, and deeming it to be contrary to the law, may institute proceedings in the superior court . . . and have such order reviewed and its reasonableness and lawfulness inquired into and determined. Pending such review, if the court having jurisdiction shall be of the opinion that the order or requirement of the commission is unreasonable or unlawful, it may suspend the same . . . pending such litigation. . . . Said action of review shall be taken by the said railroad or express company within twenty days after notice of said order, and if said action of review is not taken within said time, then in all litigation thereafter arising between the state of Washington and said railroad or express company, or private parties and said railroad or express company, the said order shall be deemed final and conclusive. If, however, said action in review is instituted within said time, the said railroad or express company shall have the right of appeal or to prosecute by other appropriate proceedings, from the judgment of the superior court to the supreme court of the state of Washington, as in civil actions. . . . The action in review of such order, whether by writ of review or appeal or otherwise, shall be heard by the court without intervention of a jury. and shall be heard and determined upon the evidence and exhibits introduced before the commission and certified to by it. . . ."

The bill of exceptions recites that on the hearing in the superior court, the Oregon 516] Company offered competent *and non-cumulative testimony in support of its contention on the issues between it and the commission, which, if received, would have tended to show that there was no public necessity for such track connections at either of the places; that no public convenience would be served by making them, and that the cost, instead of aggregating $7,500, would be $21,000 (the amount at each place being specified), besides the expense of acquiring additional land and franchises needed for the construction and operation of the tracks. The court rejected all this evidence on the ground that, under the statute, the petition for review must be determined on the testimony which had been submitted to the commission. After argument the petition was dismissed and the Oregon Company excepted. All of the evidence introduced before the commission, and attached as an exhibit to its answer, was duly incorporated in the bill of exceptions, which also contains a recital that the photographs and maps identified by one of the witnesses had not been forwarded by the commission, nor were they considered by the court. There was, however, no motion by the defendant for an order requiring such omitted papers to be sent up so as to complete the record. Neither did it appear that any motion was made before the commission to require a more definite statement of the location of the proposed tracks.

The judgment dismissing the petition was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 52 Wash. 17, 100 Pac. 179. It held that the statute was valid; that it gave the defendant every opportunity to make its defense, and granted an adequate judicial review by which to test the validity of the order. In answer to the contention that the evidence showed that the order was unreasonable and amounted to a taking of property without public necessity, the court merely said: "As to the public necessity for the track connections, we are not pre- 517] pared to say that the *finding of the commission in that respect was not justified by the testimony." The cause was brought here by writ of error, in which it is contended that the Washington statute failed to furnish an adequate hearing or opportunity for judicial review, especially in prohibiting the submission to the court of competent evidence as to the unreasonableness of the order; and, further there was no evidence of a public necessity, and that the order was void as taking property without due process of law.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Cotton and Zera Snow, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

All regulation of the business of common carriers, whether taking the form of a regulation of rates or the making of track connections, must be reasonable; and the question of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of all such attempted regulation is essentially a judicial question, which, if not permitted by the law under which it is undertaken, constitutes the taking of property without due process of law, and amounts to a denial of the equal protection of the law.

Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 457, 33 L. ed. 970, 980, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 397, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 697, 43 L. ed. 858, 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 526, 42 L. ed. 819, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 172, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 18, 106 S. W. 960.

Section 3 of the railroad commission act of Washington, requiring cases to be heard by the courts only upon evidence taken before the commission and certified to by it, does not provide the necessary judicial review to constitute due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 107, 24 L. ed. 620; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 240, 41 L. ed. 986, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

The railway commission law is unconstitutional because of the excessive penalties which follow a refusal to comply with the commission's orders, rendering a compliance necessary rather than resort to the courts for a decision as to the validity and reasonableness of the orders of the commission.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

There was no public necessity or public convenience to be subserved by the track connections ordered; the order was an unreasonable and arbitrary exercise of bald power, and as such it constituted a taking of the property of the plaintiff in error without due process of law.

Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 S. W. 960.

When the question of the reasonableness of the regulation of a carrier is up for consideration, the evidence leading up to the regulation must be examined.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 172, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 S. W. 960.

Mr. W. V. Tanner, Attorney General of Washington, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Walter P. Bell and S. H. Kelleran, filed a brief for defendants in error:

It is no violation of the 14th Amendment that a state statute permits the property of an individual to be taken from him in an eminent domain proceeding, wherein the value of that property is fixed by a board of commissioners, and the decision of the commissioners upon the question of value is final, leaving open to the court reviewing the proceeding only the inquiry whether an erroneous basis was adopted by the tryers in their appraisal, or other errors in their proceedings.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 695, 41 L. ed. 1168, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

A state statute providing that benefits for street improvements may be assessed by the city council upon notice to the property owner, without any right of appeal to, or review by, the courts, does not violate the 14th Amendment.

Voigt v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Goodrich v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 432, 46 L. ed. 627, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397. See also Ross v. Wright County, 128 Iowa, 427, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 438, 104 N. W. 506; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56.

Due process is not necessarily judicial process.

Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372.

Nor is the right of appeal essential to due process of law.

Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. ed. 422, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The state legislature could not, if it would, deny to a railroad company, access to the Federal courts to set aside, by injunction or other appropriate procedure, a schedule of rates or a requirement of service or facilities which was so low, or otherwise so unreasonable, as to amount to confiscation of the property of the railroad.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The Washington act does not undertake to deprive the Federal courts of jurisdiction. It is true that if relief were sought in the Federal courts, the right of the court to review the order of the commission would be limited to an inquiry as to whether the rates were so low as to amount to confiscation.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

In order to determine the question as to whether the judicial review provided by the act in question satisfies the requirements of the 14th Amendment, it will be necessary to review the definitions of the term "due process of law," as used in that Amendment, and we confidently submit that after a consideration of those expressions of the courts, the courts will not hesitate to conclude that the act in question has not deprived and will not deprive the plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 107, 24 L. ed. 620; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516-537, 28 L. ed. 232-239, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230-236, 44 L. ed. 747-750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389-393, 40 L. ed. 467-469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 571, 38 L. ed. 269, 274, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701-708, 28 L. ed. 569-572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The commission's order requiring the Oregon Company to make track connection was not a mere administrative regulation, but it was a taking of property, since it compelled the defendant to expend money, and prevented it from using for other purposes the land on which the tracks were to be laid. Its validity could not be sustained 524] merely because of the fact that the carrier had been given an opportunity to be heard, but was to be tested by considering whether, in view of all the facts, the taking was arbitrary and unreasonable, or was justified by the public necessities which the carrier could lawfully be compelled to meet. For the guaranty of the Constitution extends to the protection of fundamental rights,—to the substance of the order as well as to the notice and hearing which precede it. "The mere form of the proceeding instituted against the owner, even if he be admitted to defend, cannot convert the process used into due process of law, if the necessary result be to deprive him of his property without compensation." Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 236, 41 L. ed. 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 416, 41 L. ed. 494, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130. So that, where the taking is under an administrative regulation, the defendant must not be denied the right to show that, as matter of law, the order was so arbitrary, unjust, or unreasonable as to amount to a deprivation of property in violation of the 14th Amendment. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 173, 44 L. ed. 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

2. This was recognized by the supreme court of the state, which held that this constitutional right was not denied, but that the statute furnished, first, an adequate opportunity to be heard before the commission, and then provided for a judicial review by authorizing the company to test the validity of the order in the superior court. Both of these rulings are assigned as error by the Oregon Company. It complains that the statute did not afford it the means of making a defense before the commission and yet required it to attack the reasonableness of the order on such evidence as it might have been able to produce before the administrative body. If this were true, the defendant's position would be correct, for the hearing which must precede the taking of property is not a mere *form. The carrier must have the right[525 to secure and present evidence material to the issue under investigation. It must be given the opportunity by proof and argument to controvert the claim asserted against it before a tribunal bound not only to listen, but to give legal effect to what has been established. But, as construed by the state court, all these rights were amply secured by the statute, which declared that the commission, "after a full hearing," might require track connection. On such investigation the company could have objected to the sufficiency of the complaint, and obtained an order requiring it to be made more specific as to the exact location of the proposed tracks. The defendant was given the benefit of compulsory process to secure and present evidence in its behalf. There was a provision to require the attendance of witnesses, the production of documents, and for the taking of testimony by deposition. It also had the right to cross-examine witnesses produced on the part of the commission, and the privilege of offering evidence on every matter material to the investigation.

3. The defendant insists, however, that, no matter how complete the right to be heard before the commission, the statute, having denied all other opportunity for testing the validity of the order in the state courts, furnished an utterly inadequate judicial review because, as the carrier could not anticipate what decision would be made, it was unjust to require it to produce evidence to show in advance the unreasonableness of an order the terms of which were not known. From this it argues that the statute was unconstitutional in so far as it prevented the court from receiving competent and noncumulative testimony tending to prove that there was no public necessity for making the track connection, and that the order was void.

This position would be true if the defendant had not been put on notice as to what order was asked for, and *then[526 given ample opportunity to show that it would be unjust or unreasonable to grant it. In this case, and under the statute, it was given such notice. The complaint alleged that some of the towns were important shipping points, and that at all of them there was a public necessity that the roads should be connected. The defendant denied each of these allegations. The hearing, both on the law and the facts, was necessarily limited to that issue. There could have been no valid order which was broader than that claim. The defendant was charged with notice that if the allegations of the complaint as to necessity were established, the order could then be lawfully granted, unless there was also proof that the cost, in comparison with the receipts, or other fact, made it unjust to require the connections to be made. The carrier was therefore given the right both to meet the charge of public necessity, and also to establish any fact which would make it unjust to pass the order for which the complainant prayed. The act further provided that after the administrative body had acted, the carrier should have the right to test the lawfulness and reasonableness of the regulation in the superior court, where every error in rejecting or excluding evidence, or otherwise, could be corrected. On that trial the court was not bound by the finding of fact, but, like the commission, it was obliged to weigh and consider the testimony, and to give full effect to what was established by the evidence, since it acted judicially, "under an imperative obligation, with a sense of official responsibility for impartial and right decision, which is imputed to the discharge of official duties." Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 115 U. S. 334, 29 L. ed. 417, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

4. Having been given full opportunity to be heard on the issues made by the complaint and answer, and as to the reasonableness of the proposed order, and having adopted the statutory method of review, this company cannot complain. It had the 527]right to offer all competent *testimony before the commission, which, in view of the form of proceedings authorized by the statute, acted in this respect somewhat like a master in chancery who has been required to take testimony and report his findings of fact and conclusions of law. The court would test its correctness by the evidence submitted to the master. Nor would there be any impairment of the right to a judicial review because additional testimony could not be submitted to the chancellor. The statute enlarges what this court has recognized to be proper practice in equity cases attacking such regulations. There the hearing is de novo, and there is no prohibition in equity against offering all competent evidence to prove that the order was unreasonable. But in Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 196, 40 L. ed. 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700, it was said: "We think this a proper occasion to express disapproval of such a method of procedure on the part of the railroad company as should lead them to withhold the larger part of their evidence from the Commission, and first adduce it in the circuit court. . . . The theory of the act evidently is, as shown by the provision, that the findings of the Commission shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that the facts of the case are to be disclosed before the Commission." See also Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 238, 239, 40 L. ed. 954, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 164 Fed. 649.

There is no claim here that the evidence rejected by the superior court was newly discovered, or that its materiality could not have been anticipated, or that for any reason the defendant had been prevented from submitting to the commission the testimony it offered in court to show that the cost would be $21,000 instead of $7,500. Nor was there any allegation of surprise, mistake, or other extraordinary fact requiring the admission of such evidence in order to preserve the right guaranteed by the Constitution. There is therefore no call for a decision as *to whether, under those[528 circumstances, such evidence should be admitted, or the case remanded, so that the commission might consider material and probably controlling testimony which the carrier, without fault on its part, had failed to submit on the first hearing.

5. If, then, the defendant had notice and was given the right to show that the order asked for, if granted, would be unreasonable, it has not in this case been deprived of the right to a hearing. That being so, it leaves for consideration the contention that, as a matter of law, the order, on the facts proved, was so unreasonable as to amount to a taking of property without due process of law. This necessitates an examination of the evidence, not for the purpose of passing on conflicts in the testimony, or of deciding upon pure questions of fact, but, as said in Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 591, ante, 565, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320, from an inspection of the "entire record including the evidence, if properly incorporated therein, to determine whether what purports to be a finding upon questions of fact is so involved with and dependent upon such questions of law as to be in substance and effect a decision of the latter." Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, ante, 594, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Graham v. Gill, 223 U. S. 643, ante, 586, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396. Here the question presented is whether, as matter of law, the facts proved show the existence of such a public necessity as authorizes a taking of property.

6. Since the decision in Wisconsin, M. &

P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115, there can be no doubt of the power of a state, acting through an administrative body, to require railroad companies to make track connection. But manifestly that does not mean that a commission may compel them to build branch lines, so as to connect roads lying at a distance from each other; nor does it mean that they may be required to make connections at every point where their tracks come close together in city, town, and country, regardless of the amount of business to be done, *or the number of persons who may utilize the connection if built. The question in each case must be determined in the light of all the facts, and with a just regard to the advantage to be derived by the public and the expense to be incurred by the carrier. For while the question of expense must always be considered (Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 174, 44 L. ed. 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336), the weight to be given that fact depends somewhat on the character of the facilities sought. If the order involves the use of property needed in the discharge of those duties which the carrier is bound to perform, then, upon proof of the necessity, the order will be granted, even though "the furnishing of such necessary facilities may occasion an incidental pecuniary loss." But even then the matter of expense is "an important criteria to be taken into view in determining the reasonableness of the order." Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 27, 51 L. ed. 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330. Where, however, the proceeding is brought to compel a carrier to furnish a facility not included within its absolute duties, the question of expense is of more controlling importance. In determining the reasonableness of such an order the court must consider all the facts,—the places and persons interested, the volume of business to be affected, the saving in time and expense to the shipper, as against the cost and loss to the carrier. On a consideration of such and similar facts the question of public necessity and the reasonableness of the order must be determined. This was done in Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, in which for the first time, it was decided that a state commission might compel two competing interstate roads to connect their tracks.

It appeared on an examination of the facts in that case that on one of the lines there was an immense supply of wood, for which there was a great demand at points on the other, where there was none, and that if the connecting track was installed there would be a saving in time and *freight on this large volume of business. It also appeared that many cattle were raised on one line, for which there were important markets on the other, and that without the track connection these cattle would have to be hauled over a much longer route, with a resulting loss in weight and value. The advantage to the public was so great that the order requiring the track connection was sustained, in spite of the fact that one of the roads was thereby deprived of the revenue which it would otherwise have received for the longer haul.

But the court said that—

"in so deciding we do not at all mean to hold that under no circumstances could a judgment enforcing track connection between two railroad corporations be a violation of the constitutional rights of one or the other, or possibly of both such corporations. It would depend upon the facts surrounding the cases in regard to which the judgment was given. The reasonableness of the judgment with reference to the facts concerning each case must be a material, if not a controlling, factor upon the question of its validity. A statute or a regulation provided for therein is frequently valid, or the reverse, according as the fact may be, whether it is a reasonable or an unreasonable exercise of legislative power over the subject-matter involved. And in many cases questions of degree are the controlling ones by which to determine the validity or the reverse of legislative action."

7. The complaint in this case was framed in recognition of this principle, and alleged that several of the towns were important shipping points, and that at all of them there was a public demand and a public necessity for track connection between the lines of the several roads. As there is no presumption that connection should be made merely because the roads are in proximity to each other, the burden was on the commission. If no evidence whatever had been offered, the order could not have been granted; or, *if granted, would necessarily have been set aside by the court on the hearing of the petition for review, because there was no proof of the fact on which only the order could issue taking the defendant's property. The same result must have followed if the testimony that was so submitted to the commission was insufficient to establish the existence of the public necessity alleged to exist. For, even if, under the statute, the burden was cast on the defendant when the petition for review came on to be heard, the company could, in view of the limited character of the proceedings permitted, successfully carry that burden by showing to the court that there was before the commission a lack of evidence to prove the existence of a public necessity. That it was bound to sustain the allegations of the complaint seems to have been recognized by that body, and witnesses in its behalf were examined as to the cost of laying the track, and also on the subject of the public demand and necessity. It was testified, however, without contradiction, that there was no necessity for connection at Waverly, Thornton, Farmington, or Colfax. They were not asked specifically as to the connections at all of the other towns, though there was proof of the general proposition that if the connections were laid, it would shorten the haul between given points in case goods were routed over these tracks. But as to the essential elements of a public necessity, there was nothing at all comparable to what was established in the Jacobson Case.

There the evidence of necessity was clear and convincing, it being shown that a large volume of business would be served and a great saving in rates effected and loss in value of cattle prevented if the two roads were united by a switch track. Here there is no evidence of inadequate service, no proof of public complaint or of a public demand, and no testimony that any freight had been offered in the past for shipment between the points named, or that any such freight would be offered in the future; nor was there 532] any evidence whatever as to the volume of freight that would use these tracks, or that the saving in freight and time to the shipper would justify the admitted expense to the carrier, whether that expense be $7,500, as found by the Commission, or $21,000, as claimed by the carrier.

Neither do the undisputed facts establish what appeared in Minnesota & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396, where, under the statute, the order was prima facie binding in so far as it required the company to build stations in towns and villages. The court found that this prima facie case had not been overcome, and that at the town named there was no station; that, in view of the increase in population since a prior refusal to grant the order, "it was necessary for the accommodation of the citizens of the town and vicinity, the public at large, and the public necessity required that the company should build and maintain a station house." But here there was no evidence whatever warranting a finding that there was any public necessity for the track connections.

8. The chairman of the commission dissented as to so much of the order as required connections to be made at Thornton, Waverly, Farmington, and Pullman, on 56 L. ed.

the ground that there was no evidence of any public necessity therefor at those points, and it would involve expense which would ultimately have to be paid by the people. And it is practically conceded here that the proof was insufficient,—the attorney general in his brief filed in this case saying that "it must be admitted that the testimony introduced before the commission as to the character of the traffic, and the nature of the traffic movement in the territory served by the lines of railway, is not of a very satisfactory or definite character." He argues, however, that there is nothing to show that the commission acted arbitrarily, and that the carriers ought to have produced their records for the purpose of showing that there was no need for physical connection at the place where the *commis-[533 sion was seeking to have been installed. That might have been true if the evidence was peculiarly within their knowledge, or if the company had been permitted to file a bill in equity attacking a final order in the usual and ordinary manner, without being restricted by statute as to the evidence that might be considered by the court. In this case the witnesses for the railroad confirmed what had been stated by those for the commission, and testified that there had been no demand for track connections, and that there was no necessity to put them in. The company was not permitted to offer additional testimony for the purpose of establishing its defense, since the statute declared that the validity of the order was to be determined by the court on what had been proved before the commission. The burden was on the commission to establish the allegations in the complaint. That body, as well as the carrier, was charged with notice that the reasonableness of the order was to be determined by what appeared at the hearing before it. The insufficiency of the evidence submitted to the commission could not, under this statute, be supplied on the judicial review by a presumption arising from the failure of the carrier to disprove what had not been established.

A careful examination of this record fails to show what, if any, business would be routed over these connections, or what saving would come to the public if they were constructed. There is nothing by which to compare the advantage to the public with the expense to the defendant, and nothing to show that, within the meaning of the law, there is such public necessity as to justify an order taking property from the company. The judgment is therefore reversed without prejudice to the power of the commission to institute new proceedings.

534] *MARY NIELSEN, Administratrix, etc., and in Her Own Right, Appt.,

v.

ALBERT STEINFELD et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 534-541.)

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — statement of fact.

1. A territorial supreme court does not discharge its duty under the act of April 7, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80), to make an adequate statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict, where it merely hypothetically assumes the findings of the trial court to be correct, and upon such mere hypothesis bases a judgment which reverses a decree for complainant below and remands the cause, with a direction to enter a final decree against such complainant.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, V. o., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — absence of statement of facts — rendering proper judgment.

2. The hypothetical assumption by a territorial supreme court of the correctness of the findings of the trial court, and the basing upon such mere hypothesis of a judgment which reversed a decree in favor of complainant below, and remanded the cause, with a direction to enter a final decree against such complainant, instead of discharging its duty under the act of April 7, 1874, to make a statement of the facts in the nature of a special verdict, calls for a reversal in the Federal Supreme Court, rather than the usual affirmance, where such action arose from the court's misconception as to the nature and extent of its power in discharging its statutory duty, and where the initial action by which the error was committed was ambiguously manifested, and may have misled the unsuccessful party, and the final order which made clear the court's intent and misconception was not entered until months after the appeal to the Federal Supreme Court had been taken.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. e., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 218.]

Argued April 17 and 18, 1912. Decided
May 13, 1912.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court of Pima County, in that territory, in favor of complainant in a suit to set aside a transfer of stock, with directions to enter a final decree in favor of defendants. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

872

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 381, 100 Pac. 1094.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edwin F. Jones argued the cause, and Mr. William Herring filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Mary Nielsen, individually and as administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, Carl S. Nielsen, commenced this action in 1905 in the district court of *Pima county, in the then territory [535 of Arizona. Albert Steinfeld and the Nielsen Mining & Smelting Company, now the Silver Bell Copper Company, were named as defendants. The relief sought was the setting aside of a transfer made by Nielsen to Steinfeld of 300 shares of stock in the Nielsen Company, and for a decree adjudging Mary Nielsen (who is the appellant), as administratrix of her husband's estate, to be the legal owner of the stock. An accounting from Steinfeld of moneys received by him as dividends on the stock was also prayed.

The cause was tried by the court, without a jury, and evidence, both oral and documentary, was introduced on behalf of the plaintiff and defendants. The trial court made elaborate findings of fact upon which it entered judgment against Steinfeld for $23,300, with interest, and the shares of stock in controversy were decreed to be the property of the administratrix. The defendants appealed to the supreme court of the territory. With the judgment roll there was filed in the office of the clerk of that court various exhibits of both plaintiff and defendants, and the reporter's transcript of evidence, copies of which papers so filed, it was recited, were omitted from the transcript by direction of the attorneys for appellants. (Steinfeld et al.)

What errors were assigned on the appeal to the supreme court of the territory do not appear in the transcript of record. It was conceded, however, in the argument at bar, by the counsel of both parties, that in the supreme court of the territory it was insisted, on behalf of the appellants (Steinfeld et al.), that the decree of the trial court should be reversed, not only because there was no evidence sustaining various findings of the trial court which were material to its decree, but also because, taking the findings to be sufficiently supported by proof, they were nevertheless inadequate to sustain the decree which had been based on them. It therefore may be assumed 536] *that the errors thus admitted to have been assigned in the supreme court are those referred to in the minute entry contained in the record, stating that a "motion and objection of the appellee to the consideration of assignments of error set forth and specified in appellants' brief" were denied by the supreme court.

224 U. S.

The supreme court reversed the judgment of the trial court, and remanded the cause, with directions to enter judgment for the defendants. (12 Ariz. 381, 100 Pac. 1094.) The opinion is preceded by what is denominated in the body of the opinion a statement of the facts. The statement begins with a brief recital of the nature of the controversy, the entry of judgment in the trial court, and the taking of the appeal; and after the declaration that "the court (trial court) found the facts as follows," there appears a literal copy of the findings made by the trial court. In the opinion which next follows it is first declared that it was "contended by the appellants that the facts found do not constitute legal fraud, and that therefore the court erred in not so finding, and in rendering judgment for the plaintiff and against the defendants, based thereon." A summary is then made of what were styled "the facts upon which the court predicated fraud in the purchase of the shares of stock of Nielsen," followed by the statement that "unless these facts constituted legal fraud, the judgment of the trial court cannot be sustained." The court then considers whether the facts so found amounted to legal fraud, and concludes its consideration of the subject by saying: "In our judgment the findings do not support the legal conclusion made by the trial court that such fraud was perpetrated by Steinfeld in the purchase of the stock, as to warrant the rescission of the contract and the recovery of the stock and of the dividends which have been received by Steinfeld thereon." It is then stated that "for this reason the judgment of the trial court must be reversed and the 537]case remanded, *with directions to the trial court to enter judgment for the defendants." The chief justice of the supreme court of the territory dissented in the following words:

"I dissent from the conclusion and the result reached by my associates in the foregoing opinion. I think the judgment of the trial court was correct."

A motion for a rehearing was denied on May 1, 1909, and on the same day the appeal now under consideration was allowed by the chief justice of the court.

On June 10, 1909, there was filed nunc pro tunc as of May 1, 1909, what was styled 56 L. ed.

in the journal entry "a certain statement of facts," in which, under the title of the cause, it was recited as follows:

"I, Edward Kent, chief justice of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona, do hereby certify that the supreme court of the territory of Arizona, having adjudged that the facts as found by the district court in this cause did not sustain the conclusions of law or the judgment of the district court, did, without passing in this court upon the corrections (correctness?) of the facts as found by the district court, remand this cause to the district court, with directions to that court to enter judgment absolute for the defendants.

"And on behalf of the said supreme court of the territory of Arizona, I do hereby certify to the Supreme Court of the United States upon the appeal herein, that the following were the facts as found by the district court upon which the said judgment of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona was based."

This certificate was followed by a reproduction of the findings made by the trial court, and the certificate concluded with the date of May 1, 1909, and the signature of the chief justice.

On June 12, 1909, a bond on appeal was duly filed. Five months afterwards, viz., on November 12, 1909, the following order was entered in the court below:

"*At this day, it is ordered by the 538 court that all former statements of facts filed in this cause in this court be, and the same are hereby, withdrawn, and a certificate of the chief justice in regard to statement of facts filed."

The certificate referred to appears in the transcript of record following a recital of the entry of an order enlarging the time for preparing and filing such transcript. Omitting the title of the cause, date, and signature of the chief justice, the certificate reads as follows:

"I, Edward Kent, chief justice of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona, do hereby certify that the supreme court of the territory of Arizona, having adjudged that the facts as found by the district court in this cause did not sustain the conclusions of law or the judgment of the district court, did, without passing in this court upon the correctness of the facts as found by the district court, remand this cause to the district court, with directions to that court to enter judgment absolute for the defendants, and therefore do not certify to the United States Supreme Court any statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict."

In the argument at bar it is urged on behalf of appellant—citing Stringfellow v.

Cain, 99 U. S. 610, 25 L. ed. 421, and William W. Bierce v. Hutchins, 205 U. S. 340, 51 L. ed. 828, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524,—that as the supreme court of the territory reversed the judgment of the trial court “for the reason that the facts as found are not sufficient to support the judgment,” the court below must be held to have adopted as its own the findings of the trial court, and therefore there is an adequate statement of the facts in the nature of a special verdict, as required by the act of Congress of April 7, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80). The appellees, on the other hand, relying upon the last certificate made by the chief justice on behalf of the court, direct attention to the fact that the court did not either adopt the findings of the trial court or make express findings of its own, since it simply accepted the findings made by the 539] trial *court for a limited purpose; that is, with the object of determining whether the findings, if hypothetically taken for true, were adequate to sustain the judgment which the trial court had based on them. It is not, however, suggested that this state of the record precludes a determination of whether the court below erred in deciding that, upon the assumption of the correctness of the findings of the trial court, they were inadequate to sustain its decree, but it is urged that under the circumstances, if it be deemed that the court below erred, it would be a gross injustice to reverse, with directions to affirm the judgment of the trial court, because thereby the appellants in the court below, the appellees here, would be denied a hearing on the contention urged in the court below that there was no evidence sustaining some of the essential findings of the trial court.

As it is obvious from the final action of the court below, as manifested by the last certificate of the chief justice, that the premise upon which the suggestions last referred to rest is well founded, it is clear that the court below made no statement of facts complying with its statutory duty. It is equally clear, under the circumstances stated, that although the appellees apparently do not expressly assert the inadequacy of the purported statement of facts to sustain our jurisdiction to review, in effect their contention is equivalent to that proposition. This is true because the result of the proposition insisted upon is to contend that the statement of facts which the court below accepted for a particular purpose is sufficient to enable a review of its action if the conclusion be that the court below did not err, but is not sufficient to justify correction of its action if it be found that error was committed.

The evident duty imposed upon the court below by the statute, as long since established and repeatedly pointed out, was to make a statement of the facts in the nature of a special verdict either by adopting as correct *the findings of fact made by[540 the trial court, or by making its own express findings,—a duty which was plainly disregarded by merely hypothetically assuming the findings of the trial court to be correct, and basing upon such mere hypothesis a judgment of reversal, with a direction to enter a final decree against the complainant.

The general rule is to affirm a judgment on an appeal from a territorial court where the record contains no exceptions to rulings upon the admission or rejection of evidence, and where there is an absence of the statement of facts required by the statute to enable the reviewing power to be exerted, and when there is no showing that the appellant has used due diligence to exact a compliance with the statute, so as to enable an appeal to be prosecuted. Gonzales v. Buist, 224 U. S. 126, ante, 693, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463. We are of opinion, however, that the facts of this case cause it to be an exception to this general rule. First, because the action of the court below was plainly the result not of a mere omission to perform its duty to make a statement of facts, but arose from a misconception as to the nature and extent of its powers in discharging that statutory duty,—a misconception not arising from any action of the party appellant here, and which in itself therefore intrinsically we think constituted reversible error. Second, because the initial action by which the error was committed was ambiguously manifested and may have misled the unsuccessful party. Third, because the final order which made it indubitably clear that the court intended to make no findings of fact, and deemed that, consistently with the right to review its action which was vested in this court, it had the power to decide the case upon a mere hypothesis as to the correctness of the findings of the trial court, was entered months after the appeal now before us had been entered.

Considering the whole situation, we think we must treat the case upon the theory that the court below committed *reversible[541 error in refusing to perform the duty imposed upon it by law, and the reversal of its decree because of such error will have the legal effect of causing the case to be as though it were yet pending undetermined on the appeal from the trial court. As, since the filing of the record here, the territory of Arizona has been admitted as a state, and the case before us is of a character which, by the terms of the enabling act (36 Stat. at L. chap. 310, § 33, p. 577), should be remanded to the supreme court of the state, our duty therefore is to reverse the decree of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona, and to remand the case to the Supreme Court of the State of Arizona for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

And it is so ordered.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
OZRO CASTLE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 541-546.)

Appeal — affirmance on motion.

1. A judgment of a Federal circuit court will be affirmed on motion, under Supreme Court rule 6, subd. 5, where the questions urged as a basis for reversal have been so plainly foreclosed by the decisions of the Supreme Court as to make further argument unnecessary.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VII. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — police power — modifying doctrine of contributory negligence.

2. The police power of the state justifies a statutory modification of the doctrine of contributory negligence by providing that such negligence on the part of an injured employee shall not be a bar to a recovery against the employer, where the employee's negligence was slight, and that of the employer gross in comparison, but that damages shall be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the injured employee.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 891-894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — privileges and immunities — injuries to railway employees — comparative negligence.

3. Railway companies are not denied the equal protection of the laws, nor are their privileges and immunities as citizens of the United States abridged, by Neb. Comp. Stat. chap. 21, § 4, under which the contributory negligence of a railway employee injured while engaged in train service will not bar a recovery from the company, where his negligence was slight, and that of the company gross in comparison, the damages being diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the injured employee.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 286-291, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — congressional inaction — comparative negligence.

4. Until Congress acted in the matter, there was no repugnancy to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution in the provisions of Neb. Comp. Stat. chap. 21, § 4, under which the contributory negligence of a railway employee injured while engaged in interstate commerce did not bar a recovery from the company, where his negligence was slight and that of the company was gross in comparison, the damages being diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the injured employee.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 68-79, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — invalid in part.

5. The validity of Neb. Comp. Stat. chap. 21, §§ 3, 4, in so far as they impose liability upon a railway company for an injury to an employee engaged in interstate commerce, arising from the negligence of a coemployee, and modify the rule of contributory negligence, is not affected because such statute also covers subjects dealt with by the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), such as acts of negligence of railway companies in respect of their cars, roadbed, machinery, etc. [For other cases, see Statutes, 61-88, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — diverse citizenship — foreign corporations.

6. A corporation originally incorporated under the laws of the state of Missouri, which admits in its answer the existence of

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwin, 6 L.R.A.; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On state regulation of relations between railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce and their employees—see notes to State v. Northern P. R. Co. 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 134, and People v. Erie R. Co. 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 240.

On statutes part valid and part invalid 56 L. ed.

—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 249; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 298; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, & N. Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtis, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; and McDonald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287.

On citizenship of corporation for purpose of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 3 L. ed. U. S. 36, and National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 27 L. ed. U. S. 87.

the diverse citizenship relied upon to support the jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court for the district of Nebraska over a suit against it, cannot successfully urge, to defeat such jurisdiction, that it had become a Nebraska corporation under the Constitution and laws of that state, as construed by its courts.

[For other cases, see Courts, 637-664, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 344.]

Submitted April 22, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action by a railway employee to recover damages from the railway company for personal injuries. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Balie P. Waggener submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The Missouri Pacific Company had become a domestic corporation in the state of Nebraska.

State ex rel. Leese v. Missouri P. R. Co. 25 Neb. 164, 41 N. W. 127; Winn v. Wabash R. Co. 118 Fed. 55; Fitzgerald v. Missouri P. R. Co. 45 Fed. 816; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Meeh, 30 L.R.A. 250, 16 C. C. A. 510, 32 U. S. App. 691, 69 Fed. 753.

If it appears from the record that the requisite diverse citizenship did not exist at the time of the institution of the suit, the circuit court was without jurisdiction to render a judgment against the defendant railway company, and to do so is reversible error.

Thomas v. Ohio State University, 195 U. S. 210, 49 L. ed. 163, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 28 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.) 151 U. S. 673, 689, 38 L. ed. 311, 317, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 98, 42 L. ed. 673, 675, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 62, 63, 48 L. ed. 870, 877, 878, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 177, 55 L. ed. 164, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

Will not this court take judicial notice of the fact, as disclosed by the Constitution and laws of Nebraska, and decisions of the supreme court of that state, that the Missouri Pacific Railway Company had no status in that state except as a domestic corporation, organized, created, and existing under the laws of that state?

Secombe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 23 Wall. 108, 23 L. ed. 67; Lamar v. Mi-

cou, 114 U. S. 223, 29 L. ed. 95, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 649, 24 L. ed. 1058; Börs v. Preston, 111 U. S. 255, 28 L. ed. 420, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Patch v. Wabash R. Co. 207 U. S. 277, 281-284, 52 L. ed. 204, 207, 208, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80, 12 Ann. Cas. 518; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606-610, 41 L. ed. 1132-1134, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703.

Congress, by its legislation on the subject of "safety appliances" on interstate trains, has certainly superseded the right of the state of Nebraska to legislate on the subject.

Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, ante, 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 618, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1090; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 231, 16 L. ed. 244; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 506, 24 L. ed. 554; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 23, 5 L. ed. 24; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20-27, ante, 72, 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 212, 40 L. ed. 945, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Second Employers' Liability Cases, 223 U. S. 1-53, ante, 327-347, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, ante, 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79.

The laws of the several states, in so far as they cover the same field, were superseded by the enactment by Congress of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, regulating the liability of interstate railway carriers for the death or injury of their employees while engaged in interstate commerce.

Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1-53, ante, 327-347, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Southern R. Co. v. Reid. 222 U. S. 424, 444, ante, 257, 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, 145.

A right of action or remedy founded solely upon a statute, or suit to enforce such remedy, not prosecuted to judgment, is determined by the repeal of the statute.

Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 937; Assessors v. Osborne (Gates v. Osborne) 9 Wall. 567, 19 L. ed. 748; District of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18, 36 L. ed. 60, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; United States v. Ranlett, 172 U. S. 133, 43 L. ed. 393, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Ex parte McCordle, 7 Wall. 514, 19 L. ed. 265.

Will it be said that the repeal of the statute by the legislature which enacted it would have been more effective as to existing causes of action under it than the suspension and superseding of the same act by Congress, which has, when it does act, exclusive power over the same subject?

Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Ritchie, 5 Wall. 541, 18 L. ed. 540.

The classification is arbitrary and unreasonable.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 152, 166, 41 L. ed. 667, 672, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Vanzant v. Waddel, 2 Yerg. 270; Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants (Dibrell v. Lanier) 89 Tenn. 497, 12 L.R.A. 70, 15 S. W. 95.

The Federal Constitution is the supreme law of the land, and state statutes, even when avowedly enacted in the exercise of the police power, must yield to that law.

Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194-206, 49 L. ed. 444-449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540-558, 46 L. ed. 679-689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 110, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 398, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 197, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302; Frank L. Fisher Co. v. Woods, 187 N. Y. 94, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 707, 79 N. E. 836; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 29 Am. St. Rep. 868, 10 S. E. 285.

If the statute, although enacted under the police power, in its operation amounts to a denial to persons within the state of the equal protection of the laws, it must be held to be unconstitutional.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540-559, 46 L. ed. 679-690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227-242, 16 L. ed. 243-247; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613-626, 42 L. ed. 878-883, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

An unwarranted and arbitrary interference with the property rights of the citizen renders the act unconstitutional and void.

Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 236-239, 49 L. ed. 169, 175, 176, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133-137, 38 L. ed. 385-389, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 19; Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L.R.A. 727, 35 Am. St. Rep. 152, 32 Pac. 874; Crescent Liquor Co. v. Platt, 148 Fed. 898; Hume v. Laurel Hill Cemetery, 142 Fed. 563; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 196, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302; State v. 56 L. ed.

Marble, 72 Ohio St. 33, 70 L.R.A. 835, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063, 2 Ann. Cas. 898; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395.

No right or privilege granted or secured by the Constitution of the United States can be withdrawn or impaired by the statute of any state, even though enacted in the exercise of the police power.

Crescent Liquor Co. v. Platt, 148 Fed. 898; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223-234, 49 L. ed. 169-174, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Frank L. Fisher Co. v. Woods, 187 N. Y. 94, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 707, 79 N. E. 836.

To justify the interposition by the state of the police power, it must appear that the interest of the public generally, as distinguished from a class, requires such legislation.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133-137, 38 L. ed. 385-389, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Hume v. Laurel Hill Cemetery, 142 Fed. 565; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 196, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302; State v. Redmon, 134 Wis. 89, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 229, 126 Am. St. Rep. 1003, 114 N. W. 137, 15 Ann. Cas. 408; Frank L. Fisher Co. v. Woods, 187 N. Y. 94, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 707, 79 N. E. 836.

Mr. T. J. Mahoney submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. J. A. C. Kennedy was on the brief:

The first section of the Nebraska statute is not in violation of the Federal Constitution, in that it makes a railway company liable to one employee engaged in train service for an injury inflicted through the negligence of another employee in the same service.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

The same reasons which justify a departure from the common-law rule in respect to the negligence of a fellow servant will likewise justify a similar departure in regard to the effect of contributory negligence in the same class of hazardous occupation, as the classification is identical in both instances.

Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

In the absence of Federal legislation un-on the subject, the enactment of such laws as this falls within the police power of the state.

Ibid.; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 473, 480, 482, 31 L. ed. 508, 510, 513, 514, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 99, 32 L. ed. 352, 353, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 146, 47 L. ed. 108, 113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Alleging himself to be a citizen of Nebraska, and averring that the railway company was a citizen of Missouri, Castle sued the railway company to recover for injuries received by him while in the service of the railway company as a brakeman upon a freight train operating in the state of Nebraska, the injury having been occasioned through the negligence of a coemployee. The right to recover under such circumstances was based upon a Nebraska statute adopted in 1907, consisting of two sections which are now §§ 3 and 4 of chapter 21 of the Compiled Statutes of Nebraska. The 1st section made every railway company liable to its employees who, at the time of the 543] injury, *were engaged in construction or repair works, or in the use and operation of any engine, car, or train for said company, for all damages which may result from the negligence of its officers, agents, or employees, or by reason of any defects or insufficiency due to its negligence in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, road-bed, ways, or work. The 2d section provided that contributory negligence shall not be a bar to recovery where the negligence of the injured employee was slight and that of the employer was gross in comparison, but that damages shall be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the injured employee. In its answer the railway company admitted that it was then, and was at all of the times mentioned in the petition, "a railroad corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Missouri," and set up that the injury to the plaintiff was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant or coemployee, and was also the result of the contributory negligence of the plaintiff. The validity of the 2d section of the statute was challenged because it deprived "of the defense of contributory negligence accorded to all other litigants, persons or corporations, within the state of Nebraska," and because the statute established and enforced against railroads a rule of damages not applicable to any other litigant in similar cases, whereby the privileges and immunities of the company as a citizen of the United States within the jurisdiction of the state of Nebraska were abridged, and it was denied the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the 14th Amendment. The repugnancy of the statute to the commerce clause of the Constitution was also averred, on the ground that "the plaintiff, at the time he received the injuries complained of, and engaged as an employee of an interstate railroad engaged in commerce between the states of Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska," and the statute of Nebraska "attempts to regulate and *control as well as create a cause of[544] action and remedy, imposing upon the defendant company a liability inconsistent with and repugnant to the action of the Congress of the United States on said subject."

At the trial the company excepted to the refusal of the court to give instructions embodying its contentions respecting the invalidity of the statute, and also excepted to the giving of certain instructions which were antagonistic to those contentions. From a judgment entered upon a verdict of a jury in favor of the plaintiff, this direct writ of error was sued out.

Defendant in error moves to affirm the judgment under subdivision 5 of rule 6. The motion, we think, should prevail, since the questions urged upon our attention as a basis for a reversal of the judgment have been so plainly foreclosed by decisions of this court as to make further argument unnecessary.

This court has repeatedly upheld the power of a state to impose upon a railway company liability to an employee engaged in train service for an injury inflicted through the negligence of another employee in the same service. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; and Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

Obviously, the same reasons which justified a departure from the common-law rule in respect to the negligence of a fellow servant also justify a similar departure in regard to the effect of contributory negligence, and the cases above cited in principle are therefore authoritative as to the lawfulness of the modification made by the 2d section of the statute under consideration of the rule of contributory negligence as applied to railway employees. The decision in the Mondou Case, sustaining the validity of the Federal employees' liability act, practically *forecloses all question as to the authority possessed by the state of Nebraska by virtue of its police power to enact the statute in question, and to confine the benefits of such legislation to the employees of railroad companies; and as, at the time the plaintiff received the injuries complained of, there was no subsisting legislation by Congress affecting the liability of railway companies to their employees, under the conditions shown in this case, the state was not debarred from thus legislating for the protection of railway employees engaged in interstate commerce. See the Mondou Case, supra, and Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

The circumstance that the Nebraska statute covers acts of negligence of railroad companies in respect to their cars, roadbed, machinery, etc.,—subjects dealt with by the safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174],—does not afford any substantial ground for the contention that the statute is invalid, in so far as it imposed liability for an injury to an employee arising from the negligence of a coemployee.

In the argument at bar, a contention is made which was seemingly not presented in the court below nor alluded to in the assignments of error; viz., that although originally incorporated under the laws of the state of Missouri, the railway company had, in law and in fact, become a domestic corporation in Nebraska under the Constitution and laws of that state, and was such domestic corporation when this suit was instituted; and in consequence the diversity of citizenship essential to the jurisdiction if the circuit court was wanting? In support of the contention, an allegation of the petition is quoted to the effect that the railway company owned and operated its road as well in the state of Nebraska as in the other states; and reference is made to a provision of the Constitution of Nebraska—§ 8, art. 1, Comp. Stat. (Neb.) 1905, pp. 74, 75—denying to a railroad corporation organized *under the laws of any other state or of the United States, and doing business in Nebraska, the power to exercise the right of eminent domain, or to acquire the right of way or real estate for depot or other uses until it shall have 56 L. ed.

become a body corporate, pursuant to and in accordance with the law of the state. Two decisions of the supreme court of Nebraska are cited, in one of which (State ex rel. Leese v. Missouri P. R. Co. 25 Neb. 164, 165, 41 N. W. 127), it is said it was decided that because of consolidations with domestic companies, the Missouri Pacific Company had become a domestic corporation in the state of Nebraska, and could therefore "acquire a right of way," etc. As to the other (Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co. 23 Neb. 243-249, 36 N. W. 502), the contention appears to be that the railway company was held to be a domestic corporation by force of the constitutional provision heretofore referred to. In the face, however, of the clear admission made in the answer of the railway company as to the existence of diverse citizenship, we cannot assent to the soundness of the claim now made, based on the contentions referred to. Certainly, in the absence of any issue on the subject, weight cannot be attached to the decision in 25 Neb.; and it is consistent with the constitutional provision to infer that the railway company, if it became a domestic corporation of Nebraska, did so by compulsion of the Nebraska statutes on the subject. Indeed, the contention is adversely disposed of by Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713, cited in Patch v. Wabash R. Co. 207 U. S. 284, 52 L. ed. 208, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80, 12 Ann. Cas. 518. In the Allison Case, the court, among other cases, referred approvingly to Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 104 Fed. 377, where it was held that a corporation originally created by the state of Illinois, although made by the law of Nebraska a domestic corporation of that state, was nevertheless a citizen of Illinois.

Judgment affirmed.

*AMERICAN RAILROAD COMPANY OF PORTO RICO, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ANN ELIZABETH BIRCH and Ernest Victor Birch.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 547-558.)

Parties — employers' liability — personal representative.

The widow and son of a deceased railway employee cannot bring in their own names the action for damages given by the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35

NOTE.—On parties in actions for death under foreign statute—see notes to Nelson v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 15 L.R.A. 585, and Boston & M. R. Co. v. Hurd, 56 L.R.A. 206.

Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), § 2, "to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband or children of such employee,"—especially in Porto Rico, where the distinction between heirs and personal representatives is recognized, and where there existed a local employers' liability act when the Federal statute was enacted, which gave a cause of action, if the conditions of liability existed, to the widow of the deceased, or to his children or dependent parents.

[For other cases, see Parties, I. a, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 224.]

Submitted April 24, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought by the widow and son of a deceased railway employee, under the employers' liability act. Reversed without prejudice to such rights as the personal representative may have.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill and F. L. Cornwell submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

While the purpose of the statute is doubtless remedial, and it is to be given a liberal construction consistent with its terms, to effectuate that purpose, there is no place for "construction" in the technical sense, because of the absence of ambiguity.

Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 419, 44 L. ed. 219, 221, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510, 521, 44 L. ed. 1170, 1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981.

It may well be that, in selecting the personal representative instead of the heirs of the deceased or the specified beneficiary as the proper party to bring the suit, Congress intended to mark the logical distinction between providing for the survival of a cause of action existing in the injured party up to the time of death, and for the creation of a new cause of action, arising in the representative from the moment of death. At least, that it does create a new cause of action seems plain.

Fulgham v. Midland Valley R. Co. — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 104 C. C. A. 151, 181 Fed. 91; Walsh v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 173 Fed. 494.

While we have found no decision of any Federal court construing this very statute since its enactment, decisions upon similar statutes are very pertinent.

Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Charman, 161 Ind. 95, 67 N. E. 923; Louisville & N. R.

Co. v. Trammell, 93 Ala. 350, 9 So. 870; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Osgood, 36 Ind. App. 34, 73 N. E. 285; Peers v. Nevada Power, Light & Water Co. 119 Fed. 400.

Mr. Willis Sweet submitted the cause for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for damages for the death, through the alleged negligence of plaintiff in error, of the husband and father of defendants in error, who are, respectively, deceased's widow and son.

The action was originally brought by Ann Elizabeth Birch. A demurrer was filed to the complaint, which was sustained in part, and the court directed counsel "to so amend the complaint as to show whether or not the plaintiff is the sole heir of the deceased, or, if she sues for the benefit of certain other heirs, then the complaint must specifically state the name of said other heirs, and state under what law the said action is brought."

An amended complaint was filed, alleging that the deceased, Francisco Abraham Birch, was, when killed, at his post of duty as brakeman on a train of the railroad which was running through the city of Aguadilla at a high rate of speed, and contrary to an ordinance of the city, in consequence of which speed and a defect in one of the wheels of the car the body of the car left the tracks and was thrown to the ground, crushing the deceased beneath it, and thus causing instant death.

It is alleged that a proper inspection of the wheels would have disclosed the defect in it, and, further, that if the train had been running within the limits of the requirements of the law, the train might and would have been stopped before the accident occurred.

At the time of his death, it is alleged, that the deceased was forty-seven years of age, was receiving $42 per month, was a skilled and efficient railroad employee, and was in vigorous health and strength. And it is alleged that his death was caused without negligence on his part, and while he was in the faithful discharge of his duty.

It is declared that the "action is based upon an act of Congress entitled, 'An Act Relating to the Liability of Common Carriers by Railroad to Their Employees in Certain Cases,' approved April 22, 1908." [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322.]

It is alleged that Ernest Victor Birch was poor in health and frail in body, and was dependent upon deceased for support.

Damages were prayed at $10,000.

The railroad company denied the specific allegations against it of speed and failure to inspect the wheels, alleged that they were inspected, and that no defects were visible or could be ascertained. It also put in issue the allegations of the complaint in regard to Ernest Victor Birch.

The answer alleged that no administration proceedings had been had on the estate of deceased, and that neither of the plaintiffs has been declared his heir, as required by law. It is also alleged that Ernest Victor Birch was over the age of twenty-one years, and that deceased was under no legal obligation to support him.

The case was tried to a jury upon evidence conflicting upon certain of the issues. There was no conflict as to the circumstances of the accident, the death of Birch in the line of duty, and that the accident was caused by a broken wheel, and that the train was not equipped with air brakes, but only with the ordinary hand brakes. There was conflict as to the speed of the train and as to whether the engineer in charge of the locomotive could see signals to stop, or whether he disregarded them.

The instructions of the court, so far as material, will be noticed presently in considering the assignments of error.

These assignments are: (1) The court erred in overruling the demurrer; (2) in denying the motion to dismiss the action and direct verdict on the ground that it had not been brought by the personal representative of the deceased, as required by the statute upon which it was based; (3) in holding that the heirs could sue in their own names; (4) in refusing to give the following: "That the court instruct the jury that the Federal act with regard to safety appliances has no application to the question at bar." And (5) in refusing to instruct the jury as follows:

"That they [the plaintiffs in action] are entitled to recover the actual compensation that they would have received if he [the deceased] had not been killed, and that would be limited to the purchase of an annuity for his recognized period of life."

These assignments are reducible to three propositions, to wit: (1) the capacity of plaintiffs to sue, (2) the application of the safety-appliance law, and (3) the measure of damages. Their discussion requires a consideration of the employers' liability law, as the amended complaint is based on that law. Section 2 of the act provides as follows:

"That every common carrier by railroad in the territories, the District of Columbia, the Panama canal zone, or other possessions of the United States, shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed *by such carrier in any of [554] said jurisdictions, or, in case of the death of such employee, to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee, and if none, then of such employee's parents, and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee, for such injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier, or by reason of any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, works, boats, wharves, or other equipment."

Section 3 includes the defense of contributory negligence, but requires the damages to be "diminished by the jury in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to such employee." But provides that contributory negligence is not to be attributable to the employee injured or killed "where the violation by such common carrier of a statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee." And by § 4, assumption of risk by the employee is also excluded in such case.

Such part of the instructions of the court as are necessary to be considered in connection with the act are, as given by the court, in effect as follows:

(1) The action is brought under the employers' liability act of Congress of April 22, 1908, which is in force in Porto Rico, the provisions of which are explained as set out above.

(2) The damages can only be compensatory, and the measure of them is what the plaintiffs or either of them necessarily lose in or by the death of their husband and father, and in measuring these damages the jury may take into consideration the age, health, and expectancy of life of the deceased, his earning capacity, his character, his mode of treatment of his family, and the amount contributed out of his wages to them for their support, and calculate from these facts the amount the jury, as reasonable *and practical men, believe the [555] plaintiffs lose because of the death. If the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, the damages should be diminished in proportion to such negligence; and if it be established by a preponderance of the evidence that the violation by the defendant of the law of Congress requiring safety appliances upon its trains and cars contributed to the death of the deceased, or was the proximate cause thereof, then the deceased cannot be held to have been guilty of contributory negligence nor to have assumed the risk, if the jury believe that the absence of safety appliances in and about the train contributed to or was the proximate cause of the injury.

The employers' liability act expressly applies to Porto Rico. It is, however, contended that the safety-appliance act does not. To this contention defendants in error answer that it is made a part of the former act by the provision of § 3 of that act "that no such employee who may be injured or killed shall be held to have been guilty of contributory negligence in any case where the violation of such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee." A similar provision is made in § 4 as to assumption of risk. These opposing contentions present a serious controversy. It is, however, really doubtful if they arise on the record. The charge in the complaint is that the deceased came to his death by being crushed under the body of a car upon which he was acting as brakeman, and that his death was "caused by the negligence of the defendant in failing to cause a proper inspection of the wheels" of the car, which "inspection would have discovered the unsafe condition of the wheel in question." As a further ground of negligence it was charged that the train was running at a high rate of speed, and that if it had been running within the speed "requirements of the law, the same might and would 556] have been stopped *before the accident occurred." To these charges the testimony was directed to sustain or deny. The amount of testimony as to contributory negligence and assumption of risk we should not think was worthy of attention if the court and counsel had not considered an instruction was called for in regard to them, and it may be that the question is presented of the application of the safety-appliance act to Porto Rico. However, we are not called upon to decide it, as we find a fatal defect of parties.

In the original complaint, defendant in error alleged that she was the widow of the deceased. To this a demurrer was filed, alleging as a ground that the complaint did not "state in what capacity" she sued. Thereupon an amendment was directed and made, as we have indicated. In the amended complaint she joined with her Ernest Victor Birch, alleging him to be the son and herself the widow of the deceased. By agreement of the parties the demurrer to the original complaint was considered as a demurrer to the amended complaint, and as such it was overruled.

The record shows that at the trial the plaintiffs presented, against the objection of the company, a certificate from the proper insular court "in which it was certified that the plaintiffs in the action were the legal heirs of the deceased." Subsequently the court, in passing on and overruling a motion of the company for direction of a verdict for it upon the ground that the suit was not "brought by any person authorized under the national employers' liability act to bring suit," said "that the suit being brought under the act of Congress of April 22, 1908, it is properly brought in the name of the only persons for whose benefit any recovery could be had, and it is the opinion of the court that the words used in § 2 of the act in question, 'to his or her personal representative,' cannot be construed to mean that it is necessary, in cases where only the husband or wife could inherit and are the only survivors, that they be forced, in the absence of any estate *belonging to the[557 deceased other than his right to sue, to have an administrator appointed."

But the words of the act will not yield to such a liberal construction. They are too clear to be other than strictly followed. They give an action for damages to the person injured, or, "in case of his death, . . . to his or her personal representative." It is true that the recovery of the damages is not for the benefit of the estate of the deceased, but for the benefit "of the surviving widow or husband and children."

But this distinction between the parties to sue and the parties to be benefited by the suit makes clear the purposes of Congress. To this purpose we must yield. Even if we could say, as we cannot, that it is not a better provision than to give the cause of action to those in relation to the deceased. In the present case it looks like a useless circumlocution to require an administration upon the deceased's estate, but in many cases it might be much the simpler plan and keep the controversy free from elements but those which relate to the cause of action. But we may presume that all contending considerations were taken into account and the purpose of Congress expressed in the language it used.

It is not denied that under the laws of Porto Rico there is a distinction between heirs and personal representatives. Indeed, defendant in error cites § 61 of the Code of Civil Procedure which recognizes the distinction. The section provides: "When the death of a person, not being a minor, is caused by wrongful act of another, his heirs or personal representatives may maintain an action for damages against the person causing the death." And defendants in error urge that the national act should be construed to give a like alternative right to heirs or personal representatives, although its language is different. The purpose of the national act, it is argued, as of the Code of Civil Procedure of the island, is to keep 558] the action "alive and beneficently" "to protect those dependent upon the employee as well as the employee himself;" and that therefore "a 'personal representative'" might act in the place of the deceased. But it is further argued that this was not the only purpose of the act. It had the purpose of giving to a defendant company the right to have its liability determined in one action, and that such liability would be secured whether executors or administrators sued or heirs sued. The reasoning is not very satisfactory and puts out of account the absolute words of the statute. And these take a special force in Porto Rico. An employers' liability act existed there at the time of the enactment of the national act, which gave a cause of action, if the conditions of liability existed, to the widow of the deceased or to his children or dependent parents. The national act gives the right of action to personal representatives only.

Judgment reversed without prejudice to such rights as the personal representatives may have.

EDWARD QUIGLEY McCAUGHEY and George Joseph McCaughey, Minors, by Their Guardian, Susan McCaughey, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

ALEXANDER LYALL, H. J. Finger, Mae Morton, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 558-563.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — parties — foreclosure suit — heirs of mortgagor.

Construing Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1582, to mean that the heirs are not necessary parties to a suit against the administratrix to foreclose a mortgage executed by the decedent, does not deprive such heirs, without due process of law, of the title which Cal. Civ. Code, § 1384, casts upon them upon the death of their ancestor.

[For other cases, see Constitutional, Law, IV, b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 228.]

Submitted April 19, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Santa Barbara County, in that State, sustaining a title to land derived through a sheriff's sale under a mortgage foreclosure. Affirmed.

See same case below, 152 Cal. 615, 93 Pac. 681.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Cyrus F. McNutt submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. William G. Griffith was on the brief:

The supreme court of the state of California has repeatedly held that upon the death of the ancestor the title to the real estate vests immediately in the heir.

Bates v. Howard, 105 Cal. 183, 38 Pac. 715; Re Woodworth, 31 Cal. 604; Chapman v. Hollister, 42 Cal. 463.

The general rule, as laid down in the authorities outside of California, is that in actions to foreclose mortgages after the death of the mortgagors, their heirs are necessary parties defendant.

Lane v. Erskine, 13 Ill. 501; Harvey v. Thornton, 14 Ill. 217; Stark v. Brown, 12 Wis. 573, 78 Am. Dec. 762; Zaegel v. Kuster, 51 Wis. 31, 7 N. W. 781; Johnson v. Johnson, 27 S. C. 309, 13 Am. St. Rep. 636, 3 S. E. 606.

It has been held that even where the mortgagor retains an equitable interest only, and the legal title is vested in the mortgagee, the heirs are necessary parties.

Fraser v. Bean, 96 N. C. 327, 2 S. E. 159.

It has been uniformly held in the state of California that where the mortgagor has parted with his title to the mortgaged premises, his grantee is a necessary party defendant, and that as against him the mortgagee can acquire no right or title by a proceeding in foreclosure and a sale under a decree therein, unless such successor has been made a defendant in the foreclosure proceeding.

Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 468, 76 Am. Dec. 540; Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 559, 76 Am. Dec. 561.

Surely such a proceeding as was here had cannot be regarded as due process of law as respects the heirs of the intestate.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 619; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 296, notes 3, 4; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 713; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Calhoun v. Fletcher, 63 Ala. 574; Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206; Clark v. Lewis, 35 Ill. 417; Garvin v. Daussman, 114 Ind. 429, 5 Am. St.

Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. 56 L. ed.

Rep. 637, 16 N. E. 826; Hyland v. Brazil Block Coal Co. 128 Ind. 335, 26 N. E. 672; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 313; Gilman v. Tucker, 128 N. Y. 190, 13 L.R.A. 304, 26 Am. St. Rep. 464, 18 N. E. 1040; Zeigler v. South & North Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 599; Brown v. Denver, 7 Colo. 305, 3 Pac. 455; Citizens' Horse R. Co. v. Belleville, 47 Ill. App. 388.

Mr. Alexander Lyall, in propria persona, submitted the cause for defendants in error:

In an action to foreclose a mortgage in the state of California, where the mortgagor has died since the execution of the mortgage, and an administrator has been appointed and qualified, it is not necessary to make his heirs or devisees parties.

McCaughy v. Lyall, 152 Cal. 615, 93 Pac. 681; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446, 34 Pac. 1085; Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 167, 24 Pac. 738; De La Ossa v. Oxarart, 58 Cal. 101; Dickey v. Gibson, 121 Cal. 276, 53 Pac. 704.

This doctrine has been so long adhered to as to become and be a rule of law of real property in the state of California, and to hold otherwise would be to unsettle the title to a vast amount of real property in the state of California and other states where a similar law prevails.

2 Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. p. 881; Neves v. Scott, 13 How. 268, 14 L. ed. 140; Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Lorman v. Clarke, 2 McLean, 568, Fed. Cas. No. 8,516; McClaskey v. Barr, 42 Fed. 609; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; D'Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 7 L. ed. 227; Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. 195, 10 L. ed. 123; Fitch v. Creighton, 24 How. 159, 16 L. ed. 596; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 627, 24 L. ed. 858; Mills v. Scott, 99 U. S. 25, 25 L. ed. 294; Van Norden v. Morton, 99 U. S. 378, 25 L. ed. 453; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 28 L. ed. 52, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 345, 37 L. ed. 475, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Bacon v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 131 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 128, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787; Telfair v. Stead, 2 Cranch, 407, 2 L. ed. 320; Carey v. Roosevelt, 81 Fed. 608; Hearfield v. Bridges, 21 C. C. A. 212, 44 U. S. App. 574, 75 Fed. 47.

Due process of law has been defined by this court to be its regular administration through courts of justice, by timely and regular course of proceedings, to judgment and execution. As a rule it includes parties, regular pleadings, and a trial according to the settled course of procedure.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 22 L. ed. 72, Pearson v. Yewdall, 95 U. S. 294-296, 24 L. ed. 436, 437; Parsons v. Russell, 11 Mich. 113, 83 Am. Dec. 728.

Where the law, for convenience in its administration, has furnished a representative of the interest in question, those so represented need not be made parties to the litigation.

1 Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. § 45; 2 Jones, Mortg. 3d ed. p. 415, § 1414; Harwood v. Marye, 8 Cal. 580.

The decision of a state court involving nothing more than the ownership of property, with all parties in interest before it, cannot be regarded by the unsuccessful party as a deprivation of property without due process of law simply because its effect is to deny the claim of ownership in such property.

Tracy v. Ginzberg, 205 U. S. 170, 51 L. ed. 755, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461.

Certainly when state courts act upon and according to a statute that has been in force for more than half a century, and upon their construction of such statute thousands of titles to real property repose, this court would certainly be very reluctant to hold such construction erroneous and in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error is directed to a judgment of the supreme court of the state of California, sustaining the title of defendants in error to certain lands in that state, derived through a sheriff's sale of the same upon suit for foreclosure of a mortgage. The suit was instituted and prosecuted against the administratrix of the estate of the father of plaintiffs in error, they not having been made parties nor given notice of the pendency of the suit.

The facts, as stated in the opinion of the court, are as follows:

"George McCaughy died intestate on March 1, 1890. The plaintiffs are his children and heirs at law. During his lifetime, on June 6, 1889, the deceased executed a mortgage on certain land to one H. J. Finger to secure a promissory note for $500, which was due and unpaid at the death of the decedent. After his death Susan McCaughy was duly appointed and qualified as administratrix of his estate.

The note and mortgage were duly presented to the administratrix and were allowed by her and approved by the probate judge. In January, 1894, Finger commenced an action against the administratrix to foreclose the mortgage, but did not make plaintiffs parties to such action. Such proceedings were had that a judgment of foreclosure was regularly rendered, under which the land was duly sold by the sheriff on April 10, 1895, to defendant Lyall, who in due time received a sheriff's deed therefor. Several years afterwards this present action was brought by said heirs to have 562] *it adjudicated that they are the owners of an undivided one half of the said land; that the claim of the defendants thereto be adjudged null and void; that plaintiffs recover the possession of the land, etc. A general demurrer to the complaint was interposed by the defendant Lyall and by other defendants. The demurrers were sustained; and plaintiffs declining to amend, judgment was rendered for defendants." [152 Cal. 616, 93 Pac. 681.]

The judgment was affirmed by department 2 of the supreme court, and a petition for rehearing in bank was denied. Thereupon the chief justice of the court granted this writ of error.

The contention of plaintiffs in error is that the law cast upon them the title to the land upon the death of their intestate ancestor, and that such title could not be divested in a suit in which they were not parties.

To sustain the contention, plaintiffs in error make, as we shall see, one part of the law of the state paramount to another part, certain decisions of the courts of the state paramount to other decisions, putting out of view that necessarily the co-ordination of the laws of the state and the accommodation of the decisions of its courts is the function and province of the tribunals of the state, legislative and judicial, respectively.

For their rights of property plaintiffs adduce § 1384 of the Civil Code of the state, which provides that "the property, both real and personal, of one who dies without disposing of it by will, passes to the heirs of the intestate, subject to the control of the probate court, and to the possession of any administrator appointed by that court, for the purposes of administration." And decisions of the supreme court are cited, holding, it is said, "that upon the death of the ancestor, the title to the real estate vests immediately in the heir." From the Code and the decisions it is deduced that the descent being cast at the instant of the death of ancestor, the "right of the heir is 563] *fixed by such positive law, and he 56 L. ed.

becomes invested with the measure of title which that law has fixed, and cannot be divested of such title without due process of law."

It is admitted that the heir takes subject to administration, but with that limitation only, it being contended further that "he holds precisely the title held by the ancestor." Section 1582 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the state is cited as defining the limitation. It provides that "actions for the recovery of any property, real or personal, or for the possession thereof, or to quiet title thereto, or to determine any adverse claim thereon, and all actions founded upon contracts, may be maintained by and against executors and administrators in all cases in which the same might have been maintained by or against their respective testators or intestates."

The supreme court of the state in a number of decisions has considered that section to mean that an heir is not a necessary party with the administrator. Cunningham v. Ashley, 45 Cal. 485; Bayly v. Muehe, 65 Cal. 345, 3 Pac. 467, 4 Pac. 486; Finger v. McCaughey, 119 Cal. 59, 51 Pac. 13; Dickey v. Gibson, 121 Cal. 276, 53 Pac. 704. This is conceded by plaintiffs in error, but they say that because § 1582 of the Code of Civil Procedure "is made the basis of the rule established by the supreme court of the state," they complain of it, and respectfully urge that it "is repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, § 1." This is equivalent to saying that the legislative power of the state, being the source of the rights and the remedies, has so dealt with one as to make the other repugnant to the Constitution of the United States; or, if the complaint be of the decisions, that the supreme court of the state cannot construe the laws of the state and make of them a consistent system of jurisprudence, accommodating rights and remedies. Both contentions are so clearly untenable that further discussion is unnecessary.

Judgment affirmed.

*FRANK H. WASKEY, Petitioner, [564
v.

J. J. CHAMBERS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 564-567.)

Real property—recording laws—subsequent purchaser—lease of mine.

1. A lessee in possession of a mining claim in Alaska under an agreement to work the same continuously, and pay over to the lessor a percentage of the minerals extracted, is a purchaser for a valuable consideration, within the meaning of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 321, 505, chap. 786), title 3, § 98, providing that every unrecorded conveyance of real property shall be void against any subsequent innocent purchaser, in good faith and for a valuable consideration, of the same real property or any portion thereof, whose conveyance shall be first duly recorded.

NOTE.—On lease as conveyance within meaning of recording statutes—see note to Eadie v. Chambers, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 879.

[For other cases, see Real Property, 91-103b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Real property — recording laws — what may be recorded.

2. A conveyance of a mining claim in Alaska is not entitled to registration under the act of June 6, 1900, title 1, § 15, title 3, §§ 82, 95, where it has but one witness, and the only acknowledgment was taken before an alteration, made by consent of the parties.

[For other cases, see Real Property, 55-62, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 221.]

Argued April 23 and 24, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the District of Alaska, in favor of the plaintiff in an action to recover possession of a mining claim. Reversed.

See same case below, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 879, 96 C. C. A. 561, 172 Fed. 73, 18 Ann. Cas. 1096.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Albert Fink argued the cause, and with Mr. W. H. Metson, filed a brief for petitioner:

When the deed was changed, whether surreptitiously by Chambers, as claimed by Whittren, or by mutual consent, as insisted by Chambers, the original acknowledgment failed, and even as between the parties, the deed became a new instrument, necessitating a new acknowledgment.

1 Devlin, Deeds, § 462; Coit v. Starkweather, 8 Conn. 293; Stiles v. Probst, 69 Ill. 382.

A deed not entitled to record is no record at all, even though in fact placed thereon.

Alaska Exploration Co. v. Northern Min. & Trading Co. 81 C. C. A. 363, 152 Fed. 145.

A lease is a conveyance of real property within the meaning of registry and recording acts.

Jones v. Marks, 47 Cal. 243; Johnson v. Stagg, 2 Johns. 510; Tuohy's Estate, 23 Mont. 305, 58 Pac. 722; Anderson's Law

Dict. "Lease;" Black's Law Dict.; 2 Bl. Com. 317; Greenleaf's Cruise, Real. Prop. 372, chap. 5, § 54; Archbold, Land & T. 2; Watkins, Conveyancing, 425; Webb, Record of Title, § 28, p. 62; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 85; Garber v. Gianella, 98 Cal. 527, 33 Pac. 458; Commercial Bank v. Pritchard, 126 Cal. 600, 59 Pac. 130; State ex rel. Winston v. Morrison, 18 Wash. 664, 52 Pac. 228; Spielmann v. Kliet, 36 N. J. Eq. 199; State, Shimer, Prosecutor, v. Phillipsburg, 58 N. J. L. 506, 33 Atl. 852; Flower v. Pearce, 45 La. Ann. 853, 13 So. 150; Paine v. Mason, 7 Ohio St. 199; St. Vincent's Roman Catholic Congregation v. Kingston Coal Co. 221 Pa. 349, 70 Atl. 839; Crouse v. Michell, 130 Mich. 347, 97 Am. St. Rep. 479, 90 N. W. 32; Milliken v. Faulk, 111 Ala. 658, 20 So. 594.

An antenuptial contract for conveyance of lands upon the death of the intended husband, to be void in the event of his surviving, was held a conveyance within the recording acts.

Aultman v. Pettys, 59 Mich. 482, 26 N. W. 680. See also Springfield Co. v. Ely, 44 Fla. 319, 32 So. 892; Cogan v. Cook, 22 Minn. 137; Gregg v. Owens, 37 Minn. 61, 33 N. W. 216; Corse v. Leggett, 25 Barb. 389; Bingham v. Frost, Fed. Cas. No. 1, 413; State Trust Co. v. Casino Co. 19 App. Div. 344, 46 N. Y. Supp. 492; Patterson v. Jones, 89 Ala. 388, 8 So. 77; Cawley v. Johnson, 21 Fed. 492.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors has been held a conveyance within the meaning of the insolvent laws.

Prouty v. Clark, 73 Iowa, 55, 34 N. W. 614; Weston v. Loyhed, 30 Minn. 221, 14 N. W. 892.

The term "conveyance," as used in an act authorizing a creditor to attack after judgment, was held to embrace an assignment of a chose in action.

Wilson v. Beadle, 2 Head, 510.

An assignment of a mortgage is a conveyance within the recording acts.

Larned v. Donovan, 84 Hun, 533, 32 N. Y. Supp. 731; Merrill v. Luce, 6 S. D. 354, 55 Am. St. Rep. 844, 61 N. W. 43; Burns v. Berry, 42 Mich. 176, 3 N. W. 924; Swasey v. Emerson, 168 Mass. 118, 60 Am. St. Rep. 368, 46 N. E. 426; Henniges v. Paschke, 9 N. D. 489, 81 Am. St. Rep. 588, 84 N. W. 350; Hull v. Diehl, 21 Mont. 71, 52 Pac. 782; Butler v. Bank of Mazeppa, 94 Wis. 351, 68 N. W. 998.

A certificate of an execution sale of lands is a conveyance within the recording acts.

Drake v. McLean, 47 Mich. 102, 10 N. W. 126.

The term "conveyance," as used in the recording acts, includes a real-estate mortgage.

Pickett v. Buckner, 45 Miss. 226; Merrill v. Luce, 6 S. D. 354, 55 Am. St. Rep. 844, 61 N. W. 43; Burns v. Berry, 42 Mich. 176, 3 N. W. 924; Odd Fellows' Sav. Bank v. Banton, 46 Cal. 603; Allison v. Manske, 118 Wis. 11, 94 N. W. 659.

Even the release or partial release or satisfaction of a mortgage has been held a conveyance within the recording acts.

Baker v. Thomas, 61 Hun, 17, 15 N. Y. Supp. 359; Bacon v. Van Schoonhoven, 87 N. Y. 446; Merchant v. Woods, 27 Minn. 396, 7 N. W. 826; Palmer v. Bates, 22 Minn. 532.

A valuable consideration may be other than the actual payment of money, and may consist of acts to be done after the conveyance.

Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754.

Two witnesses are necessary.

Hendon v. White, 52 Ala. 597; Lewis v. Herrera, 10 Ariz. 74, 85 Pac. 245; Merwin v. Camp, 3 Conn. 35; Watson v. Wells, 5 Conn. 468; Kenyon v. Segar, 14 R. I. 490; Allston v. Thompson, Cheves, L. 271; Spanier v. DeVoe, 52 La. Ann. 581, 27 So. 174; Summers v. White, 17 C. C. A. 631, 36 U. S. App. 395, 71 Fed. 106; Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. 577, 5 L. ed. 334.

Mr. Albert H. Elliot argued the cause, and, with Mr. George W. Rea, filed a brief for respondent:

As between the grantor and grantee of a deed to real property, if the deed is otherwise properly executed, but has only one witness to the signature of the grantor, the deed is valid and passes title.

Moore v. Thomas, 1 Or. 201; Fleschner v. Sempter, 12 Or. 161, 6 Pac. 506; Good-enough v. Warren, 5 Sawy. 494, Fed. Cas. No. 5,534; Dougherty v. Randall, 3 Mich. 586; Crane v. Reeder, 21 Mich. 24, 4 Am. Rep. 430; Price v. Haynes, 37 Mich. 489; Baker v. Clark, 52 Mich. 22, 17 N. W. 225; Fulton v. Priddy, 123 Mich. 298, 81 Am. St. Rep. 201, 82 N. W. 65; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 126 Mich. 217, 85 N. W. 577; Morton v. Leland, 27 Minn. 37, 6 N. W. 378; Conlan v. Grace, 36 Minn. 276, 30 N. W. 883; Johnson v. Sandhoff, 30 Minn. 197, 14 N. W. 889; Summers v. White, 17 C. C. A. 631, 36 U. S. App. 395, 71 Fed. 106; Adams v. Dennis, 76 Neb. 682, 107 N. W. 867; Robison v. Gray, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 1296, 97 S. W. 347; Leinenkugel v. Kehl, 73 Wis. 238, 40 N. W. 684; Howard v. Russell, 104 Ga. 230, 30 S. E. 802; Meuley v. Zeigler, 23 Tex. 88; McLane v. Canales, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 25 S. W. 30; Stirman v. Cravens, 29 Ark. 548.

56 L. ed.

An acknowledgment is a substitute for attesting witnesses.

Belk v. Meagher, 3 Mont. 65, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 522; Sharpe v. Orme, 61 Ala. 263.

Attestation was no part of the execution of a deed at common law, and, as between the parties or their privies, a deed was sufficient to convey title if (1) signed, (2) sealed, and (3) delivered.

2 Bl. Com. 307; Dole v. Thurlow, 12 Met. 164; Hepburn v. Dubois, 12 Pet. 345, 9 L. ed. 1111.

The owner of a leasehold estate in real property is not within the purview of the statute of frauds because he is not an innocent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration.

9 Cyc. 860; Edwards v. Perkins, 7 Or. 149; Jeffers v. Easton, E. & Co. 113 Cal. 345, 45 Pac. 680; Commercial Bank v. Pritchard, 126 Cal. 600, 59 Pac. 130; Summerville v. Stockton Mill. Co. 142 Cal. 539, 76 Pac. 243; Gear, Land. & T. § 2; Taylor, Land. & T. p. 59, § 51; Vattier v. Hinde, 7 Pet. 270, 8 L. ed. 682; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 554.

When alterations are made in a deed by consent, the deed takes effect from the subsequent delivery, and no new acknowledgment is necessary.

Webb v. Mullins, 78 Ala. 111; 2 Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, § 1354; Bassett v. Bassett, 55 Me. 127; Sharpe v. Orme, 61 Ala. 263; Woods v. Hilderbrand, 46 Mo. 284, 2 Am. Rep. 513; Greenl. Ev. § 568; Fulton v. Priddy, 123 Mich. 298, 81 Am. St. Rep. 201, 82 N. W. 65; Bacon v. Hooker, 177 Mass. 335, 83 Am. St. Rep. 279, 58 N. E. 1078.

A deed or other instrument under seal may be altered by consent of the party to be bound thereby.

1 Devlin, Deeds, § 460, and note; Speake v. United States, 9 Cranch, 28, 3 L. ed. 645; King v. Bush, 36 Ill. 142; Humphreys v. Guillo, 13 N. H. 385, 38 Am. Dec. 499; Collins v. Makepeace, 13 Ind. 448; Kennedy v. Lancaster County Bank, 18 Pa. 347; Kilkelly v. Martin, 34 Wis. 531; Stiles v. Probst, 69 Ill. 382; The Robert W. Parsons (Perry v. Haines) 191 U. S. 17, 48 L. ed. 73, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8; Martin v. Buffalo, 121 N. C. 34, 27 S. E. 995; Coburn v. Webb, 56 Ind. 96, 26 Am. Rep. 15; Swift v. Barber, 28 Mich. 503; Toomer v. Rutland, 57 Ala. 379, 29 Am. Rep. 722; North v. Henneberry, 44 Wis. 306; Woodbury v. Alleghany & K. R. Co. 72 Fed. 375; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 568A.

After title once passes, the grantee cannot be divested of his title by any alteration or even the destruction of his title deed.

Blewett v. Front-Street Cable R. Co. 49

Fed. 126; Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, § 1259.

The law presumes that an alteration appearing upon the face of a deed or other instrument was made prior to the execution of the deed; and the burden of overcoming this presumption is on the party attacking the instrument on account of the alteration.

Jones, Real Property in Conveyancing §§ 1359, 1360, note 4; Little v. Herndon, 10 Wall. 26, 19 L. ed. 878; Hagan v. Merchants' & B. Ins. Co. 81 Iowa, 321, 25 Am. St. Rep. 493, 46 N. W. 1114; Franklin v. Baker, 48 Ohio St. 296, 29 Am. St. Rep. 547, 27 N. E. 550; Wilson v. Hayes, 40 Minn. 531, 4 L.R.A. 196, 12 Am. St. Rep. 754, 42 N. W. 467; Van Hook v. Simmons, 25 Tex. Sup. 323, 78 Am. Dec. 573; North River Meadow Co. v. Christ Church, 22 N. J. L. 424, 53 Am. Dec. 258.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought by the respondent. Chambers, against Waskey and others, to recover possession of a placer mining claim and damages for gold extracted from the same. Waskey defended under two leases from the parties alleged by him to be the owners. The plaintiff had a verdict and a judgment which was affirmed by a majority of the circuit court of appeals (24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 879, 96 C. C. A. 561, 172 Fed. 73, 18 Ann. Cas. 1096). The facts 565] as they are to be taken under the *verdict are these: Whittren was the original locator of the claim. He made a deed of a part interest to Chambers, and acknowledged it on April 21, 1902, the notary being the only witness. In May, 1906, the deed was altered by consent of the parties so as to convey one half, and was filed for recording on June 20 of that year. On September 24, 1905, Whittren conveyed one half to Eadie, and this deed was recorded. On June 11, 1906, Whittren and Eadie, who were the record owners, made a lease of a part to Waskey for two years, recorded on August 22, 1906, and on June 20, 1906, Whittren made a lease of the other part to Eadie and Waskey, which was recorded on August 30, 1906. Waskey denied the validity of the deed to Chambers and also claimed as purchaser for value without notice. The circuit court of appeals held that the deed to Chambers was good as between the parties, and that Waskey was not within the protection of the statute as a purchaser without notice, and also that he gave no valuable consideration for his lease, these questions having been raised below by exclusion of evidence and instructions of the court.

The act of Congress reads: "Every conveyance of real property within the district, hereafter made, which shall not be filed for record as provided in this chapter, shall be void against any subsequent innocent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration of the same real property, or any portion thereof, whose conveyance shall be first duly recorded." Act of June 6, 1900, chap. 786, title 3, § 98, 31 Stat. at L. 321, 505; Code, pt. 5, § 98. The circuit court of appeals went on the ground that a lease creates only a chattel interest, and is not a conveyance, and therefore is not within the protection of the statute. But it is obvious that in principle the right of a lessee is the same as that of a purchaser in fee, and it would be a great misfortune, especially to mining interests, if a man taking a lease from those whom the record showed and he believed *to be the owners were liable.[566 after spending large sums of money on the faith of it, to be turned out by an undisclosed claimant, on the strength of an unrecorded deed. We find no words in the statute that require such a result. On the contrary, the word "conveyance" is defined, although for other purposes, as embracing every written instrument except a will by which any interest in lands is created. Act of 1900, title 3, § 136, 31 Stat. at L. 510, chap. 786; Code, pt. 5, § 136. See title 2, § 1046, 31 Stat. at L. 493, chap. 786; Code, pt. 4, § 1046. And the statute provides for the recording of leases, as well as of deeds and grants, act of 1900, title 1, § 15, 31 Stat. at L. 327, chap. 786; Code, pt. 3, § 15. Blackstone defines a lease as a conveyance, 2 Com. 317, and in Sheppard's Touchstone, 267. Leases are ranked under the head of grants,—“as in other grants.” The point does not need authority except to exclude the notion that the statute uses the word in a narrower sense.

It is said that Waskey was not a purchaser for value. By the lease of June 11 he agreed to enter at once and work the mine continuously, and to pay 30 per cent of the gold and precious minerals or metals extracted. The other agreement was similar, except that one eighth was to go to Whittren, one eighth to Eadie, and the remainder, after paying mining expenses, to be divided between Waskey and Eadie. His working the mine was a valuable consideration, and none the less so if in the event he was reimbursed for his expenditures and made a profit for his trouble.

Waskey was in possession and at work before the deed to Chambers was filed for recording, but we do not have to consider whether possession under the lease would have the same effect as getting the later instrument recorded before the earlier one, under § 98, above quoted. For although the deed to Chambers was filed before the leases, it had no effect as against people without actual notice. It never had but one witness, two being necessary to authorize *the recording of a deed, and the only acknowledgment was before the alteration. Therefore it was filed without authority, was not entitled to registration, and, as we have said, had no effect as against the petitioner. Act of 1900, title 1, § 15, title 3, §§ 82, 95, 31 Stat. at L. 327, 503, 505, chap. 786; Code, pt. 3, § 15; pt. 5, §§ 82, 94. Alaska Exploration Co. v. Northern Min. & Trading Co. 81 C. C. A. 363, 152 Fed. 145.

Judgment reversed.

MARY C. LEARY, Administratrix of James D. Leary, Deceased, Appt.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 567-576.)

Intervention — petition — sufficiency.

1. Allegations in a petition in intervention filed by the administratrix of the surety on a forfeited bail bond, that the decedent became such surety "upon the understanding and condition" that certain securities held in trust or on deposit by a third person should remain in the latter's hands as security and indemnity for signing the bond, sufficiently show a right to intervene in a suit by the United States to charge the holder of such securities with a trust in favor of the government, as against the objections that the petition does not negative the surety's ignorance of the facts claimed to raise the latter trust, and that, so far as appears, the asserted right of intervention rests upon an implied contract.

[Intervention generally, see Intervention, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — public policy — indemnifying surety on bail bond.

2. Public policy does not forbid an agreement under which the surety on a bail bond became such upon condition that certain securities held in trust or on deposit by a third person should remain in the latter's hands as security and indemnity for signing the bond.

[For other cases, see Contracts, IV. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the right of surety to intervene in action against principal—see note to Carlton v. Price, 68 L.R.A. 736.

On the validity of agreement to indemnify bail in criminal case—see notes to United States v. Simmons, 14 L.R.A. 78, and Carr v. Davis, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 58.

On statutes of limitation and lapse of 56 L. ed.

Laches — intervention — trust.

3. The right of the administratrix of the surety on a forfeited bail bond, asserting an express trust in the surety's favor in certain securities held by a third person, to intervene in a suit by the United States to charge the holder of the securities with a trust in favor of the government, is not barred by laches because the petition in intervention was not filed until the evidence in the suit had been taken and it was ready for final hearing, where such petition was filed shortly after judgment had been recovered in a contested suit on the bond.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 508.]

Argued April 29 and 30, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Virginia, refusing leave to file a petition in intervention in a suit by the United States to charge the holder of certain securities with a trust in favor of the government. Reversed.

See same case below, 107 C. C. A. 27, 184 Fed. 433.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. T. Coleman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. E. Strode and David McClure, filed a brief for appellant:

The circuit court of appeals had jurisdiction to allow the amendment.

Kennedy v. Bank of Georgia, 8 How. 586, 610, 611, 12 L. ed. 1209, 1218, 1219; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 61, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

In passing upon applications to amend, the ends of justice should never be sacrificed to mere form, or by too rigid an adherence to technical rules of practice.

Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 1141, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771.

An express contract to indemnify a person on his becoming bail for a prisoner charged with crime is not illegal and in violation of public policy.

Maloney v. Nelson, 144 N. Y. 182, 39 N. E. 82, 158 N. Y. 355, 53 N. E. 31.

The Federal courts are bound in the matter of taking bail in criminal cases, time as bar to enforcing trust—see notes to Prevost v. Gratz, 5 L. ed. U. S. 311; Thomas v. Brockenbrough, 6 L. ed. U. S. 287; Philippi v. Philippe, 29 L. ed. U. S. 336; Ducie v. Ford, 34 L. ed. U. S. 1091; Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co. 35 L. ed. U. S. 1029.

by the state laws, by express command of the statutes.

United States v. Rundlett, 2 Curt. C. C. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 16,208; United States v. Ewing, 140 U. S. 142, 35 L. ed. 388, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; United States v. Horton, 2 Dill. 94, Fed. Cas. No. 15,393; United States v. Evans, 2 Flipp. 605, 2 Fed. 147; United States v. Case, 8 Blatchf. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 14,742.

The public policy of a state with respect to contracts made within it, and sought to be enforced therein, is obligatory upon the Federal courts, whether acting in equity or at law.

Missouri, K. & T. Trust Co. v. Krumseig, 172 U. S. 351, 43 L. ed. 474, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

Mr. Marion Erwin, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Lehmann, filed a brief for appellee:

The intervention as pleaded sets up as to the alleged understanding or agreement of January 20, 1902, on which petitioner relies for relief, only an implied contract of a principal to indemnify bail in a criminal case, and is void as against public policy.

United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 729, 28 L. ed. 308, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196.

The intervention, if it can be construed to set up an express contract, sets up a contract by a principal to indemnify bail in a criminal case, and is unenforceable because against the public policy of the United States.

Ibid.

The facts pleaded do not create a legal or equitable lien on the stock in favor of Leary, or constitute an assignment of the fund, even in equity, and are within the rule laid down in:

Christmas v. Russell, 14 Wall. 70, 20 L. ed. 762; Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 447, 22 L. ed. 624; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 779; Third Nat. Bank v. Buffalo German Ins. Co. 193 U. S. 581, 48 L. ed. 801, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Thomas v. New York & G. L. R. Co. 139 N. Y. 163, 34 N. E. 877.

Denial of leave to intervene is not ordinarily appealable.

Credits Commutation Co. v. United States, 177 U. S. 311, 44 L. ed. 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; The Three Friends, 166 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 897, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

The pleadings in the original case as well as the state of the record required that the intervener claiming a right to the securities alleged to have been acquired from Greene in January, 1902, should have either put in issue the existence of the frauds alleged in the bill, or that the securities had been purchased with the funds of the government, fraudulently diverted, or set up that Leary acquired the alleged right in the securities as a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice of the trust existing in favor of the government.

Coffey v. Greenfield, 62 Cal. 602; Smith v. Gale, 144 U. S. 519, 36 L. ed. 525, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 506; Minot v. Mastin, 37 C. C. A. 238, 95 Fed. 739; Clapp v. Phelps, 19 La. Ann. 461, 92 Am. Dec. 545; Davis v. Sullivan, 33 N. J. Eq. 569; Empire Distilling Co. v. McNulta, 23 C. C. A. 415, 46 U. S. App. 578, 77 Fed. 703; Buel v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 44 C. C. A. 213, 104 Fed. 842.

It is not enough to say that Leary's claim is superior to the government's claim for that is a mere conclusion to be drawn or not drawn from the facts well pleaded.

United States v. Van Auken, 96 U. S. 366, 24 L. ed. 852; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416.

The failure of an intervener to make proper averments excusing gross laches apparent on the face of an intervention, as in the case at bar, is fatal.

Landsdale v. Smith, 106 U. S. 391, 27 L. ed. 219, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Smith v. Gale, 144 U. S. 509, 36 L. ed. 521, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 184 U. S. 450, 46 L. ed. 636, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Buel v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 44 C. C. A. 213, 104 Fed. 842; Continental Trust Co. v. Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. 82 Fed. 642.

Where the intervener treated her pleadings as final, and appealed from the order denying leave to intervene, even though her petition was without equity, so that if she had not appealed the adjudication would not have been final, yet it was proper for the circuit court of appeals to affirm the order of denial rather than dismiss her case for want of jurisdiction, because she had by election made the adjudication final.

Rothwell v. Dewees, 2 Black, 613, 17 L. ed. 309.

An express contract of a principal to indemnify bail is against public policy and the contract is void.

United States v. Simmons, 14 L.R.A. 78, 47 Fed. 577; Herman v. Jeuchner, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 561, 54 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 340, 53 L. T. N. S. 94, 33 Week. Rep. 606, 49 J. P. 502; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 172; 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 684.

Whatever may be the policy of particular states as to the administration of criminal laws, the public policy of the United States, as declared by the Federal courts, must control in the case at bar.

Missouri, K. & T. Trust Co. v. Krumseig, 172 U. S. 351, 43 L. ed. 474, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The magistrate in Federal cases must follow the state procedure for taking "bail," and not follow the state procedure for taking something else in lieu of bail, not directed to be taken by the Federal statute.

United States v. Burr, Fed. Cas. No. 14,694; United States v. Reid, 12 How. 366, 13 L. ed. 1025; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 301, 36 L. ed. 442, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for leave to intervene in a suit brought by the United States to charge the defendant Kellogg with a trust in respect of funds alleged to have been received by him from Greene, and to have been obtained from the plaintiff by Greene through his participation in the well-known Carter frauds. The funds specially referred to were certain shares of railroad stock standing in Kellogg's name, but held in trust for Greene. The nature of the alleged frauds can be gathered from United States v. Carter, 217 U. S. 286, 54 L. ed. 769, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515, 19 Ann. Cas. 594. See Greene v. Henkel, 183 U. S. 249, 46 L. ed. 177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218. The bill of intervention alleges the indictment of Greene, and that the plaintiff's deceased became surety upon Greene's bail bond "upon the understanding and condition that the securities held in trust or on deposit" by Kellogg from Greene, being the above-mentioned railroad stock, should remain in Kellogg's hands as security and indemnity to Leary for signing the bond. It goes on to allege Greene's failure to appear, a forfeiture of the bond, a suit upon it brought September 10, 1903, and a judgment for the United States against the intervener on January 6, 1908. Finally the bill sets forth that the United States not only has got an injunction pendente lite forbidding Kellogg to deliver the fund to the intervener to be used in partial liquidation of the judgment against her, but is pressing the collection 574] of the judgment; *and that the United States has no equity unless subject to that which the intervener claims.

This suit was begun on December 19, 1903. The evidence had been taken and it was ready for final hearing when the petition for leave to intervene was filed, April 18, 1908. But the action on the bond seems to have been contested, and no judgment was entered until January 6, 1908, as we have said. The circuit court intimated an 56 L. ed.

opinion that the bill of intervention was defective for want of an allegation that Leary, at the time of his agreement, did not know the facts alleged in the principal bill to raise a trust for the government, and also that, so far as appears, it might be brought upon a supposed implied contract, whereas no such undertaking of indemnity would be implied by the law, citing United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 729, 28 L. ed. 308, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196. But observing that the petition might be amended in these respects, it held that amendment would be unavailing, as the contract was against public policy and void. 163 Fed. 442. The circuit court of appeals, without deciding upon this last point, affirmed the decree on the above-mentioned ground that Leary's knowledge was not negatived, and also on that of laches, apparent and unexplained. 107 C. C. A. 27, 184 Fed. 433.

The result is that the petitioner is denied her chance to be heard for want of amendments which the court that might have allowed them told her that it was no use to make, as it was going to decide against her, whatever she did. Even if the court would have allowed them, which is a speculation, it is holding a party to very technical rules to say that while one case was being dealt with below, he ought to have contemplated having to meet a different one above. But we need not consider that matter, as we are of opinion that the bill, without amendment, showed a sufficient right to intervene.

We lay on one side the suggestion that the intervention goes only upon an implied contract in its proper sense of *an obli-575 gation raised by the law, irrespective of any real promise. That would seem to us a perverted interpretation of the words "upon the understanding and condition," even if the contract were only a general one to indemnify; but a contract that certain specific stock in the hands of a trustee should be held as security for a specific contingent claim could not exist unless it was express. It would be none the less express if it was conveyed by acts importing it than if it was stated in words. The point that Leary's knowledge ought to have been denied impresses us hardly more. The plaintiff has not the legal title, and is not claiming against an admitted prior equity as a purchaser without notice. Her position is that she does not know whether the United States has any equity or not, but that whatever rights the United States may have are inferior to hers. She is not called on to allege Leary's ignorance of facts that she does not admit and that are not yet finally established. We are of opinion that anyone reading the bill in the same way that he would read an untechnical document would have no doubt that the plaintiff meant to put her ease as we have taken it.

The only matters that seem to us to need argument are the questions of public policy and laches. As to the former, the ground for declaring the contract invalid rests rather on tradition than on substantial realities of the present day. It is said that the bail contemplated by the Revised Statutes (§ 1014, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716) is a common-law bail, and that nothing should be done to diminish the interest of the bail in producing the body of his principal. But bail no longer is the mundium, although a trace of the old relation remains in the right to arrest. Rev. Stat. § 1018. The distinction between bail and suretyship is pretty nearly forgotten. The interest to produce the body of the principal in court is impersonal and wholly pecuniary. If, as in this case, the bond was 576] for $40,000, that sum was the *measure of the interest on anybody's part, and it did not matter to the government what person ultimately felt the loss, so long as it had the obligation it was content to take. The law of New York recognizes the validity of contracts like the one alleged, and without considering whether the law of New York controls, we are content to say merely that the New York decisions strike us as founded in good sense. Maloney v. Nelson, 144 N. Y. 182, 189, 39 N. E. 82, s. c. 158 N. Y. 351, 355, 53 N. E. 31.

As to laches, there is no legal presumption that the petitioner knew of this suit, and still less that she knew the position taken by Kellogg. He set up that the stock was taken as indemnity to himself for his promise to indemnify Leary, etc., and said nothing about the petitioner's claim. If that claim is well founded and she knew of this suit, it was not laches in her to assume that Kellogg would do his duty as her trustee. She might be bound by a decree against him, but before decree, on discovering his conduct, she fairly may ask a chance to protect herself. Moreover, as she disputed liability on the bond, she had an additional reason for not moving until the case against her had gone to judgment. See Anonymous, 11 Mod. 2. On the whole matter it seems to us that she was dealt with too technically. She presents a case which, unless read with an adverse mind, is a good one on its face, and whatever misgivings we may entertain, we are of opinion that she ought to be allowed to try to prove it. In the circumstances it seems to us that the leave to intervene may be granted, subject to the condition that the evidence already in shall be taken to be evidence against her, subject to her right to recall and cross-examine such witnesses for the government as she may be advised.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Pitney dissent.

*TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY[577 COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

W. A. HOWELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 577-583.)

Appeal — from circuit court — negligence suit — reversible error.

1. Plain error alone will justify the Federal Supreme Court in reversing a judgment of a circuit court of appeals in a personal-injury case which is brought to the Supreme Court solely on the ground that the defendant corporation has a charter from the United States.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — reversible error — submission to jury — instructions.

2. No reversible error is committed in leaving to the jury an action for personal injuries sustained by an employee from a falling timber, while he was digging a post hole under a coal chute and other employees were tearing up the floor above him, with instructions that if the injury was due to the negligence of the master in sending men to work above the employee, as a contributing cause, the master was liable, but not if the injury was due only to the negligence of fellow servants in their way of performing their work.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5071-5143, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — proximate cause — disease.

3. A jury is warranted in finding that tuberculosis of the spine is the direct result of an injury from a falling timber, where there was ample evidence that the blow occasioned the development of the disease, though it was not discovered to be such for over a year.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XII. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 947.]

Submitted April 22, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

NOTE.—On appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On servant's assumption of risk from changing condition of the working place during progress of work—see note to Citron v. O'Rourke Engineering Constr. Co. 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 340.

As to master's duty to provide safe place to work—see notes to Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 40 L. ed. U. S. 767; and Union P. R. Co. v. James, 41 L. ed. U. S. 236.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Texas in favor of plaintiff in an action against a railway company to recover damages for personal injuries received by an employee. Affirmed.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 674, 191 Fed. 1006.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William L. Hall submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiff failed to make out a case of negligence on the part of the defendant, and the jury should have been so instructed.

Bishop. Non-Contract Law, § 649; Koontz v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 65 Iowa, 224, 54 Am. Rep. 5, 21 N. W. 577; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Alexander, 103 Tex. 594, 132 S. W. 119.

The rule requiring a railroad company to furnish a safe place for their employees to work has no application to a case where laborers are sent to repair a defective structure, such as a coal chute.

Labatt, Mast. & S. § 269; Schneider v. Philadelphia Quartz Co. 220 Pa. 548, 69 Atl. 1035; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Brown, 20 C. C. A. 147, 34 U. S. App. 759, 73 Fed. 970; American Bridge Co. v. Seeds, 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1041, 75 C. C. A. 407, 144 Fed. 605; Fortin v. Manville Co. 128 Fed. 642; Montgomery v. Robertson, 229 Ill. 466, 82 N. E. 396; Bedford Quarries Co. v. Bough, 168 Ind. 671, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 418, 80 N. E. 529; Meehan v. St. Louis, M. & S. E. R. Co. 114 Mo. App. 396, 90 S. W. 102; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Jackson, 12 C. C. A. 507, 27 U. S. App. 519, 65 Fed. 48; Moore v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 167 Pa. 495, 31 Atl. 734; Richardson v. Anglo-American Provision Co. 72 Ill. App. 77; McNeill v. Bottsford-Dickinson Co. 128 App. Div. 544, 112 N. Y. Supp. 867; Clark v. Liston, 54 Ill. App. 578; Kreigh v. Westinghouse, C. K. & Co. 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 684, 81 C. C. A. 338, 152 Fed. 120; McElwaine-Richards Co. v. Wall, 166 Ind. 267, 76 N. E. 408; Armour v. Hahn, 111 U. S. 313, 28 L. ed. 440, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Armour & Co. v. Dumas, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 36, 95 S. W. 710; Allen v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 344, 37 S. W. 171; Walton v. Bryn Mawr Hotel Co. 160 Pa. 3, 28 Atl. 438; Clancy v. Guaranty Constr. Co. 25 App. Div. 355, 50 N. Y. Supp. 800; Walaszewski v. Schoknecht, 127 Wis. 376, 106 N. W. 1070; 2 Bailey, Personal Injuries Relating to Mast. 56 L. ed.

& S. §§ 2993, 2996, 3001, 3022; Dresser, Employers' Liability, p. 535; Moon-Anchor Consol. Gold Mines v. Hopkins, 49 C. C. A. 347, 111 Fed. 303; Finalyson v. Utica Min. & Mill. Co. 14 C. C. A. 492, 32 U. S. App. 143, 67 Fed. 507; Southern R. Co. v. Lyons, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 95 C. C. A. 55, 169 Fed. 560; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Mayo, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 253, 37 S. W. 659; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. O'Hare, 64 Tex. 603; Watson v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 58 Tex. 438; Florence & C. C. R. Co. v. Whipps, 70 C. C. A. 443, 138 Fed. 13.

The Potts' disease of the spine with which the plaintiff is now suffering is too remote a consequence to be chargeable against the defendant as the result of the injury he received.

Hamilton, Railway & Other Accidents, p. 257.

Mr. S. P. Jones submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The evidence was sufficient to satisfy the jury in finding that the railway company was guilty of negligence which was the proximate and direct cause of the injury.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 386, 37 L. ed. 780, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Mather v. Rillston, 156 U. S. 398, 39 L. ed. 470, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 165; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 672, 42 L. ed. 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 68, 48 L. ed. 100, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 38 L. ed. 958, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978; Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Danielson, 6 C. C. A. 636, 12 U. S. App. 688, 57 Fed. 915; Chicago House Wrecking Co. v. Birney, 54 C. C. A. 458, 117 Fed. 72; National Steel Co. v. Lowe, 62 C. C. A. 229, 127 Fed. 311; 4 Thomp. Neg. §§ 3809-3814; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. §§ 185b, 194.

To charge Howell with assuming the risk, it would be necessary to show that Howell knew that the men were tearing up the decking over him, and that the manner of tearing the same up was dangerous to the extent that an ordinarily prudent man would not have remained in the service.

Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Danielson, 6 C. C. A. 636, 12 U. S. App. 688, 57 Fed. 915; Mather v. Rillston, 156 U. S. 398, 39 L. ed. 470, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 165; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 68, 48 L. ed. 100, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 185b; Chicago House Wrecking Co. v. Birney, 54 C. C. A. 458, 117 Fed. 72.

The uncontroverted evidence fully justified the jury in finding that "Potts' disease" and the diseased condition of the defendant in error was the direct result of the injury that he received by reason of the negligence of the plaintiff in error.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Melick, 27 L.R.A. 629, 12 C. C. A. 544, 27 U. S. App. 547, 65 Fed. 178; Crane Elevator Co. v. Lippert, 11 C. C. A. 521, 24 U. S. App. 176, 63 Fed. 942; 13 Cyc. 30, 31; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Leslie, 57 Tex. 83.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for personal injuries done to the plaintiff, the defendant in error, Howell, while in the employ of the railway company. The plaintiff had a verdict and judgment, subject to exceptions, and the judgment was affirmed without discussion by the circuit court of appeals. The material facts can be stated in a few words. The plaintiff was set to digging a hole for a post under a coal chute. While he was at work the defendant put other men to removing certain timbers and planks from the floor, 12 feet or so above him, without his knowledge, as he contends, and a piece of timber fell and struck the plaintiff on the head. The plaintiff now is suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, in consequence, as he says, of the blow. The defendant asked the court to direct a verdict, and also to instruct the jury that if the plaintiff knew that other servants were tearing up the floor above him, he took the risk; that if no harm would have resulted but for the negligence of those other servants the defendant was not liable; and that the plaintiff's present disease of the spine was too remote from the blow to be 582]attributed to it as a result. *The case was left to the jury with instructions that if the injury was due to negligence of the defendant in sending men to work above the plaintiff, as a contributing cause, the defendant was liable; but not if it was due only to the negligence of fellow servants in their way of performing their work. The question also was left to the jury whether the disease was the direct consequence of the blow.

The case was begun in the state court and was removed to the circuit court, and is brought here, solely on the ground that the plaintiff in error has a charter from the United States. But for that accident, which has no bearing upon the questions raised, the case would stop with the circuit court of appeals. Under such circumstances we go no further than to inquire whether plain error is made out. Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, ante, 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79. We find nothing that requires us to reverse the judgment. It was open to the jury to find that the usual duty to take reasonable care to furnish a safe place to the plaintiff in his work remained. They well might be of opinion that the general nature of the things to be done gave no notice to the plaintiff that he was asked to take a necessary risk. At the same time, they were warranted in saying that if the defendant saw fit to do the work above and below at the same time, it did so with notice of the danger to those underneath, and took chances that could not be attributed wholly to the hand through which the harm happened. Even if Howell knew that repairs were going on overhead, that did not necessarily put him on an equality with his employer, and require a ruling that he took the risk. Kreight v. Westinghouse, C. K. & Co. 214 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 984, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

The plaintiff was injured on March 3, 1908. There was ample evidence that the blow occasioned the development of his disease, although it was not discovered to be the Potts disease, as it is called, for over a year. *But it is argued that if such[583 a disease is due to the presence of tubercular germs in a man's system before the accident, the defendant ought not to be required to pay more than it would to a normal man. On this point also we are of opinion that the jury were warranted in finding that the disease was the direct result of the injury, as they were required to, by the very conservative instructions to them, before holding the defendant to answer for it. Crane Elevator Co. v. Lippert, 11 C. C. A. 521, 24 U. S. App. 176, 63 Fed. 942; Spade v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 172 Mass. 488, 491, 43 L.R.A. 832, 70 Am. St. Rep. 298, 52 N. E. 747; Smith v. London & S. W. R. Co. L. R. 6 C. P. 14, 21, 40 L. J. C. P. N. S. 21, 23 L. T. N. S. 678, 19 Week. Rep. 230, 18 Eng. Rul. Cas. 726.

Judgment affirmed.

B. ALTMAN & COMPANY, Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 583-602.)

Direct appeal from circuit court — revenue cases — Federal question.

1. A direct appeal lies to the Federal Su-

NOTE.—Direct review by Federal Supreme Court of circuit or district court judgments or decrees.

I. In general, 895.

II. Effect of prior appeal to circuit court of appeals, 895.

preme Court from a circuit court in a revenue case in which, in addition to an objection to the classification and the rate of duty, there is involved the construction of a Federal law, or the validity or construction of a treaty, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, 827, 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549), § 5, governing such direct appeals, notwithstanding the provision of § 6 of that act, making the circuit courts of appeals the proper and final tribunals in revenue cases, and the special provision of the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 403, chap. 205), amendatory of the revenue act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886), for the review by the circuit courts of appeals of decisions as to the construction of the tariff laws and the facts respecting the classification of merchandise, and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Direct appeal from circuit court — Federal question — treaty — commercial compact.

2. The commercial reciprocal agreement with France, negotiated under the authority

III. The designated classes of cases.

- a. When jurisdiction is in issue, 896.
- b. Criminal causes, 902.
- c. When construction or application of Federal Constitution is involved, 903.
- d. When constitutionality of Federal law or validity or construction of treaty is drawn in question, 906.
- e. When state law or Constitution is claimed to violate Federal Constitution, 907.

I. In general.

This note is supplemental to that appended to the case of Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

By the adoption of the Federal Judicial Code (act of March 3, 1911, 36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228), the applicable jurisdictional statute was changed by eliminating the provision for review in criminal cases, and by omitting any reference to the circuit courts abolished by that Code, the present statute (Code, § 238) now reading:

"Appeals and writs of error may be taken from the district courts, including the United States district court for Hawaii, direct to the Supreme Court, in the following cases: In any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, in which case the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified to the Supreme Court from the court below for decision; from the final sentences and decrees in prize causes; in any case that involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States; in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, is drawn in question; and in any case in which the Constitution or law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States."

No pecuniary limit was imposed by the act of March 3, 1891, upon the appellate jurisdiction over the Federal district or circuit courts which was conferred by that act upon the Supreme Court of the United States and the circuit courts of appeals. Kirby v. American Soda Fountain Co. 194 U. S. 141, 48 L. ed. 911, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

56 L. ed.

But the limitation with reference to the amount in dispute, prescribed by the act of March 3, 1887 for appeals from or writs of error to a Federal district court sitting as a court of claims, remained in force, notwithstanding the provision of the circuit courts of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 14, that "all acts and parts of acts relating to appeals or writs of error inconsistent with the provisions for review by appeals or writs of error in the preceding §§ 5 and 6 of this act are hereby repealed." Reid v. United States, 211 U. S. 529, 53 L. ed. 313, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

The appeal required by the act of June 22, 1860, § 11, to be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States if the decree of the district court in certain private land claim cases is against the United States, was "otherwise provided by law," within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 6, making the circuit court of appeals the proper tribunal for the review of final decisions of the district court in other than certain excepted cases, which include those where it is otherwise provided by law. United States v. Dalcour, 203 U. S. 408, 51 L. ed. 248, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

A direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a final decree of a circuit court in a proceeding to compel the production of papers and the giving of testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission was authorized by the provision in the act of February 19, 1903, § 3, making applicable to "any case" brought under the direction of the Attorney General, in the name of the Commission, the provisions of the act of February 11, 1903, the 2d section of which authorizes direct appeals from the Federal circuit courts to the Supreme Court in cases brought under the anti-trust or interstate commerce acts, although this section has reference only to suits in equity, and the paragraphs preceding the proviso in the later statute do not include proceedings of this character. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

II. Effect of prior appeal to circuit court of appeals.

A judgment of a Federal circuit court in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover contained in the tariff act of 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1626), § 3, to make reciprocal agreements with reference to certain specified articles, is a treaty within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, giving a direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court in cases where the validity or construction of any treaty made under the authority of the United States is drawn in question.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Tariff — bronze bust — statuary — reciprocity.

3. A bronze bust cast by artisans from the artist's model is dutiable, upon importation from France, at 45 per cent ad valorem, under the tariff act of 1897, ¶ 193, which covers articles or wares not specially provided for in the act, composed wholly or in part of metal, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, and is not classifiable as statuary, under the commercial reciprocal agreement with France, negotiated in accordance with, and under the authority contained in, § 3 of that act, to make reciprocal agreements with reference, among other articles, to "paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen-and-ink drawings, and statuary," since the tariff act defines statuary as including only such as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from a solid block of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, and such as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor.

[For other cases, see Duties, 89-96, 213-219, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 208.]

damages for the infringement of a copyrighted map, in which a prior judgment sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the declaration on the ground that the copyright law gave no such action was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, to which the case was carried by the plaintiff, may be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on a direct writ of error sued out by the defendant below under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as presenting the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Globe Newspaper Co. v. Walker, 210 U. S. 356, 52 L. ed. 1096, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

A defendant which, on an appeal to a circuit court of appeals from a decree of a Federal circuit court sustaining a demurrer to a bill on the ground of want of jurisdiction of the state court from which the case was removed, does not insist upon the jurisdictional objection, but takes its chances on the merits, stands in no better position, so far as its right to appeal to the Supreme Court from a decree of the circuit court, entered pursuant to the direction of the circuit court of appeals, is concerned, than if it had itself taken the appeal to that court. Kansas City Northwestern R. Co. v. Zimmerman, 210 U. S. 336, 52 L. ed. 1084, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

A decision of a circuit court of appeals, affirming, on the revisory proceeding authorized by the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 24b, an interlocutory order of the court of bankruptcy which overruled a motion to dismiss the proceedings, cannot preclude a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the bankruptcy court, to review the final decision, bringing up the question of the jurisdiction of that court to make an adjudication of bankruptcy on a claim for unliquidated damages. Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co. 212 U. S. 445, 53 L. ed. 591, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 332.

A direct appeal will not lie to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, to review, as presenting a question of jurisdiction, a decree of a circuit court entered pursuant to the mandate of a circuit court of appeals, which, being of the opinion that the bill was within the ancillary jurisdiction of the circuit court, had reversed a decree of that court dismissing such bill for want of jurisdiction, since there was an opportunity afforded by the statute to obtain a review of the jurisdictional question in the Supreme Court, either upon a certificate of the circuit court of appeals, or on writ of certiorari to that court. Brown v. Alton Water Co. 222 U. S. 325, ante, 221, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156.

The Federal Supreme Court cannot review, as presenting a question of jurisdiction, a decree of a Federal circuit court dismissing a bill in aid of an attempt to remove condemnation proceedings from a state court, which decree was necessitated by the mandate of a circuit court of appeals, which court, being of the opinion that the condemnation proceedings did not amount to a "suit" within the meaning of the removal statutes, had reversed an order of the circuit court, granting a temporary injunction restraining the further prosecution of the proceedings, and had remanded the cause with directions to proceed in accordance with its opinion, since there was an opportunity afforded to obtain a review of the jurisdictional question, either upon a certificate of the circuit court of appeals, or on a writ of certiorari to that court. Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. 223 U. S. 519, ante, 533, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

See also div. V., in note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 613, as to the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals where the case was also within the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit and district courts.

III. The designated classes of cases.

a. When jurisdiction is in issue.

Effect of prior appeal to circuit court of appeals, see supra, II.

It is the jurisdiction of the court as a

Argued April 25 and 26, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment which affirmed a decision of the Board of General Appraisers, sustaining an assessment of a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem upon a bronze bust imported from France. Affirmed.

See same case below, 172 Fed. 161.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry J. Webster argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Howard T. Walden and John K. Maxwell, filed a brief for appellants:

The mere designation of the instrument

Federal court which must be in issue in order to support the appeal or writ of error.

A direct appeal from a Federal district court to the Supreme Court cannot be maintained under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, because the jurisdiction of the lower court was questioned, unless it was the jurisdiction of that court as a court of the United States that was in issue, and that question is certified to the appellate court. Schweer v. Brown, 195 U. S. 171, 49 L. ed. 144, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15.

A writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court, authorized by the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, when the jurisdiction of the lower court is in issue, cannot be maintained because of a question as to the jurisdiction of that court in respect to its general authority as a judicial tribunal, or its power as a court of equity. Bien v. Robinson, 208 U. S. 423, 52 L. ed. 556, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

The question whether a Federal circuit court, under the principles of equity and comity governing all courts having concurrent jurisdiction over the same subject-matter, has authority to administer a trust estate after a suit with reference thereto has been begun in a state court, does not involve the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a Federal tribunal, which alone, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, can furnish ground for a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court as a case in which the "jurisdiction of the court is in issue." Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

Whether the bill presents a case for equitable relief or not does not involve a question of the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court. Scully v. Bird, 209 U. S. 481, 52 L. ed. 899, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597.

The objection that an attachment suit in aid of an action at law was not cognizable in a Federal circuit court, to which it had been removed from the state court for diversity of citizenship, because the proceeding was inequitable in form, is not open to by another name, even by Congress and the President, does not prevent its being a treaty if it is such in substance.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Ann. Crim. Rep. 135; Bartram v. Robertson, 122 U. S. 116, 118, 30 L. ed. 1118, 1119, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1115.

In the general sense, and without special reference to the Constitution and laws of the United States, the so-called commercial agreement with France is unquestionably a treaty.

Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 253, 314, 7 L. ed. 415, 435; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 571, 10 L. ed. 579, 594; United States consideration by a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, which is sought to be maintained under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as a case in which the jurisdiction of the circuit court was in issue. Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 49 L. ed. 398, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The jurisdiction of a Federal district court of the United States was in issue so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, where the exceptions to a libel and intervening petition claiming salvage for services rendered to a vessel on fire in a dry dock challenged the jurisdiction because, from the situation of the vessel, the place where the services were rendered, and their nature and character, they afforded no basis for the jurisdiction of the court as a court of admiralty of the United States, and this was the conception upon which that court acted in dismissing such libel and intervening petition. The Jefferson, 215 U. S. 130, 54 L. ed. 125, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54, 17 Ann. Cas. 907.

The jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court of a direct appeal from a decree of a Federal district court sitting as a court of admiralty, which dismissed a libel for contribution in favor of a joint wrongdoer who had paid a judgment recovered against him in a suit at common law, founded on the wrong, to which the other wrongdoer was not made a party, cannot be defeated on the theory that the dismissal, although expressed to be for want of jurisdiction, is really upon the merits, because payment of a judgment at common law is not a ground for contribution from a wrongdoer not a party to the suit. The Ira M. Hedges (Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Cornell S. B. Co.) 218 U. S. 264, 54 L. ed. 1039, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17, 20 Ann. Cas. 1235.

The question of the jurisdiction of a Federal district court is not involved so as to require the appeal to be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States rather than to the circuit court of appeals, in the determination that a corporation is principally engaged in such a business that it can be adjudged a bankrupt. Columbia

v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 222; Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 386, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

In the Constitution and laws of the United States the word "treaty" has no special meaning different from the general definition.

Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 253, 314, 7 L. ed. 415, 435; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483, 489, 25 L. ed. 628, 630.

The reason for vesting the power to make treaties in the President and Senate appears to have been simply to secure secrecy and despatch, which, it was recognized, were often necessary; and except for this consideration the power would doubtless have been expressly vested in Congress as a whole.

2 Hunt's, Madison, Journal of Const. Conv. of 1787, p. 327; 5 Pinckney, Elliott's Debates in State Conventions, pp. 253-267.

In some court decisions this particular agreement with France has been called a treaty without discussion as to the exact meaning of the word.

Nicholas v. United States, 122 Fed. 892; Migliavacca Wine Co. v. United States, 148 Fed. 142; Shaw v. United States, 1 Customs App. 426.

The Constitution, in conferring the power to make treaties, does not prescribe the time or method of the Senate's giving its advice and consent.

Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 85, 5 L.

Ironworks v. National Lead Co. 64 L.R.A. 645, 62 C. C. A. 99, 127 Fed. 99.

A direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from a judgment of a district court dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, entered after directing the jury to find that the alleged bankrupt was engaged chiefly in farming, and was therefore, by the express terms of the bankruptcy act, not subject to its provisions, cannot be maintained on the theory that the jurisdiction of the district court was drawn in issue, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5,—especially where no question of jurisdiction was certified by the district court, as required by that section. First Nat. Bank v. Klug, 186 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 1127, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899.

A judgment of a district court of the United States, imposing imprisonment for contempt, cannot be reviewed in the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to that court, on the theory that the case is one in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, where jurisdiction over the person and subject-matter was not challenged, and the question asserted in the certificate of the lower court was whether it had jurisdiction to try and punish the defendant for contempt upon the facts and for the causes stated. O'Neal v. United States, 190 U. S. 36, 47 L. ed. 945, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776, 14 Am. Crim. Rep. 303.

The dismissal by a Federal circuit court of an action brought by a domestic corporation to recover from nonresident railway companies the excess over a reasonable freight rate exacted by them because the declaration contained no averment that the Interstate Commerce Commission had sustained plaintiff's right to reparation does not present a question of the jurisdiction of that court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, since precisely the same question would have arisen for decision had the suit been pending in a state court of general authority, having jurisdiction over the defendants. Darnell v. Illinois C. R. Co. 225 U. S. 243, post, —, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760.

The question whether a Federal circuit court, in a suit in which the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, may enforce a cause of action based on a state statute alleged to be penal in its nature, does not involve the jurisdiction of the court as a Federal court, which alone can support a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as a case in which the jurisdiction of the circuit court was in issue. Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The question of the validity of the service of a subpoena issued by a Federal circuit court upon the resident treasurer of a foreign corporation involves the jurisdiction of that court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, from an order setting aside the service. Kendall v. American Automatic Loom Co. 198 U. S. 477, 49 L. ed. 1133, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768.

The question of the validity of the service of process of a Federal circuit court on certain persons as the agents of a foreign corporation involves the jurisdiction of that court so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, from a decree dismissing the bill for lack of valid service. Board of Trade v. Hammond Elevator Co. 198 U. S. 424, 49 L. ed. 1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740.

A decree of a Federal circuit court sustaining a plea to the jurisdiction may be brought to the Federal Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, by direct appeal, where the question presented involves issues of fact as to whether the corporate defendant was doing business in the state, and whether the person attempted to be served as agent was such at that time. Herndon-Carter Co. v. James N. Norris, Son & Co. 224 U. S. 496, ante, 857, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

The contention that there was no valid service of process upon a foreign corporate ed. 547, 568; Poole v. Flegger, 11 Pet. 185, 209, 9 L. ed. 680, 690, affirming 1 McLean, 185, Fed. Cas. No. 4,860; Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wall. 39, 59, 20 L. ed. 67, 72.

It is within the spirit and intent of the act of March 3, 1891, to give this court jurisdiction in this case.

Durousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch, 307, 314, 3 L. ed. 232, 234.

If the agreement of France is a treaty, this court has jurisdiction of the entire case.

Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 576, 36 L. ed. 266, 268, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

A name of an article, used in a statute without qualification, includes that article in all its forms and species.

Chew Hing Lung v. Wise, 176 U. S. 156, 160, 44 L. ed. 412, 414, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; Shoellkopf v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 301, 38 U. S. App. 17, 71 Fed. 694.

Where a treaty admits of two constructions, one restrictive as to the rights that may be claimed under it, and the other liberal, the latter is to be preferred.

Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. 242, 7 L. ed. 666; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483, 487, 25 L. ed. 628, 629.

The honor of the government and people of the United States is involved in every inquiry whether rights secured by such stipulations shall be recognized and protected.

defendant in a suit removed by it from a state to a Federal court, because the corporation was not doing business in the state, and the person attempted to be served was not its agent at that time, involves the jurisdiction of the latter court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct review of the judgment of that court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, by writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court. Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

The jurisdiction of the court below as a Federal court was so involved as to sustain a direct review, in the Supreme Court of the United States, of a Federal circuit court judgment dismissing an action which had been removed from the state court, where the ground of the judgment was lack of a valid service of process on the defendant, and the plaintiff had moved to remand the cause. Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court as a Federal court is so involved as to sustain a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, in a judgment dismissing the suit on the ground of the invalidity of the attachment and garnishment of the property of the nonresident defendant, and upon the lack of a general appearance by such defendant. Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. ed. 708, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 823, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, 18 Ann. Cas. 907.

The dismissal of a bill filed against nonresident aliens in a Federal circuit court because complainant offered no proof to establish the fact that the property sought to be affected was within the district, as contemplated by the act of March 3, 1875, § 8, which authorizes the exertion of jurisdiction as to the property of absent defendants, the bill's averment in this regard having been traversed by plea, involves a question as to the power of the court as a Federal court, reviewable by direct appeal to the Supreme Court. Chase v. Wetz- 56 L. ed.

lar, 225 U. S. 79, post, 990, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659.

A suit in which the jurisdiction of a United States circuit court was only questioned under the established rules of practice as to bringing in parties to ancillary or pro interesse suo proceedings, and those governing courts of concurrent jurisdiction as between themselves, does not involve a question of jurisdiction which, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, may be certified directly to the Federal Supreme Court. Bache v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 48 L. ed. 774, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547.

The objection that an action brought by the United States against the principal and sureties on the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of February 24, 1905, amending the act of August 13, 1894, for his failure to pay certain designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in construction, should, under such statutes, when rightly construed, have been brought in the Federal circuit court for the district wherein the contract was to be performed, instead of in the court for the district where the defendants reside, raises a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court which will sustain a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court. United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, ante, 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

The denial of a motion to remand a cause which has been removed from the state court to a Federal circuit court does not so present the question of that court's jurisdiction as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, where such motion did not in terms put in issue the power of the circuit court as a court of the United States to hear and determine the cause. Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 49 L. ed. 398, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The contention that a Federal circuit court has no jurisdiction of a suit founded on a decree of that court because the state court from which the suit was removed was without jurisdiction does not present a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit

Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 539, 28 L. ed. 770, 771, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 23, 42 L. ed. 927, 935, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

The treaty must contain the whole contract between the parties.

New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 23, 42 L. ed. 927, 935, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States, 183 U. S. 176, 183, 46 L. ed. 138, 143, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59; Meigs v. M'Clung, 9 Cranch, 11, 3 L. ed. 639.

The office of a proviso generally is either to except something from the enacting clause, or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of it, as extending to cases not intended by the legislature to be brought within its purview.

Minis v. United States, 15 Pet. 423, 445, 10 L. ed. 791, 799; United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 165, 10 L. ed. 689, 698; White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 551, 48 L. ed. 295, 297, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

Messrs. W. Wickham Smith and John K. Maxwell filed a brief for appellants in opposition to the motion to dismiss or affirm.

Assistant Attorney General Wemple argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles E. McNabb, Assistant Attorney, and Mr. Frank L. Lawrence, Special Attorney, filed a brief for appellee:

A change looking to the ordinary busi-court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, on the ground that the jurisdiction of the circuit court was in issue. Kansas City Northwestern R. Co. v. Zimmerman, 210 U. S. 336, 52 L. ed. 1084, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

The objection that a Federal circuit court to which a suit has been removed from a state court was without jurisdiction because the removal was improper is not open on a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, presenting the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, where the record and certificate show that the jurisdiction of that court was denied on the single ground that the state court where the proceedings started was without jurisdiction. Ibid.

The dismissal by a Federal circuit court of a suit against a foreign executor for the want of jurisdiction in the state court, from which it had been removed for diversity of citizenship, does not present a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a Federal court, which will authorize a direct appeal under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, to the Federal Supreme Court. Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 49 L. ed. 398, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

A case cannot be brought up to the Supreme Court of the United States by direct appeal from the Federal circuit court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as one in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, where the jurisdiction challenged is not that of the court rendering the decree from which the appeal is taken, but is that of the court which rendered a former decree, which is set up in the bill as the basis of the title in suit. Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 51 L. ed. 779, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

The jurisdictional question must not be wholly without merit.

A decree of a Federal circuit court, dismissing, for want of the requisite diversity of citizenship, a bill by which, on the ground of fraud, injunctive relief against the collection of a judgment against a railway company and of a subsequent judgment against the surety on its appeal bond is sought by such surety and by the person who is, by contract, ultimately liable to pay the original judgment, is so plainly correct as to require the dismissal of an appeal to the Supreme Court, where such decree is based upon the proposition that such railway company, although insolvent, is an indispensable party, which must be aligned with the plaintiffs for the purpose of determining the question of jurisdiction. Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

The contention that under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1342, art. 62, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 957, a court-martial has exclusive jurisdiction over the crimes committed by a military officer which are cognizable by courts-martial under the provisions of that article, is too clearly unfounded to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, to review a conviction in a circuit court. Franklin v. United States, 216 U. S. 559, 54 L. ed. 615, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

A decision of a court of bankruptcy, upholding its jurisdiction to adjudicate the validity of an alleged equitable lien upon property which it decided to be an asset of the estate in bankruptcy, and not exempt property of the bankrupt, does not create a question of jurisdiction which will sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, since, by the express terms of the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898, § 2, subdiv. 11, jurisdiction is conferred upon courts of bankruptcy to determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions. Lucius v. Cawthon-Coleman Co. 196 U. S. 149, 59 L. ed. 425, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

A plaintiff cannot maintain a direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, because the jurisdiction of the lower court was in issue, where that jurisdiction was sustained and a decree rendered in favor of defendants on the merits. Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 191 U. S. 376, 48 L. ed. 228, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

ness of the courts should not be held to embrace a change in special jurisdiction merely on the strength of words general enough to include it, when it appears that the general policy of the special jurisdiction still is maintained.

Reid v. United States, 211 U. S. 529, 538, 53 L. ed. 313, 315, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

Assuming, but not admitting, that § 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, applies to suits in which the United States is defendant under the act of June 10, 1890, then, in order that this court may have jurisdiction, the record in this case must show that a real and substantial dispute exists over the construction of the Constitution of the United States, or the validity or construction of a treaty made under its authority.

Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Thiebaud, 177 U. S. 615, 619, 620, 44 L. ed. 911-913, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 243, 244, 44 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 282, 283, 45 L. ed. 527, 530, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 281, 45 L. ed. 859, 861, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 530, 48 L. ed. 287, 290, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

If the treaty when negotiated went beyond the statute, it could not affect the statute, but could only become operative

A bill of exceptions is not essential to a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court, presenting the sole question of the jurisdiction of the latter court, where it can add nothing to what is apparent on the face of the record. Fredrick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co. 212 U. S. 445, 53 L. ed. 591, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 332.

Certificate.

The lack of a certificate of jurisdiction is not fatal to an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court which necessarily decided constitutional questions expressly raised in the bill. Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 225 U. S. 272, post, —, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

The absence of a certificate of the question of jurisdiction is not fatal to the right to maintain a direct appeal from a Federal district court to the Supreme Court, where, upon the face of the record, aside from the recitals in the order made on the allowance of the appeal, it is apparent that the only question which was decided below was one of jurisdiction, and the decree appealed from on its face shows that the cause was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. The Jefferson, 215 U. S. 130, 54 L. ed. 125, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54, 17 Ann. Cas. 907.

A decree showing dismissal for want of jurisdiction only takes the place of the certificate required by the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, governing a direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of decrees of the circuit courts. Herndon-Carter Co. v. James N. Norris, Son & Co. 224 U. S. 496, ante, 857, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

A recital in an order allowing an appeal from a decree of a circuit court, that the appeal was allowed "from the final order and decree dismissing said suit for want of jurisdiction," is a sufficient certificate of the circuit court that the jurisdiction of that court was in issue, to warrant a direct appeal to the Supreme Court. Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge 56 L. ed.

Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The record does not show an equivalent of the certificate of jurisdiction required to sustain a direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of a judgment of the circuit court, which had dismissed a complaint for want of jurisdiction, where the assignment of errors is directed both to the jurisdiction and the merits, and the petition for the writ of error which was allowed generally, and without any limitation or specification, prays for a review to the end that the rulings and judgment of the court may be reversed. Filhiol v. Torney, 194 U. S. 356, 48 L. ed. 1014, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698.

Formal defects in the certificate as to jurisdiction filed by a Federal circuit court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, for the purpose of sustaining a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, are not material, where the record clearly shows that the only matter tried and decided in the circuit was one of jurisdiction. Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. ed. 708, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 823, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, 18 Ann. Cas. 907.

The failure of the certificate of a Federal circuit court to show the exact nature of the jurisdictional question relied upon to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court does not defeat the jurisdiction of the latter court, where an examination of the record, aided by the opinion of the circuit court, contained therein, and made part thereof, distinctly shows the nature of the question of jurisdiction passed upon. Chicago v. Mills, 204 U. S. 321, 51 L. ed. 504, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

The question of the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court is sufficiently certified to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, irrespective of any irregularity in the bill of exceptions or formal certificate, where the judgment dismissing the action and the prior proceedings clearly exhibit the ground on which the judgment was based, and make apparent on the record the fact that the only matters tried and decided were de-by means of new legislation. And if such treaty does follow the authority conferred by statute, then a court, in considering the situation, has to find first whether the treaty in fact became operative, and if that be found so, the entire consideration must shift at once to the statute, on an inquiry as to the proper meaning and construction of the act which was made effective by the happening of the condition subsequent.

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, 211 U. S. 155, 161, 162, 53 L. ed. 129, 131, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Shaw v. United States, 212 U. S. 559, 560, 53 L. ed. 652, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

The commercial agreement is a treaty neither in name nor in essence. In a broad sense, perhaps, all treaties are agreements or contracts, the word "agreement" being sufficiently comprehensive to embrace all forms of stipulation, written or verbal, and relating to all kinds of subjects.

Virginia v. Tennessee, 148 U. S. 503, 517, 518, 37 L. ed. 537, 542, 543, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728.

But this particular agreement is not a treaty within the meaning of the Constitution and of the judiciary act of 1891, which follows the Constitution. This appears by several considerations.

1. By constitutional limitations upon the states.

Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 570, 571, 10 L. ed. 579, 594, 595.

murrers to pleas to the jurisdiction, and the petition upon which the writ of error was allowed asked only for a review of the judgment, which decided that the court was without jurisdiction. Petri v. F. E. Creelman Lumber Co. 199 U. S. 487, 50 L. ed. 281, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133.

The question of the jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court must be regarded as fairly presented, so as to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, despite the indefiniteness of the allegations of the plea to the jurisdiction, where the certificate below states that the defendant raised by such plea the objections that it was a foreign corporation not doing business in the state, and that the person attempted to be served was not its agent at the time, and shows that the court did not consider the affidavits which the bill of exceptions states were filed, but overruled the plea on the sole ground that the facts stated in the return of the sheriff to the summons were conclusive, and also recites that when the case was filed for trial the same objection was made and overruled for the same reason. Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

The ground of the action of a Federal circuit court in dismissing a bill, as recited in the certificate presenting a question of jurisdiction, will be accepted by the Supreme Court on appeal, where a different course requires an assumption of inconsistency between the lower court's opinion and order of dismissal and such certificate. Scully v. Bird, 209 U. S. 481, 52 L. ed. 899, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597.

The certificate of a Federal circuit court may be considered by the Supreme Court on the direct review authorized by the act of March 3, 1891, for the purpose of supplying the failure of the record to show when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised, if the elements necessary to decide the question are in the record, although it is the better practice to make apparent on the record by a bill of exceptions or other appropriate mode the fact that the question of jurisdiction was raised and passed upon, and the elements upon which the decision of the question was based. C. H. Nichols Lumber Co. v. Franson, 203 U. S. 278, 51 L. ed. 181, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

In deciding the question of the jurisdiction below which is shown by the certificate of the Federal circuit court to have been raised, the Supreme Court cannot resort to the statements in the certificate for the purpose of supplying elements of decision which it could not properly consider in an action at law without a bill of exceptions. Ibid.

The thirty days' limitation for appeals in bankruptcy cases, made by general orders in bankruptcy, rule 36, does not apply to a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a court of bankruptcy, presenting the question of the jurisdiction to make an adjudication of bankruptcy on a claim for unliquidated damages, but such proceeding is governed by the two years' limitation fixed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1008, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 715, and the act of March 3, 1891, §§ 4, 5. Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co. 212 U. S. 445, 53 L. ed. 591, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 332.

A direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court in a case in which the lack of a certificate of jurisdiction is supplied by the decree which shows dismissal for want of jurisdiction only may be perfected after the term, if within two years from the entry of the decree. Herdon-Carter Co. v. James N. Norris, Son & Co. 224 U. S. 496, ante, 857, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

b. Criminal causes.

A conviction in a Federal district court of murder in the second degree, punishable only by imprisonment, was not reviewable in the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as amended by the act of January 20, 1897, as a case of "conviction of capital crime," although the accused could have been convicted, under the indictment, of a capital offense. Rakes v. United

2. By the distinction between a treaty and an act of Congress.

Haver v. Yaker (Jecker v. Magee) 9 Wall. 32, 35, 19 L. ed. 571, 573; Head Money Cases (Edy v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 580, 598, 28 L. ed. 798, 803, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 419, 30 L. ed. 425, 429, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 222; United States v. Wile, 64 C. C. A. 577, 130 Fed. 332; Richard v. United States, 151 Fed. 954, 86 C. C. A. 671, 158 Fed. 1019; Marshall, Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 693, 36 L. ed. 294, 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; The Aurora v. United States, 7 Cranch, 382, 388, 3 L. ed. 378, 380; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 23, 42 L. ed. 927, 935, 18

Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 194, 195, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1055, 1056, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States, 183 U. S. 176, 183, 46 L. ed. 138, 143, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59.

3. By implied legislative declaration in the very act under discussion that agreements of the sort mentioned in § 3 are not treaties.

The commercial agreement could not enlarge or extend the scope of § 3 of the tariff act.

Nicholas v. United States, 122 Fed. 892; United States v. Wile, 64 C. C. A. 577, 130 Fed. 332; Richard v. United States, 151 Fed. 954, 86 C. C. A. 671, 158 Fed. 1019.

States, 212 U. S. 55, 53 L. ed. 401, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

As pointed out in div. I. of this note, the provision relating to criminal causes was omitted when the Judicial Code was enacted. See also note to United States v. Stevenson, 54 L. ed. U. S. 153, on Review by government in criminal case under the act of March 2, 1907, by writ of error directed to a circuit or district court.

c. When construction or application of Federal Constitution is involved.

The record, and not a certificate of the trial judge, furnishes the basis for determining whether the suit is one which involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States within the meaning of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, § 5, authorizing the taking of appeals or writs of error in such cases from district or circuit courts of the United States direct to the Supreme Court. Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

The question must be real and substantial, and not frivolous and wholly lacking in merit. Harris v. Rosenberger, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 762, 76 C. C. A. 225, 145 Fed. 449.

A contention by importers that the Treasury regulations respecting the polariscopic test for sugar assumed to add something to the dutiable standard prescribed by the tariff act of July 24, 1897, par. 209, and that the Secretary of the Treasury thus exercised legislative power confided by the Constitution solely to Congress, does not constitute a real and substantial dispute or controversy concerning the construction or application of the Federal Constitution within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, so as to sustain a direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court. American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, 211 U. S. 155, 53 L. ed. 129, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89.

The contention that constitutional rights to trial by jury and to due process of law are infringed by the action of a Federal circuit court, after appointing receivers of the assets and property of a corporation, and enjoining any interference with such property, in compelling repayment by summary process, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, from one who, with knowledge of the injunction, collects a check drawn in his favor by the corporation to satisfy a debt, and in denying his application to compel the bringing of an action at law for the recovery of the proceeds of the check, is too frivolous to serve as the foundation of a writ of error from the Supreme Court. Bien v. Robinson, 208 U. S. 423, 52 L. ed. 556, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

The contention that an indictment charging subornation of perjury before a Federal grand jury did not sufficiently set forth "the nature and cause of the accusation," within the meaning of U. S. Const., 6th Amend., because it did not "set forth in some definite way the matter or thing which was under investigation at the particular time, so that the defendant may know as to what particular controversy the alleged false testimony is claimed to be material, and how to meet the allegation of materiality," is too frivolous to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court, to review a conviction under such indictment, where the description therein of the proceeding in which the perjury was committed is as follows: ". . . Sitting as a grand jury . . . and, among other matters, inquiring into certain criminal violations of the laws of the said United States relating to the public lands and the disposal of the same, and the unlawful fencing thereof, which had then lately before been committed within the said district." Hendricks v. United States, 223 U. S. 178, ante, 394, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313.

See also infra, Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, and United States v. Larkin, 208 U. S. 333, 52 L. ed. 517, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

A question of the construction or application of the Federal Constitution which has been directly determined by the Supreme Court of the United States will no

The rule that the same words occurring in different parts of a statute are to be taken in the same sense would require the limitation of "statuary" in § 3 as in §§ 454 and 649. This rule is especially applicable to revenue laws.

Swan & F. Co. v. United States, 190 U. S. 143, 145, 146, 47 L. ed. 984, 986, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 702; 17 Ops. Atty. Gen. 579; 21 Ops. Atty. Gen. 501; 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 418; Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. 162, 165, 20 L. ed. 566, 567.

The late Solicitor General Bowers and Assistant Attorney General Lloyd filed a brief in support of a motion to dismiss or affirm.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from an order of the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, affirming a decision of the board of general appraisers, which sustained an assessment of duty by the collector at the port of New York upon a certain bronze bust imported by the appellants, B. Altman & Company.

The bust was imported from France, and was assessed a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 193 of the tariff act of 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1626), which covers articles or wares not specially provided for in the act, *composed wholly or in part of metal, and whether partly or whollonger serve to support the exercise of this jurisdiction. Harris v. Rosenberger, supra.

A suit which involves the consideration of questions relating to the power of Congress under the Constitution over the navigable waters of the United States is one which involves the construction or application of the Federal Constitution within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, authorizing direct appeals from a circuit court to the Supreme Court of the United States. Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472.

A contention that by the sentence of an army court-martial the accused was twice punished for the same offense is so raised as to authorize a direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from an order of the circuit court, discharging a writ of habeas corpus, as a case involving the construction and application of the Constitution of the United States, where such contention was put forward in the petition and was argued on the return. Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 46 L. ed. 236, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181.

A decision of a Federal circuit court denying a writ of habeas corpus may be reviewed by direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, where the petition averred that the imprisonment of the appellant was in violation of the Federal Constitution. Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 48 L. ed. 1110, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780.

Habeas corpus proceedings on behalf of a person whose interstate extradition is sought pursuant to the Federal Constitution and laws, and who contends that his detention in custody is unlawful because the indictment, which is its only excuse, is not a charge of crime within the meaning of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, ¶ 2, regulating extradition, involve the construction of the Constitution of the United States, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, governing direct appeals from the circuit courts to the Supreme Court. Pierce v. Creecy, 210 U. S. 387, 52 L. ed. 1113, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

An order of a Federal district court denying relief by habeas corpus to a person convicted in a United States court for the Indian territory is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court as involving the construction of the Federal Constitution, where the allegation in the petition that the accused was deprived of his liberty without due process of law was based entirely upon the supposed want of jurisdiction in the court where the conviction was had over an offense committed during the interim between the passage of the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906, and the admission of the state into the Union, which is a question involving the construction, and not the constitutionality, of the enabling act. Childers v. McClaughry, 216 U. S. 139, 54 L. ed. 420, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

A writ of error will not lie from the Supreme Court of the United States to review an order of a circuit court committing a district attorney for contempt in refusing to obey an order directing him to return to the owner certain books and papers in his possession which the court found had been seized in violation of constitutional rights. Wise v. Mills, 220 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 579, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597.

A judgment of a Federal circuit court discharging a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under an order committing a district attorney for contempt in refusing to obey an order directing him to return to the owners certain books and papers in his possession is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, as involving a Federal question, although the reason assigned for the order for the return of the books and papers was that they had been seized in violation of constitutional rights. Wise v. Henkel, 220 U. S. 556, 55 L. ed. 581, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599.

The application of the due process of law clause of U. S. Const., 5th Amend., is involved so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a circuit court, where the latter court gave effect, as res judicata, to the judgment of a state court which is claimed unlawfully ly manufactured. A protest was filed by the importers, in which they contended that the bust should be classed as statuary under the commercial reciprocal agreement with France (30 Stat. at L. 1774), which was negotiated under the authority contained in § 3 of the tariff act of 1897 to make reciprocal agreements with reference, among other articles, to "paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen-and-ink drawings, and statuary." A considerable amount of testimony was taken before the board of general appraisers, and it held that the bust was cast in a foundry by mechanics from a model furnished by the artist, and that the artist did little or no work upon the casting, and overruled the protest, on the authority of C. B. Richard & Co. v. United States, 86

C. C. A. 671, 158 Fed. 1019, and Tiffany v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 297, 38 U. S. App. 29, 71 Fed. 691.

The circuit court affirmed the order and decision of the board of general appraisers on the authority of the same cases, and an appeal was prayed to this court, which was allowed, the circuit judge certifying that the questions involved in the case were, in his opinion, of such importance as to require a review of the decision of the court by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Certain errors were assigned, and the following are insisted upon in this court:

"1. In not holding that the commercial agreement between the United States and France, as proclaimed by the President of the United States (T. D. 19405), was to

to have deprived the parties of their property under the forms of law, without any judicial finding of the vital fact which alone could justify such deprivation. Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

A case in which the contention is made that the decree which is the basis of suit is void as violating the right under the Federal Constitution to a jury trial and to due process of law does not involve the construction or application of such Constitution, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, authorizing direct appeals from the circuit or district courts to the Federal Supreme Court, where the real issue as to such prior decree was whether it was res judicata between the parties, or, as is contended by the appellants, was rendered without jurisdiction. Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 51 L. ed. 779, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

The contention by a foreign corporation that the rendition of certain judgments in the state courts, sought to be introduced in evidence against it, was without due process of law, does not make the suit one involving the construction or application of the Federal Constitution, within the meaning of the provisions of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, § 5, for a direct review of a Federal circuit court judgment in the Supreme Court, where this claim is based solely upon the theory that, under the circumstances, the service of process in the suits in the state courts upon the corporation's designated agent was unauthorized either by the state Constitution and laws, or the principles of general jurisprudence. Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

A question respecting an alleged privilege of freedom from arrest as a United States senator, under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 6, is one involving the construction and application of the Federal Constitution, which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a conviction in a district court. Burton v. United 56 I. ed.

States, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. ed. 482, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

The contention that the constitutional privilege of a congressman from arrest embraces arrest and punishment for a criminal offense while Congress is not in session is not so frivolous as not to sustain a direct writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a circuit court. Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

A writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review the conviction of a congressman in a circuit court, presenting a question respecting his alleged constitutional privilege from arrest, will not be dismissed because the Congress of which the accused was a member has ceased to exist, since, even if the question has thus become a mere abstraction, jurisdiction of the writ of error depends upon the existence of a constitutional question when the writ was sued out, and carries with it the duty of reviewing the whole case. United States v. Larkin, 208 U. S. 333, 52 L. ed. 517, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

A case which involves the application of the Constitution of the United States, and is therefore the subject of a direct appeal from a circuit court to the Supreme Court, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, is presented by a bill in equity which alleges that a contract right of a waterworks company, with whose predecessors a municipality, with legislative sanction, contracted for a municipal water supply, is impaired by an ordinance directing that the waterworks company be notified that the city denies any liability on a contract for the use of hydrants, and by the subsequent action of the city in holding an election to authorize an issue of bonds to buy or construct waterworks of its own, and in refusing to pay the amount due and payable under the terms of the contract. Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253.

The construction or application of the be in full scope according to its language without being in any way restricted or modified by the definition contained in paragraph 454, § 1, of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, but which definition was not embodied either in the commercial agreement itself or in the President's proclamation thereof.

"2. In not holding that the term 'statuary' as used in § 3 of the tariff act and in 595]said commercial agreement *with France or the President's proclamation thereof, was not subject to the definition contained in paragraph 454, Schedule N, § 1, of said tariff act.

"3. In not holding the merchandise dutiable at 15 per cent ad valorem under § 3 of the tariff act and the commercial agreement with France and the President's proclamation thereof.

"7. In holding the merchandise dutiable at 45 per cent under paragraph 193 as manufactured metal.

"8. In affirming the decision of the board of general appraisers.

"9. In not reversing the decision of the board of general appraisers and of the collector of the port, and holding the merchandise dutiable at 15 per cent under § 3 and the commercial agreement with France, as proclaimed by the President."

A motion was made by the Solicitor General to dismiss the appeal. That motion was postponed for hearing with the case upon its merits. To support the motion it is contended on behalf of the United States

Federal Constitution is not involved so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, from a decree of a circuit court enjoining state gaugers from proceeding under La. Acts 1904, p. 201, to gauge coal except as to coal sold or intended for sale by boat or barge loads or some aliquot part thereof, unless there is a question as to the relation between some provision of the Federal Constitution and the state statute. Knop v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. 211 U. S. 485, 53 L. ed. 294, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188.

A decision on the merits may be had in the Federal Supreme Court on a direct appeal taken under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, in a case involving a question under the Federal Constitution, although the circuit court dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction, and has certified the question of jurisdiction alone to the Supreme Court for decision. North American Cold Storage Co. v. Chicago, 211 U. S. 306, 53 L. ed. 195, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101, 15 Ann. Cas. 276.

See also infra, III. e.—Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 225 U. S. 272, post, —, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 47 L. ed. 909, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639.

A cross appeal to review only the non-Federal questions decided against the defendant may be taken directly to the Federal supreme court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, from a decree of the circuit court in a case in which jurisdiction was invoked both because of diverse citizenship and on constitutional grounds. Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784.

d. When constitutionality of Federal law or validity or construction of treaty is drawn in question.

Assertions of errors of construction of Federal statutes furnish no basis for jurisdiction on constitutional grounds, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court. Rakes v. United States, 212 U. S. 55, 53 L. ed. 401, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

The construction of an Indian treaty is not drawn in question in a suit in a Federal circuit court, so as to justify a direct appeal to the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, where the contentions with reference to the proper construction of such treaty are only made by way of founding an argument as to the proper construction of the act of August 7, 1882, providing for allotments in an Indian reservation, which is the issue directly in question. Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 48 L. ed. 814, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

The construction of the extradition treaties, on which the determination of the case depended in part, at least, was none the less so drawn in question by habeas corpus proceedings in a Federal circuit court as to permit a direct review of the judgment in the Supreme Court, because it also became necessary or appropriate for the court below to construe the acts of Congress passed to carry into effect the provisions of such treaties. Pettit v. Walshe, 194 U. S. 205, 48 L. ed. 938, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

The constitutional question must be real and substantial, and not wholly without merit.

The right to a direct appeal to the Supreme Court under the statute distributing appellate jurisdiction between that court and the circuit court of appeals is not established by a claim that a pertinent act of Congress is violative of the Constitution, but the claim must be real and substantial, and not merely colorable, or without reasonable foundation. Harris v. Rosenberger, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 762, 76 C. A. 225, 145 Fed. 449.

The claim that power of legislation is unconstitutionally delegated to the state legislatures by the act of July 7, 1898, § 2, adopting such punishment for offenses committed in places under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the United States as the laws of the state in which such that no question is involved which, under § 5 of the circuit court of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, 827, 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549), entitles the appellant to a direct appeal from the circuit court to this court. By the circuit court of appeals act that court is given jurisdiction to review appeals in revenue cases, and by the 6th section of the act judgments of that court in such cases are made final.

Prior to June 10, 1890, the right to a review of revenue cases was by appeal to this court from the circuit court. Rev. Stat. § 699. By the act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886), special provision was made for the review of revenue cases where the owner, importer, etc., was dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers. Under § 15 of that act an appeal was given from the decision of the board of general appraisers "as to the construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification *of such merchandise and[596 the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification . . . to the circuit court of the United States within the district in which the matter arises for a review of the questions of law and fact involved in such decision." And it was provided that the decision of the circuit court should be final, unless the court should be of the opinion that the question involved was of such importance as to require a review of such decision by places are situated "now provide" for a like offense, the punishment therefor not being otherwise provided for by any law of the United States, is too clearly unfounded to serve as the basis of a writ of error from a Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court. Franklin v. United States, 216 U. S. 559, 54 L. ed. 615, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

The contention that merchandise coming into the United States from the Canal Zone in the Isthmus of Panama could not be subjected, as is attempted by the act of March 2, 1905, to the duties imposed on merchandise imported from foreign countries, is too frivolous to serve as the basis of a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court. David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

A question of the constitutional validity of an act of Congress which has been directly determined by the Supreme Court of the United States no longer constitutes a ground for a direct appeal to that court under the statute distributing the appellate jurisdiction between it and the circuit court of appeals. Harris v. Rosenberg, supra.

The constitutionality of the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5509, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712, for such punishment of persons committing any other felony or misdemeanor, when conspiring contrary to the preceding section, as is attached to such felony or misdemeanor by the laws of the state in which the offense is committed,—is too well settled to permit the question as to such constitutionality to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court. Rakes v. United States, 212 U. S. 55, 53 L. ed. 401, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

e. When state law or Constitution is claimed to violate Federal Constitution.

A writ of error may be maintained from the Supreme Court of the United States to a circuit court, in a case in which the validity of a state statute is drawn in question as being in contravention of the Constitution of the United States. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662.
56 L. ed.

Like the other Federal questions considered supra, III. c. and d., the question must not be one wholly devoid of merit.

A claim that ten days' statutory notice of the time appointed for action upon a petition for the settlement of the final account of an executor and for the final distribution of the decedent's estate is so unreasonable as to a nonresident claimant as to be wanting in due process of law is too clearly unsubstantial and devoid of merit to furnish a basis for a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court. Goodrich v. Ferris, 214 U. S. 71, 53 L. ed. 914, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

Any question respecting the invalidity of the provisions of the West Virginia Constitution for the forfeiture of lands to the state for five years' neglect to pay taxes is too clearly foreclosed by prior decisions of the Federal Supreme Court to serve as the basis of a writ of error to a circuit court. Fay v. Crozer, 217 U. S. 455, 54 L. ed. 837, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

The contention that due process of law is denied by a tax imposed under the authority of Maryland Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 81, §§ 214, 215, upon a custodian of distilled spirits, which rests upon the theory that the taxing power of the state is, by its Constitution, confined exclusively to the levy of taxes in personam upon the owners of property, is too devoid of merit to present a substantial Federal question which will sustain a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court, where the highest state court has upheld the statute in controversy as an exercise of the taxing power of the state, and, in so doing, declared that it but reiterated and re-expounded the rulings by it previously made. Hannis Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 216 U. S. 285, 54 L. ed. 482, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326.

An appeal lies directly to the Supreme the Supreme Court of the United States, in which case an appeal was allowed to this court. It is to be observed that the cases herein referred to are strictly revenue cases, in which the decision concerns the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under the classification made. This act remained in force until amended by the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 403, chap. 205), to which we shall have occasion to refer later. In the meantime, on March 3, 1891, the circuit court of appeals act was passed, giving a direct appeal in certain cases to this court. So much of § 5 as is pertinent to this case provides:

"That appeals or writs of error may be taken from the district courts or from the existing circuit courts direct to the Supreme Court in the following cases:

In any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, is drawn in question."

The circuit court of appeals act did not repeal the revenue act to which we have referred, but broadly provided for direct appeal to this court from the circuit court in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty, etc., was drawn in question.

We think the cases show that this court, so far as it has had occasion to deal with the question, has permitted direct appeal to this court in all revenue cases where, in *addition to the objection to classification of merchandise and rate of duty imposed, a real question under § 5 has been involved.

In Anglo-California Bank v. United States, 175 U. S. 37, 44 L. ed. 64, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19, an attempt was made to take an appeal to this court from a judgment of the circuit court of appeals, affirming the decree of the circuit court, which overruled the decision of the board of general appraisers, and it was held that the appeal would not lie. In the course of the opinion, Mr. Chief Justice Fuller said that, under the act of June 10, 1890, a direct appeal would lie to this court if the circuit court certified that the question involved was of such importance as to require a review of such decision and decree by this court, but the Chief Justice pointed out that the attempted appeal was not an appeal from the circuit court directly to this court, nor did the case fall within any of the classes of cases enumerated in § 5, in which a direct appeal to this court would lie, and, moreover, that the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, prescribed a different rule as to the prosecution of appeals. While the question here made was not directly involved in that case, it is to be fairly inferred that the court would have sustained an appeal had the case been brought from the circuit Court of the United States from a decree of a circuit court dismissing a bill which is based not only upon diversity of citizenship, but upon the alleged unconstitutionality of certain municipal ordinances as impairing the obligation of a contract with the municipality under prior ordinances. Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.

A suit to enjoin the enforcement of a municipal ordinance regulating telephone rates is not one in which the Constitution or law of a state is "claimed" to violate the Federal Constitution, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), § 5, governing direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of decrees of circuit or district courts, where the first and only reference to the Federal Constitution is in the opinion of the circuit judge, on final hearing, holding that the rates are confiscatory and destructive of the telephone company's rights under that Constitution, the case as made by the bill being that the ordinance was passed without legislative authority, and its further allegations as to the confiscatory character of the ordinance being referable only, if consistency with its other provisions is to be observed, to the state Constitution, which would be violated if such allegations were true. Memphis v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 218 U. S. 624, 54 L. ed. 1185, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

A suit to enjoin a state official from enforcing the provisions of a registration and inspection law is one in which the law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, so as to permit a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court, sustaining a general demurrer to the bill for want of equity, where such bill, although averring that complainant's product is not comprehended by the statute, properly interpreted, also alleges that the defendant, who was authorized to enforce the statute, had construed it to be applicable to such product, and challenges the constitutionality of the statute as so construed. Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, post, —, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

The contention that, properly construed, the provisions of La. Acts 1904, p. 201, for gauging coal, apply to sales by weight and measurement, and, if so construed, violate the Federal Constitution, does not present a Federal question which will sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, court within the terms of § 5 and upon one of the grounds there stated.

In the case of Spreckles Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376, an appeal was allowed from the circuit court of appeals to this court, and, concerning what were revenue cases within the meaning of the circuit court of appeals act, under the 6th section, making that court's judgment final in cases arising under the revenue laws, this court said:

"So far as we now remember, this precise point has not heretofore arisen for our determination. Looking at the purpose and scope of the act of 1891, we are of opinion that the position of the government on this 598]point cannot be *sustained. It rests upon an interpretation of the act that is too technical and narrow. The meaning of the words 'arising . . . under the revenue laws,' in the 6th section, is satisfied if they are held as embracing a case strictly arising under laws providing for internal revenues, and which does not, by reason of any question in it, belong also to the class mentioned in the 5th section of that act."

While the Spreckels Case was commented on and limited in some measure in the subsequent case of Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490, nothing was said to indicate any disagreement with the definition of this court as to what was a case arising under the revenue laws, and the court said that the Spreckels Case was held not to be final in the circuit court of appeals because the original jurisdiction involved the construction of the Constitution of the United States, as well as a strictly revenue question, and that, thus construed, it was consistent with all the decisions.

From the principles laid down in these cases, we think it is plain that this court will entertain a direct review in a revenue case which involves not only questions of classification and amount of duty thereunder, as specified in the revenue act to which we have referred, but also a question under the 5th section as to the constitutionality of a law of the United States, or the validity or construction of a treaty under its authority.

Nor did the amendment of the revenue act by the act of May 27, 1908, effect any change in this respect, for its provisions with respect to the review of the decision of a circuit court are substantially identical with the act of June 10, 1890, except that the decision of a circuit court is made final, unless the court certifies that it is of the opinion that the question involved is of such importance as to require a review of such decision by the circuit court of appeals, the decree of which may be reviewed in the *Supreme Court in any of the[599 ways provided in cases arising under the revenue laws by the act approved March 3, 1891, being the circuit court of appeals act;

1891, § 5, from a decree of a Federal circuit court enjoining the state gaugers from proceeding under the state statute except as to coal sold or intended for sale by boat or barge load or some aliquot part thereof, where the statute, construed as applying to boat and barge loads, has been declared valid by the Federal Supreme Court, and appellee does not contend that the statute is invalid, but only that it is inapplicable to the facts. Knop v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. 211 U. S. 485, 53 L. ed. 294, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188.

The issue of the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, whether certified or not, is open on an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree which necessarily decided the constitutional questions as to the validity of a state statute under the Federal Constitution raised in the bill. Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 225 U. S. 272, post, —, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States to consider the whole case on a direct appeal from a circuit court, taken under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, in a case in which a state Constitution is claimed to violate the Constitution of the United States, cannot be narrowed to a review of the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a court of the United States, by a certificate of the circuit judge which raises that single question. Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 47 L. ed. 909, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639.

See also supra, III. c.—North American Cold Storage Co. v. Chicago, 211 U. S. 306, 53 L. ed. 195, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101, 15 Ann. Cas. 276.

The Federal Supreme Court, on appeal from the decision of a circuit court, may decide local questions only, and omit to decide the Federal questions as to the validity of a state statute under the Federal Constitution, which gave the lower court jurisdiction, or may decide such questions adversely to the party claiming their benefit. Silver v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213, U. S. 175, 53 L. ed. 753, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451.

The mere fact that the defeated party in a suit in a Federal circuit court set up the repugnancy of a state law to the Federal Constitution does not authorize him to maintain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, where his contention on that point was sustained. Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 191 U. S. 376, 48 L. ed. 228, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

but that act (amendment of May 27, 1908), like the act of June 10, 1890, provides only for the review of decisions of the board of general appraisers "as to the construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification." We do not think that this act changes the effect of the circuit court of appeals act, and operates to prevent an appeal here in cases really involving the Constitution of the United States or the construction of a treaty.

The government relies, in support of its motion to dismiss, on Shaw v. United States, 212 U. S. 559, 53 L. ed. 652, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687. In that case, however, the appeal was undertaken to be made directly from the circuit court because of an alleged deprivation of constitutional right, and because of the construction of a reciprocal agreement made with Italy under the tariff act of 1897. The case was dismissed on the authority of American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, 211 U. S. 155, 53 L. ed. 129, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89, in which it was held that the only real, substantial controversy concerned the construction of the tariff act of 1897. An examination of the record in the Shaw Case shows that no real constitutional question was involved, and that the assessment of duty was in accordance with the reciprocal commercial agreement with Italy. Shaw v. United States, 158 Fed. 648.

The report of the American Sugar Ref. Co. Case, to which the court referred in the Shaw Case, and which was decided at the same term (211 U. S. 155, 53 L. ed. 129, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89), shows that it was an attempt to appeal directly from the circuit court, and that this court did not think that the constitutional question made in the case had any real merit, but that the only question was a construction of the tariff act relating to the collection of duty upon 600]sugar, and *therefore this court had no jurisdiction by direct appeal. In this connection this court said:

"The present direct appeal to this court is a mere attempt to obtain a reconsideration of questions arising under the revenue laws and already determined by the circuit court of appeals [upon a former appeal] in due course. Such direct appeals [from a circuit court], under § 5 of the act of 1891, cannot be entertained unless the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States is involved."

An examination of the record in the present case shows that the importer throughout insisted that the statutory was dutiable at 15 per cent ad valorem under the reciprocal agreement between the United States and France, entered into under the authority of § 3 of the tariff act of 1897. If this contention be correct, then the assessment was wrong, and, if the reciprocal agreement referred to was a treaty within the meaning of § 5 of the circuit court of appeals act, then there was a right of direct appeal to this court.

Generally, a treaty is defined as "a compact made between two or more independent nations, with a view to the public welfare." 2 Bouvier's Law Dict. 1136. True, that under the Constitution of the United States the treaty-making power is vested in the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and a treaty must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of that body (art. 2, § 2), and treaties are declared to be the supreme law of the land (art. 6); but we are to ascertain, if possible, the intention of Congress in giving direct appeal to this court in cases involving the construction of treaties. As is well known, that act was intended to cut down and limit the jurisdiction of this court, and many cases were made final in the circuit court of appeals which theretofore came to this court, but it was thought best to preserve the right to a review by direct appeal or writ of error from a circuit court in certain matters of importance, and, among others, *those involving the construc- [601] tion of treaties. We think that the purpose of Congress was manifestly to permit rights and obligations of that character to be passed upon in the Federal court of final resort, and that matters of such vital importance, arising out of opposing constructions of international compacts, sometimes involving the peace of nations, should be subject to direct and prompt review by the highest court of the nation. While it may be true that this commercial agreement, made under authority of the tariff act of 1897, § 3, was not a treaty possessing the dignity of one requiring ratification by the Senate of the United States, it was an international compact, negotiated between the representatives of two sovereign nations, and made in the name and on behalf of the contracting countries, and dealing with important commercial relations between the two countries, and was proclaimed by the President. If not technically a treaty requiring ratification, nevertheless it was a compact authorized by the Congress of the United States, negotiated and proclaimed under the authority of its President. We think such a compact is a treaty under the circuit court of appeals act, and, where its construction is directly involved, as it is here, there is a right of review by direct appeal to this court.

Coming to the merits, the contention of the importer is that the word "statuary" should receive its popular construction, and that the term should include such a piece of cast bronze as is here involved, but we think the definition and authority of the act cannot be ignored in this connection.

The negotiation was entered into between the representatives of the two countries under the authority of § 3 of the tariff act of 1897, as we have seen. In that act the term "statuary" is defined as follows: "The term 'statuary,' as used in this act, shall be understood to include only such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise 602] wrought *by hand from a solid block or mass of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, and as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only." The reciprocal agreements were authorized with reference to "paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen-and-ink drawings, and statuary." We think this must have reference to statuary as already defined in the act, which both parties understood was the source of their authority to negotiate the reciprocal commercial agreement in question, for the agreement provides:

"It is reciprocally agreed on the part of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of the United States tariff act of 1897, that during the continuance in force of this agreement, the following articles of commerce, the product of the soil or industry of France, shall be admitted into the United States at rates of duty not exceeding the following, to wit:

"Paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen-and-ink drawings, and statuary, fifteen per centum ad valorem."

Thus in its terms the agreement was made under the authority and in accordance with § 3 of the tariff act of 1897, in which very act the term "statuary," as used therein, was specifically defined, as we have already stated.

We think that it is clear that the board of general appraisers and the circuit court did not err in finding that this bronze statue was not wrought by hand from metal. On the other hand, the testimony is clear that the statue was cast from metal by artisans employed for that purpose, and was very little touched, if at all, in its finishing, by the professional designer.

The result is that the judgment must be affirmed.

*PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, & [603
WASHINGTON RAILROAD COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.

THEODORE A. SCHUBERT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 603-616.)

Commerce — Federal regulation — employers' liability — accepting relief fund benefit.

1. Congress had the power to enforce the regulations validly prescribed by the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), § 5, by preventing the acceptance of benefits under a contract of membership in a railway relief department from operating as a bar to the recovery of damages for the injury or death of an employee, and by avoiding any agreement to that effect.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. a; Constitutional Law, 605-607, 891-894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — employers' liability act — acceptance of railway relief fund benefit.

2. Stipulations making the acceptance of benefits on account of the injury or death of an employee under a contract of membership in a railway relief department equivalent to a release of the company's liability must be deemed to fall within the condemnation in the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, § 5, of "any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act,"—especially in view of the proviso of that section permitting a set-off of any sum which the company may have contributed toward any benefit paid to the employee or his legal representative.

Master and servant — employers' liability act — existing contracts against liability.

3. Existing as well as future contracts of

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On contracts requiring servant to elect between acceptance of benefits out of a relief fund, and a prosecution of his claim in an action for damages—see note to Frank v. Newport Min. Co. 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 182.

On validity of provision in contract of railroad relief department for forfeiture of benefits in case of suit against company for damages—see note to Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Healy, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 198.

the proscribed character fall within the condemnation in the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, § 5, of "any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act."

Commerce — Federal regulation — employers' liability — invalidating existing contracts.

4. Construing the condemnation in the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, § 5, of "any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act" as embracing an existing agreement under which the acceptance of benefits on account of the injury or death of an employee under a contract of membership in a railway relief department was to release the company from liability does not render the section invalid, since such agreement must necessarily be regarded as having been made subject to the possibility that at some future time Congress might so exert its power to regulate commerce as to render the agreement unenforceable, or impair its value.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. a; Constitutional Law, 605-607, 891-894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 549.]

Argued April 29, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of plaintiff in an action against a railway company to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by an employee, in which the acceptance of benefits under a contract of membership in the company's relief department was set up as a bar to the action. Affirmed.

See same case below, 36 App. D. C. 565.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John S. Flannery and William Hitz, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

At the time the contract in this case was entered into in October, 1905, and when the employers' liability act of 1908 was passed, relief department contracts like the one pleaded in this case, by the uniform trend of decision in the Federal and state courts of this country, had been held (a) not to be against public policy, and (b) not to be contracts exempting the employer from responsibility for his negligence.

Johnson v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 163 Pa. 127, 29 Atl. 854; Atlantic Coast Line

R. Co. v. Dunning, 94 C. C. A. 128, 166 Fed. 850; Day v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 102 C. C. A. 654, 179 Fed. 26.

Courts uniformly refuse to give to a statute a retrospective operation whereby existing contracts or rights previously vested are injuriously affected unless compelled to do so by language so clear and positive as to leave no room to doubt that such was the intention of the legislature.

Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 770, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 22 L. ed. 339.

Being a statute in derogation of common-law rights, it cannot be given any broader or different meaning than its meaning naturally implies.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 290.

Mr. John A. Kratz, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. M. J. Fulton and Joseph W. Cox, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Section 5 of the employers' liability act of 1908, as applicable to the District of Columbia, is constitutional.

El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; McNamara v. Washington Terminal Co. 35 App. D. C. 230; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 572, 55 L. ed. 328, 340, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

Section 5 of the employers' liability act of 1908 is applicable to the relief-benefit contract pleaded in this case.

McNamara v. Washington Terminal Co. 35 App. D. C. 230; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 942.

The employers' liability law was passed to promote the safety of commerce by protecting those engaged in carrying it on. As one means, among others, of accomplishing that end, the right was conferred on the employees to bring civil actions for negligence. In other words. Congress declares the policy of responsibility for negligence as a means of effecting this purpose of the act.

Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 942; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 533, 52 L. ed. 323, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Narramore v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co.

48 L.R.A. 68, 37 C. C. A. 499, 96 Fed. 300; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

The act was also passed for the benefit of the men employed in the hazardous business of railroading, thousands of whom are annually killed or maimed through defects in appliances, or through negligence on the part of others over whom they have no control, and in whose selection they have no voice.

Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 950.

Congress also recognized that in the matter of making contracts the railroad companies and their employees were not on an equal footing; that contracts apparently voluntary were not so in reality; and that the railroad companies were in a position largely to defeat both objects of the law by means of contracts made with their employees at the time of employment, under which the employees would accept stated sums agreed upon in advance, in the event of injuries through negligence.

McNamara v. Washington Terminal Co. 35 App. D. C. 230.

Even before the passage of the law, carriers could not by contract exempt themselves from liability for injury to their employees caused by negligence, such contracts being void, as contrary to public policy.

9 Cyc. 544.

But there was a class of contracts in general use by railroad companies at the time of the passage of the law, recognized as valid by many, but not all, courts, which, while not expressly exempting the companies from liability for negligence, had the practical effect of enabling the companies, by contract made in advance of injury, to relieve themselves of the consequences of negligence, and to cause the employee to accept after injury the sum agreed upon in advance, although at the time of accepting it he might not consider it a fair or just judgment.

The contracts through which this result was accomplished are usually referred to as "relief benefit contracts," which generally, and perhaps always, as in the present case, became "part of the conditions of employment." These contracts were not held to bar the employee's right of action, but the acceptance under them of benefits to which the companies had contributed was held to constitute such bar.

9 Cyc. 543; Johnson v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 163 Pa. 127, 29 Atl. 854; Brown v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 6 App. D. C. 237.

Where words are susceptible of several meanings the courts will always adopt that meaning which best consists with all other provisions of the statute and its spirit and purpose as a whole.

9 Cyc. 1128, 1129; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 253; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 246, 37 L. ed. 152, 154, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

Sections 1 and 2 of the act are wholly declaratory of the common law of negligence as it existed at the time of the passage of the act, with the exception that it abolished the fellow-servant rule, which rule itself was a discredited exception to the ancient common-law rule of negligence, having been invented and first applied in the cases of Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. 1 McMull. L. 385, 36 Am. Dec. 268, and Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 49, 38 Am. Dec. 339.

See Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. Introduction; 14 Law Notes, 161; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 949.

Section 5 is constitutional not only as to contracts made since the passage of the act, but also if applied to contracts made prior thereto.

Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; McNamara v. Washington Terminal Co. 35 App. D. C. 230; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. ed. 287; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 28 L. ed. 279, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170, 312; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 949.

The courts have unanimously held that contracts for interstate transportation at special rates, though antedating the enactment of the Federal interstate commerce act, became invalid upon the enactment of the statute.

Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 10 Mont. 168, 11 L.R.A. 246, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 536, 25 Pac. 120; Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 63 Vt. 169, 13 L.R.A. 70, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 633, 22 Atl. 76; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

Courts will always, when it is possible to do so, construe a statute so as to avoid insensible meaning or absurd results, which are never to be imputed to Congress. The object designed to be reached by the act will often control the literal import of its terms and the phraseology employed; and there is always a presumption against a construction which will render a statute ineffective or inefficient, or which would cause public injury or inconvenience.

Dourousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch, 307, 314, 3 L. ed. 232, 234; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 460, 36 L. ed. 227, 228, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 293, 41 L. ed. 437, 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 213, 47 L. ed. 1016, 1021, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465; Bird v. United States, 187 U. S. 118, 124, 47 L. ed. 100, 103, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by Schubert, the defendant in error, against the Philadelphia, Baltimore, & Washington Railroad Company, to recover damages for personal injuries. He received the injuries on May 13, 1908, while in its service as a brakeman within the District, and they were due to the negligence of a fellow servant.

The company pleaded the general issue, and in addition filed a special plea that Schubert was at the time a member of its "relief fund," under a contract of membership made in 1905, in which it was agreed that the company should apply, as a voluntary contribution from his wages, $2.10 a month for the purpose of securing the benefits described in certain regulations. These contributions continued from October 18, 1905, to May 13, 1908, the date of the accident. Among the regulations, by which he agreed to be bound, was the following:

607] *"58. Should a member or his legal representative make claim, or bring suit, against the company, or against any other corporation which may be at the time associated therewith in administration of the relief departments, in accordance with the terms set forth in regulation No. 6, for damages on account of injury or death of such member, payment of benefits from the relief fund on account of the same shall not be made until such claim shall be withdrawn or suit discontinued. Any compromise of such claim or suit, or judgment in such suit, shall preclude any claim upon the relief fund for benefits on account of such injury or death, and the acceptance of benefits from the relief fund by a member or his beneficiary or beneficiaries, on account of injury or death, shall operate as a release and satisfaction of all claims against the company and any and all of the corporations associated therewith in the administration of their relief departments, for damages arising from such injury or death."

914

A stipulation that the acceptance of benefits should constitute a release from all claims for damages was also incorporated in the application for membership.

The plea further set forth that the relief fund was formed by voluntary contributions from the employees of the defendant company and other companies in association with it for the purpose, appropriations by the company whenever necessary to make up any deficit, the income or profit derived from investments of the moneys of the fund, and such gifts or legacies as might be made for its use. The companies took general charge of the department, guaranteed the fulfilment of its obligations, became responsible for the safe-keeping of its funds, supplied the necessary facilities for conducting the business of the department, and paid all its operating expenses. On December 31, 1908, the total number of employees of the defendant company was 8,458, of which 6,909 were "members of the "relief fund;" [608 during the year 1908 the company contributed, as the cost of administration, the sum of $21,557.02, and during the period of the plaintiff's membership its total contribution for this purpose was $57,610.51. In addition, the company furnished the facilities of its mail, express, and telegraph departments free of charge.

It was also alleged that after his injury Schubert (between June, 1908, and August, 1908) had voluntarily accepted benefits amounting to $79; that he had subsequently presented his claim for damages, in view of which no further payments were made, and that the acceptance of the benefits above mentioned was a bar to his action.

The court sustained a demurrer to the special plea, and Schubert recovered judgment for $7,500, which was affirmed by the court of appeals.

The questions presented by the assignments of error relate to the validity of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, chap. 149 (35 Stat. at L. 65, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), under which the action was maintained; and particularly, both to the applicability, and to the validity, if applicable, of § 5 of that act, upon which the court below based its ruling as to the insufficiency of the special plea.

That Congress did not exceed its power, in imposing the liability defined by the statute, has been decided by this court. Second Employers' Liability Cases, 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169. Section 5 provides:

"That any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act, shall to that extent be void: Provided, that in any action brought against any such common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act, such common carrier may set off therein any sum it has contributed or paid to any insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity 609] that may have been paid to the *injured employee or the person entitled thereto on account of the injury or death for which said action was brought.

With respect to this section, the court said in the case cited: "Next in order is the objection that the provision in § 5, declaring void any contract, rule, regulation, or device, the purpose or intent of which is to enable a carrier to exempt itself from the liability which the act creates, is repugnant to the 5th Amendment to the Constitution, as an unwarranted interference with the liberty of contract. But of this it suffices to say, in view of our recent decisions in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; and Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 55 L. ed. 878, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621, that if Congress possesses the power to impose that liability, which we here hold that it does, it also possesses the power to insure its efficacy by prohibiting any contract, rule, regulation, or device in evasion of it." Second Employers' Liability Cases, supra, p. 52.

In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, supra, the court had before it the amendment, made in 1898, of § 2071 of the Code of Iowa. This section, in the cases within its purview, abrogated the fellow-servant rule, and the amendment provided:

"Nor shall any contract of insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity in case of injury or death, entered into prior to the injury, between the person so injured and such corporation, or any other person or association acting for such corporation, nor shall the acceptance of any such relief, insurance, benefit, or indemnity by the person injured, his widow, heirs, or legal representatives, after the injury, from such corporation, person, or association, constitute any bar or defense to any cause of action brought under the provisions of this section; but nothing contained herein shall be construed to prevent or invalidate 610] *any settlement for damages between the parties subsequent to the injuries received."

It was held that the amendment was 56 L. ed.

valid, and hence that the defense based upon the acceptance of benefits could not be sustained. The court said (pp. 564, 572): "Neither the suggested excellence nor the alleged defects of a particular scheme may be permitted to determine the validity of the statute, which is general in its application. . . . Its provision that contracts of insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity, and the acceptance of such benefits, should not defeat recovery under the statute, was incidental to the regulation it was intended to enforce. Assuming the right of enforcement, the authority to enact this inhibition cannot be denied. If the legislature had the power to prohibit contracts limiting the liability imposed, it certainly could include in the prohibition stipulations of that sort in contracts of insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity, as well as in other agreements. . . . It does not aid the argument to describe the defense as one of accord and satisfaction. The payment of benefits is the performance of the promise to pay contained in the contract of membership. If the legislature may prohibit the acceptance of the promise as a substitution for the statutory liability, it should also be able to prevent the like substitution of its performance."

Upon similar grounds, Congress had the power to enforce the regulations validly prescribed by the act of 1908 by preventing the acceptance of benefits under such relief contracts from operating as a bar to the recovery of damages, and by avoiding any agreement to that effect. The question is whether this power has been exercised; that is, whether the stipulation of the contract of membership, asserted in defense, comes within the interdiction of § 5. The former act of June 11, 1906, chap. 3073 (34 Stat. at L. 232, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1316), which was valid as to employees engaged in commerce within the District of Columbia (Hyde v. Southern R. Co. 31 App. D. C. 466; [611 El. Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 97, 98, 54 L. ed. 106, 111, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21), contained explicit provision that such a contract or the acceptance of benefits thereunder should not defeat the action. Section 3 of that act was as follows:

"That no contract of employment, insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity for injury or death, entered into by or on behalf of any employee, nor the acceptance of any such insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity by the person entitled thereto, shall constitute any bar or defense to any action brought to recover damages for personal injuries to or death of such employee: Provided, however, that upon the trial of such action against any common carrier, the defendant may set off therein any sum it has contributed toward any such insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity that may have been paid to the injured employee, or, in case of his death, to his personal representative."

But it is urged that the substituted provision—of § 5 of the act of 1908—failed to embrace that which the earlier act specifically described. We cannot assent to this view. The evident purpose of Congress was to enlarge the scope of the section, and to make it more comprehensive by a generic, rather than a specific, description. It thus brings within its purview "any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act." It includes every variety of agreement or arrangement of this nature; and stipulations, contained in contracts of membership in relief departments, that the acceptance of benefits thereunder shall bar recovery, are within its terms. The statute provides that "every common carrier by railroad in . . . the District of Columbia . . . shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier . . . 612]resulting *in whole or part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier, or by reason of any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, works, boats, wharves, or other equipment." That is the liability which the act defines and which this action is brought to enforce. It is to defeat that liability for the damages sustained by Schubert which otherwise the company would be bound under the statute to pay, that it relies upon his contract of membership in the relief fund, and upon the regulation which was a part of it. But for the stipulation in that contract, the company must pay; and if the stipulation be upheld, the company is discharged from liability. The conclusion cannot be escaped that such an agreement is one for immunity in the described event, and as such it falls under the condemnation of the statute.

If there could be doubt upon this point, it would be resolved by a consideration of the proviso of § 5, which immediately follows the language condemning contracts, rules, regulations, or devices, the purpose of which is to exempt the carrier from liability. It is: "Provided, that in any action brought against any such common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act, such common carrier may set off therein any sum it has contributed or paid to any insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity that may have been paid to the injured employee or the person entitled thereto on account of the injury or death for which said action was brought." The practice of maintaining relief departments, which had been extensively adopted, and of including in the contract of membership provision for release from liability to employees who accepted benefits, was well known to Congress, as is shown by § 3 of the act of 1906. On specifically providing in that section that neither such contracts, nor their performance, should be a bar to recovery, Congress inserted *a proviso permitting a set-off[613 of any sum the company had contributed toward any benefit paid to the employee. When, in the act of 1908, it enlarged the scope of the clause defining the contracts and arrangements for immunity which should not prevail, Congress retained the proviso in terms substantially the same. This clearly indicates the intent to include within the statute stipulations which made the acceptance of benefits under contracts of membership in relief departments equivalent to a release from liability. Unless the liability survived the acceptance of benefits, there could be no recovery, and hence no occasion for set-off.

It is also insisted that the statute does not cover the agreement in this case, as it was made before the statute was enacted. But that the provisions of § 5 were intended to apply as well to existing, as to future, contracts and regulations of the described character, cannot be doubted. The words, "the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act," do not refer simply to an actual intent of the parties to circumvent the statute. The "purpose or intent" of the contracts and regulations, within the meaning of the section, is to be found in their necessary operation and effect in defeating the liability which the statute was designed to enforce. Only by such general application could the statute accomplish the object which it is plain that Congress had in view.

Nor can the further contention be sustained that, if so construed, the section is invalid. The power of Congress, in its regulation of interstate commerce, and of commerce in the District of Columbia and in the territories, to impose this liability, was not fettered by the necessity of maintaining existing arrangements and stipulations which would conflict with the execution of its policy. To subordinate the exercise of the Federal authority to the continuing operation of previous contracts 614] would be to place, *to this extent, the regulation of interstate commerce in the hands of private individuals, and to withdraw from the control of Congress so much of the field as they might choose, by prophetic discernment, to bring within the range of their agreements. The Constitution recognizes no such limitation. It is of the essence of the delegated power of regulation that, within its sphere, Congress should be able to establish uniform rules, immediately obligatory, which, as to future action, should transcend all inconsistent provisions. Prior arrangements were necessarily subject to this paramount authority.

In speaking of the act in question, this court said that "the natural tendency of the changes described is to impel the carriers to avoid or prevent the negligent acts and omissions which are made the bases of the rights of recovery which the statute creates and defines; and, as whatever makes for that end tends to promote the safety of the employees, and to advance the commerce in which they are engaged," there was no doubt that, "in making those changes, Congress acted within the limits of the discretion confided to it by the Constitution." Second Employers' Liability Cases, 223 U. S. 51, ante, 346, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175. If Congress may compel the use of safety appliances (Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158), or fix the hours of service of employees (Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 55 L. ed. 878, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621), its declared will, within its domain, is not to be thwarted by any previous stipulation to dispense with the one or to extend the other. And so, when it decides to protect the safety of employees by establishing rules of liability of carriers for injuries sustained in the course of their service, it may make the rules uniformly effective. These principles, and the authorities which sustain them, have been so lately reviewed by this court that extended discussion is unnecessary. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

In that case it appeared that in 1871, 615] in settlement of a *claim for damages for personal injuries, the plaintiffs had entered into an agreement with the railroad company by which the latter promised that during their lives they should have free passes upon the railroad and its branches. It was held that the company rightfully refused, after the passage of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591. U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 56 L. ed.

1288), further to comply with the agreement, and that a decree requiring the continued performance of its provisions was erroneous. The ground for this conclusion was thus stated (pp. 482-486): "The agreement between the railroad company and the Mottleys must necessarily be regarded as having been made subject to the possibility that, at some future time, Congress might so exert its whole constitutional power in regulating interstate commerce as to render that agreement unenforceable, or to impair its value. That the exercise of such power may be hampered or restricted to any extent by contracts previously made between individuals or corporations is inconceivable. The framers of the Constitution never intended any such state of things to exist. . . . After the commerce act came into effect no contract that was inconsistent with the regulations established by the act of Congress could be enforced in any court. The rule upon this subject is thoroughly established. . . . If that principle be not sound, the result would be that individuals and corporations could, by contracts between themselves, in anticipation of legislation, render of no avail the exercise by Congress, to the full extent authorized by the Constitution, of its power to regulate commerce. No power of Congress can be thus restricted. The mischiefs that would result from a different interpretation of the Constitution will be readily perceived." See also Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 228, 44 L. ed. 136, 142, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

*We find no error in the rulings of [616] which the plaintiff in error complains, and the judgment of the court below is therefore affirmed.

JAMES H. GRAHAM, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616-631.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — punishing habitual criminals.
1. A former convict is not denied due process of law by bringing him, after conviction, before the court of another county in a separate proceeding instituted conformably to W. Va. Code, chap. 165, §§ 1-5, by information charging him with prior convictions, which were not alleged in the indictment on which he was last tried and convicted, and, on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, sentencing him to the additional punishment which chap. 152, §§ 23, 24, in such cases prescribes. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On enhancing penalty for crimes when committed by habitual criminals or prior offenders—see notes to Re Miller, 34 L.R.A. 398; Com. v. McDermott, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 431; and McDonald v. Com. 45 L. ed. U. S. 542.

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — punishing habitual criminals.

2. Bringing a convict after judgment before the court of another county in a separate proceeding instituted conformably to W. Va. Code, chap. 165, §§ 1-5, by information charging him with prior convictions which were not alleged in the indictment on which he was last tried and convicted, and, on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, sentencing him to the additional punishment which chap. 152, §§ 23, 24, in such cases prescribes, does not deny him the equal protection of the laws because of the difference in procedure between the case where the fact of former conviction is alleged in the indictment and determined by the jury on the trial of the charge of crime, and the case where it is charged in the information, and determined by a jury in a proceeding thereby instituted.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, §§ 397-401, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — former jeopardy — punishing habitual criminal.

3. A former convict is not placed twice in jeopardy by bringing him after conviction before the court of another county in a separate proceeding instituted conformably to W. Va. Code, chap. 165, §§ 1-5, by information charging him with prior convictions which were not alleged in the indictment on which he was last tried and convicted, and, on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, sentencing him to the additional punishment which chap. 152, §§ 23, 24, in such cases prescribes.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, 84, 85, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — privileges and immunities — punishing habitual criminal.

4. None of the privileges or immunities of a former convict as a citizen of the United States are abridged by bringing him, after conviction, before the court of another county in a separate proceeding instituted conformably to W. Va. Code, chap. 165, §§ 1-5, by information charging him with prior convictions which were not alleged in the indictment on which he was last tried and convicted, and, on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, sentencing him to the additional punishment which chap. 152, §§ 23, 24, in such cases prescribes.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 397-401, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — cruel and unusual punishment — habitual criminals.

5. Cruel and unusual punishment is not inflicted upon a former convict by bringing him, after conviction, before the court of another county in a separate proceeding instituted conformably to W. Va. Code, chap. 165, §§ 1-5, by information charging him with prior convictions which were not alleged in the indictment on which he was last tried and convicted, and, on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, sentencing him to the additional punishment which chap. 152, §§ 23, 24, in such cases prescribes.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 721.]

Argued April 17, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Marshall County, in that state, sentencing an habitual criminal to imprisonment for life. Affirmed.

See same case below, 68 W. Va. 248, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 69 S. E. 1010.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. D. W. Baker argued the cause, and Messrs. Frank J. Hogan, Everett F. Moore, and D. B. Evans filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The defendant is a person within the jurisdiction of the state of West Virginia, and is denied by the state the equal protection of the laws.

Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 272, 273, 42 L. ed. 461, 464, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis), 101 U. S. 22-33, 25 L. ed. 989-993; Re Lowrie, 8 Colo. 499, 54 Am. Rep. 558, 9 Pac. 489; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 556-561, 46 L. ed. 679, 688-690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 697, 698, 34 L. ed. 816, 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; State v. Lewin, 53 Kan. 679, 37 Pac. 168; Budd v. State, 3 Humph. 483, 39 Am. Dec. 189; Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 48 L. ed. 417, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 295, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 100-112, 46 L. ed. 92, 106-110, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Re Landford, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 437, 57 Fed. 570.

The defendant is deprived of his liberty and property by the state of West Virginia without due process of the law.

Stoutenburgh v. Frazier, 48 L.R.A. 220, 16 App. D. C. 235; Curry v. District of Columbia, 14 App. D. C. 439; Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 77; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 43, 55 L. ed. 78, 80, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 226, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136, Ann. Cas. 1912a, 463; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 81, 82, 55 L. ed. 369, 378, 379, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 448, 34 L. ed. 519, 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 383, 42 L. ed. 780, 788, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

The defendant's privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States are abridged by the state of West Virginia in making and enforcing W. Va. Code, chap. 165, as he is thereby denied his immunity from double jeopardy.

Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Re Butler, 138 Mich. 453, 101 N. W. 630; Herndon v. Com. 105 Ky. 197, 88 Am. St. Rep. 303, 48 S. W. 989; Oliver v. Com. 113 Ky. 228, 67 S. W. 983; Com. v. Phillips, 11 Pick. 28; Satterfield v. Com. 105 Va. 867, 52 S. E. 979; Scott v. Chichester, 107 Va. 933, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 304, 60 S. E. 95; People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 541, 51 N. E. 288; Paetz v. State, 129 Wis. 174, 107 N. W. 1090, 9 Ann. Cas. 767; Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 N. W. 150; People ex rel. Cosgriff v. Craig, 195 N. Y. 190, 88 N. E. 38; State v. Gordon, 35 Mont. 458, 90 Pac. 173.

The statute and sentence inflict cruel and unusual punishment on the defendant.

McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Weems v. United States, 217 U. S. 349, 362-382, 54 L. ed. 793, 796-805, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544, 19 Ann. Cas. 705; Stoutenburgh v. Frazier, 48 L.R.A. 220, 16 App. D. C. 229; Howard v. North Carolina, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 446, 34 L. ed. 519, 523, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 158, 35 L. ed. 971, 973, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156.

Mr. William G. Conley, Attorney General of West Virginia, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The constitutionality of laws providing for the imposition of additional penalties upon habitual criminals is no longer an open question.

Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. 56 L. ed.

Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

A proceeding under the West Virginia statute was not a "holding to answer" within the meaning of the Constitution of West Virginia.

State v. Graham, 68 W. Va. 248, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 69 S. E. 1010. See also Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 171.

An indictment was necessary at common law, yet the states may abolish that form of procedure if they wish.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 173, 174, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 263, 48 L. ed. 965, 970, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

The statute merely provides a means of identification.

Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 165; King v. Lynn, 90 Va. 345, 18 S. E. 439.

The defendant is not denied the equal protection of the laws because the legislature prescribed that identification should be made upon an information.

Finley v. California, 222 U. S. 28, ante, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 209, 32 L. ed. 107, 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 413, 54 L. ed. 817, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Fifth Ave. Coach Co. v. New York, 221 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 815, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Provident Inst. for Savings v. Malone, 221 U. S. 660, 55 L. ed. 899, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1129, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

There is no constitutional provision requiring an indictment or presentment of a grand jury in this character of proceeding. The legislature is therefore free to provide other fair means of plainly informing the accused of the charge against him. It has provided an information. This is due process of law.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

The plaintiff in error was not twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.

Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 171; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The sentence in this case is not so disproportionate to the offense as to be cruel and unusual.

Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

In April, 1898, the plaintiff in error, James H. Graham, then known as John H. Ratliff, was indicted for grand larceny in Pocahontas county, West Virginia, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. In April, 1901, under the name of Ratliff, he was indicted for burglary in Pocahontas county, West Virginia, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years. In October, 1906, he was granted a parole by the governor of West Virginia upon condition that he should pursue the course of a law-abiding citizen. In September, 1907, under 621] the name of John H. Graham, *alias J. H. Gray, he was indicted in Wood county, West Virginia, for grand larceny, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for five years.

In February, 1908, the prosecuting attorney for Marshall county, in which the penitentiary was located, presented an information to the circuit court of that county, alleging that the convict Graham was the same man who had twice before been convicted as above stated. Graham was brought before the court, and pleaded that he was not the same person. Later he withdrew his plea, moved to quash the information, and on denial of the motion renewed the plea. A jury was called, and after hearing evidence for the prosecutor the defendant offering none, returned a verdict identifying him as the person previously convicted. Thereupon the defendant moved for arrest of judgment upon the ground that the proceeding was in violation of the Constitution of the state, and also contrary to the 5th and 14th Amendments of the Constitution of the United States. The motion was overruled and the court sentenced the prisoner to confinement in the penitentiary for life. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of West Virginia. 68 W. Va. 248, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 69 S. E. 1010. And the case comes here on error.

The proceeding was taken under §§ 1 to 5 of chapter 165 of the Code of West Virginia, which are as follows:

"1. All criminal proceedings against convicts in the penitentiary shall be in the circuit court of the county of Marshall.

"2. When a prisoner convicted of an offense, and sentenced to confinement therefor in the penitentiary, is received therein, if he was before sentenced to a like punishment, and the record of his conviction does not show that he has been sentenced under the 23d or 24th section of chapter 152, the superintendent of the penitentiary shall give *information thereof, without de- [622 lay, to the said circuit court of the county of Marshall, whether it be alleged or not in the indictment on which he was so convicted, that he had been before sentenced to a like punishment.

"3. The said court shall cause the convict to be brought before it, and upon an information filed, setting forth the several records of conviction, and alleging the identity of the prisoner with the person named in each, shall require the convict named to say whether he is the same person or not.

"4. If he say he is not, or remain silent, his plea, or the fact of his silence, shall be entered of record, and a jury shall be empaneled to inquire whether the convict is the same person mentioned in the several records.

"5. If the jury find that he is not the same person, he shall be remanded to the penitentiary; but if they find that he is the same person, or if he acknowledge in open court, after being duly cautioned, that he is the same person, the court shall sentence him to such further confinement as is prescribed by chapter 152, on a second or third conviction, as the case may be."

The provisions of §§ 23 and 24 of chapter 152, to which the above statute refers, are:

"23. When any person in convicted of an offense and sentenced to confinement therefor in the penitentiary, and it is alleged in the indictment on which he is convicted, and admitted, or by the jury found, that he had been before sentenced in the United States to a like punishment, he shall be sentenced to be confined five years in addition to the time to which he is or would be otherwise sentenced."

"24. When any such convict shall have been twice before sentenced in the United States to confinement in a penitentiary, he shall be sentenced to be confined in the penitentiary for life."

*These statutes were derived from [623 the laws which were in force in Virginia before West Virginia was created, and formed part of the Code of Virginia of 1860, chap. 199, which in turn had been taken from the Code of 1849, chap. 199.

The plaintiff in error challenges the validity of the legislation and the proceedings which it authorized, upon the grounds: (1) that he has been deprived of his liberty without due process of law; (2) that he has been denied the equal protection of the laws; (3) that his privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States have been abridged, and that he has been denied his immunity from double jeopardy; and (4) that cruel and unusual punishment has been inflicted.

1. The propriety of inflicting severer punishment upon old offenders has long been recognized in this country and in England. They are not punished the second time for the earlier offense, but the repetition of criminal conduct aggravates their guilt and justifies heavier penalties when they are again convicted. Statutes providing for such increased punishment were enacted in Virginia and New York as early as 1796 and in Massachusetts in 1804; and there have been numerous acts of similar import in many states. This legislation has uniformly been sustained in the state courts (Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 165, 170; Plumbly v. Com. 2 Met. 413, 415; Com. v. Richardson, 175 Mass. 202, 205, 55 N. E. 988; Rand v. Com. 9 Gratt. 740, 741; King v. Lynn, 90 Va. 345, 347, 18 S. E. 439; People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 114, 17 Am. Rep. 401; People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 609, 79 Pac. 283; Ingalls v. State, 48 Wis. 647, 4 N. W. 785; Maguire v. State, 47 Md. 485; State v. Austin, 113 Mo. 538, 21 S. W. 31, and it has been held by this court not to be repugnant to the Federal Constitution. Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

In the McDonald Case, the statute (Mass. Stat. 1887, chap. 435, § 1) provided that 624] whenever one had been twice *convicted of crime and committed to prison in Massachusetts, or in any other state, he should, upon conviction of a subsequent felony, be deemed to be an "habitual criminal," and should be punished by imprisonment for twenty-five years. In delivering the opinion of the court, Mr. Justice Gray said (p. 312):

"The fundamental mistake of the plaintiff in error is his assumption that the judgment below imposes an additional punishment on crimes for which he had already been convicted and punished in Massachusetts and in New Hampshire.

"But it does no such thing. . . . The punishment is for the new crime only, but is the heavier if he is an habitual criminal. . . . The allegation of previous convictions is not a distinct charge of crimes, but is necessary to bring the case within the statute, and goes to the punishment only."

56 L. ed.

In the present case, it was not charged in the indictment on which the prisoner was last tried that he had previously been convicted of other offenses, but after judgment he was brought before the court of another county, in a separate proceeding instituted by information, and on the finding of the jury that he was the former convict, he was sentenced to the additional punishment which the statute in such case prescribed.

By this proceeding he was not held to answer for an offense; the information did not allege crime. As was said by the supreme court of appeals of West Virginia: "It [the information] alleges that he has been held to answer for crime, and that he stands convicted of it through the indictment of a grand jury. It points him out as a convict already held, upon whom rests the general sentence of the law of life imprisonment. . . . The proceedings under the statute are for identification only. They are clearly not for the establishment of guilt. The question of guilt is not reopened." 68 *W. Va. 248, 251.—[625 L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 69 S. E. 1010. Full opportunity was accorded to the prisoner to meet the allegation of former conviction. Plainly, the statute contemplated a valid conviction which had not been set aside or the consequences of which had not been removed by absolute pardon. No question as to this can be raised here, for the prisoner in no way sought to contest the validity or unimpaired character of the former judgments, but pleaded that he was not the person who had thus been convicted. On this issue he had due hearing before a jury.

It cannot be said that the prisoner was deprived of due process of law because the question as to former conviction was passed upon separately. While it is familiar practice to set forth in the indictment the fact of prior conviction of another offense, and to submit to the jury the evidence upon that issue, together with that relating to the commission of the crime which the indictment charges, still in its nature it is a distinct issue, and it may appropriately be the subject of separate determination. Provision for a separate and subsequent determination of his identity with the former convict has not been regarded as a deprivation of any fundamental right. It was established by statute in England that, although the fact was alleged in the indictment, the evidence of the former conviction should not be given to the jury until they had found their verdict on the charge of crime. The act of 6 & 7 Wm. IV. chap. 111, provided that it should "not be lawful on the trial of any person for any such subsequent felony to charge the jury to inquire concerning such previous conviction until after they shall have inquired concerning such subsequent felony, and shall have found such person guilty of the same; and whenever in any indictment such previous conviction shall be stated, the reading of such statement to the jury as part of the indictment shall be deferred until after such finding, as aforesaid." Exception was made in cases where the accused gave evidence 626] *of good character to meet the charge of crime, whereupon the prosecutor might show the former conviction before the verdict of guilty had been returned. And in Reg. v. Shuttleworth, 3 Car. & K. 375, 376, Lord Campbell thus stated the practice under the statute: "It is the opinion of all the judges: The prisoner is to be arraigned on the whole indictment, and the jury are to have the new charge only stated to them, and if no evidence is given as to character, nothing is to be read to the jury of the previous conviction till the jury have given a verdict as to the new charge. The jury, without being resworn, are then to have the previous conviction stated to them; and the certificate of it is to be put in, and the prisoner's identity proved." See 24 & 25 Vict. chap. 96, § 116.

If a state adopts the policy of imposing heavier punishment for repeated offending, there is manifest propriety in guarding against the escape from this penalty of those whose previous conviction was not suitably made known to the court at the time of their trial. Otherwise, criminals who change their place of operation and successfully conceal their identity would be punished simply as first offenders, although on entering prison they would immediately be recognized as former convicts. It is to prevent such a frustration of its policy that provision is made for alternative methods; either by alleging the fact of prior conviction in the indictment and showing it upon the trial, or by a subsequent proceeding in which the identity of the prisoner may be ascertained and he may be sentenced to the full punishment fixed by law. Plumbly v. Com. 2 Met. 413, 415, per Shaw, Ch. J.). In the latter proceeding, as well as in the former, the fundamental rights of the defendant with respect to the ascertainment of his liability to the increased penalty may be fully protected.

Nor is there any reason why such a proceeding should not be prosecuted upon an 627] information presented by a *competent public officer on his oath of office. There is no occasion for an indictment. To repeat, the inquiry is not into the commission of an offense; as to this, indictment has already been found and the accused convicted. There remains simply the question as to the fact of previous conviction. And it cannot be contended that in proceeding by information instead of by indictment, there is any violation of the requirement of due process of law. Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 175, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 584, 44 L. ed. 597, 598, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

The principles governing a proceeding of this sort, to inquire into the fact of prior conviction, were stated in Ross's Case (1824) 2 Pick. 165, 169-171. The legislature of Massachusetts (Stat. 1817, chap. 176 approved February 23, 1818) had provided for increased punishment upon second and third convictions. Reciting that the previous conviction might not be known to the grand jury or to the attorney for the commonwealth at the time of the indictment and trial, the statute contained the following provision closely resembling the one now under consideration:

"That whenever it shall appear to the warden of the state prison, . . . that any convict, received into the same, pursuant to the sentence of any court shall have before been sentenced, by competent authority of this or any other state, to confinement to hard labor for term of life or years, it shall be the duty of the said warden . . . to make representation thereof, as soon as may be, to the attorney or solicitor general; and they or either of them shall, by information or other legal process, cause the same to be made known to the justices of the supreme judicial court, . . . and the said justices shall cause the person or persons, so informed against, to be brought before them, in order that, if he deny the fact of a former conviction, it may be tried according to law, whether the charge contained in such *information 628 be true. And if it appear by the confession of the party, by verdict of the jury, or otherwise, according to law, that said information is true, the court shall forthwith proceed to award against such convict the residue of the punishment provided in the foregoing section; otherwise the said convict shall be remanded to prison, there to be held on his former sentence." Laws of Mass. 1815-1818, pp. 602, 603. Ross, then undergoing sentence for five years, was brought before the court pursuant to such an information, and his term of imprisonment was increased. In sustaining this sentence, the court, by Parker, Ch. J., said:

"In regard to the objection made to the process, this is not an information of an offense for which a trial is to be had, but of a fact; namely, that the prisoner has already been convicted of an offense; and this fact must appear, either by his own confession, or by verdict of a jury, or otherwise, according to law, before he can be sentenced to the additional punishment. Is he to be sentenced for an offense distinct from the one for which he has been tried upon an indictment? We apprehend not; but the only question is whether he is such a person as ought to have been sentenced, on his last conviction, to additional punishment, if the fact of a former conviction had then been known to the court. There was no need of a presentment by a grand jury, for no offense was to be inquired into. That had been already done. An indictment is confined to the question whether an offense has been committed. Here the question was simply whether the party had been convicted of an offense.

"It is said that at common law both offenses should be stated in the same count. The question upon this is whether the legislature had not a right to prescribe a different mode; and we think they had."

In the case at bar, the record is silent upon the question whether the fact of the 629]former convictions was known *at the time of the last indictment and trial. This, however, cannot be regarded as important from the constitutional standpoint. The indictment did not allege the prior convictions; the issue was not involved in the trial of the indictment, and the court could not have considered these convictions in imposing sentence. State v. Davis, 68 W. Va. 142, 150, 151, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 501, 69 S. E. 639, Ann. Cas. 1912a, 996. They were not considered until the subsequent proceeding was had. Doubtless, as has been said, the object in providing the alternative proceeding is to make sure that old offenders should not be immune from the increased punishment because their former conviction was not known when they were last tried. But this does not define the limit of state power. Although the state may properly provide for the allegation of the former conviction in the indictment, for a finding by the jury on this point in connection with its verdict as to guilt, and thereupon for the imposition of the full sentence prescribed, there is no constitutional mandate which requires the state to adopt this course even where the former conviction is known. It may be convenient practice, but it is not obligatory. This conclusion necessarily follows from the distinct nature of the issue and from the fact, so frequently stated, that it does not relate to the commission of the offense, but goes to the punishment only, and therefore it may be subsequently decided.

2. It is insisted that the plaintiff in error was denied the equal protection of the laws, 56 L. ed.

in that the statute arbitrarily discriminates against the former convict—in a case like the present one—by requiring an information, instead of indictment, for the sole reason that he has been received into the penitentiary; so that, as the plaintiff in error puts it, "if he be out of the penitentiary, the defendant must be prosecuted by indictment in order to inflict the increased penalty; but if he be in the penitentiary, he is denied the right to indictment, and must be prosecuted by information."

*The argument is without merit.[630 The statute in question applies to all those "convicted of an offense, and sentenced to confinement therefor in the penitentiary," who previously have been sentenced to a like punishment. The fact of such sentence, indicating the gravity of the offense, affords a reasonable basis for classification. Those who have been so sentenced once before, and those who have been so sentenced twice before, are subjected, respectively, to the same measure of increased punishment. In all cases, before the increased punishment can be inflicted, there must be conviction on the new charge; the former conviction must be shown, and there must be a finding by a jury, if the fact is contested, of the identity of the defendant with the former convict. The distinction, upon which the contention is based, has regard simply to the difference in procedure between the case where the fact of former conviction is alleged in the indictment, and determined by the jury on the trial of the charge of crime, and the case where it is charged in the information, and determined by a jury in a proceeding thereby instituted. This, in view of the nature of the issue to be determined, cannot be said to give rise to a substantial difference in right, or to any inequality within the meaning of the constitutional provision.

The 14th Amendment is not to be construed "as introducing a factitious equality without regard to practical differences that are best met by corresponding differences of treatment." Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 413, 420, 54 L. ed. 817, 820, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543. A state may make different arrangements for trials under different circumstances of even the same class of offenses (Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 177, 44 L. ed. 119, 121, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lang v. New Jersey, 209 U. S. 467, 52 L. ed. 894, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594); and certainly it may suitably adapt to the exigency the method of determining whether a person found guilty of crime has previously been 631] convicted of *other offenses. All who were in like case with the plaintiff in error were subject to the same procedure. He belonged to a class of persons convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary whose identity as former convicts had not been determined at the time of their trial. As to these, it was competent for the state to provide appropriate means for determining such identity.

3. What has been said, and the authorities which have been cited, sufficiently show that there is no basis for the contention that the plaintiff in error has been put in double jeopardy, or that any of his privileges or immunities as a citizen of the United States have been abridged. Nor can it be maintained that cruel and unusual punishment has been inflicted. Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Howard v. North Carolina, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 51 L. ed. 666, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 111, 53 L. ed. 417, 430, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

The questions raised under the Constitution of the state are not open here, and in no aspect of the case does it appear that any right of the plaintiff in error under the Constitution of the United States has been infringed.

Judgment affirmed.

632] *CROSS LAKE SHOOTING AND FISHING CLUB, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF LOUISIANA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 632-640.)

Error to state court — Federal question — impairing contract obligations — judicial decision.

1. Mere errors committed by a state court when passing upon the validity and effect of a contract under the laws in existence when it was made cannot give rise to a question of the impairment of contract obligations, reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error, where no effect has been given to any subsequent legislation, even though the rulings are not in accord with prior decisions, on the faith of which the rights in question were acquired. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1709-1714, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — impairing contract obligations.

2. A decree of a state court avoiding a conveyance by the board of commissioners of the Caddo levee district under the supposed authority of La. Acts 1892, No. 74, § 9, on the ground that under that section, properly construed, the board had no authority to sell until a proper instrument conveying the land to the board had been duly executed by the proper state officers, does not give effect to Acts 1902, No. 171, repealing the earlier act, so as to present a question of the impairment of contract obligations, reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1376-1392, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 46.]

Argued April 18, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the District Court for the Parish of Caddo, in that state, adjudged the state to be the owner of land theretofore conveyed by the board of commissioners of the Caddo levee district. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 123 La. 208, 48 So. 891.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edgar H. Farrar argued the cause, and, with Mr. John D. Wilkinson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A state court cannot oust the jurisdiction of this court by dodging a Federal question which inheres in the case, either by neglecting or declining to decide the question, or by attempting to evade it. This court will itself look into the case and decide, irrespective of the views expressed by the state court:

First. What was the contract set up by the party who claims its obligation has been violated?

Second. Has the obligation of the contract, as found by this court, been violated by subsequent state action, either by legislation or by judicial decision equivalent

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On error to state courts in cases presenting questions of impairment of contract obligations—see note to Osborne v. Clark, 51 L. ed. U. S. 619.

to legislation, as was held in Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 687, 25 L. ed. 971, and Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 570, 49 L. ed. 877, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Louisiana ex rel. Hubert v. New Orleans, 215 U. S. 175, 54 L. ed. 147, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 443, 17 L. ed. 177; Bridge Proprs. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 145, 17 L. ed. 571, 576; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 793, 25 L. ed. 921, 922; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 664, 667, 34 L. ed. 305, 306, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 501, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 204, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

Mr. W. P. Hall argued the cause, and, with Mr. Walter Guion, Attorney General of Louisiana, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The authority conferred by a state on its courts to hear and determine cases is not the kind of authority referred to in § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), which declares that this court has the right to review a judgment of the highest court of a state "where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any state."

Bethell v. Demaret, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007.

A decision on questions of compliance with the Constitution or statutes of a state does not involve a Federal question.

Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52, 32 L. ed. 640, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Missouri ex rel. Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Harris, 144 U. S. 210, 36 L. ed. 407, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 838; Sage v. Board of Liquidation, 144 U. S. 647, 36 L. ed. 577, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 35 L. ed. 971, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156.

Where a state law is admitted to be valid, and the only question is whether it has been correctly construed, this court has no jurisdiction.

Congdon v. Goodman, 2 Black. 574, 17 L. ed. 257; Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L. ed. 181; Lessieur v. Price, 12 How. 59, 13 L. ed. 893; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Smith v. Hunter, 7 How. 738, 12 L. ed. 894.

A decision of the state court resting upon the construction, and not upon the validity, of a statute of the state, does not present a Federal question.

Grand Gulf R. & Bkg. Co. v. Marshall, 12 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 938; Ferry v. King County, 141 U. S. 668, 35 L. ed. 895, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Snell v. Chicago, 152 U. S. 191, 38 L. ed. 408, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States cannot be sustained on the ground that the judgment of the state court impairs or fails to give effect to a contract.

Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 383, 20 L. ed. 414, 415; New York v. Central R. Co. 12 Wall. 455, 20 L. ed. 458; Hopkins v. McLure, 133 U. S. 380, 33 L. ed. 660, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 350, 351, 46 L. ed. 936, 943, 944, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Todd County, 142 U. S. 282, 35 L. ed. 1014, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

A decision of a state supreme court that certain railroad aid bonds were void under the Constitution and statutes of the state, in force at the time the bonds were issued, there being no subsequent legislation on the subject, is not subject to review on the ground that the contract was impaired by the decision of the state court.

Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464.

This court has no jurisdiction to review a judgment of a state court on writ of error, when such jurisdiction is based upon an alleged impairment of a contract by reason of the alteration by a state court of a construction theretofore given by it to such contract, or to a particular statute or series of statutes in existence when the contract was entered into.

Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 647, 48 L. ed. 828, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit by the state of Louisiana 633] against the *Cross Lake Shooting and Fishing Club, to recover about 11,000 acres of land, in the parish of Caddo, in that state, of which the fishing club was in possession, and to which it was asserting title, under a sale and deed made to its remote grantors by the board of commissioners of the Caddo levee district. Although defeated in the district court, the state prevailed in the supreme court, and there obtained a final judgment in its favor. 123 La. 208, 48 So. 891. The fishing club has brought the case here, claiming that the judgment gave effect to a state law which impinged upon the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States.

The facts are these: By act No. 74 of 1892, the legislature of the state created the Caddo levee district, defined its boundaries, vested the control and management of its affairs in a board of commissioners, clothed the board with corporate powers, and made to it a grant of state lands in the following terms:

"Sec. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That in order to provide additional means to carry out the purposes of this act, and to furnish resources to enable the said board to assist in developing, establishing, and completing the levee system in the said district, all lands now belonging or that may hereafter belong to the state of Louisiana, and embraced within the limits of the levee district as herein constituted, shall be and the same are hereby granted, given, bargained, donated, conveyed, and delivered unto the said board of commissioners of the Caddo levee district, whether the said lands or parts of lands were originally granted by the Congress of the United States to the state of Louisiana, or whether the said lands have been or may hereafter be forfeited, or bought in by or for, or sold to the state at tax sale for nonpayment of taxes; where the state has or may hereafter become the owner of lands by or through tax sales, conveyances thereof shall only be made to the said board of levee commis- 634] sioners *after the period of redemption shall have expired; provided, however, any and all former owners of lands which have been forfeited to purchasers by or sold to the state for nonpayment of taxes may at any time within six months next ensuing after the passage of this act redeem the said lands or all of them upon paying to the treasurer of this state all taxes, costs, and penalties due thereon, down to the date of the said redemption; but such redemption shall be deemed and be taken to be sales of lands by the state, and all and every sum or sums of money so received shall be placed to the credit of the Caddo levee district. After the expiration of the said six months it shall be the duty of the auditor and register of the state land office, on behalf of and in the name of the state, to convey to the said board of levee commissioners by proper instruments of conveyance, all lands hereby granted or intended to be granted and conveyed to the said board whenever, from time to time, the said auditor or register of the state land office or either of them shall be requested to do so by the said board of levee commissioners or by the president thereof, and thereafter the said president of the said board shall cause the said conveyances to be properly recorded in the recorder's office of the respective parishes wherein the said lands are located, and when the said conveyances are so recorded the title to the said lands, with the possession thereof, shall from thenceforth vest absolutely in the said board of commissioners, its successors or grantees. The said lands shall be exempted from taxes after being conveyed to, and while they remain in the possession or under the control of, the said board. The said board of levee commissioners shall have the power and authority to sell, mortgage, and pledge, or otherwise dispose of, the said lands in such quantities, and at such times, and at such prices, as to the board may seem proper. But all proceeds derived therefrom shall be deposited in the state treasury, *to the [635 credit of the Caddo levee district, and shall be drawn only upon the warrants of the president of said board, properly attested, as provided in this act."

The lands in question were within the district so created, and at the date of the act were owned by the state, but whether it had acquired them as swamp lands, under the legislation of Congress (Acts March 2, 1849, 9 Stat. at L. 352, chap. 87; September 28, 1850, 9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), or as the bed of what was a navigable lake when the state was admitted into the Union (see Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565), is left uncertain. For present purposes, however, this uncertainty may be disregarded and the state's title treated as resting on the swamp-land grant by Congress, as was claimed by the fishing club in the state courts. No instrument conveying the lands to the board of the levee district was ever executed by the state auditor or the register of the state land office, or recorded in the recorder's office of the parish. But in 1895 the board sold and deeded the lands to the remote grantors of the fishing club for the agreed price of $1,100, or 10 cents per acre, which was deposited in a bank under an agreement whereby it would be payable to the board whenever the latter should perfect the title by obtaining a conveyance from the auditor and register. Such a conveyance was not obtained, and in December, 1901, the grantees in the deed requested the board to complete the title, and in that connection offered to pay $3,500 more for the lands; whereupon the board adopted a resolution accepting the offer, and authorizing its president to take proper steps to perfect the title. But it does not appear that the additional sum was either paid or tendered or that anything was done under the resolution.

In July, 1902, the legislature of the state passed an act (Laws of 1902, No. 171, p. 324) authorizing the register of the state land office to sell these lands at not less than $5 per acre, nor in greater quantities 636] than 320 acres to *any one person, directing that the proceeds of such sales be placed to the credit of the board of the levee district, and containing the following repealing provision:

"Section 4. Be it further enacted, etc., that act No. 74 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Louisiana for 1892, and act No. 160 of the Acts of 1900, be and the same are hereby repealed in so far as they may in any way whatever affect any of the lands described herein, the same never having been transferred by the register of the state land office and the state auditor, nor either of them, by any instrument of conveyance from the state, as required by said act to complete the title to same."

This suit was brought in 1906. The petition made no mention of the act of 1902, but proceeded upon the theory, among others, that under § 9 of act No. 74 of 1892, supra, the board of the levee district was wholly without authority to sell or otherwise dispose of the lands until a proper instrument conveying them to the board had been executed by the auditor and register and duly recorded in the recorder's office of the parish, and that, as no such instrument had been executed or recorded, the sale and deed by the board, under which the fishing club was asserting title, were unauthorized and void. The answer, which was also silent respecting the act of 1902, alleged, in substance, that the act of 1892 was a grant in presenti of the lands, and operated to transfer them to the board of the levee district without any conveyance from the auditor and register; that the fishing club's grantors purchased on the faith of that act; and that to permit the state to re-take the lands would impair the obligation of its contract embraced in the act.

At the hearing in the district court, counsel for the state placed some reliance 56 L. ed.

upon the act of 1902, but the court ruled that the act of 1892 was a grant in presenti of all lands falling within its terms other than those acquired through tax sales; that the provision requiring conveyances *from the auditor and register related[637 only to lands acquired through such sales; that, as the lands in suit had not been acquired in that way, the sale and deed by the board to the fishing club's grantors were authorized and valid, even although there was no conveyance from the auditor and register; and that the rights acquired thereby were not divested or affected by the subsequent act of 1902. The record does not disclose that there was any reliance upon that act in the supreme court, and yet it was practically conceded in argument here that there was. But, whether relied upon or not, the act was mentioned in the statement preceding the court's opinion, and was not otherwise noticed or treated as a factor in the decision. The court held that the act of 1892 was not a grant in presenti; that a conveyance from the auditor and register was essential to invest the board with any disposable title; and that, in the absence of such a conveyance, the sale and deed by the board were wholly unauthorized and void. Upon that subject the court said:

"In our opinion, the levee board acquired no title to the lands in dispute under the act of 1892, because no deed of conveyance thereto was ever executed by the auditor and register, or either of them, and, of course, no such deed was ever recorded. . . . This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider the other issues presented by the pleadings, . . . and it is wholly immaterial whether the board attempted to sell the land or to give it away, or whether it received an amount agreed to be paid, or received nothing. Our reasons for the conclusion that the board acquired no title, and could therefore convey none, predicated on the admitted fact that no deed of conveyance of the lands in question has ever been executed by the auditor or register, are, briefly, as follows:"

Then, after proceeding with an analysis and interpretation of the provisions[638 of § 9 of the act of 1892, it was further said:

"Upon the whole, we are of opinion that the law in question is susceptible of but one interpretation, i. e., that its makers intended that disposable title to all lands granted or intended to be granted by it should vest in the grantee only upon registry, in the parishes where the lands lie, of proper instruments of conveyance executed by the auditor and register of the state land office. So far as the tax lands are concerned, the reason for thus qualifying the grant is obvious enough. . . . As to the swamp lands, it may well be that in many instances there were pending unsettled claims and controversies of which the land office was advised, with which the register alone was qualified to deal, and which rendered it inadvisable that new titles should issue save to the knowledge of that officer. But whether these views as to the reasons which inspired the law be correct or not, the law itself is plain, and it has (in effect) twice received from this court the interpretation which we are now placing on it; once in a case involving lands formerly constituting the bed of a shallow lake, and again in a case involving lands acquired by the state under its tax laws."

With this statement of the case, we come to consider whether it presents any question under that clause of the Constitution which declares: "No state shall . . . pass any . . . law impairing the obligation of contracts." This clause, as its terms disclose, is not directed against all impairment of contract obligations, but only against such as results from a subsequent exertion of the legislative power of the state. It does not reach mere errors committed by a state court when passing upon the validity or effect of a contract under the laws in existence when it was made. And so, while such errors may operate to impair the obligation of the contract, they do not give rise to a Federal question. 639] But when the state court, *either expressly or by necessary implication, gives effect to a subsequent law of the state whereby the obligation of the contract is alleged to be impaired, a Federal question is presented. In such a case it becomes our duty to take jurisdiction and to determine the existence and validity of the contract, what obligations arose from it, and whether they are impaired by the subsequent law. But if there be no such law, or if no effect be given to it by the state court, we cannot take jurisdiction, no matter how earnestly it may be insisted that that court erred in its conclusion respecting the validity or effect of the contract; and this is true even where it is asserted, as it is here, that the judgment is not in accord with prior decisions on the faith of which the rights in question were acquired. Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 383, 20 L. ed. 414, 415; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 111, 112, 40 L. ed. 91, 94, 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 220, 221, 41 L. ed. 132, 137, 138, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 647, 48 L. ed. 823, 828, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532;

Louisiana ex rel. Hubert v. New Orleans, 215 U. S. 170, 175, 54 L. ed. 144, 147, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Fisher v. New Orleans, 218 U. S. 438, 54 L. ed. 1099, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Missouri & K. Interurban R. Co. v. O'Lathe, 222 U. S. 187, ante, 47, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

It is most earnestly insisted that, even conceding that our jurisdiction is as restricted as just stated, it still includes the present case, because the decision of the state court, although not expressly rested upon the act of 1902, by necessary implication gave effect to it; and in support of this position it is said that, but for that act, the state could not have maintained the suit. But we do not understand that the state's right to maintain the suit was dependent upon that act, nor do we perceive any reason for believing that the act was an influential, though unmentioned, factor in the decision. Under the construction given to the act of 1892 the state still held the title, no conveyance having been made to the board of the levee district, and, of course, the right to maintain the suit was appurtenant to the title.

*What has been said sufficiently demonstrates that no effect whatever was given to the act of 1902, and therefore that the case presents no question under the contract clause of the Constitution; and, as there is no suggestion of the presence of any other Federal question, the writ of error is dismissed.

LEVI B. GRITTS et al., Appts.,

v.

WALTER L. FISHER, Secretary of the Interior, and Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 640-648.)

Indian allotments—minor children.

1. Children born to enrolled members of the Cherokee tribe after September 1, 1902, though expressly excluded by the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), from enrolment or participation in the distribution of the tribal property, were, if living on March 4, 1906, embraced by the provision of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, 148, chap. 1876), § 2, as amended by the act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 325, 341, chap. 3504), for the enrolment of "children who were minors living March 4, 1906."

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law—vested rights—Indian allotments.

2. Vested rights of members of the Cherokee tribe living on September 1, 1902, and enrolled under the act of July 1, 1902, to participate in the allotment and distribution of the remaining tribal lands and funds, were not destroyed,—their individual allotments not being affected,—by the provision of the act of April 26, 1906, § 2, as amended by the act of June 21, 1906, for admitting newly-born members of the tribe to the allotment and distribution from which they were excluded by the earlier act if born after September 1, 1902.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV, e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 896.]

Argued January 10 and 11, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin the enrolment of children born to enrolled members of the Cherokee tribe after September 1, 1902. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 473. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John J. Hemphill and William H. Robeson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. C. Calhoun and Daniel B. Henderson, filed a brief for appellants:

It cannot be held that the general act of 1906 repeals the special act of 1902, without violating the most fundamental rules of statutory construction.

Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 686, 34 L. ed. 832, 833, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504–511, 41 L. ed. 244–247, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596, 27 L. ed. 251, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

Plaintiffs' rights do not depend upon citizenship in the Cherokee Nation as a body politic.

Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 86, 51 L. ed. 96, 101, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29.

Inasmuch as the title was originally in the Cherokee people, as a community, and as the United States and the Cherokee people agreed that the community should terminate on a given date, and that the lands and funds of the former community should belong to an identified class of persons, namely, the appellants in this case, and that no person born after September 1, 1902, should share, the appellants became certainly vested as owners in common with all the right, title, and interest in and to all the lands and funds of the Nation.

Drew v. Carroll, 154 Mass. 181, 28 N. E. 148; Webster v. Reid, Morris (Iowa) 467.

56 L. ed.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The title to the surplus lands and the funds is in the Cherokee Nation, and not in the individual members of the tribe.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Nation, 193 U. S. 127, 48 L. ed. 646, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

Congress had the same power to amend the law that it had to enact it originally. That property expectations would be affected by its action did not impair its power.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 423, 51 L. ed. 547, 551, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

That the Cherokee Nation assented to the act of July 1, 1902, and that it is in the nature of an agreement, does not alter the case. Acts of Congress dealing with Indian tribes, and treaties with those tribes, stand upon the same footing.

Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 91, 54 L. ed. 393, 396, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Nothing became vested in the individual members of the tribe except as allotment or distribution was actually made to them. As to surplus lands and funds not distributed, and not available for distribution, still resting in tribal ownership, the power to make a change, and the duty to make it, if the welfare of the Indians required it, remained in Congress.

Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 316, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Muskrat v. United States, 44 Ct. Cl. 137.

Mr. William W. Hastings filed a brief for the Cherokee Nation as amicus curiæ:

The Cherokee tribal government is still in existence and recognized as such.

Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Intermarried Whites of Cherokee Nation, 40 Ct. Cl. 411, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. ed. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Nation, 193 U. S. 127, 48 L. ed. 646, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

As long as a nation of Indians was recognized in the tribal capacity by the political department of the United States, they were under the supervisory control of Congress.

Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 756, 757, 18 L. ed. 672, 673; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Brown v. United States, 44 Ct. Cl. 283.

No individual citizen of the Cherokee Nation has any vested interest in the unallotted lands or the undistributed funds of the tribe.

Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 218, 42 L. ed. 442, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60; Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 54 L. ed. 393, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Hayes v. Barringer, 93 C. C. A. 507, 168 Fed. 221; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. ed. 880, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Sac & Fox Indians v. Sac & Fox Indians, 45 Ct. Cl. 287; Garfield v. United States, 30 App. D. C. 177, affirmed in 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

The act of July 1, 1902, was entitled to no greater weight than the acts of June 28, 1898, and March 3, 1901.

Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. ed. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29.

Interest of the individual members of the Nation in the tribal lands was communal.

Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

Petitioners have no right to maintain this action, for the reason that the title to the unallotted lands remained in the tribe, and is therefore "a right of the tribe."

Blackfeather v. United States, 190 U. S. 368, 47 L. ed. 1099, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772.

The construction given to a statute by those charged with the duty of executing it ought not to be overruled without cogent reasons.

United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 763, 24 L. ed. 589.

The power of Congress to administer upon the affairs of dependent Indian tribes is plenary.

Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 478; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. ed. 1105; Starr v. Campbell, 208 U. S. 527, 52 L. ed. 602, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

Nor does the difference in the character of title held by the Indian tribes to their lands in any manner or degree change, alter, or diminish the power of Congress over them or their tribal property. This power is the same in all cases,—plenary.

United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75.

It is not material that petitioners became citizens of the United States under the act of March 3, 1901. The government of the United States did not thereby lose control over their tribal property. The courts have uniformly held that as long as a nation of Indians was recognized in their tribal capacity by the political department of the United States, they were under the supervisory control of Congress.

Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 756, 757, 18 L. ed. 672, 673; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Farrell v. United States, 49 C. C. A. 183, 110 Fed. 942; Hitchcock v. United States, 22 App. D. C. 275; Beck v. Flournoy Live-Stock & Real-Estate Co. 12 C. C. A. 497, 27 U. S. App. 618, 65 Fed. 30; Pilgrim v. Beck, 69 Fed. 895; United States v. Flournoy Live-Stock & Real Estate Co. 71 Fed. 576; United States v. Mullin, 71 Fed. 682; Eells v. Ross, 12 C. C. A. 205, 29 U. S. App. 59, 64 Fed. 417; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 51 L. ed. 566, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340-359, 52 L. ed. 520-528, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 54 L. ed. 195, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

Even if the act of July 1, 1902, because it was ratified by a vote of the citizens of the Cherokee Nation, should be held to be an agreement, still the citizens have no vested rights to enrolment or to unallotted lands or tribal moneys, and Congress could have amended or repealed it, whether it be construed as "only an act of Congress," an agreement, or a treaty.

Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 621, 20 L. ed. 229; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340.

Ratification of the act was only necessary because it was one of the conditions imposed by the act. But, as decided in the case of Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Congress could have omitted the condition and no ratification would have been necessary, and the act would have been a valid exercise of power.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented for decision in this case is whether children born to enrolled members of the Cherokee tribe of Indians after September 1, 1902, and living on March 4, 1906, are entitled to enrolment as members of the tribe, and to participation in the allotment and distribution of its lands and funds now being made under the legislation of Congress. The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Treasury, who are respectively charged with important duties in that connection, have taken the position, and are proceeding upon the theory, that under the acts of April 26, 1906, and June 21, 1906, infra, the right of the controversy is with the children; and the purpose of this suit is to test the accuracy of that position, and, if it be held untenable, to enjoin those officers from giving effect to it. The suit was begun in the supreme court of the District of Columbia in 1911, and the plaintiffs are three Indian members of the tribe, duly enrolled as such as of September 1, 1902, under the act of July 642]1, 1902, infra*, who sue on behalf of themselves and all other similarly situated. A demurrer to the bill was sustained and a decree of dismissal entered, which was affirmed by the court of appeals. 37 App. D. C. 473. An appeal brought the case here.

During the last twenty years Congress has enacted a series of laws looking to the allotment and distribution of the lands and funds of the Five Civilized Tribes, of which the Cherokee tribe is one, among their respective members, and to the dissolution of the tribal governments. An extended statement of these laws, so far as they concern the Cherokees, as also of the title by which their lands and funds have been held and of the relations of the tribe and its members to the United States, will be found in Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. ed. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher, 223 U. S. 95, ante. 364, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196, and Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, ante. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.
56 L. ed.

Anterior to this legislation the lands and funds belonged to the tribe as a community, and not to the members severally or as tenants in common. The right of each individual to participate in the enjoyment of such property depended upon tribal membership, and when that was terminated by death or otherwise the right was at an end. It was not alienable or descendible. And when children were born into the tribe they became thereby members, and entitled to all the rights incident to that relation. Under treaties with the United States the tribe maintained a government of its own, with legislative and other powers, but this was a temporary expedient, and in time proved inefficient and unsatisfactory. As in the instance of other tribal Indians, the members of this tribe were wards of the United States, which was fully empowered, whenever it seemed wise to do so, to assume full control over them and their affairs, to determine who were such members, to allot and distribute the tribal lands and funds among *them, and to terminate the tribal[643 government. This Congress undertook to do. The undertaking was a large one and difficulties were encountered. The first legislation was largely preliminary and experimental and need not be specially noticed, because no material change in the situation resulted therefrom.

The act of July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375, which related only to the Cherokees, and is spoken of as the Cherokee agreement, was quite comprehensive and is the one upon which the plaintiffs here rely. It made provision for ascertaining who were members, and permanently enrolling them (§§ 25-30), for reserving certain of the tribal lands for public purposes (§ 24), for appraising the other lands (§§ 9, 10), and for allotting in severalty to each enrolled member land equal in value to 110 acres of the average allottable lands (§ 11). It declared that the enrolment should be made "as of September 1, 1902," and should include "all persons then living" and entitled to enrolment (§ 25); that "no child born thereafter" should be entitled to enrolment or "to participate in the distribution of the tribal property" (§ 26); that during the months of September and October, 1902, applications could be received for the enrolment of infant children born to recognized and enrolled members on or before September 1 of that year, but that the application of no person whomsoever for enrolment should be received after October 31, 1902 (§ 30); that no person not enrolled should be entitled to "participate in the distribution of the common property" of the tribe, and those who were enrolled should "participate in the manner set forth" in the act (§ 31); that the enrolment should be made in partial lists, which, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, were to constitute parts of the final roll "upon which allotment of land and distribution of other tribal property" should be made, and that when lists embracing all persons lawfully [644] entitled to enrolment were *made and approved, the roll should "be deemed complete" (§ 29). There were provisions that "no allotment of land or other tribal property" should be made on behalf of any enrolled person dying prior to September 1, 1902, but that his right in the lands or other tribal property should be deemed extinguished (§ 31); and that if any enrolled person should die after September 1, 1902, and before receiving his allotment, the lands to which he would have been entitled if living should be allotted in his name, and should, "with his proportionate share of other tribal property," descend to his heirs (§ 20). The act declared that the tribal government should not continue longer than March 4, 1906 (§ 63), directed the payment in full, out of the tribal funds, of the lawful indebtedness of the tribe incurred up to the time of its dissolution, and authorized a pro rata distribution, among the enrolled members, of the tribal funds remaining after the dissolution of the tribal government and the payment of its indebtedness (§§ 66, 67). But it made no specific provision for the distribution or disposal of tribal lands remaining after the prescribed reservations and allotments were made.

But the tribal government was not dissolved on March 4, 1906. By joint resolution of March 2, 1906, Congress provided that the tribal existence and the tribal government should continue until all property of the tribe, or the proceeds thereof, should be distributed among the individual members (34 Stat. at L. 822); and by the act of April 26, 1906, they were further continued until otherwise provided by law (34 Stat. at L. 137, 148, chap. 1876). On those dates the work contemplated by the act of July 1, 1902, had not been completed. Some of the applications for enrolment, received within the time prescribed in the act, had not been acted upon; some of the enrolled members had not selected their allotments, and litigation was pending which involved the rights of some who had been enrolled and of others whose applications were awaiting *ac-[645]tion. In addition to this, some who otherwise were entitled to enrolment had filed applications therefor after the time prescribed, and the tribal council of the Cherokees had requested that children born after September 1, 1902, and before March 4, 1906, who, but for the limitation in the act of July 1, 1902, would be entitled to participate in the allotment and distribution of the tribal lands and moneys equally with members born prior thereto, be admitted to such participation, if possible, and if that could not be done, that each child born between those dates be given a sum of money sufficient to place him, as far as possible, on an equal footing with the others.

The act of April 26, 1906, unlike that of July 1, 1902, was not limited to the Cherokees, but it did in express terms include them. By its 28th section it continued the tribal existence and the tribal government, as just indicated; by its 1st section it authorized the enrolment of a class of persons whose applications therefor were made prior to December 1, 1905, and were not allowed solely because not made in time; and by its 2d section, as amended June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 325, 341, chap. 3504), it provided as follows:

"That for ninety days after approval hereof applications shall be received for enrolment of children who were minors living March fourth, nineteen hundred and six, whose parents have been enrolled as members of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cherokee, or Creek tribes, or have applications for enrolment pending at the approval hereof, and for the purpose of enrolment under this section illegitimate children shall take the status of the mother, and allotments shall be made to children so enrolled. If any citizen of the Cherokee tribe shall fail to receive the full quantity of land to which he is entitled as an allotment, he shall be paid out of any of the funds of such tribe a sum equal to twice the appraised value of the amount of land thus deficient. . . . Provided,

*That the rolls of the tribes affected [646] by this act shall be fully completed on or before the fourth day of March, nineteen hundred and seven, and the Secretary of the Interior shall have no jurisdiction to approve the enrolment of any person after said date: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed so as hereafter to permit any person to file an application for enrolment or to be entitled to enrolment in any of said tribes, except for minors, the children of Indians by blood, or of freedmen members of said tribes, . . . as herein otherwise provided."

By its 16th and 17th sections it further provided that after the making of the allotments provided for in that and other acts, the residue of the lands, not reserved or otherwise disposed of, should be sold by the Secretary of the Interior, and the proceeds deposited in the United States Treasury to the credit of the tribe, together with moneys arising from other sources, and that thereafter, and when all the just charges against the tribal funds should be deducted therefrom, the remaining funds should be distributed per capita to the members then living and to the heirs of deceased members named in the finally approved rolls.

The controversy here arises out of the provision in § 2 of the act of April 26, 1906, as amended June 21 following, for the enrolment of "children who were minors living March 4, 1906," which the defendants regard as including children born after September 1, 1902, and living on March 4, 1906. The appellants contend, first, that it does not include children born after September 1, 1902, but only such as were born prior to that date, and for whom no application for enrolment was made within the time limited by the act of July 1, 1902; that is, on or before October 31, 1902; and, second, that if it does include children born after September 1, 1902, it arbitrarily takes from the appellants and others similarly situated property *which is theirs and gives it to others, and therefore is violative of due process of law. The last contention rests upon another, viz., that the act of July 1, 1902, vested in the members living on September 1, 1902, who were enrolled under that act, an absolute right to receive all lands of the tribe not reserved or allotted thereunder, and all funds of the tribe not used, in the payment of tribal debts.

We are unable to assent to the first contention. The provision in question says "children who were minors living March 4, 1906," and those words as naturally and aptly embrace children born after as before September 1, 1902. Had it been intended, as is claimed, merely to extend the time for filing applications on behalf of children living on September 1, 1902, and therefore born on or before that date, it is reasonable to believe that other words more appropriate to the occasion would have been used. Why say "living March 4, 1906," if as to these children the prior requirement expressed in the words "living on September 1, 1902," was not to be affected? Besides, the Cherokee tribal council, as also the Chickasaw legislature (see H. R. Doc. No. 455, 59th Cong., 1st Sess.), had asked that provision be made for the enrolment of children born up to March 4, 1906, and that would shed some light on the provision were its meaning uncertain. But it does not seem to have been regarded as uncertain by those charged with its enforcement, nor by the courts below. On the contrary, they treated it as plainly including children born after September 1, 1902, and we think that is the right view of it.

We come, then, to the second contention. It is not proposed to disturb the individual allotments made to members living September 1, 1902, and enrolled under the act of 1902, and therefore we are only concerned with whether children born after September 1, 1902, and living on March 4, 1906, should be excluded from the allotment and distribution. The act of 1902 required that they be *excluded, and [648 the legislation in 1906, as we have seen, provides for their inclusion. It is conceded, and properly so, that the later legislation is valid and controlling unless it impairs or destroys rights which the act of 1902 vested in members living September 1, 1902, and enrolled under that act. As has been indicated, their individual allotments are not affected. But it is said that the act of 1902 contemplated that they alone should receive allotments and be the participants in the distribution of the remaining lands, and also of the funds, of the tribe. No doubt such was the purport of the act. But that, in our opinion, did not confer upon them any vested right such as would disable Congress from thereafter making provision for admitting newly-born members of the tribe to the allotment and distribution. The difficulty with the appellants' contention is that it treats the act of 1902 as a contract, when "it is only an act of Congress, and can have no greater effect." Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 93, 51 L. ed. 96, 103, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29. It was but an exertion of the administrative control of the government over the tribal property of tribal Indians, and was subject to change by Congress at any time before it was carried into effect and while the tribal relations continued. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 423, 51 L. ed. 547, 551, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363. It is not to be overlooked that those for whose benefit the change was made in 1906 were not strangers to the tribe, but were children born into it while it was still in existence, and while there was still tribal property whereby they could be put on an equal, or approximately equal, plane with other members. The council of the tribe asked that this be done, and we entertain no doubt that Congress, in acceding to the request, was well within its power.

Decree affirmed.

649] *CITY OF LOUISVILLE, Kentucky,
Appt.,
v.

CUMBERLAND TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 649-665.)

Municipal corporations — telephone franchise — revocation.

1. The assent of the municipality, when once given conformably to the charter of a telephone company, empowering the latter, with and by the consent of the city council, to construct and maintain a telephone system in the city, perfects the company's franchise, which, being a legislative grant, cannot thereafter be repealed, nullified, or forfeited by municipal ordinance. [For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Municipal corporations — telephone franchise — withdrawal — revocation.

2. The right to use the city streets for telephone purposes, acquired by a telephone company conformably to its charter, by which it was empowered, with and by the consent of the city council, to construct and maintain a telephone system in Louisville, Kentucky, was not withdrawn or made subject to municipal revocation by Ky. Const. 1891, §§ 156, 163, 164, 199, or Ky. Stat. §§ 2742, 2783, 2825, conferring upon municipalities the right to grant street franchises, or by Ky. Stat. § 573, enacted under the reserve power, repealing all special corporate privileges, since such repeal relates to exclusive grants, tax exemptions, monopolies, and similar immunities, and the other provisions are in the main prospective, the Constitution, while limiting for the future the power to sell street franchises, distinctly protecting the interests of those public-utility companies whose charters had been theretofore granted conferring such rights, where work had in good faith been begun thereunder.

[For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — consolidation — effect on telephone franchise.

3. The right to use the city streets for telephone purposes, possessed by a telephone company under its charter, passed to the new corporation formed by consolidation conformably to Ky. Stat. § 556, which declares that the consolidated company shall be vested with all the property, business, assets, and effects of the constituent companies, without deed or transfer, and bound for all their contracts and liabilities.

[For other cases, see Corporations, 107-124, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — of municipality — attacking telephone franchise.

4. The demand by a municipality from a consolidated telephone company of the bond previously required of the original company, and the expenditure of large sums by the consolidated company in extending and improving the telephone system, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the city, and in reliance upon the statutory conveyance of the street rights, estops the city from claiming that its consent to the use of the city streets by the original company for telephone purposes was inoperative, and from denying that the consolidated company had succeeded to the rights and obligations of its predecessor.

[For other cases, see Estoppel, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Municipal corporations — telephone franchise — duration — revocation.

5. The right to use the city streets for telephone purposes, acquired under the perpetual charter of a telephone company, empowering it, with and by the consent of the city council, to construct and maintain a telephone system in Louisville, Kentucky, was not revocable by the city at will, and did not expire when, by Ky. Stat. § 2742, Louisville was made a city of the first class, with new and enlarged powers.

[For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 197.]

Argued March 7 and 8, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance attempting to revoke a telephone franchise. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On the privilege of using streets as a contract within the constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts—see note to Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 50 L.R.A. 142.

On the right of telegraph and telephone companies to use public streets—see notes to St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 810; Southern Bell Teleg. & Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 44 C. C. A. 155; and Owensboro v. Cumberland Teleg. & Teleg. Co. 99 C. C. A. 14.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

On April 3, 1886, the legislature of Kentucky chartered the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, fixing no limit to its corporate existence. Its principal office was to be at Louisville, but the company was empowered to construct and maintain within the state and elsewhere telephone lines, exchanges, and systems, and authorized "to purchase or to acquire and dispose of real estate, apparatus, patents, licenses, rights, and franchises relating to such business; to borrow money, and to issue and sell bonds, and to secure the payment of the same by a mortgage on all the property of the company, and on any of its . . . franchises, easements, rights of way, and privileges . . ." In § 5 it was enacted that "the said company may construct, equip, and maintain said telephone systems and exchanges, erect poles and string wires thereon, and operate its telephone lines over, along, or under any highway, street, or alley in the city of Louisville, with and by the consent of the general council of said city." On August 17, 1886, the city council passed an ordinance which, after reciting this section of the charter, ordained that the act of the legislature above mentioned, so far as it refers to the use of the streets of Louisville, "is hereby ratified and confirmed, and the right is hereby granted and confirmed 651] to the said Ohio Valley *Telephone Company, its successors and assigns, to maintain a telephone system, and to erect poles and string wires thereon; . . . and to operate its telephone lines over, along, or under any street, avenue, alley, or sidewalk in the city of Louisville." There were also provisions in this ordinance regulating the manner of erecting poles and stringing wires in the street, and requiring the company to carry the fire and police wires of the city free of charge, and to give a bond in the sum of $50,000, with surety, to save the city harmless against any damage caused by the opening of any street for telephone purposes. This bond was to be renewed from time to time as required by the city. It was declared that nothing in the ordinance should be construed to give the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, its successors or assigns, any exclusive right in the streets.

The ordinance was accepted, the $50,000 bond was given, and the Ohio Valley Telephone Company erected poles, strung wires, and maintained a telephone exchange in the city of Louisville until January 27, 1900, when it consolidated with the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company. By virtue of the Kentucky statute then of force, a new corporation was created under the name of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company, and the appellee was thereafter vested with all the "property . . . of the constituent companies, without deed or transfer, and bound for their debts and liabilities." The statute, at that time, was silent as to the transfer of "franchises," but in 1902 (Ky. Stat. § 556) it was amended so as to provide that upon the filing of the certificate the consolidated company should be vested "with all the rights, privileges, franchises, exemptions, property, assets, and effects of the constituent companies."

Upon this consolidation, on January 27, 1900, the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company entered into *possession [652] of all the property of the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, and operated the plant, poles, and wires in Louisville until April 7, 1902, when the city council passed an ordinance that the Cumberland Company should execute a bond for $50,000, as required of the Ohio Valley Telephone Company under the ordinance of August 17, 1886. This was done, and, on June 2, 1902, the council passed a resolution that "the bond of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company, successor of the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, principal, and the American Bonding Company, of Baltimore city, as surety, be and the same is hereby accepted and approved, and the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, and its sureties, are hereby relieved from all liability under their bond of August 28, 1886."

The Cumberland Company fully complied with the agreement as to carrying the police and fire wires of the city free of charge, greatly enlarged the telephone system in the city, and, at an expense of more than a million dollars, improved the plant and trebled the number of subscribers, although there was in the city another telephone company with a large number of patrons.

In 1908 a difference arose between the city and the company, the city claiming that the company's methods were dictatorial and oppressive, that it rendered poor service at high rates, and was guilty of discrimination among its patrons. This the company denied, claiming that its service was good, its rates were low, and that what was called discrimination consisted in different rates for different classes of service, open on equal terms to all members of the public alike.

No proceedings of any sort were instituted to decide the merits of this controversy, or to secure appropriate relief if, after a hearing, the charges were found to be true. But, apparently with the view of having only one telephone system, an ordinance was submitted to the city council 653]*of Louisville in 1908, providing for the creation of a comprehensive telephone system, repealing all existing rights, and granting a new franchise, which was to be sold to the highest bidder.

The Cumberland Company gave notice that it would rely on its existing contract to use the streets, and would not be a bidder at the proposed sale. Thereupon this ordinance was withdrawn, and another introduced and passed, by which the city, on January 23, 1909, repealed the ordinance of August 17, 1886, under which the Ohio Valley Telephone Company had erected poles, strung wires, and conducted a telephone system.

The Cumberland Company thereupon filed its bill in the United States circuit court for the western district of Kentucky, setting out the facts above outlined, alleging that it was the successor to the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, which, in reliance upon the ordinance of August 17, 1886, had erected a telephone system; that the Cumberland Company, as its successor under the terms of the consolidation act, and in accordance with the contract between the city and the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, carried on the telephone business, and does now carry upon its poles and underground conduits the fire alarm and police wires of the city, free of charge, which wires have been and now are daily used by the city in the conduct of its police and fire departments; that the Cumberland Company has largely extended and improved the plant, appliances, and business, and in doing so has expended $1,700,000, "all of which was done upon the faith of and in reliance upon the said ordinance." It alleged that the repealing ordinance of 1909 impaired the obligation of its contract and deprived the company of its business and property without due process of law, and that, unless enjoined, the city would remove the poles and wires, and destroy the company's business, to its irreparable damage.

654] *A temporary injunction was granted, and the city's demurrer to the bill for want of equity was overruled. The case was referred to a master to take testimony as to the extent of the discrimination and other matters as to which the city made complaint. On consideration of his report the court said: "We find nothing in the answer of the defendant nor in the large mass of testimony heard on the issues made by the pleadings which should in any way change the views expressed in passing on the demurrer and the motion for a temporary injunction." He thereupon entered a final decree making the injunction permanent. The city appealed, alleging generally that the court erred in overruling the demurrer and in granting the injunction. It specifically alleges that the court erred in holding (1) that the charter granted to the Ohio Valley Telephone Company the right, with the consent of the city, to operate a telephone system, which could not be repealed by the city council; (2) that the ordinance of August 17, 1886, constituted a valid and binding contract between the city and the company, which could not be repealed by the council; (3) that upon the consolidation of the Ohio Valley Telephone Company with the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company all the rights of the former under its charter and the ordinance passed to and are now owned by and vested in the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company; and (4) that the ordinance of January 23, 1909, repealing that of August 17, 1886, was void and of no effect.

Messrs. Clayton B. Blakey and Huston Quinn argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph S. Lawton, filed a brief for appellant:

Power to grant a franchise does not exist in a city unless expressly conferred.

Nellis, Street Railways, § 23; Louisville City R. Co. v. Louisville, 8 Bush, 415; East Tennessee Teleph. Co. v. Russellville, 106 Ky. 669, 51 S. W. 308; Henderson v. Covington, 14 Bush, 312.

A valid franchise authorizing a telephone company to occupy the streets of a city entitles such telephone company to an absolute and exclusive appropriation of that space in the streets which is occupied by its telephone poles.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 97, 37 L. ed. 383, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

When a telephone company acquires from the state authority to use the streets of a city by and with the consent of the city, its franchise to use such streets is acquired from the state; the grant from the municipality is a mere revocable license.

Booth, Street Railways, § 10; Nellis, Street Railways, § 20; Boise City Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. v. Boise City, 59 C. C. A. 236, 123 Fed. 232; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732, s. c. 110 Mich. 334, 35 L.R.A. 859, 64 Am. St. Rep. 350, 68 N. W. 304; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 867; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748; East Ohio Gas Co. v. Akron, 81 Ohio St. 33, 26 L.R.A. (N.S.) 92, 90 N. E. 40, 18 Ann. Cas. 332; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 L. ed. 801, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Home Teleph. & Telcg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 273, 53 L. ed. 182, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Chicago City

R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 547; People ex rel. Chicago v. Chicago Teleph. Co. 220 Ill. 238, 77 N. E. 245; Parkhurst v. Capital City R. Co. 23 Or. 471, 32 Pac. 304; Parkersburg Gas Co. v. Parkersburg, 30 W. Va. 435, 4 S. E. 650; New Haven & N. R. Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 629.

A franchise granted by a city, silent as to the length of time during which it may be exercised, is not a perpetual franchise to occupy the streets unless the city had express authority to grant a perpetual franchise.

Boise City Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. v. Boise City, 59 C. C. A. 236, 123 Fed. 232; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732, s. c. 110 Mich. 384, 35 L.R.A. 859, 64 Am. St. Rep. 350, 68 N. W. 304; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 867; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748; East Ohio Gas Co. v. Akron, 81 Ohio St. 33, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 92, 90 N. E. 40, 18 Ann. Cas. 332; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 L. ed. 801, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 273, 53 L. ed. 182, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 547; People ex rel. Chicago v. Chicago Teleph. Co. 220 Ill. 238, 77 N. E. 245; Parkhurst v. Capital City R. Co. 23 Or. 471, 32 Pac. 304; Parkersburg Gas Co. v. Parkersburg, 30 W. Va. 435, 4 S. E. 650; New Haven & N. R. Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 629; Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 528, 14 L. ed. 1044; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921; Buffalo & J. R. Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S. 821, 26 L. ed. 471; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 892, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201.

A grant of a franchise, irrevocable and permanent in its nature, made by a city without express authority from the legislature to make such grant, is void.

Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611, 84 Am. Dec. 314; West End & A. Street R. Co. v. Atlantic Street R. Co. 49 Ga. 155; Atty. Gen. v. New York, 3 Duer, 119; Blaschko v. Wurster, 156 N. Y. 437, 51 N. E. 303; Ampt v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio C. C. 300, 11 Ohio C. D. 805; Birmingham & P. Mines Street R. Co. v. Birmingham Street R. Co. 79 Ala. 473, 58 Am. Rep. 615; Westminster Water Co. v. Westminster, 98 Md. 551, 64 L.R.A. 630, 103 Am. St. Rep. 424, 56 Atl. 990; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 35 L. ed. 55, 68, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.
56 L. ed.

A void act of a municipal body will not be validated by the adoption of a new state Constitution.

East Tennessee Teleph. Co. v. Russellville, 106 Ky. 673, 51 S. W. 303.

When two corporations consolidate, a new corporation comes into existence which is eo instanti granted by the state only such portion of the rights and privileges of the constituent corporations as the state at the time had the power to grant.

Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; Clearwater v. Meredith (Ferguson v. Meredith) 1 Wall. 25, 17 L. ed. 604; Atlantic & G. R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359, 25 L. ed. 185; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 24 L. ed. 836; Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 38 L. ed. 450, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Pennsylvania College Cases, 13 Wall. 209, 20 L. ed. 552; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Wright v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 216 U. S. 422, 54 L. ed. 552, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

All charters, franchises, and special privileges granted by the Kentucky legislature subsequent to 1856 are subject to revocation.

Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. ed. 679, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

The legislature had authority to delegate to the city the right to revoke any franchise which the appellee may have acquired to use the streets of the city of Louisville.

Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. ed. 898, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

All special privileges or grants made to corporations prior to the adoption of the present Constitution, and inconsistent with the provisions of that Constitution and the laws made pursuant thereto, are now repealed.

Hager v. Kentucky Title Co. 119 Ky. 850, 85 S. W. 183; Pearce v. Mason County, 99 Ky. 357, 35 S. W. 1122; McTigue v. Com. 99 Ky. 72, 35 S. W. 121.

Where a city gives its consent for a telephone company to use its streets without limit as to time, the right of such telephone company to continue to use the streets expires when the charter of the city expires.

Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 485, 50 L. ed. 836, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; People ex rel. Chicago v. Chicago Teleph. Co. 220 Ill. 238, 77 N. E. 245; Parsons v. Breed, 126 Ky. 765, 104 S. W. 766; Louisville v. Vreeland, 140 Ky. 404, 131 S. W. 195.

A city cannot convert a license into a contract by calling it a contract.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 97, 37 L. ed. 382, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748.

A city may revoke a grant or a license without notice to the grantee, and without assigning reasons therefor.

Calder v. Michigan, 218 U. S. 598, 54 L. ed. 1167, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 510, 35 L. ed. 1099, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

Discrimination among its patrons gives a city ample cause for revoking the franchise of the telephone company.

Wyman, Public Service Corp. chaps. 27, 28; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Kelly, 87 C. C. A. 268, 160 Fed. 317, 15 Ann. Cas. 1210; Missouri ex rel. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 23 Fed. 541; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 133 Ky. 148, 97 S. W. 778.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and William L. Granbery argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alexander Pope Humphrey, Jr., filed a brief for appellee:

The legislature had the right, prior to the adoption of the present Constitution of Kentucky, to grant to the Ohio Valley Telephone Company its charter, including § 5 thereof, and to grant to the city of Louisville the power therein conferred upon it.

Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Memphis, 37 C. C. A. 410, 96 Fed. 120.

A grant of this character is an easement in the streets, and as much property as any other estate, real or personal, which can be acquired by an individual or a corporation.

Morristown v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 53 C. C. A. 132, 115 Fed. 304; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 9, 43 L. ed. 345, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L.R.A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 394, 395, 46 L. ed. 610, 611, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

A charter had been granted to the Ohio Valley Telephone Company prior to the adoption of the Constitution of 1891, and work had been begun under the terms and provisions of that charter.

Louisville v. Louisville Water Co. 105 Ky. 754, 49 S. W. 766.

There was a consideration for the grant of this easement to the Ohio Valley Telephone Company.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

This easement is of a character which is entirely independent of corporate life, and would exist as property even if the corporation should cease to exist, and is as much a property in fee as any other real or personal property which the company has acquired or may hereafter acquire.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 395, 46 L. ed. 611, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Southampton v. Jessup, 162 N. Y. 122, 56 N. E. 538; People ex rel. Howell v. Jessup, 160 N. Y. 249, 54 N. E. 682, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Arcata v. Arcata & M. River R. Co. 92 Cal. 639, 28 Pac. 676; People ex rel. Pontiac v. Central U. Teleph. Co. 192 Ill. 307, 85 Am. St. Rep. 338, 61 N. E. 428; State, Hudson Teleph. Co., Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 49 N. J. L. 303, 60 Am. Rep. 619, 8 Atl. 123.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

1. Under the present Constitution of Kentucky, street franchises cannot be granted for longer than twenty years, and then only to the highest bidder, after public advertisement by the city authorities. But in 1886, when the Ohio Valley Telephone Company was chartered, the legislature not only had the sole right to create corporations and to grant franchises, but, without municipal consent, it could have authorized the company to use any and all streets in the city of Louisville. Instead, however, of exercising this plenary power, the charter declared that the company might maintain its telephone system, erect poles and string wires over the streets and highways of the city, with and by the consent of the general council. These provisions of the charter gave the municipality ample authority to deal with the subject, and by virtue of this statutory power it could have imposed terms, which the company might have been unable or unwilling to accept; in which event the franchise granted by the state would have been nugatory. But, when the assent was given, the condition precedent had been performed, the franchise was perfected, and could not thereafter be abrogated by municipal action. For, while the city was given the authority to consent, the statute did not confer upon it the power to withdraw that consent, and no attempt was made to reserve such a right in the collateral contract contained in those provisions of the ordinance relating to the company's *giving a bond and carrying the[659 police and fire wires free of charge. If those or other terms of this independent and separate contract had been broken by the Ohio Valley Company or its successors, the city would have had its cause of action. But the municipality could not by an ordinance impair that contract nor revoke the rights conferred. Those charter franchises had become fully operative when the city's consent was given, and thereafter the company occupied the streets and conducted its business, not under a license from the city of Louisville, but by virtue of a grant from the state of Kentucky. Such franchises granted by the legislature could not, of course, be repealed, nullified, or forfeited by any ordinance of a general council.

2. In 1891 a new Constitution was adopted by the state of Kentucky, conferring upon municipalities the right to grant street franchises, and later, under the reserve power, a statute was passed repealing all special corporate privileges. It is claimed that, in consequence of these laws, the street rights granted the Ohio Valley Telephone Company have been withdrawn, or at least made subject to municipal revocation. But we find in the cited sections of the Constitution (156, 163, 164, and 199) and the statutes (573, 2742, 2783, and 2825) nothing which sustains this contention, which, if correct, would lead to the conclusion that all structures theretofore lawfully placed in city streets by water, light, telephone, railway, and other public utility companies became nuisances, and as such were removable after September, 1898, to the damage of the community at large and the destruction of property of immense value dedicated to public purposes. The general repeal of all special privileges, referred to in the statute, related to exclusive grants, tax exemptions, monopolies, and similar immunities (Ky. Stat. § 573; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. ed. 679, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383), and not to those corporate powers and property rights needed 660]* and conferred in order to enable the company to perform the duties for which it had been organized. For, while this charter conferred privileges, it also created obligations in favor of the public, and no attempt was made by the general law to repeal the rights which had vested, nor to relieve the company of the burden which had been imposed.

3. The provisions of the Constitution and statutes relied on as revoking licenses from municipalities, or as conferring power upon cities to repeal grants, are in the main prospective, and do not in any event support the claim that the general council can destroy the rights granted the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, whether they be 56 L. ed.

treated as having been acquired under the charter of April 3, 1886, or under the ordinance of August 17, 1886. On the contrary, the Constitution of 1891, while limiting for the future the power to sell street franchises, distinctly protected the interests of those public-utility companies "whose charters have been heretofore granted, conferring such rights, and work has in good faith been begun thereunder." Inasmuch, therefore, as the charter of the Ohio Valley Telephone Company was granted and as the exchanges were in operation before the adoption of the Constitution, that company's rights are expressly preserved by the organic law of the state.

4. The Ohio Valley Company, thus owning the right to use the streets for telephone purposes, was consolidated on January 27, 1900, into the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company, the appellee, and the latter claims that, as successor, it acquired and now holds these privileges. This is denied by the city on the ground that while the statute, then of force, provided for the transfer of the "property" of the constituent companies, it was not until the amendment of 1902 that provision was made by which their "franchises" could pass to the consolidated company.

It is not necessary to determine whether that amendment *was intended to sup- 661 ply an omission, remove a doubt, or ratify the transfer and use under this and prior mergers. City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 569, 41 L. ed. 1118, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653. For while franchises to be are not transferable without express authority, there are other franchises to have, to hold, and to use, which are contractual and proprietary in their nature, and which confer rights and privileges which can be sold wherever the company, as here, has power to dispose of its property. In the present case the Ohio Valley Company was by its charter given authority to mortgage and dispose of franchises. Among those thus held was the right to use the streets in the city for the purpose necessary in conducting a telephone business. Such a street franchise has been called by various names,—an incorporeal hereditament, an interest in land, an easement, a right of way,—but, howsoever designated, it is property. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 394, 46 L. ed. 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Louisville City R. Co. v. Louisville, 8 Bush, 415; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 534, 12 L. ed. 535, 546; Morristown v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 53 C. C. A. 132, 115 Fed. 304, 307. Being property, it was taxable, alienable, and transferable; and, as property, passed to the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company under the express provisions of the Kentucky statute, which, as of force in 1900, declared that the consolidated company should be "vested with all the property, business, assets, and effects of the constituent companies, without deed or transfer, and bound for all their contracts and liabilities."

That the street rights, however designated, passed to the Cumberland Company, is the natural and obvious construction of the act. The plant and property of a telephone company are useless when dis severed from the streets, and there would, in effect, have been no property out of which to pay the debts or with which to perform the public duties imposed if the street rights of the constituent companies had not been transferred by the *statute to the consolidated company. The Constitution (§§ 199 and 200), in providing for the incorporation and consolidation of telephone companies, evidently contemplated, as did the statute, that on this statutory union there should be a transfer of that franchise, right of way or property, which alone gave value to the plant, thereby preserving the investment which had been made for purposes of private gain and public use. The city itself so construed the general law, and thereupon demanded from the Cumberland Company, as successor of the Ohio Valley Company, the bond for $50,000 called for in the ordinance of August 17, 1886. The company, in pursuance of the collateral contract contained in the ordinance, and of the requirements of the consolidation statute, carried the police and fire wires of the city free of charge. With the knowledge and acquiescence of the city, and in reliance on the statutory conveyance of the street rights, the Cumberland Company, at an expense of more than a million dollars, erected many new poles, laid additional conduits, and strung miles of wire in extending and improving the telephone system. This action of the council could not enlarge the charter grant, but did operate to estop the city (Boone County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 139 U. S. 693, 35 L. ed. 322, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687), from claiming that the ordinance was inoperative, and it also prevented the council from denying that the Cumberland Company had succeeded to every right and obligation of the Ohio Valley Company.

5. The appellant makes the further contention that its general demurrer should have been sustained and the bill dismissed because the original grant of street rights, having been indefinite as to time, was either void ab initio, or revocable at the will of the general council, or that it expired in 1893, when (Ky. Stat. § 2742) Louisville was made a city of the first class, with new and enlarged power. In support of this proposition numerous *decisions are cited, in[663 some of which it appeared that a state had chartered a public-utility corporation, but the city, by ordinance, had given an exclusive or perpetual grant of a street franchise which was held to be void, because made in excess of the statutory power possessed by the municipality. In others the company had been incorporated for thirty years, and the street right was held to have been granted only for that limited period. In others, it was decided that such privileges terminated with the corporate existence of the municipality through whose streets the rails and tracks were to be laid. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 54, 43 L. ed. 67, 71, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; St. Clair County Turnp. Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S. 63, 24 L. ed. 651; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 L. ed. 801, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; 3 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 1265-1269.

None of these decisions are applicable to a case like the present, where the Ohio Valley Telephone Company, with a perpetual charter, has received, not from the municipality, but from the state of Kentucky, the grant of an assignable right to use the streets of a city which remains the same legal entity, although by a later statute it has been put in the first class and given greater municipal powers. Vilas v. Manila, 220 U. S. 345, 361, 55 L. ed. 491, 497, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

In considering the duration of such a franchise it is necessary to consider that a telephone system cannot be operated without the use of poles, conduits, wires, and fixtures. These structures are permanent in their nature and require a large investment for their erection and construction. To say that the right to maintain these appliances was only a license, which could be revoked at will, would operate to nullify the charter itself, and thus defeat the state's purpose to secure a telephone system for public use. For, manifestly, no one would have been willing to incur the heavy expense of installing these necessary and costly fixtures if they were removable at will of the city, and the utility and value of the entire plant *be thereby destroyed.[664 Such a construction of the charter cannot be supported, either from a practical or technical standpoint.

This grant was not at will, nor for years, nor for the life of the city. Neither was it made terminable upon the happening of a future event; but it was a necessary and integral part of the other franchises conferred upon the company, all of which were perpetual, and none of which could be exercised without this essential right to use the streets The duration of the public business in which these permanent structures were to be used, the express provision that franchises could be mortgaged and sold, the nature of the grant, and the terms of the charter as a whole, compel a holding that the state of Kentucky conferred upon the Ohio Valley Telephone Company the right to use the streets to the extent and for the period necessary to enable the company to perform the perpetual obligation to maintain and conduct a telephone system in the city of Louisville. Such has been the uniform holding of courts construing similar grants to like corporations. Milhau v. Sharp (1863) 27 N. Y. 611, 84 Am. Dec. 314; State, Hudson Teleph. Co., Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 49 N. J. L. 303, 60 Am. Rep. 619, 8 Atl. 123; Mobile v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 122, 5 Am. St. Rep. 342, 4 So. 106; Seattle v. Columbia & P. S. R. Co. 6 Wash. 392, 33 Pac. 1048; People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 153 N. Y. 528, 47 N. E. 787. The earlier cases are reviewed in Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L.R.A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 634, which was cited with approval in Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 395, 46 L. ed. 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410, this court there saying that "where the grant to a corporation of a franchise to construct and operate its road is not, by its terms, limited and revocable, the grant is in fee."

The right to conduct a telephone exchange and to use the streets of the city of Louisville, which had been vested by law in the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company, could not be impaired or forfeited by an ordinance of the general council; nor 665] had it expired by lapse of *time or under any provision of law when the bill was filed. The Circuit Court properly made the injunction permanent, and its decree is affirmed.

GEORGE W. CHOATE et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

M. F. TRAPP, Secretary of the State Board of Equalization, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 665-679.)

Taxes — Indian allotments — exemption.

1. A tax exemption, and not merely an additional guard against alienation, which would fall when the restrictions on alienation were removed, was made by the act of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 505, chap.

NOTE.—On exemption of Indians from taxation—see note to Allen County v. Simons, 13 L.R.A. 512.
56 L. ed.

517), under which the lands allotted in severalty under that act to the members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes were subjected to various restrictions on alienation, and were to be nontaxable while the title remained in the original allottees.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 301-304, 364, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Tax exemption — Indian allotments — liberal construction.

2. Any doubt as to whether the tax exemption provision in the act of June 28, 1898, allotting lands in severalty to the members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes, was a personal privilege, and repealable, or an incident attached to the land itself for a limited period, must be resolved in favor of the patentees.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. c, 8 a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — vested rights — tax exemption — Indian allotments.

3. Choctaw and Chickasaw allottees under the Atoka agreement embodied in the act of June 28, 1898, under which, in part consideration of their relinquishment of all claim to the tribal property, they were to receive allotments of the lands in severalty, which were to be nontaxable for a specified period while the title remained in the original allottees, acquired vested rights of exemption from state taxation, protected by U. S. Const., 5th Amend., from abrogation during that period, as was attempted by the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), removing the restrictions upon alienation, and providing that lands from which such restrictions had been removed should be subject to taxation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 809.]

Argued February 23, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Logan County, in that state, sustaining a demurrer to the petition in a suit to enjoin state taxation of Indian allotments. Reversed.

See same case below, 28 Okla. 517, 114 Pac. 709.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Joseph W. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. F. McMurray and W. A. Ledbetter filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Where the property of a citizen of the United States is exempted from taxation for a consideration, he cannot be deprived of that exemption by subsequent legislation without his consent, and it is immaterial whether the citizen be an Indian or not.

New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303; Cooley, Taxn. p. 108; Wilmington

ton & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 20 L. ed. 568; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 21 L. ed. 204; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 495; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281-289, 10 L. ed. 965-968; Barnes v. Kornegay, 62 Fed. 671.

The removal of restrictions on the right of sale, or the absence of any restrictions on the right of sale, does not render land of Indians subject to taxation, if it was exempt from taxation by treaty provisions.

Allen County v. Simons, 129 Ind. 193, 13 L.R.A. 512, 28 N. E. 420.

The statutes exempting property from taxation are presumed to be based on a sufficient consideration.

Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 438, 19 L. ed. 498.

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

Congress may abrogate treaties at its will.

Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 271, 42 L. ed. 743, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340.

A treaty may supersede a prior act of Congress, and an act of Congress may supersede a prior treaty.

Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 253, 314, 7 L. ed. 415, 435; Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curt. C. C. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 13,799.

Treaties with Indians within the United States stand in no better position than treaties with foreign nations.

Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227.

Where the legislature makes a plain provision, without making any exception, the courts can make none.

Yturvide v. United States, 22 How. 290, 16 L. ed. 342; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 251; Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

Congress has plenary power over the property of the Indians and of the Indian tribes, and had the right to amend the Atoka agreement and supplemental agreement, not only by the act of May 27, 1908, but by the act of April 26, 1908, as well.

Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

The state of Oklahoma, neither by its Constitution nor by its ordinance irrevocable, made a contract as to tax exemption.

Gleason v. Wood, 28 Okla. 502, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 114 Pac. 703.

The state court having decided that the state made no contract, that ground was broad enough to rest the judgment upon without a consideration of whether the contract was broken.

Wailes v. Smith, 157 U. S. 271, 39 L. ed. 698, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Moffitt v. Kelly, 218 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 1086, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1179, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Taylor, Jurisdiction, § 240.

It is very clear that if there was a contract, it was only between the United States and the state. Nothing is pleaded to show any contract between the state and the plaintiffs in error; therefore, if there has been a breach of the alleged contract, the parties to that contract are the only persons who can complain of the breach.

Walsh v. Columbus, H. Valley & A. R. Co. 176 U. S. 469, 44 L. ed. 548, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393.

Individual Indians cannot complain of a breach.

Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

*Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the [667] opinion of the court:

The eight thousand plaintiffs in this case are members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes. Each of them holds a patent to 320 acres of allotted land issued under the terms of the Curtis act (30 Stat. at L. 507, chap. 517), which contained a provision "that the land should be nontaxable" for a limited time. Before the expiration of that period the officers of the state of Oklahoma instituted proceedings with a view of assessing and collecting taxes on these lands lying within that state. The plaintiffs' application for an injunction was denied.

In order to understand the issues presented by the writ of error it is necessary to refer, as briefly as possible, to certain well-known facts, and to material portions of lengthy statutes, under which the tribal property of the Choctaws and Chickasaws was divided in severalty among their members.

The Five Civilized Tribes owned immense tracts of land in territory that is now embraced within the limits of the state of Oklahoma. The legal title was in the Tribes for the common use of their members. But the fact that so extensive an area was held under a system that did not recognize private property in land presented a serious obstacle to the creation of the state which Congress desired to organize for the government and development of that part of the country. And, with a view of removing these difficulties, it provided (27 Stat. at L. 645, chap. 209) for the appointment of the Dawes Commission, authorizing it to enter into negotiations with these Tribes for the extinguishment of their title, either by cession to the United States or by allotment, in severalty, among their members. As might have been anticipated, the commission found that many of the Indians were greatly opposed to any change. "Some of them held passionately to their institutions from custom *and patriotism, and others held with equal tenacity because of the advantages and privileges they enjoyed." (20 H. R. Doc., 1903-04, p. 1.) After several years of negotiations their opposition was so far overcome that provisional agreements were made which contemplated most radical changes in the political and property rights of the Indians.

On April 23, 1897, the Dawes Commission and the Choctaw and Chickasaw representatives made what is known as the Atoka agreement. It was incorporated bodily into the Curtis act of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 517), and was modified by the act of July, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 657, chap. 1362).

These two acts, containing what is known as the Atoka agreement and the supplemental agreement, provided that Indian laws and courts should be at once abolished; that there should be an enrolment of all the members of the tribes; and that the members of the two tribes should become citizens of the United States.

It was also provided, as appears from extracts copied in the margin,† that each member of the tribe should have *allotted to him his share of the land—all of which "shall be nontaxable while the title remains in the original allottee;" that a part of the land could be sold after one year and all of it sold after five years; that the patents issued to the allottee "should be framed in conformity with the provisions of the agreement;" and that the acceptance of such patent should be operative as an assent on his part to the allotment of all land of the tribes, in accordance with the provisions of the agreement, and as a relinquishment of all his interest in other parts of the common property.

The complainant does not state when the plaintiffs received their patents, but the report of the Dawes Commission *for[670 the year ending June 1, 1904 (20 H. R. Doc. 27-42), shows that the enrolment and allotment had so far progressed as to make it fair to assume that most, if not all, of the patents had been issued, and that much of the land was alienable, and all of it was nontaxable when, on November 16, 1907, Oklahoma was admitted into the Union. The Constitution of that state provided that all existing rights should continue as if no change in government had taken place, and that property exempt from taxation by virtue of treaties and Federal laws should so remain during the force and effect of such treaties or Federal laws.

No taxes were assessed against the lands of the plaintiffs for the year 1907, but on May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), Congress passed a general act removing restrictions from the sale and encumbrance of land held by Indians of the class to which the plaintiffs belong. Another section provided that lands from which restrictions had been removed should be subject to taxation.

Thereupon proceedings were instituted by the state of Oklahoma with a view of assessing the plaintiffs' lands for taxes. This they sought to enjoin, but their complaint was dismissed on demurrer. The case was carried to the supreme court of the state, which held that Oklahoma was not a party to any contract with the Indians; that the United States, by virtue of its governmental power over the Indians, could have substituted title in severalty for ownership in common without plaintiffs' consent, and that, for want of a consideration, the provision that the land should be nontaxable was not a contract, but a mere gratuity

†[That] all the lands allotted shall be nontaxable while the title remains in the original allottee, but not to exceed twenty-one years from date of patent, and each allottee shall select from his allotment a homestead of 160 acres, for which he shall have a separate patent, and which shall be inalienable for twenty-one years from date of patent. . . . The remainder of the lands allotted to said members shall be alienable for a price to be actually paid . . . one fourth . . . in one year, one fourth in three years, and the balance of said alienable lands in five years from the date of patent. . . . The United States shall put each allottee in possession of his allotment. . . . That, as soon as practicable after the completion of said allotments [the chiefs of the two nations shall] . . . deliver to each of the said allottees patents conveying to him all the right, title, and interest of the Choctaws and Chickasaws in and to the land which shall have been allotted to him in conformity with the requirements of this agreement. . . . Said patent shall be framed in accordance with the provisions of this agreement. . . . And the acceptance of his patents by such allottee shall be operative as an assent on his part to the allotment and conveyance of all the lands of the Choctaws and Chickasaws in accordance with the provisions of this agreement, and as a relinquishment of all his right, title, and interest in and to any and all parts thereof, excepting the land embraced in which could be withdrawn at will. The court thereupon overruled plaintiffs' contention that they had a vested right of exemption which prevented the state from taxing the land at this time, and dismissed their suit.

1. There are many cases, some of which are cited in the opinion of the supreme 671] court of Oklahoma (*Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 271, 42 L. ed. 743, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 565, 47 L. ed. 306, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216), recognizing that the plenary power of Congress over the Indian Tribes and tribal property cannot be limited by treaties so as to prevent repeal or amendment by a later statute. The Tribes have been regarded as dependent nations, and treaties with them have been looked upon not as contracts, but as public laws which could be abrogated at the will of the United States.

This sovereign and plenary power was exercised and retained in all the dealings and legislation under which the lands of the Choctaws and Chickasaws were divided in severalty among the members of the Tribes. For, although the Atoka agreement is in the form of a contract, it is still an integral part of the Curtis act, and, if not a treaty, is a public law relating to tribal property, and as such was amendable and repealable at the will of Congress. But there is a broad distinction between tribal property and private property, and between the power to abrogate a statute and the authority to destroy rights acquired under such law. Reichart v. Felps, 6 Wall. 160, 18 L. ed. 849. The question in this case, therefore, is not whether the plaintiffs were parties to the Atoka agreement, but whether they had not acquired rights under the Curtis act which are now protected by the Constitution of the United States.

2. The individual Indian had no title or enforceable right in the tribal property.

said patents, except also his interest in the proceeds of all lands, coal, and asphalt herein excepted from allotment. Atoka agreement, 30 Stat. at L. 507, chap. 517.

There shall be allotted to each member of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes, as soon as practicable after the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of his enrollment as herein provided, land equal in value to 320 acres of the average allottable land of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations. . . . Each member of said tribes shall, at the time of the selection of his allotment, designate as a homestead out of said allotment land equal in value to 160 acres of the average allottable land of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, as near as may be, which shall be inalienable during the lifetime of the allottee, not exceeding

But as one of those entitled to occupy the land, he did have an equitable interest, which Congress recognized, and which it desired to have satisfied and extinguished. The Curtis act was framed with a view of having every such claim satisfactorily settled. And though it provided for a division of the land in severalty, it offered a patent of nontaxable land only to those who would relinquish their claim in the other property of the Tribe formerly held for their common use. For the Atoka agreement, after declaring that "all land *allotted[672 should be nontaxable," stipulated further that each enrolled member of the Tribes should receive a patent framed in conformity with the agreement, and that each Choctaw and Chickasaw who accepted such patent should be held thereby to assent to the terms of this agreement, and to relinquish all of his right in the property formerly held in common.

There was here, then, an offer of nontaxable land. Acceptance by the party to whom the offer was made, with consequent relinquishment of all claim to other lands, furnished a part of the consideration, if, indeed, any was needed, in such a case, to support either the grant or the exemption. Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 386, 48 L. ed. 231, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 437, 19 L. ed. 497; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 458, 21 L. ed. 205. Upon delivery of the patent the agreement was executed, and the Indian was thereby vested with all the right conveyed by the patent, and, like a grantee in a deed poll, or a person accepting the benefit of a conveyance, bound by its terms, although it was not actually signed by him. Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 621, 33 L. ed. 672, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Hendrick v. Lindsay, 93 U. S. 143, 23 L. ed. 855.

As the plaintiffs were offered the allotments on the conditions proposed; as they twenty-one years from the date of certificate of allotment, and separate certificate and patent shall issue for said homestead. 32 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 1362.

All lands allotted to the members of said tribes, except such land as is set aside to each for a homestead, as herein provided, shall be alienable after issuance of patent as follows:

One fourth in acreage in one year, one fourth in acreage in three years, and the balance in five years; in each case from date of patent; provided that such land shall not be alienable by the allottee, or his heirs, at any time before the expiration of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribal governments for less than its appraised value. (643.)

accepted the terms, and, in the relinquishment of their claim, furnished a consideration which was sufficient to entitle them to enforce whatever rights were conferred, we are brought to a consideration of the question as to what those rights were.

3. On the part of the state it is argued that there was, in fact, no tax exemption, but that that provision was only intended to guard absolutely against alienation of the land, whether for taxes, or at judicial sale, or by private contract. In other words, it is said that the tax exemption was only an additional prohibition against a sale, so that when the restrictions against alienation were removed by the act of 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), the provision as to nontaxability went as a necessary part thereof.

673] *But the exemption and nonalienability were two separate and distinct subjects. One conferred a right and the other imposed a limitation. The defendant's argument also ignores the fact that, in this case, though the land could be sold after five years, it might remain nontaxable for sixteen years longer, if the Indian retained title during that length of time. Restrictions on alienation were removed by lapse of time. He could sell part after one year, a part after three years, and all except homestead after five years. The period of exemption was not coincident with this five-year limitation. On the contrary, the privilege of nontaxability might last for twenty-one years, thus recognizing that the two subjects related to different periods and that neither was dependent on the other. The right to remove the restriction was in pursuance of the power under which Congress could legislate as to the status of the ward and lengthen or shorten the period of disability. But the provision that the land should be nontaxable was a property right, which Congress undoubtedly had the power to grant. That right fully vested in the Indians and was binding upon Oklahoma. Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737 (1), 756, 18 L. ed. 667, 672; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

4. The record contains no copy of any of the patents under which the plaintiffs hold. But the act provided that they should be framed in conformity with the Atoka agreement. Those who signed the patent could not convey more rights than were granted by that part of the Curtis act, nor could they, by omission, deprive the patentee of any exemption to which he was thereby entitled. The patent and the legislation of Congress must be construed together, and when so construed, they show that Congress, in consideration of the Indians' relinquishment of all claim to the common property, and for other satisfactory reasons, made a grant of land which should be nontaxable for a limited period. The patent issued in *pursuance of [674 those statutes gave the Indian as good a title to the exemption as it did to the land itself. Under the provisions of the 5th Amendment there was no more power to deprive him of the exemption than of any other right in the property. No statute would have been valid which reduced his fee to a life estate, or attempted to take from him 10 acres, or 50 acres, or the timber growing on the land. After he accepted the patent the Indian could not be heard, either at law or in equity, to assert any claim to the common property. If he is bound, so is the tribe and the government when the patent was issued.

5. It is conceded that no right which was actually conferred on the Indians can be arbitrarily abrogated by statute. But it is claimed that he, in fact, acquired no valid exemption, since it stands on a different footing from the grant of the land itself; and that, though the provision of nontaxability added to the value of the property, it can be withdrawn, because, if not a gratuity, it is at least subject to the general rule that tax exemptions are to be strictly construed, and are subject to repeal unless the contrary clearly appears. Welch v. Cook, 97 U. S. 541, 24 L. ed. 1112; Christ Church v. Philadelphia County, 24 How. 300, 16 L. ed. 602; Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 22 L. ed. 805; West Wisconsin R. Co. v. Trempealeau County, 93 U. S. 595, 23 L. ed. 814, are cited in support of this proposition. Some of these cases construe general statutes containing, not a grant, but an offer of exemption to such companies as should do certain work or build certain lines of road before a given date. They hold that a statute making such an offer might be repealed even as against those companies which actually built in reliance on its terms. But these rulings are based on the theory that "the legislature was not making promises, but framing a scheme of public revenue and public improvement" (Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 387, 48 L. ed. 231, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107). The companies gave nothing, and the state received nothing in exchange for the offer. There *was no consideration moving from [675 one to the other. Such exemption was a mere bounty, valuable as long as the state chose to concede it, but as tax exemptions are strictly construed, it could be withdrawn at any time the state saw fit.

6. But in the government's dealings with the Indians the rule is exactly the contrary. The construction, instead of being strict, is liberal; doubtful expressions, instead of being resolved in favor of the United States, are to be resolved in favor of a weak and defenseless people, who are wards of the nation, and dependent wholly upon its protection and good faith. This rule of construction has been recognized, without exception, for more than a hundred years, and has been applied in tax cases.

For example, in Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 760, 18 L. ed. 667, 674, the question was whether a statute prohibiting levy and sale of Indian lands prevented a sale of state taxes. The rule of strict construction would have compelled a holding that the property was liable. But Justice Davis, in speaking for the court, said that "enlarged rules of construction are adopted in reference to Indian treaties." He quoted from Chief Justice Marshall, who said that "the language used in treaties with the Indians shall never be construed to their prejudice, if words be made use of which are susceptible of a more extended meaning." Again, in Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, it was held that "Indian treaties must be construed, not according to the technical meaning of their words, but in the sense in which they would naturally be understood by the Indians." In view of the universality of this rule, Congress is conclusively presumed to have intended that the legislation under which these allotments were made to the Indians should be liberally construed in their favor in determining the rights granted to the Choctaws and Chickasaws.

The provision that "all land shall be non-taxable" naturally indicates that the exemption is attached to the land,—only an artificial rule can make it a personal privilege. But if there is any conflict between the natural meaning and the technical construction,—if there were room for doubt, or if there were any question as to whether this was a personal privilege and repealable, or an incident attached to the land itself for a limited period, that doubt, under this rule, must be resolved in favor of the patentee.

The decision in New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303, is directly in point here, and especially as to the quality of the exemption. It appeared there that the Delaware Indians had claims to lands in that state lying south of the river Rariton. An agreement for a release of the claim was made between the Commissioners and the Indians, under which the latter were to receive a conveyance to a large body of land in fee. The agreement was approved by the state by an act which, among other things, declared that the land "should not hereafter be subject to any tax." The Indians, after many years, sold the land, and the state subsequently passed a statute repealing the exemption. This court, speaking by Chief Justice Marshall, held that "every requisite to the formation of a contract is found in the proceedings between the then colony of New Jersey and the Indians. The subject was a purchase on the part of the government of extensive claims of the Indians, the extinguishment of which would quiet the title to a large portion of the province. A proposition to this effect was made, the terms stipulated, the consideration agreed upon, which is a tract of land with the privilege of exemption from taxation; and then, in consideration of the arrangement previously made, one of which this act of assembly is stated to be, the Indians executed their deed of cession. This is certainly a contract clothed in forms of unusual solemnity. The privilege, though for the benefit of the Indians, is annexed by the terms which create it, to the land itself, not to their persons." And it was thereupon held that the right was not affected by the later statute repealing the exemption. The case here is much stronger. For the tax exemption, which adds value to the property, is not perpetual, but is attached to the land only so long as the Indian retains the title, and in no event to exceed twenty-one years. It is property, and entitled to protection as such, unless the fact that the owner is an Indian, subject to restrictions as to alienation, made a difference.

7. There have been comparatively few cases which discuss the legislative power over private property held by the Indians. But those few all recognize that he is not excepted from the protection guaranteed by the Constitution. His private rights are secured and enforced to the same extent and in the same way as other residents or citizens of the United States. Re Heff, 197 U. S. 504, 49 L. ed. 855, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 307, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Jackson ex dem. Smith v. Gooddell, 20 Johns. 188; Lowry v. Weaver, 4 McLean, 82, Fed. Cas. No. 8,584; Whirlwind v. Vonder Ahe, 67 Mo. App. 628; Taylor v. Drew, 21 Ark. 487. His right of private property is not subject to impairment by legislative action, even while he is, as a member of a tribe, subject to the guardianship of the United States as to his political and personal status. This was clearly recognized in the leading case of Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. There it appeared that an Indian chief owned in fee land which fronted on a stream. The chief died, and in 1891 his son and heir, during the continuance of the tribal organization, let the land to Meehan for ten years. In 1894 he again let the same property to Jones for twenty years. In that year the Secretary of the Interior was authorized by Congress to approve the lease to Jones if the latter would increase the rental. This he did, and with the assent of the Indian and the Secretary of the Interior a lease was made to Jones. In the litigation which followed, Meehan relied on the first contract, made in the exercise of the Indian's right of private ownership. Jones relied on that made 678] *under congressional authority; and although the Indian was a member of the tribe, and much more subject to legislative power than these plaintiffs, the court held that the subsequent act could not relate back so as to interfere with the right of property which the Indian possessed and conveyed as an owner in fee, and while Congress had power to make treaties, it could not affect titles already granted by the treaty itself.

Nothing that was said in Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578, is opposed to the same conclusion here. For that case did not involve property rights, but related solely to the power of Congress to extend the period of the Indian's disability. The statute did not attempt to take his land or any right, member, or appurtenance thereunto belonging. It left that as it was. But, having regard to the Indian's inexperience, and desiring to protect him against himself and those who might take advantage of his incapacity, Congress extended the time during which he could not sell. On that subject, after calling attention to the fact that "Tiger was still a ward of the Nation, so far as the alienation of these lands was concerned, and a member of the existing Creek Nation," it was said that "incompetent persons, though citizens, may not have the full right to control their property," and that there was nothing in citizenship incompatible with guardianship, or with restricting sales by Indians deemed by Congress incapable of managing their estates.

But there was no intimation that the power of wardship conferred authority on Congress to lessen any of the rights of property which had been vested in the individual Indian by prior laws or contracts. 56 L. ed:

Such rights are protected from repeal by the provisions of the 5th Amendment.

The Constitution of the state of Oklahoma itself expressly recognizes that the exemption here granted must be protected until it is lawfully destroyed. We have seen that it was a vested property right which could not be *abrogated by stat-[679 etc. The decree refusing to enjoin the assessment of taxes on the exempt lands of plaintiffs must therefore be reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

MICHAEL H. GLEASON, Minnie Love, Henry McGee, et al., Pliffs. in Err.,
v.

J. I. WOOD, County Treasurer of Pittsburg County, Oklahoma, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 679, 680.)

This case is governed by the decision in Choate v. Trapp, ante, 941.

[No. 575.]

Argued February 23, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Pittsburg County, in that state, sustaining a demurrer to the petition in a suit to enjoin state taxation of Indian allotments. Reversed.

See same case below, 28 Okla. 502, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 114 Pac. 703.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. W. L. Sturdevant and David C. McCurtain argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edward P. Hill, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

A legislative grant of an exemption from taxation, resting upon a consideration, is a contract, and such an exemption becomes an element of value of the thing exempted, and is therefore a property right.

New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303; Thompson v. Holton, 6 McLean, 386, Fed. Cas. No. 13,958; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 395; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 718, 25 L. ed. 501; May v. Cass County, 12 N. D. 137, 96 N. W. 292; Nivens v. Nivens, 4 Ind. Terr. 574, 76 S. W. 114.

Congress is as such prohibited from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts as are the legislatures of the states.

Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 718, 719, 25 L. ed. 501; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 388, 1 L. ed. 649; Miller, Const. 529, 530; 3 Current Law, p. 765; 3 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. pp. 503, 510; Thompson v. Holton, 6 McLean, 386, Fed. Cas. No. 13,958; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McFarlan, 31 N. J. Eq. 706; Evans-Snider-Buel Co. v. McFadden, 58 L.R.A. 900, 44 C. C. A. 494, 105 Fed. 293, 185 U. S. 505, 46 L. ed. 1012, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Sutherland, Notes on U. S. Const. pp. 78, 79; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 626; 2 Beach, Modern Law of Contr. p. 2121, §§ 1634-1637; United States v. Bostwick, 94 U. S. 53, 24 L. ed. 65; Foster v. Nelson, 2 Pet. 253-314, 7 L. ed. 415-436; Hewitt v. New York & O. M. R. Co. 12 Blatchf. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 6,443.

A treaty or an agreement of the government, made with an Indian tribe, has the legal force of a treaty with a foreign state; and because of the situation of the parties, it stands upon higher moral ground.

United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. ed. 1089, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662; Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 565, 47 L. ed. 306, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 598, 28 L. ed. 803, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 927, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; United States v. New York Indians, 173 U. S. 464, 43 L. ed. 769, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Shulthis v. McDougal, 95 C. C. A. 615, 170 Fed. 529; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Chae Chan Ping v. United States, 130 U. S. 581, 32 L. ed. 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; New York Indians v. United States, 40 Ct. Cl. 448; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 262, 53 L. ed. 174, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

A repeal of the agreements made with the Indians, and embodied in acts of Congress under which this exemption right is claimed, will not be presumed, but if repealed, rights already acquired are not affected.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 216, 217; Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; United States v. Lee Yen Tai, 185 U. S. 220-223, 46 L. ed. 882, 883, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 145, 146, 40 L. ed. 372, 373, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 486, 19 L. ed. 280; Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 153, 21 L. ed. 429; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 116, 25 L. ed. 783; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 41 L. ed. 437, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Ex parte Steele, 162 Fed. 704.

The principles of law under which we seek to protect the exemption in this case have been invoked by the courts to protect similar rights in an almost endless variety of cases; and the United States government, as much so as the states, is prohibited by the Federal Constitution from depriving persons and corporations of property without due process of law.

New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch, 43, 3 L. ed. 650; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 738, 8 L. ed. 564; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 289, 10 L. ed. 968; Baldwin v. Payne, 6 How. 332, 12 L. ed. 460; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 542, 12 L. ed. 549; Piqua State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 385, 401, 14 L. ed. 983, 990; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 550-554, 18 L. ed. 408-410; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 438, 19 L. ed. 498; East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 376, 20 L. ed. 613; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 458, 21 L. ed. 205; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 21 L. ed. 326; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 223, 23 L. ed. 861; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 803, 27 L. ed. 481, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 750, 27 L. ed. 461, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Given v. Wright, 117 U. S. 655, 29 L. ed. 1024, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; Pearshall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 662, 40 L. ed. 843, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, 216 U. S. 206, 233, 54 L. ed. 446, 460, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 352.

At the time of the passage of the act of May 27, 1908, the plaintiffs were citizens of the United States, had received their patents for their allotments, the United States had relinquished its interest and control over their allotted land, and any attempt by Congress to make the same subject to taxation was an unlawful exercise of governmental authority.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

There is nothing in the status of the Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes, and especially the plaintiffs in this case, that would take them and their property from under the protection of the Constitution of the United States, and Congress possesses no power or authority to legislate respecting Choctaw Indians and their private property that it does not possess respecting other citizens of the United States and their property in the state of Oklahoma.

Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; United States v. Auger, 153 Fed. 671.

The subject of state taxation is a matter within the exclusive control and jurisdiction of the state, and since statehood the Congress of the United States is without power or authority to pass any legislation relating to the property of citizens of a state except for national purposes.

Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 11; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed. 97.

The state of Oklahoma cannot, independently of the act of Congress of May 27, 1908, tax the allotted lands of the Choctaws so long as the title remains in the original allottees, but must link its fortunes with that act, which we maintain is void and of no effect, and with that act must stand or fall, as the case may be, for by the provisions of its own Constitution the state of Oklahoma has exempted such allotted lands from taxation during the force and effect of the treaties and Federal laws theretofore exempting such lands from taxation.

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

For his contentions, see his brief as reported in Choate v. Trapp, ante, 941.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The complaint alleges that the plaintiffs are Choctaws owning homesteads and surplus granted under the terms of the Atoka agreement. Their applications to enjoin the officers of the state of Oklahoma from assessing their lands for taxation for the year 1909 were denied. All of the *ques-[680 tions involved are disposed of by the decision in Choate v. Trapp, just rendered. [224 U. S. 665, ante, 941, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.] the judgment, therefore, is reversed, and the case remanded, with directions for further proceedings not inconsistent with that opinion. Reversed.

BESSIE BROWN ENGLISH, Plff. in Err.,
v.

H. T. RICHARDSON, County Treasurer of Tulsa County.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 680, 681.)

Constitutional law — vested rights — tax exemption — Indian allotments.

A Creek homestead allottee under an agreement incorporated in Congressional legislation by which, in part consideration of the relinquishment by the Indians of their claim to the tribal property, they were to receive homestead allotments which should be nontaxable and inalienable for a specified period, acquired a vested right to exemption from state taxation, protected by the Federal Constitution against abrogation by Congress during that period.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV, e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 559.]

Argued February 23, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Tulsa County, in that state, sustaining a demurrer to the petition in a suit to enjoin state taxation of Indian allotments. Reversed.

See same case below, 28 Okla. 408, 114 Pac. 710.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. L. Sturdevant argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Grant Foreman and M. L. Mott, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A legislative grant of an exemption from taxation is presumed to rest upon a consideration and is conclusive against the grantor; and the exemption attaching to the property, right, or franchise becomes an element of its value, and is therefore a property right; and when this right becomes vested, it is inviolate, and cannot be extinguished or disturbed by legislation. Such a grant constitutes a contract which is protected by § 10 of art. 1 of the Constitution of the United States, and likewise by Amendments 5 and 14 of the Constitution. And where an agreement for an exemption is entered into between the state and an individual, and the contract becomes executed, such a contract has all the force of a grant, and the authority of the grantor thereover entirely ceases.

NOTE.—On exemption of Indians from taxation—see note to Allen County v. Simons, 13 L.R.A. 512.

New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303; Thompson v. Holton, 6 McLean, 386, Fed. Cas. No. 13,958; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 395; 3 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 353.

Section 10 of art. 1 of the Constitution of the United States, which provides, among other things, that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, does not in terms prohibit Congress from passing such a law; but except in those instances where such a law may be passed in the exercise of an express or a necessarily implied power under the Constitution, the Congress is, on principle, as much prohibited from so doing as the legislatures of the states. The protection of property rights is one of the fundamental purposes of government,—one consideration of the social compact; and the exercise of a power by a legislature which would impair the obligation of contracts or imperil security in private property, whether prohibited or not, would be subversive of the fundamental principles upon which governments rest. Only the exercise of a governmental power regarding matters of the gravest public concern would justify such a course; and in that event the power would have to be exercised so as uniformly to affect the whole people; no special class or individuals could be singled out as victims of its operation.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 718, 719, 25 L. ed. 501; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 388, 1 L. ed. 649; Miller, Const. 529, 530; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. ed. 287; 22 Ops. Atty. Gen. 194.

A treaty or agreement between the government and an Indian tribe is as binding from every legal standpoint as a treaty between the government and a foreign state; but because of that relation between the government and the Indian by which, through the superior power of the former, the latter is made dependent on its will and subject to its authority, the agreements and treaties made with the Indians involve a higher moral obligation on the part of the government than if made with an independent state.

Where, under such circumstances, an agreement has been made between the strong and the weak, the independent and the dependent sovereignties, and property rights thereunder acquired by the latter in reliance solely upon the good faith of the former, it would be repugnant to every instinct of justice and morality to contend that the rights so acquired may be violated simply because the power exists so to do; and although conceding that power in the abstract to exist, nevertheless no considerations other than those of public policy of the greatest moment would justify its exercise.

United States v. Winans, 198 U. S. 371, 49 L. ed. 1089, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662; Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 565, 47 L. ed. 306, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. ed. 228, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

Repeals by implication are not favored. Unless express terms are used or the repugnancy of the statutes is so great as to be irreconcilable, the former statutes will stand, and no intent to repeal will be presumed. And where rights have been acquired under the statute, it can only be repealed by express terms showing an unmistakable intention so to do. But when thus repealed, the rights acquired thereunder cannot be divested or disturbed. It is likewise true that many statutes are and must be construed with certain exceptions from the effect of their general operation. This is necessary in order that other statutes under which rights have become fixed, and which would otherwise be repealed, may still be operated to the extent of preserving such rights.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 216, 217; Frost v. Wenne, 157 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; United States v. Lee Yen Tai, 185 U. S. 220, 223, 46 L. ed. 882, 883, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 145, 146, 40 L. ed. 372, 373, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 486, 19 L. ed. 280; Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 153, 21 L. ed. 429; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 116, 25 L. ed. 783; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 41 L. ed. 437, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Ex parte Steele, 162 Fed. 705.

The principles of law announced in New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303, have been reiterated and affirmed by the Supreme Court in many subsequent decisions. The property right in an exemption from taxation, the contractual character of such a law, within the constitutional meaning, and the inviolability of such a right, have all been considered in many decisions; and the right, under whatever circumstances it may have arisen, has at all times been held inviolate.

There are instances almost innumerable, and we refer to some of them, in which the courts have held that a grant of a franchise to a corporation, with the exemption of its property from taxation for a limited term, if accepted and acted upon by the corporation, constitutes a contract between the corporation and the state or municipality granting the same, and that the rights of the parties thereto cannot be changed or modified by legislation. The rule has been exactly the same in cases where exemptions have been granted to churches, charities, public or private enterprises, and contracts of this character are of equal efficacy whether between states or municipalities and individuals, or between two states.

Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch, 43, 3 L. ed. 650; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 738, 8 L. ed. 564; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 289, 10 L. ed. 968; Baldwin v. Payne, 6 How. 332, 12 L. ed. 460; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 542, 12 L. ed. 549; Piqua State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 385, 401, 14 L. ed. 983, 990; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 550-554, 18 L. ed. 408-410; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 438, 19 L. ed. 498; East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 376, 20 L. ed. 613; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 458, 21 L. ed. 205; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 21 L. ed. 326; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 223, 22 L. ed. 861; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 803, 27 L. ed. 481, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 750, 27 L. ed. 461, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Given v. Wright, 117 U. S. 655, 29 L. ed. 1024, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 662, 40 L. ed. 843, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, 216 U. S. 206, 233, 54 L. ed. 446, 460, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

By accepting the terms of the act of Congress of June 16, 1906, as amended March 4, 1907, known as the enabling act, and adopting a Constitution by a vote of 56 L. ed.

her people in accordance with the authority and conditions thereof, the state of Oklahoma ratified and bound herself to an observance of all rights of the Indians existing by reason of treaties and agreements made by them with the government of the United States, and has by such acts estopped herself to assert an interest in conflict with such right.

United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 536, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

A proceeding to enjoin an illegal tax levy, or a levy upon exempt property, is specifically authorized in the form of the present proceeding by § 242 of the Code of Oklahoma, statutes of 1903; and if the proceeding be against the state, the state, under such statute, has consented thereto.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wiggins, 5 Okla. 477, 49 Pac. 1019; Gray v. Stiles, 6 Okla. 470, 49 Pac. 1083; Missouri River, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. v. Morris, 13 Kan. 277; Hudson v. Atchison County, 12 Kan. 140.

Nor would a proceeding of this character be repugnant to the 11th Amendment to the Federal Constitution were it instituted in a circuit court of the United States, on the ground that the suit is against the state. The person attempting the unlawful act can be prohibited, notwithstanding the state is interested in the result.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 200 U. S. 273, 50 L. ed. 477, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

For his contentions, see his brief as reported in Choate v. Trapp, ante, 941.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff holds a patent dated December 12, 1902. It was issued to her as a member of the Creek Nation when the tribal lands were divided in pursuance of the same general policy as that discussed in Choate v. Trapp, just decided. [224 U. S. 665, ante, 941, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565]. There were, however, a few differences. The tax exemption covered only the homestead of 40 acres, *and there was a restriction on alien-[681] ability for twenty-one years. The patent, instead of being "framed in conformity with the agreement" as in the case of the Choc-taws and Chickasaws, bore on its face a provision that the land should be nontaxable; the language of the agreement incorporated in the act of Congress being that "each citizen shall select from his allotment 40 acres of land . . . as a homestead, which shall be and remain nontaxable, inalienable, and free from any encumbrance whatever for twenty-one years from the date of the deed therefor, and a separate deed shall be issued to each allottee for his homestead, in which this condition shall appear." [32 Stat. at L. 503, chap. 1323, § 16.]

952

These differences are not material. The right of plaintiff to the exemption granted by Congress is protected by the Constitution on principles stated and applied in Choate v. Trapp. The judgment dismissing her complaint is therefore reversed, and the case remanded for proceedings not inconsistent with that opinion.

Reversed.

224 U. S.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

Vol. 225.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 225,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 225 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 225 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1-2	Maryland v. West Virginia	955	101	Railroad Commission v. Worthington	1004
2-4	" "	956		" "	1006
4-7	" "	957	102-105	" "	1007
7-9	" "	958	105-107	" "	1008
9-11	" "	959	107-110	" "	1009
11-14	" "	960	110-111	" "	1009
14-16	" "	961	111	Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & S. Co.	1009
16-18	" "	962		" "	1020
18-21	" "	963	124-126	" "	1021
21-23	" "	964	126-128	" "	1022
23-25	" "	965	128-131	" "	1023
26-27	" "	966	131-133	" "	1024
27-29	" "	967	133-136	" "	1025
29-31	" "	968	136-138	" "	1026
31	" "	969	138-141	" "	1027
32-33	The Jason	969	141-142	" "	1027
33-35	" "	970	142	Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co.	1029
36-38	" "	971		" "	1030
48-49	" "	976	143-145	" "	1031
49-52	" "	977	145-147	" "	1032
52-54	" "	978	147-150	" "	1033
54-57	" "	979	150-153	" "	1033
57	" "	980	153-154	" "	1033
58	Valdes v. Central Altagra- cia	980	155	Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby	1033
59-60	" "	982	162	" "	1036
60-62	" "	983	162-165	" "	1037
62-65	" "	984	165-166	" "	1038
65-68	" "	985	167	Jordan v. Massachusetts	1038
68-70	" "	986	172-173	" "	1040
70-73	" "	987	173-176	" "	1041
73-76	" "	988	176-177	" "	1042
76-78	" "	989	178	National Bank v. National Herkimer County Bank	1042
78-79	" "	990		" "	1044
79	Chase v. Wetzelar	990	180-181	" "	1045
80	" "	991	181-183	" "	1046
80-83	" "	992	183-186	" "	1047
83-85	" "	993	186-187	" "	1047
85-88	" "	994	187	Anderson v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co.	1047
88-89	" "	995		" "	1048
90	Sexton v. Kessler & Co.	995	188-191	" "	1049
95-96	" "	999	191-193	" "	1050
96-99	" "	1000	193-194	" "	1051
99	" "	1001	195	" "	1052
99	Southern R. Co. v. Burling- ton Lumber Co.	1001	195-198	" "	1053
100	" "	1003	198-200	" "	1054
			200-203	" "	1054

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 22. U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 225 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
203-205	Anderson v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co.	1055	330-332	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	1109
205	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Bray	1055	332-333	" "	1110
206-208	" "	1058	339-341	" "	1111
208-211	" "	1059	341-344	" "	1112
211-213	" "	1060	344-346	" "	1113
213-216	" "	1061	347	Hyde v. United States	1114
216-218	" "	1062	349-350	" "	1119
218-219	" "	1063	350-353	" "	1120
219	United States v. Colorado Anthracite Co.	1063	353-356	" "	1121
220-223	" "	1064	356-358	" "	1122
223-225	" "	1065	358-361	" "	1123
225-227	" "	1066	361-363	" "	1124
227	Johannessen v. United States	1066	363-366	" "	1125
232-234	" "	1068	366-368	" "	1126
234-237	" "	1069	368-371	" "	1127
237-239	" "	1070	371-373	" "	1128
239-241	" "	1071	373-376	" "	1129
241-243	" "	1072	376-379	" "	1130
243	R. J. Darnell v. Illinois C. R. Co.	1072	379-381	" "	1131
244-245	" "	1073	381-384	" "	1132
245	" "	1074	384-387	" "	1133
246	Creswill v. Grand Lodge K. of P.	1074	387-389	" "	1134
248-249	" "	1075	389-391	" "	1135
249-251	" "	1076	392	Brown v. Elliott	1136
251-253	" "	1077	393-394	" "	1137
254-258	" "	1078	394-397	" "	1138
258	" "	1079	397-399	" "	1139
258-261	" "	1080	399-402	" "	1140
261-264	" "	1081	402-404	" "	1141
264	Norfolk & S. Turnp. Co. v. Virginia	1082	405	Johnson v. United States	1142
265-266	" "	1082	408-410	" "	1143
266-268	" "	1084	410-413	" "	1144
268-271	" "	1085	413-415	" "	1145
271	" "	1086	415-418	" "	1146
272	Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co.	1087	418-420	" "	1147
272-274	" "	1088	420	Glasgow v. Moyer	1147
274-277	" "	1089	423-425	" "	1148
277-279	" "	1090	425-428	" "	1149
279-281	" "	1091	428-430	" "	1150
282	Procter & Gamble Co. v. United States	1091	430-434	Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	1151
284-287	" "	1092	434-436	" "	1152
287-289	" "	1093	436	Messinger v. Anderson	1152
289-291	" "	1094	441-443	" "	1155
291-294	" "	1095	443-445	" "	1156
294-297	" "	1096	445	Zeckendorf v. Steinfeld	1156
297-299	" "	1097	446-448	" "	1160
299-302	" "	1098	448-451	" "	1161
302-306	Hooker v. Knapp	1099	451-454	" "	1162
306	United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	1100	454-456	" "	1163
314	" "	1102	456-459	" "	1164
314-317	" "	1103	459	" "	1165
317-320	" "	1104	460	Low Wah Suey v. Backus	1165
320-322	" "	1105	466-468	" "	1167
322-325	" "	1106	468-471	" "	1168
325-326	" "	1107	471-474	" "	1169
326-327	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	1107	474-476	" "	1170
327-330	" "	1108	476	" "	1171
			477	Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall	1171
			481	" "	1173
			481-483	" "	1174
			483-486	" "	1175
			486-488	" "	1176
			489	David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Automobile Club	1177
			493-495	" "	1179

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 225 U. S.	Title.	Here in	Off. Rep. 225 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
495-497	David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Automobile Club	1180	604	Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Wagner Elec- tric & Mfg. Co.	1222
497-500	" "	1181		" "	1223
500-501	" "	1182	605-608	" "	1224
501	Savage v. Jones	1182	608-610	" "	1225
503	" "	1183	610-611	" "	1225
504-509	" "	1184	613-614	" "	1226
509	" "	1185	614-616	" "	1227
509-510	" "	1186	616-619	" "	1228
511-513	" "	1187	619-621	" "	1229
519-520	" "	1189	621-623	" "	1229
520-523	" "	1190	623	Murphy v. California	1231
523-525	" "	1191	627	" "	1232
525-528	" "	1192	627-630	" "	1233
528-531	" "	1193	630-631	" "	1233
532-533	" "	1194	631-633	Henderson v. Mayer	1234
533-535	" "	1195	633	" "	1235
535-538	" "	1196	636-638	" "	1236
538-540	" "	1197	638-640	" "	1236
540	Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright	1197	640	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States	1238
547-549	" "	1200	646-648	" "	1239
549-550	" "	1201	648-650	" "	1240
551	Clairmont v. United States	1201	651	Pickford v. Talbott	1244
553-554	" "	1202	652-653	" "	1245
554-557	" "	1203	653-656	" "	1246
557-559	" "	1204	656-658	" "	1247
559-560	" "	1205	658-661	" "	1248
561	Shulthis v. McDougal	1205	661-662	" "	1248
565-566	" "	1209	663	Ex parte Webb	1249
566-569	" "	1210	664-666	" "	1250
569-571	" "	1211	666-667	" "	1251
571-572	" "	1212	670-671	" "	1252
572-574	Eastern Cherokees v. Unit- ed States	1212	672-675	" "	1253
574-576	" "	1213	675-676	" "	1254
576-579	" "	1214	676-680	" "	1255
579-582	" "	1215	680-681	" "	1256
582	" "	1216	681-683	" "	1257
582	Kindred v. Union P. R. Co.	1216	683-686	" "	1258
590-592	" "	1218	686-688	" "	1259
592-595	" "	1219	688-691	" "	1260
595-597	" "	1220	691	" "	1260
597-602	Flannelly v. Delaware & H. Co.	1221	692	Kyle v. Hammond	1261
602-604	" "	1222	695-718	Memorandum Cases	1271

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States
AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

1] *STATE OF MARYLAND, Complainant.
v.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-31.)

Boundaries — between states — judicial establishment.

The true boundary line between the states of Maryland and West Virginia is established and decreed to be as delineated and set forth in a report and the accompanying map made by the commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States to run, locate, and permanently mark with suitable monuments the Deakins or old state line as the boundary line between those states from low-water mark on the southern bank of the North Branch of the Potomac river to the Pennsylvania line.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 1, Original.]

Decree entered May 27, 1912.

ORIGINAL SUIT in equity between the states of Maryland and West Virginia to settle the boundary between those states from the head waters of the Potomac to the Pennsylvania line. The boundary line established and decreed to be as delineated and set forth in the report and accompanying map made by commissioners appointed for that purpose.

See also 217 U. S. 1, 577, 54 L. ed. 645, 888, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 630.

Mr. Edgar Allan Poe, Attorney General of Maryland, and Mr. Isaac Lobe Straus for complainant.

56 L. ed.

Mr. William G. Conley, Attorney General of West Virginia, and Mr. George E. Price for defendant.

Per Curiam:

The state of West Virginia having moved the court to take up for consideration the exceptions heretofore filed in this cause by the state of Maryland to the report of Commissioners Julius K. Monroe and Samuel S. Gannett, two of the commissioners who were appointed by the decree entered in this cause on the 31st day of May, 1910, to run, locate, and permanently mark, with suitable monuments, the Deakins or old state line, as the boundary line between the states of Maryland and West Virginia, from low-water mark on *the Southern[2 bank of the North Branch of the Potomac river to the Pennsylvania line, and to overrule said exceptions and confirm said report, which report is in the words and figures following, to wit:

To the Honorable Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

We, Julius K. Monroe and Samuel S. Gannett, two of the commissioners appointed under the decree of the court rendered May 31, 1910, "to run, locate, and establish and permanently mark with suitable monuments the said Deakins or 'old state line' as the boundary line between the states of Maryland and West Virginia from said point (low-water mark) on the southern bank of the North Branch of the Potomac river to the said Pennsylvania line, etc.," have the honor to submit the following report and map entitled, "Map Showing The Boundary Line Between Maryland and West Virginia, from the Potomac River to the Pennsylvania State Line, as Surveyed and Marked under the Decree of the Supreme Court of the United States, Rendered May 31, 1910," etc.:

The party was organized and went into camp on July 12, 1910, on Arnold's ridge, about 1 mile north of the North Branch of the Potomac river, and immediately began the survey of the line.

Beginning at the Fairfax stone, a line was first run north $0^{\circ} 56'$ E. along a well-marked line to a planted stone marked

B "1101", at the southwest corner of military lot No. 1101, originally a "bounded maple standing 1 mile north from a stone fixed by Lord Fairfax for the head of the North Branch of the Potowmack river." The intersection of this line with the south bank of the North Branch of the Potomac (at low-water mark) was, under the decree of the court, fixed as the corner of Maryland and West Virginia, and monument No. 1 was therefore erected at this place and became the initial point of the boundary line run in 1910 and 1911.

From the corner of lot 1101 B, where monument No. 2 was erected, the line deflects slightly to the west and follows the old marked line on the course N. $0^{\circ} 47' 53''$ 3]E. as *identified by the surveyors in the case in 1897 and shown on the maps filed by the defendants. This line crosses Arnold's ridge, Laurel run, Backbone mountain, Youghiogheny river, and where it intersects the 3d line of a Maryland tract called "Covent Garden" monument No. 4 was erected and an offset was made to the west. The 3d line of Covent Garden was followed for a distance of 402.15 feet on the course N. $71^{\circ} 48'$ W. (true) to a planted stone, acknowledged by residents and owners of adjoining property and pointed out by them as being the limit of their respective claims, at this point. Monument No. 5 was built over this stone and the line was run N. $0^{\circ} 27' 04''$ E. in a manner to follow the property lines, as acknowledged by the citizens of the two states; passing over the center of a planted stone property corner, which marked the beginning of the Maryland tract called Mount Pleasant, surveyed in 1774. Monument No. 6 was built over and around this stone, which was pointed out by witnesses as marking the place of the original corner, a white oak tree. Continuing on the same course, a large anciently marked white oak tree was reached and identified as the beginning of a Virginia tract of land surveyed for John Pettyjohn in 1781, and also a corner of John T. Goff 1,000 acres, survey made in 1782, both of which call for the boundary line. This tree was cut and blocks taken out by your commissioners which showed surveyors' ax marks in the wood; one one hundred and thirty years old, and one one hundred and seventeen years, and the last seventy-eight years, thus indisputably establishing this course as following the oldest marked line extant. The stump of this tree was removed and monument No. 8 was built in the exact spot occupied by it. Upon trial it was found that from this white oak, northward, the line between property holdings of citizens in the two states verged to the eastward, and a slight angle was therefore made to the east and the boundary line run N. $0^{\circ} 42' 57''$ E. to the stump of a bounded sugar tree, the northwest corner of a Maryland tract called Eelshine; this tree, while standing, was identified by the surveyors in this case in 1897, and also by the owners of the tract. The land, since that time, has been cleared, and the timber destroyed by fire. The stump of this sugar tree was again pointed out to the commissioners, in 1910, by Peter F. Nine, the *present owner of the tract Eelshine.[4 This stump was removed and monument No. 10 erected exactly where it stood.

From this point the boundary line runs S. $89^{\circ} 17' 03''$ E. 482.3 feet along the line common to the tract Eelshine and the Virginia grant to Wm. Ashby for 50 acres, to the southwest corner of the Maryland tract called Buckdale. As the southwest corner of Buckdale and the southeast corner of the Ashby 50-acre tract, which are common, could not be definitely located upon the ground, as all original objects marking them have been destroyed, this point was determined by the intersection of a line produced southward passing through known and accepted points in the "old line," namely, "the stake and stone pile," on Lauer Hill, which is the common corner of the Maryland tract called "Maryland," and the Virginia grant to John Hoyer for 500 acres, and which was identified and located by the surveyors in this case in 1897, and shown at Red "C-6" upon Map No. 1, filed by defendants, and again identified by your commissioners in 1910; and a point north of the B. & O. Railroad near Hutton, Maryland, in the property line between lands of the Connell heirs and George Morris. Monument No. 11 was placed at the intersection of the line above described with the line eastward from monument No. 10. The course of the boundary from monument No. 11, as above determined, is N. $0^{\circ} 41' 02''$ E., following closely the lines of the original Virginia grants, and passing through, or very near, the several points indicated upon map No. 1 filed in this case by defendant, and testified to as standing in the "Deakins, or old state line," to a point on Glover's hill, 1 1/2 miles north of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, where monument No. 15 was erected. From this point northward it was found that the general course of the property lines verged slightly to the west, and the course of the boundary was here changed to N. $0^{\circ} 22' 27''$ E. to conform thereto, following the well-marked divisional lines between the F. & W. Deakins 6,000-acre Virginia grant, and the Maryland military lots (Nos. 1237 to 1245) and the eastern line of the Hoyer and Martin 3,600-acre Virginia grant, passing over the summits of Snaggy mountain and through the southern end of the Pine swamp 5] to a point where this *line intersects the southern line of the John Crane 776-acre Virginia grant, a short distance north of the Cranesville and Oakland road, as indicated upon the maps filed by the defendant in this case. This point was determined by reproducing upon the ground the southern line of said 776-acre Crane survey. Monument No. 19 was erected at this point.

From monument No. 19 an offset of 971.09 feet was made along the south line of the John Crane 776-acre tract N. $89^{\circ} 27' 27''$ E. to its intersection with the west boundary of Maryland military lot No. 1292, where monument No. 20 was built. The boundary here turns northward, following the west limit of military lots 1292, 1294, 1296, 1298, 1400, and 1402 as laid out by Francis Deakins, on a true course of N. $0^{\circ} 17' 00''$ E. to the northwest corner of military lot 1402. Monument No. 21 was placed at this point and an offset made 53.69 feet S. $89^{\circ} 43' 00''$ E. along the north side of lot 1402 (which is also the division line between lands of E. F. Jenkins and M. H. Frankhouser), where monument No. 22 was erected.

From monument No. 22 the course of the boundary is N. $0^{\circ} 24' 42''$ E., passing through, or near the point where a large marked red oak formerly stood, testified to in this case by Ethbell Falkenstine, as standing in the Deakins or old state line, and shown at the letters "W-K" upon the maps heretofore filed; a planted stone, a short distance north of the red oak in the east line of the Henry Banks survey of 8,000 acres, and following a well-marked line along and with the eastern boundary of the Banks survey and the western boundary of the Maryland tract called "Canrobert" to a point where it intersects the south line of the 328-acre tract granted by Virginia to Henry Deal, and passing through the same, to a point where the east line of the Banks survey intersects the south line of a tract of 367 acres granted by Virginia to Henry Deal, where monument No. 27 was erected.

From monument No. 27 an offset was made 347.3 feet N. $89^{\circ} 25' 12''$ E. along the line between the two Henry Deal tracts above mentioned, where monument No. 28 was placed.

From monument No. 28 to monument No. 32 the course of the boundary is N. $0^{\circ} 20' 07''$ W. and closely follows *the mutually[6 accepted property lines of citizens of the two states; corners, trees, and fences having been pointed out by various landowners on both sides of the "old line." Monument No. 32 replaces a large marked Spanish oak, which was a common corner of lands owned by John and George W. Vansickle, in West Virginia, and in the west line of land owned by W. M. Fike in Maryland. This tree was cut down and the stump removed by your commissioners in 1911. From this point northward it was found that the old accepted boundary line veered slightly to the east, and the course of the boundary line was therefore changed to N. $0^{\circ} 4' 55''$ E. to conform to it.

Monument No. 34 was set at the intersection of this line with the southern boundary line of the state of Pennsylvania.

In addition to the monuments just mentioned as standing at the angular points in the boundary, others were set between, exactly in line. (See description of monuments.)

The total number of large monuments erected along the Maryland-West Virginia boundary line is 34, in addition to the one restoring the "Fairfax stone." Of small monuments, 26 were erected, making a total of 60 permanent marks. The line is also marked at suitable places by 5 copper bolts securely fastened into natural and planted rocks.

A description of instruments and methods used in the survey, the method of constructing the monuments, location, latitude, longitude, approximate elevation, distance, true and magnetic bearings, will be found in the following pages.

Instruments.

The following instruments were used in making the survey: Theodolite, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inch No. 11, United States & Canada Boundary Survey, temporarily loaned during 1910 to this survey. In 1911, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inch theodolite No. 219 of United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, loaned by the Superintendent of that Bureau in place of No. 11. No. 219 is lighter, works more freely, and is altogether much more satisfactory than No. 11. The circles on both theodolites are graduated to 10' spaces and read by verniers to 10". With these instruments the line was ranged out from hilltop to hilltop and flagpoles set at intervals of 1 to 4 miles.

*2 Gurley transits, circles $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter reading by vernier A to minutes and by vernier B to hundredths of a degree, loaned by Julius K. Monroe. With these transits the line was run from flagpole to flagpole, previously located with the theodolite, in the usual manner with double backsights and foresights. The length of foresight was limited by the length of tape, 500 feet; the length of backsight was limited only by the visibility of the rear tripod. Instead of the ordinary rods for lining in, brass plumb bobs weighing 2 pounds each, supported by tripods 7 feet high, with movable heads, were used. As sights were taken on the string supporting the plumb bobs, the line was produced with great accuracy. A brass tack was set in a solid hub at each transit station.

Distances.

Distances were measured to the nearest 1/100 of a foot with a 500-foot standardized steel tape, supported at several points along its length so as to have a uniform slope, approximately parallel to the slope of the ground.

The inclination or slope of the tape was measured by the vertical circle on the transit, and the horizontal distance and difference in elevation carefully computed.

Besides the 500-ft. steel tape, which was graduated to single feet, except at each end, where 1 foot was graduated to tenths, a 100-foot steel tape graduated throughout to feet, tenths, and hundredths was used for shorter measurements.

Astronomical observations.

Astronomical observations for azimuth were obtained with the theodolite by observing Polaris near eastern elongation. Ten measurements of the angle between star and mark were made with telescope direct and reversed in 5 positions of the circle. The mark was a bulls-eye lantern placed at one of the transit stations a mile or more distant, northward. Time was obtained from the railroad; a mean time Waltham watch being compared with 75th meridian time as set by telegraph from the United States Naval Observatory at Washington each noon, and proper reduction was made for difference in longitude. Azimuth observations were made at 8 stations along the boundary line, 36.7 miles in length; usually at or near a point of deflection in the final line.

Geodetic positions.

At a point near Cranesville, West Virginia, 24 miles north of the Fairfax stone and 12 miles south of the Pennsylvania line, connection was made with Piney swamp triangulation station located by the United States Geological Survey by a belt of triangulation extending westward from Maryland heights and Sugarloaf, 2 primary triangulation stations of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The geodetic position of Piney swamp station is on United States Standard datum, and is thus free from station error. A portion of the boundary line, 1.9 miles each of this station, measured during the progress of the survey, was used as a base line, and by measuring all the angles in 2 triangles accurate connection was made with this triangulation station. From these data the geodetic positions of all large monuments were computed.

Elevations.

The approximate elevations of all stations were determined by carrying a line of vertical angle measurements along the boundary. The elevation of Fairfax stone was accepted as 3,162 feet above mean sea level, as derived from railroad levels, and checks on the heights as computed from this were obtained at 5 points from the topographic work of the United States Geological Survey, as follows: Near Gnegy church; at the crossing of the Northwestern pike; at Hutton; near Cranesville; and at the intersection of the Maryland-West Virginia line with the Pennsylvania state line. The apparent errors at these check points were distributed at the various stations in proportion to the distance.

Monuments.

List of monuments from the Fairfax stone to the Pennsylvania line, giving the size, method of construction, and location, together with the latitude and longitude of each of the principal monuments.

The principal monuments are uniform in size and shape, and consist of a molded concrete column, 22 inches square at the base, tapering to 10 inches square at 4 feet in height (top of mold), and finished, in a few instances, with rounded top, but generally in flat, pyramidal shape, extending 4 to 5 inches above the top of mold, or form, making the entire column 4 feet 4 inches in height above base; the corners are beveled 1½ inches in width to prevent defacement.

Inscriptions: Each monument, beginning with the initial one at the North Branch of the Potomac river, is numbered consecutively from 1 to 34 northward to the Pennsylvania state line; the numbers and the names of the commissioners being placed upon the south face of the monument, except where set diagonally; the date, 1910, on the north face; the letters MD. on the east, and W. VA. on the west. The letters MD. and W. VA. are 3¼ inches in height and ¾ inch deep; the numbers $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches high, and $\frac{5}{8}$ inch deep, and the names of commissioners, 1 inch in height and of proportional depth. The inscriptions were molded in the monuments, when built (except the monument at Fairfax stone, and Nos. 1 and 2), by means of reversed bevel-faced brass and lead pattern letters, which were attached separately to the inside of the "forms;" subsequently the letters MD., W. VA., the names of commissioners, and the date, 1910, were soldered on plates of tin reinforced with heavy sheet iron, which were securely fastened to the forms with screws. These plates were depressed slightly below the surface, which, on the finished monuments, formed corresponding elevations.

Material.

Three bags (300 pounds) best Portland cement, and seven bags (700 pounds) washed, white sand, were used in each of the large monuments. The cement and sand were thoroughly mixed before and after adding water. This material was firmly tamped in the "form," the top being finished with an ordinary mason's trowel. No stone was used in the monument.

Base.

The base of each of the principal monuments was made of concrete, the usual size 10]being $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet square, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ *feet deep, depending upon the character and formation of the ground; in all cases sufficient depth and breadth being obtained to insure stability.

The average amount of material used in each base was $\frac{3}{4}$ barrel of best Portland cement, 1,200 pounds of sand, and 1,500 to 2,000 pounds of broken stone. The cement and sand were thoroughly mixed before and after adding water; cement and stone were placed in the excavations in alternate layers and the whole thoroughly tamped and bonded. The base was finished and cross lines indicating its exact center marked upon it, and when firm enough to sustain the weight of the monument, the "form" was set up and carefully centered by means of the cross lines, and the monument built before the final "set," thus forming the base and column into one solid mass. In the few instances where the bases were built a day or more before the monument, a large stone was set in the center of the base and allowed to project a foot or more above the surface, and the monument built around it, thus securing a firm bond.

Small monuments.

Small monuments are also of concrete, uniform in size, 1 foot square and 2 feet high, molded in a wooden form, without taper and contain 1 bag (100 pounds) cement, 2 bags (200 pounds) washed, white sand. The top was finished in a similar manner to the large monuments. The letters MD. cut on the east face, W. VA. on the west, and the date, 1910, on the north. The base, 2 feet square and 2 feet deep, also of concrete, and built as in the larger monuments. One bag of cement and four bags of sand, in addition to the broken stone, were used.
56 L. ed.

The "Fairfax stone."

The "Fairfax stone" stands at the head of the North Branch of the Potomac river. It derived its name from Thomas, Lord Fairfax, who became the proprietor of what was known as the "Northern Neck of Virginia." The original grant was made in 1663, by Charles II. of England, and subsequently successively confirmed by James II. and George II. The title having rested by *transfers in Lord Fairfax, on the 11th of September, 1736, commissioners were appointed, with the approval of George II., to define the boundaries of the grant, which was to be "all the land lying and situate between and within the heads of the rivers Rappahannock and Potomac, the courses of the said rivers, together with the rivers themselves." The survey of the upper part of the Potomac river was made in 1736, and at the head spring as then determined a number of trees were marked by the surveyors. A dispute arose between Lord Fairfax and the representatives of the Colony of Virginia as to the source of the Potomac, and no further work or agreement reached until 1746, when representatives for each side having been named, the survey was resumed and a line was run from the head of the Rappahannock to the head of the Potomac river. The trees and springs located in the former survey of 1736, as the head of the potomac, having been found, the course of the trial line was corrected and the final line run in the reverse direction from the Potomac to the Rappahannock.

Before leaving the head of the Potomac, additional trees were marked and a stone set up, described as follows, in the notebook (still in existence) of Thomas Lewis, one of the surveyors: "October 23, 1746. Returned to the spring where we made the following marks: '—' on another beach WB WR 1746 Y3—a stone by the corner pine marked FX, on a beach marked 'AC.' This done we bid adieu to the head spring about $\frac{1}{2}$ hour after nine o'clock, our course directing to the head of Rappahannock bearing S. 46° E. 30 poles the top of the mountain in the spring heads on."

When Lieut. N. Michler made his survey of the meridian line north from the Fairfax stone in 1859, he thus describes the stone in his report: "The initial point of the work—the Fairfax stone—stands on the spot encircled by several small streams flowing from springs about it. It consists of a rough piece of sandstone, indifferent and friable, planted to the depth of a few feet in the ground and rising a foot or more above the surface, shapeless in form, it would scarce attract the attention of the passer-by. The finding of it was without difficulty, and its recognition and identification by the inscription Fx, now almost obliterated by the corroding action of water and air. In order not to disturb this stone the first observatory was built immediately in the rear (south) of it." Here, later, Michler built his monument, which was about 4 feet in height and made of several hewn stones, the upper ones being conical. The original Fairfax stone was in existence until about the year 1883, when it was destroyed by vandals and subsequently carried away, leaving the Michler monument as the only marker.

The stream surveyed in the year 1736 was what has since been designated the North Branch of the Potomac river. The source, designated as the Fairfax stone, is upon the divide between the eastern and western watersheds. It is $\frac{1}{4}$ mile northerly from the summit of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is here the highest point on that line between Cumberland, Maryland, and Elkins, West Virginia.

The stone is easily reached by a trail from Fairfax station, which is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile to the southeast. The large timber all around has been cut by mill men and fire has destroyed the balance, so that the immediate spot is now largely covered by brush and briars. The land near the Fairfax stone is principally owned by the Davis Coal & Coke Company (in 1910).

On August 12, 1910, during the present work, a new concrete monument was built, replacing both the previous marks. The new monument stands 2 feet north of the center of the base of the Michler monument, which point was marked by a brass bolt bedded level with surface of the ground. This rock and mark are still left in place, but are not visible, and the mark is 1 foot north of the point where the original stone stood. The portion of the Michler monument above ground was removed.

"Fairfax stone," restored 1910.

The base is of concrete, $3\frac{1}{2}$ ft. square and 2 ft. deep, set flush with the surface of ground. On this base the monument was built, utilizing the form which had been designed for, and was afterwards used in the construction of, the monuments along the boundary from the Potomac river to the Pennsylvania line. The monument is 22 inches square at the base and 10 inches square at the top, the latter being built up a few inches and rounded off. The total height being 4 ft. and 4 inches above the base. The monument contains $3\frac{1}{2}$ bags of best Portland cement and $6\frac{1}{2}$ bags of white sand. It is marked as follows: On south face Fx On north face 1910.

1746

The corners are beveled $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in width.

Latitude 39° 11' 41.92" Longitude 79° 29' 15.50"

Monument No. 1.

This monument marks the initial point of the present boundary survey. It is on the south bank of the North Branch of the Potomac river, 3,983 feet N. 0° 56' E. (true) from the Fairfax stone. The base is $3\frac{1}{2}$ ft. square and 4 ft. deep and tapers to $2\frac{1}{2}$ ft. square at its top. The monument is placed diagonally on this base and is marked as follows:

On the northeast side ¹⁹¹⁰MD On the southeast side W. Va.

On the southwest side ^{No 1}W. Va. On the northwest side W. Va.

It can be reached from the Fairfax station of Western Maryland Railroad by following an old lumber tram road which goes within 100 yards of the river. From the north, on Maryland side, there is a bridle path leading from the county road on Arnold's ridge, to a point almost in sight of this monument, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile distant.

Latitude 39° 12' 21.34" Longitude 79° 29' 14.67"

Monument No. 2.

Is in place of a maple tree marked "1101," which was the beginning of the Maryland military lot 1101. It can be reached from the county road on Arnold's ridge by the same trail that leads to the river. It is less than $\frac{1}{4}$ mile from top of the ridge and about 1 mile west of Eli Mosser's house. The boundary line makes a slight angle to west at this point.

Latitude 39° 12' 33.28" Longitude 79° 29' 14.42"

Arnold's ridge.

A small monument on the highest point of Arnold's ridge. It is one mile west [14 of house of Eli Mosser, and can be reached by the county road along the ridge.

Monument No. 3.

On summit of Backbone or Great Savage mountain. The base of monument rests on the solid ledge which forms the crest of the mountain. It is reached with difficulty by an old road crossing the mountain from Eli Mossers to Sommers Mossers upon the west and is more than $\frac{1}{4}$ mile west of this trail over rough, rocky ground. It can most readily be reached from the west. There is an extended view from this summit as far north as Snaggy mountain.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 14' 12.43''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 12.65''$

Stahlnaker ridge.

A small monument about 1 mile west of Sommers Mossers, and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile southwest of county road from Gnegy church to Breedlove.

Monument No. 4.

Just north of the Youghiogheny river and south of a county road from Gnegy church to Breedlove. It is in the line of a Maryland land grant called Covent garden, and in property line of Wm. Bittner and Oscar Roth. It is $\frac{3}{4}$ mile south of Gnegy church and is easily reached. The monument stands diagonally as the line here changes its course to the westward.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 15' 53.73''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 10.84''$

Monument No. 5.

About 100 yards north of county road from Gnegy church to Breedlove and in sight of road. It is in a line of the Covent Garden survey, and is in or near property lines of Wm. Bittner, Chas. Winters, Oscar Roth, and J. Stahlnaker. The monument was built over and around a rough stone marking property corners, and stands diagonally as the course of the boundary line here turns northward.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 15' 54.97''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 15.69''$

15]

*Monument No. 6.

On the south side of the county road from Oakland to Horse Shoe run, 100 yards southwest of the cross roads at Gnegy church. On or near the property line of Daniel Gnegy and Elijah Bechtel. The monument was built over and around a stone property corner which marked the beginning of the Maryland land grant called "Mount Pleasant," surveyed in 1774. The original beginning called for was a white oak tree, now gone. The stone was pointed out as said beginning by Daniel Gnegy.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 16' 31.10''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 15.32''$

Hamstead hill.

A small monument on the Obed Hamstead hill, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile east of the southwest prong of the Youghiogheny river and $\frac{1}{4}$ mile north of Gnegy church. The monument is 45 feet north of an east-west wire fence and 5 feet west of a north-south line fence.

Monument No. 7.

Situated 15 feet south of center of county road from Cash Valley to the Horseshoe run road and $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Eglon, West Virginia. The land on the east of monument is owned by George H. Gauer and that on the west by William Weimer.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 17' 46.83''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 14.56''$

Monument No. 8.

About $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Eglon, West Virginia, and 150 yards east of house of Silas Fike. This monument marks the spot where stood a large white oak tree called for in the Virginia patent to John Pettyjohn, surveyed May 30, 1781, for 400 acres. The call being at "a white oak in the Maryland line and running—and finally to pointers in the Maryland line and with said line N. 226 poles to the beginning." This tree was blocked during the survey of 1910 and the oldest mark counted one hundred and thirty years' growth, the second one hundred and seventeen years, and the third seventy-eight years. The block was saved. The tree was cut down and stump blown up with dynamite and replaced by the monument which now marks property holdings of Silas Fike, Amelius *Fike, and Seymour Hamstead.[16 There is an angle to the east in the boundary line at this point.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 17' 52.63''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 14.50''$

Silas Fike's ridge.

A copper bolt set in a rock flush with the ground on summit of a flat timbered ridge $\frac{1}{4}$ mile north of house of Silas Fike, who lives $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Eglon, West Virginia.

Dawson's hill.

A small monument on wooded hill of Lloyd Dawson, about $\frac{3}{4}$ mile south of the Northwestern pike. It is 26 feet west of north-south fence and 195 feet north of an east-west fence.

Monument No. 9.

Situated 8 miles southwest of Oakland, Maryland, in the angle formed by the North-western turnpike and the county road from Eglon, West Virginia, to Oakland. The monument is 100 yards east of the Youghiogheny river and is on a slight ridge between above-described roads and can be seen from them.

Latitude 39° 19' 07.64" Longitude 79° 29' 13.29"

Offutt's hill.

A small monument on summit of wooded hill belonging to D. E. Offutt, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of the Northwestern turnpike, and 10 feet east of a north-south fence.

Stahl's hill.

A small monument on summit of Stahl's hill, 20 feet west of an old split rail fence running north and south, and is on land owned by Peter F. Nine.

Monument No. 10.

In an open field about 300 yards south of a county road running east and west across the Youghiogheny river. The monument stands in place of a sugar tree which formerly stood here and marked a corner 17]of the Maryland *grant called "Eel-shine." The place was pointed out by Peter F. Nine, who owns the property east of it. John Bittner owns the land to the west and his house is 100 yards west of the monument. The boundary line turns to the east and the monument stands diagonally.

Latitude 39° 20' 39.47" Longitude 79° 29' 11.82"

Monument No. 11.

Situated 482 feet east from Monument No. 10, as there is here an offset in the line. It is in the line of Eelshine and Ashby 50-acre survey, and stands diagonally as boundary line here turns to north.

Latitude 39° 20' 39.41" Longitude 79° 29' 05.68"

Monument No. 12.

Is upon the south side of the county road from Brookside, West Virginia, to Oakland, Maryland. It is about 100 feet north of the Youghiogheny river, on land of Dorsey Ashby, and about 100 yards southwest of his house.

Latitude 39° 21' 04.15" Longitude 79° 29' 05.30"

Ashby's hill.

A small monument on summit of a flat ridge owned by Dorsey Ashby, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile northwest of road from Brookside to Oakland, and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile northwest of Mr. Ashby's house.

Lauer hill (south brow).

A copper bolt set in a rock 6 by 6 by 20 inches, set flush with surface of ground, on south brow of Lauer hill, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile south of house of Charles Fulks. It can be reached from the north by road and trail through the woods.

Monument No. 13.

On the summit of Lauer hill, about 6 miles southwest of Oakland, Maryland. The monument can be reached by a trail running south from a road to a coal mine near Chas. Fulk's house, which is on the north side of Lauer hill, about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from summit. The land is covered with timber and is owned by Daniel E. Offutt.

Latitude 39° 22' 02.42" Longitude 79° 29' 04.40"

*Miller.

[18

A small monument on summit of flat ridge $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of Laurel run, on land owned by J. S. Miller. It can be reached by road from Crellin, Maryland, which is $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the east.

Poling.

A small monument on a timbered ridge $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles northwest of Crellin, Maryland, and on land owned by Zach Poling. It is 120 feet south of a second-class road crossing the ridge.

White.

A small monument $\frac{3}{4}$ mile south of Hutton, Maryland, on northwest side of a second-class road, and is on land owned by Charles White.

Monument No. 14.

Is about 200 yards west of Hutton, Maryland, station, B. & O. R. R., and close to south limit of right of way of main line of that railroad. It is north of wagon road from Hutton, Maryland, to Corinth, West Virginia, is conspicuously placed, and can be seen from trains as they pass. It is near lands of John A. Connell, Chas. White, and Grant Felton.

Latitude 39° 25' 08.88" Longitude 79° 29' 01.54"

Morris-Connell.

A small monument on summit of flat ridge cleared on west and timbered on east. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of Hutton, Maryland, and is on land owned by George Morris on the west and J. A. Connell on the east.

Monument No. 15.

About $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Hutton, Maryland, or Corinth, West Virginia, and can be reached by road from Cornith. The monument is on cleared land owned by Dennis Glover. There is a slight deflection of the boundary line to the westward at this point.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 26' 07.60''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 29' 00.63''$

19] *Severe.

A small monument on north side of county road 2 miles north of Corinth, West Virginia. On land owned by John M. Browning.

Browning.

A small monument on summit of a flat wooded ridge owned by John M. Browning, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Corinth, West Virginia.

Camp rocks.

A copper bolt set in a hole drilled in top of and near the northeast corner of a rocky bluff on south slope of Snaggy mountain, 700 feet south of old Burchinal road. Stones are piled around and over the bolt. From this point, Glover's hill, Backbone mountain, and other distant points southward can be seen.

Burchinal.

1st. A small monument on top of a large flat rock 20 feet south of old Burchinal road which crosses Snaggy mountain near this place.

2d. A copper bolt set in solid rock 350 feet north of the small monument described above.

3d. A copper bolt set in solid rock 1,400 feet north of small monument described above.

Monument No. 16.

On one of the main summits of Snaggy mountain about 1,281 feet east of the "Fairfax meridian," and 75 yards from a rough road to fields on top of mountain. It can be reached from the Burchinal road, which comes out at White Oak spring on the road to Terra Alta.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 29' 07.98''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 28' 59.11''$

Monument No. 17.

Is on the very high north summit or brow of Snaggy mountain, and is one of the highest points along the boundary line, being about 3,070 feet above the mean sea level. It can be reached either from a 20] trail which crosses through *the gap between monuments 16 and 17, or from the Cranesville-Oakland road above Brownings lake, or by climbing the steep side of the mountain just south of Pine swamp.

56 L. ed.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 29' 50.50''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 28' 58.75''$

Teets.

A small monument on north side of county road which crosses Pine swamp about 3 miles south of Cranesville, West Virginia. The monument is about 1,000 feet south of house of Eugene Teets.

Monument No. 18.

On the north side of the county road from Cranesville, West Virginia, to Oakland, Maryland, and is about 3 miles south of Cranesville, 100 yards east of house of Eugene Teets, and west of Muddy creek, and on the edge of Pine swamp, which has here been drained.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 31' 38.50''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 28' 57.84''$

Monument No. 19.

Is about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles southeast of Cranesville, West Virginia, and is on the western edge of the Pine swamp, about 100 yards from solid ground. The foundation of the monument rests on hard sand, 4 feet below the surface. The timber and brush near the monument are mostly dead or burnt. The land is owned by Hiram Ringer. The monument is set diagonally as the line turns abruptly east.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 31' 53.96''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 28' 57.71''$

Monument No. 20.

Near the middle of Pine swamp, about 3 miles southeast of Cranesville, West Virginia, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile west of house of John H. Sommers, and 50 feet west of Muddy creek. The base of the monument is 4 feet square and 6 feet deep, resting on a sticky clay. The surface of the swamp near this monument is very soft, and all material had to be drawn by men on a sled for a distance of 200 yards. The land is owned by Hiram Ringer, and the adjoining land to the east by John H. Sommers. The monument is set diagonally.

Latitude $39^{\circ} 31' 54.05''$ Longitude $79^{\circ} 28' 45.32''$

*Monument No. 21.

[21

One mile east of Cranesville, West Virginia, in a small ravine, and is on property line between M. H. Frankhouser and E. F. Jenkins at the northwest corner of Maryland military lot 1402, at the end of 2d line. It is 200 yards northwest of M. H.

Frankhouser's house, 50 yards west of county road, and on northeast side of Pine swamp. The monument stands diagonally as the line turns to the east.

Latitude 39° 33' 08.69" Longitude 79° 28' 44.85"

Monument No. 22.

Is 53.69 feet eastward from monument No. 21 in the same ravine, and about 100 feet west of the county road. It stands in the 2d line of lot 1402, and is also on the property line between Frankhouser & Jenkins. The monument stands diagonally as the boundary line turns northward again.

Latitude 39° 33' 08.68" Longitude 79° 28' 44.16"

Monument No. 23.

Is about 1 mile east of Cranesville, West Virginia, 80 feet north of county road from that place to Sang Run, Maryland. It is on a bank above a large spring, and is on cleared land owned by J. G. Elsey, and is 50 yards north of house of E. F. Jenkins.

Latitude 39° 33' 22.93" Longitude 79° 28' 44.03"

Elsey's hill.

A small monument on summit of flat cultivated ridge, 1 mile east of Cranesville, on land owned by J. G. Elsey, and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of house of E. F. Jenkins.

Latitude 39° 33' 34.23" Longitude 79° 28' 43.92"

Strawser road.

A small monument on north side of road from Cranesville, West Virginia, to Sang Run, Maryland, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Cranesville, and on land owned by Samuel A. Strawser.

22] *Fike's mountain (south brow.)

A small monument on south brow of Fike's mountain, 2 miles northeast of Cranesville. It can be reached by a rough road through the woods.

Monument No. 24.

On summit of Fike's mountain, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Cranesville, West Virginia. It can be reached by a rough trail through the woods from a wagon road which crosses the mountain $\frac{1}{2}$ mile west of monument. The summit of the mountain is comparatively flat and no distant large monuments can be seen. The small monument on the south brow is visible, as well as small monument on north brow.

Latitude 39° 34' 49.21" Longitude 79° 28' 43.23"

Fike's mountain (north brow).

A small monument on the north brow of Fike's mountain, 1041.56 feet northward from monument No. 24. It is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Cranesville and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile northeast of county road, which crosses Fike's mountain $\frac{3}{4}$ mile west of this point.

Monument No. 25.

On a timbered flat ridge north of White Rock run, near southeast corner of John A. Reckard's land, and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south of his house. It is in the woods 100 yards from private road from the Cranesville road to Reckard's house.

Latitude 39° 36' 06.30" Longitude 79° 28' 42.51"

Reckard road.

A small monument 30 feet south of a second-class road through the woods near house of John A. Reckard, about 6 miles west of Friendsville, Maryland.

Herbert Friend's ridge.

A small monument on summit of flat ridge partly covered with timber and brush, owned by Herbert Friend, and is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile southeast of his house. It is 6 miles southwest of Friendsville.

*Monument No. 26. [23

On north side of county road from Keeler Glade to Friendsville, and is 5 miles southwest of latter place. It is on land of Sherman Friend, about 100 yards northeast of his house.

Latitude 39° 37' 47.35" Longitude 79° 28' 41.57"

Sherman Friend's hill.

A small monument on summit of a flat, cleared hill, owned by Sherman Friend, who lives 300 yards to southwest. It is 5 miles southwest of Friendsville, Maryland.

Melville Friend's hill.

A small monument on summit of flat, cleared hill, owned by Melville G. Friend, who lives $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Friendsville, Maryland, and 300 yards west of monument. A road crosses the hill 200 yards west of and another is at foot of hill 300 yards to north of it.

Monument No. 27.

On north side of county road near Mrs. Marshall Friend's house, about 5 miles west of Friendsville, Maryland. It is on south edge of a cleared field bordering the county road, and is on south property line of Mrs. Marshall Friend. It is in the Henry Deal surveys. The monument stands diagonally as boundary line has offset to east.

Latitude 39° 38' 32.37" Longitude 79° 28' 41.16"

Monument No. 28.

This monument is 347 3 feet eastward from monument No. 27, and the same description applies to it. It also stands diagonally as boundary line here turns northward.

Latitude 39° 38' 32.40" Longitude 79° 28' 36.72"

Monument No. 29.

Is north of a wagon road through land of Jere Teets, and is about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile southeast of his house, and 5 miles west of Friendsville, Maryland.

Latitude 39° 38' 58.92" Longitude 79° 28' 36.92"

24] *Jere Teets' ridge.

A small monument on a flat cultivated ridge sloping to the east, owned by Jere Teets, and is 150 yards east of his house, which is 5 miles west of Friendsville, Maryland. It is a few feet north of an east-west private road.

L. Dedrick's ridge.

A small monument on a flat, cleared ridge, owned by L. Dedrick. It can be reached from county road on the west by leaving that road near Chestnut avenue church, and going eastward past house of Joshua Fike.

Monument No. 30.

On summit of Evans Hill, 1 mile west of Fearer Postoffice, Maryland, and 150 yards south of the county road from Fearer to Chestnut avenue church. The monument is on cultivated land owned by Hosea Thomas, who lives 200 yards to the west.

Latitude 39° 40' 15.92" Longitude 79° 28' 37.50"

Monument No. 31.

On north side of county road from Friendsville, Maryland, to Hazelton, West Virginia, and is 1 mile west of Fearer, Maryland. It is 100 yards west of house of A. J. Thomas and on line dividing his property from that of Hosea Thomas.

Latitude 39° 40' 26.10" Longitude 79° 28' 37.58"

Monument No. 32.

Is $\frac{1}{2}$ mile southeast of house of Geo. W. Vansickle, and is nearly the same distance southwest of W. M. Fisk's house, and about 5 miles west of Selbysport, Maryland. The monument stands in place of a large Spanish oak tree, which was removed during the survey in 1911. This tree was corner of property of John Van Vansickle, George W. Vansickle, on the west, and in a line of W. Marshall Fike on the east. The land is cleared and the boundary line makes a sight deflection angle to the east. The monument is marked "Span Oak" in addition to other inscriptions.

Latitude 39° 41' 14.28" Longitude 79° 28' 37.94"

*F. T. Fike's ridge. [25

A small monument in a field owned by F. T. Fike, 200 yards east of a road leading from George Vansickle's place to Selbysport, Maryland.

Monument No. 33.

On north side of county road leading towards Selbysport, Maryland, and is about 5 miles west of that place. It is on line between cleared land owned by James McDermott and Isaiah Umble.

Latitude 39° 42' 06.58" Longitude 79° 28' 37.84"

Thomas' ridge.

A small monument on cleared flat ridge owned by M. M. Thomas on the west and by Joseph Thomas on the east. It is 300 yards northwest of house of Joseph Thomas and $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south of Pennsylvania state line.

Monument No. 34.

At the intersection of the Md.-W. Va. boundary line from the south with the Pennsylvania state line. It is 2 miles southwest of Markleysburg, Pennsylvania, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile east of point where the pike to that place crosses the Penna. line, and $\frac{1}{4}$ mile northeast of house of M. M. Thomas. It is 1,051 feet westward from the Mason & Dixon mound in which a stone monument marked, "55.2 M 1885," was set by survey made in 1885 by the states of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Monument 34 is 40 feet south of oil pipe line, which runs through Pennsylvania near its southern boundary, and is $\frac{1}{4}$ mile west of a metal gate house of this pipe line. It is in the straight line between monuments of 1885 numbered 55.2 M and 54.2 M; the latter being 4,276 feet to the westward and in center of a Mason & Dixon mound. The land south of monument No. 34 is owned by M. M. Thomas. The monument sets square and is marked the same as others, excepting that on the north face are the letters PA above the date of 1910.

Latitude 39° 43' 15.88" Longitude 79° 28' 37.72"

26]

*Table No. 1.

Horizontal distances from Monument No. 1,—distances between monuments,—true bearings,—magnetic bearings and approximate elevations above mean sea level.

Monument name or number.	Horizontal distances from mon. No. 1.	Distances between monu- ments.	True bearings.	Magnetic bearings October 1, 1910.	Approximate elevation above mean sea level.
	(Feet.)	(Feet.)	" "	" "
Fairfax.....	3989.13				3162 feet
1.....	0000.00	3989.13	S. 0 56 00 W.		2721 "
2.....	1208.55	1208.55	N. 0 56 00 E.		2894 "
Arnolds ridge.....	1976.49	767.94	N. 0 47 53 E.	N. 4 40 E.	3103 "
3.....	11242.12	9265.63	"	"	3343 "
Stahlnaker ridge.....	17906.38	6664.26	"	"	2778 "
4.....	21494.14	3587.76			2480 "
5.....	21896.29	402.15	N. 71 48 00 W.		2536 "
6.....	25551.94	3655.65	N. 0 27 04 E.	N. 4 19 E.	2523 "
Hamstead's hill.....	29604.88	4052.94	"	"	2575 "
7.....	33215.31	3610.43	"	"	2512 "
8.....	33802.71	587.40	"	"	2535 "
Silas Fike bolt in rock..	35174.15	1371.44	N. 0 42 57 E.	N. 4 38 E.	2568 "
Dawson's hill.....	37824.24	2650.09	"	"	2548 "
9.....	41393.05	3568.81	"	"	2441 "
Offuts hill.....	42784.77	1391.72	"	"	2558 "
Stahl's hill.....	48065.58	5280.81	N. 0 42 57 E.	N. 4 38 E.	2707 "
10.....	50686.81	2621.23	"	"	2464 "
27] *11	51169.11	482.30	S. 89 17 03 E.		2444 "
12.....	53672.78	2503.67	N. 0 41 02 E.	N. 4 42 E.	2420 "
Ashby's hill.....	54860.88	1188.10	"	"	2617 "
Lauer hill bolt in rock..	58182.08	3321.20	"	"	2807 "
13.....	59569.07	1386.99	N. 0 41 02 E.	N. 4 42 E.	2857 "
Miller.....	67074.89	7505.82	"	"	2619 "
Poling.....	70117.80	3042.91	"	"	2634 "
White.....	75391.99	5274.19	"	"	2433 "
14.....	78439.22	3047.23	"	"	2470 "
Morris-Connell.....	80845.03	2405.81	"	"	2548 "
15.....	84381.27	3536.24	"	"	2587 "
Severe.....	89255.10	4873.83	N. 0 22 27 E.	N. 4 34 E.	2530 "
		1713.46	"	"

Monument name or number.	Horizontal distances from mon. No. 1.	Distances between monu- ments.	True bearings.	Magnetic bearings October 1, 1910.	Approximate elevation above mean sea level.
Browning.....	90968.56				2622 "
		7280.65	"	"
Burchinal road.....	98249.21				2799 "
		4386.10	"	"
16.....	102635.31				3020 "
		4302.13	"	"
17.....	106937.44				3072 "
		9976.18	"	"
Teet's road.....	116913.62				2572 "
		953.38	"	"
18.....	117867.00				2572 "
		1563.97	"	"
19.....	119430.97				2572 "
		971.09	N. 89 27 27 E.
20.....	120402.06				2572 "
		7553.36	N. 0 17 00 E.	N. 4 29 E.
28] *21	127955.42				2575 "
		53.69	S. 89 43 00 E.
22.....	128009.11				2575 "
		1441.82	N. 0 24 42 E.	N. 4 48 E.
23.....	129450.93				2630 "
		1213.70	"	"
Elsey's hill.....	130664.63				2788 "
		2696.96	"	"
Strawser road.....	133361.59				2494 "
		3868.96	"	"
Fike's hill—southbrow.	137230.55				2862 "
		951.02	N. 0 24 42 E.	N. 4 48 E.
24.....	138181.57				2867 "
		1041.56	"	"
Fike's hill—northbrow.	139223.13				2843 "
		6760.07	"	"
25.....	145983.20				2582 "
		4621.04	"	"
Near Reckart road.....	150604.24				2344 "
		2534.50	N. 0 24 42 E.	N. 4 48 E.
H. Friend.....	153138.74				2379 "
		3070.16	"	"
26.....	156208.90				2260 "
		568.91	"	"
Friend's hill.....	156777.81				2331 "
		2995.97	"	"
M. O. Friend.....	159773.78				2299 "
		991.13	"	"
27.....	160764.91				2229 "
		347.31	N. 89 25 12 E.
28.....	161112.22				2221 "
		2682.81	N. 0 20 07 W.	N. 4 10 E.
29.....	163795.03				2193 "
		1493.04	"	"
Jer. Teets.....	165288.07				2282 "
		2411.66	"	"
L. Dedrick.....	167699.73				2331 "
		3887.49	"	"
29] *30	171587.22				2399 "
		1031.22	"	"
31.....	172618.44				2344 "
		4874.95	"	"
32.....	177493.39				2337 "
		3070.97	N. 0 04 55 E.	N. 4 38 E.
F. T. Fike.....	180564.36				2337 "
		2221.59	"	"
33.....	182785.95				2289 "
		4549.13	"	"
Thomas.....	187335.08				2301 "
		2463.89	"	"
34.....	189798.97				2321 "

TABLE No. 2.

Magnetic bearings between monuments on the Maryland-West Virginia boundary line from the Potomac river to the Pennsylvania line, for October, 1910.

Note: The original observations were reduced at the office of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Washington, District of Columbia, by courtesy of the Superintendent of that Bureau.

Monuments Nos.	True bearing	Magnetic bearing.	Magnetic declination.	Number of observations.
2-4	N. 0° 47' 53" E.	N. 4° 40' E.	3° 52' W.	20
5-7	N. 0° 27' 04" E.	N. 4° 19' E.	3° 52' W.	7
8-10	N. 0° 42' 57" E.	N. 4° 38' E.	3° 55' W.	8
11-15	N. 0° 41' 02" E.	N. 4° 42' E.	4° 01' W.	6
15-18	N. 0° 22' 27" E.	N. 4° 34' E.	4° 12' W.	13
20-21	N. 0° 17' 00" E.	N. 4° 29' E.	4° 12' W.	2
23-27	N. 0° 24' 42" E.	N. 4° 48' E.	4° 23' W.	5
28-32	N. 0° 24' 07" W.	N. 4° 10' E.	4° 30' W.	5
32-34	N. 0° 04' 55" E.	N. 4° 38' E.	4° 33' W.	3

If values for shorter intervals are desired, it will probably be best to obtain them by 30]interpolating the declination. *The value for the line between Nos. 20 and 21 is probably less reliable than the others, as it depends upon only two results which differ by 10'.

We return herewith a financial statement showing in detail the money actually expended by the commissioners for surveying and marking the boundary line under the decree in this case, including the per diem compensation of all the commissioners. We also return herewith the several exceptions made and filed before the commissioners by Mr. W. McCulloh Brown, one of the commissioners, during the progress of the work, together with such explanations, observations, and notes as we have thought proper to make concerning said exceptions, for the information of the court.

We also return herewith a number of photographs taken upon the ground, illustrating the monuments erected by us to mark the line as run by us, showing the character of the work, method of construction, and location of such monuments.

Respectfully submitted,
Julius K. Monroe,
Samuel S. Gannett,
Commissioners.

And this cause coming on this day to be heard upon said motion and upon the said report of Julius K. Monroe and Samuel S. Gannett, and upon the separate report of W. McCulloh Brown, one of the said commissioners, including his protest and exceptions in respect to said report of Commissioners Monroe and Gannett, and also upon the supplemental report filed by said Commissioners Monroe and Gannett, and the court being now fully advised in the premises:

It is thereupon adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the *said exceptions filed on[31 behalf of the state of Maryland, as aforesaid, to said report of Commissioners Julius K. Monroe and Samuel S. Gannett, be, and they are hereby, overruled, and that said report be, and the same is hereby, in all respects confirmed.

It is further adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the line as delineated and set forth in said report of Commissioners Monroe and Gannett, and upon the map accompanying the same and referred to therein, which line has been marked with permanent monuments, as stated in said report, be, and the same is hereby, established, declared, and decreed to be the true boundary line between the said states of Maryland and West Virginia, and said map is hereby directed to be filed as part of this decree.

And it appearing that the total expenses and compensation of said commissioners, and the expenditures attending upon the discharge of their duties, amount to the sum of $17,154.60, it is further adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the same be, and they are hereby, approved and allowed as part of the costs of this suit, to be borne equally between the parties to this cause. And it appearing from said report that the state of Maryland has already paid $5,038.40 of said amount, and that the state of West Virginia has already paid $12,116.11 of said amount, it is ordered that said amounts be credited to said states respectively in the settlement of the costs of this suit between them in accordance with the provisions of this decree and the former decrees entered herein.

It is further adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the clerk of this court do transmit to the chief magistrates of the states of Maryland and West Virginia copies of this decree, duly authenticated under the seal of this court, omitting from said copy, however, the map filed with the report of said Commissioners Monroe and Gannett, above mentioned.

32] *THE JASON.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 32-57.)

Average—saving stranded vessel.

1. Voluntary sacrifices and expenditures in a successful effort to save a negligently stranded vessel and her cargo and freight present a case of general average within the meaning of a clause in the bill of lading under which, if damage results from the negligent navigation of a seaworthy vessel properly manned, equipped, and supplied, the cargo owners are not to be exempt from liability for contribution in general average, but, with the shipowner, are to contribute as if the damage had not resulted from such negligence.

[For other cases, see Average, II.b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Average — stranded vessel — Harter act.

2. The exemption of a shipowner who has exercised due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, from liability for the negligence of master and crew, which is declared in the Harter act of Feb. 13, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 445, chap. 105, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2946), § 3, leaves such owner free to make a valid contract with the cargo owners under which contribution in general average may be enforced for sacrifices made subsequent to the negligent stranding of the vessel, in a successful effort to save the vessel, freight, and cargo. [For other cases, see Average, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Shipping — duty of master of stranded vessel.

3. The duty resting upon the master of a negligently stranded vessel, irrespective of whether the negligence falls within the exemption from liability made by the Harter act of February 13, 1893, § 3, or not, demands only the exercise of every reasonable effort to save the imperiled property, and does not extend so far as to call for a sacrifice of part of the owner's property, if necessary to save the cargo.

[For other cases, see Shipping, 423-433, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

†The docket title of the case is Actieselskabet Jason v. John Arbuckle et al.

NOTE.—On general average—see notes to Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 10 L. ed. U. S. 186; Ralli v. Troop, 39 L. ed. U. S. 743; and Fowler v. Rathbone, 20 L. ed. U. S. 281.
56 L. ed.

Average — stranded vessel — contribution.

4. Cargo owners are entitled to contribution from the ship for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the negligent stranding of the vessel, in a successful effort to save the vessel, freight, and cargo, where, under the general average clause of the bill of lading, the consignees or owners of the cargo in such cases are not exempted from liability for contribution in general average, but, with the shipowner, are to contribute as if the danger, damage, or disaster had not resulted from negligent navigation.

[For other cases, see Average, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Average — stranded vessel — contribution.

5. Cargo owners cannot enforce contribution from the ship, under a general average clause in the bill of lading, for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the negligent stranding of the vessel, in a successful effort to save the vessel, freight, and cargo, without on their part contributing to the general average sacrifices and expenditures of the shipowner, made for the same purpose.

[For other cases, see Average, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 220.]

Argued April 18, 1912. Decided May 13, 1912.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting the questions whether a shipowner may enforce contribution from cargo owners for sacrifices and expenditures incurred in a successful effort to save a negligently stranded vessel and her freight and cargo, and whether the cargo owners are entitled to contribution from the ship for sacrifices of cargo, and whether such cargo owners can enforce contribution without contributing to the general average sacrifices of the shipowner. First and second questions answered in the affirmative. Third question answered in the negative.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 628, 178 Fed. 414.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

Cross libels were filed in the United States district court for the southern district of New York between the owner of the steamship Jason and the firm of Arbuckle Brothers, owners, and the Insurance Company of North America, insurers[33 of part of that vessel's cargo, to recover general average contributions. The district court dismissed both libels. 162 Fed. 56. Upon appeal, the circuit court of appeals at first filed an opinion for affirm-ance (101 C. C. A. 628, 178 Fed. 414), but afterwards granted a rehearing, as a result of which the questions of law at issue were certified to this court as follows:

Statement of Facts.

The facts upon which the questions arise are these:

On July 30, 1904, the Norwegian Steamship Jason, while bound on a voyage from Cienfuegos, Cuba, to New York, with general cargo, including 12,000 bags of sugar, consigned to Arbuckle Brothers, and insured with the Insurance Company of North America, stranded off the south coast of Cuba, through the negligence of her navigators. The steamship was seaworthy and was properly manned, equipped, and supplied.

The vessel was relieved from the strand on August 9 as the result of sacrifices by jettison of 2,042 bags of sugar (1,657 bags being the property of Arbuckle Brothers), of sacrifices and extraordinary expenditures voluntarily made or incurred by the shipowner through the master, and of the services of salvors specially employed. Said sacrifices and expenditures were necessary to relieve ship, cargo, and freight from common peril. She then completed her voyage, and made delivery of the remainder of her cargo to the several consignees at New York on their executing an average bond for the payment of losses and expenses which should appear to be due from them, provided they were stated and apportioned by the adjusters "in accordance with established usages and laws in similar cases."

The bills of lading for all of the Jason's cargo contained the following provision:

"General average payable according to 34]York-Antwerp *rules, and as to matters not therein provided for, according to usages of port of New York.

"If the owner of the ship shall have exercised due diligence to make said ship in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, it is hereby agreed that in case of danger, damage, or disaster resulting from fault or negligence of the pilot, master, or crew, in the navigation or management of the ship, or from latent or other defects, or unseaworthiness of the ship, whether existing at time of shipment or at beginning of the voyage, but not discoverable by due diligence, the consignees or owners of the cargo shall not be exempted from liability for contribution in general average, or for any special charges incurred, but, with the shipowner, shall contribute in general average, and shall pay such special charges, as if such danger, damage, or disaster had not resulted from such fault, negligence, latent or other defect or unseaworthiness."

Both parties pleaded the bills of lading as constituting the contract of carriage.

A general average adjustment was afterwards made in New York by Johnson & Higgins, adjusters appointed in the average bond. Both parties presented their claims to the adjusters for sacrifices made by them respectively for the common benefit and safety of the adventure. The adjusters allowed in the general average account the compensation of the salvors, the sacrifices of cargo, and the sacrifices and extraordinary expenditures of the shipowner, and each of the interests was credited with such amounts as had been paid by it for the common benefit.

The adjustment was prepared in accordance with York-Antwerp rules, as provided for in the bill of lading, and otherwise in accordance with established usages and laws.

The adjustment and apportionment of general average, so made, showed a balance due from Arbuckle *Brothers of $5,-[35 060.24, which the latter refused to pay. The grounds of such refusal were that the stranding resulted from the ship's negligence, and that the general average clause, above quoted, contained in the bills of lading, is invalid.

The original libel was filed by the owner of the Jason against Arbuckle Brothers and its guarantor, the Insurance Company of North America, to recover this amount.

Arbuckle Brothers and the Insurance Company of North America filed a cross libel to recover the sum of $3,506.50, which they alleged would be due them on an adjustment of the general average losses, if the shipowner's losses and sacrifices were excluded from the general average account by reason of the fact that the stranding was caused by negligence of the ship's navigators. They claimed that the shipowner's sacrifices and extraordinary expenditures, made for the common benefit and safety of the adventure after the stranding, should not be allowed in the adjustment. If said sacrifices and expenditures should be excluded from the adjustment, and the value of the ship should be taken account of as a contributory interest, the adjustment would show a balance in favor of Arbuckle Brothers.

The district court made a decree dismissing both libels, from which decree both parties duly appealed to this court.

Questions Certified.

Upon the facts above set forth the questions of law concerning which this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court are:

1. Whether the general average agreement above quoted from the bills of lading is valid, and entitles the shipowner to collect a general average contribution from the cargo owners, under the circumstances above stated, in respect of sacrifices made 36]and extraordinary expenditures *incurred by it subsequent to the stranding, for the common benefit and safety of ship, cargo, and freight.

2. Whether, in view of the provisions of the 3d section of the Harter act, the cargo owners, under the circumstances above stated, have a right to contribution from the shipowner for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the stranding, for the common benefit and safety of ship, cargo, and freight?

3. Whether the cargo owners, under the circumstances above stated, can recover contribution from the shipowner in respect of general average sacrifices of cargo, without contributing to the general average sacrifices and expenditures of the shipowner, made for the same purpose.

In accordance with the provisions of § 6 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), establishing courts of appeals, the foregoing questions of law are by the circuit court of appeals of the United States for the second circuit, hereby certified to the Supreme Court.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles C. Burlingham, filed a brief for the Jason:

The facts present a case of general average within the meaning of the clause in the bill of lading.

Birkley v. Presgrave, 1 East, 220, 6 Revised Rep. 256; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 10 L. ed. 186; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 348, 18 L. ed. 155; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. ed. 638; Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. p. 25.

The case was one of general average, whether the shipowner's sacrifices should receive contribution or not. It would have been a case of general average even if there had been but one interest to contribute.

Montgomery v. Indemnity Mut. M. Ins. Co. [1901] 1 Q. B. 147, 70 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 45, 49 Week. Rep. 221, 84 L. T. N. S. 57, 17 Times L. R. 59, 6 Com. Cas. 19, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 141, [1902] 1 K. B. 734, 71 L. J. Prob. N. S. 457, 50 Week. Rep. 440, 86 L. T. N. S. 462, 18 Times L. R. 479, 7 Com. Cas. 120, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 289; Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 27, Fed. Cas. No. 11,335; Risley v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 189 Fed. 529.

The owners of the cargo in any event 56 L. ed.

would have been entitled to contribution from one another.

Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 609, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. New York, H. & R. Min. Co. 69 Fed. 414, 20 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 1, 74 Fed. 567.

The owners of cargo would also be entitled, notwithstanding the fault of the shipowner, to demand a contribution from him, subject to the reciprocal right of the shipowner to receive contribution in respect of his losses and sacrifices from them.

The Strathdon, 94 Fed. 206, 41 C. C. A. 515, 101 Fed. 600.

The items of loss, sacrifice, and expense which were included in the adjustment are common subjects of general-average contribution.

Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 393, 39 L. ed. 742, 746, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; The Bona [1895] P. 125, 64 L. J. Prob. N. S. 62, 11 Reports, 707, 71 L. T. N. S. 870, 43 Week. Rep. 290, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 557, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 376; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 348, 366, 18 L. ed. 155, 159; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. ed. 638; Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. 1912, § 37, p. 172.

Some force must be attributed to that part of the general-average clause which states that general average is "payable" according to York-Antwerp rules. The true effect of it appears to be to put general average on a contractual instead of an equitable basis, and to provide that contribution shall be payable in accordance with the rules as a legal right, unless the person asked to contribute can show that the claimant is debarred from such right by an actionable wrong on his own part which occasioned the sacrifice.

Stewart v. West India & P. S. S. Co. L. R. 8 Q. B. 95, affirmed in L. R. 8 Q. B. 363, 42 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 191, 28 L. T. N. S. 742, 21 Week. Rep. 953, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 528; Harris v. Scaramanga, L. R. 7 C. P. 488, 41 L. J. C. P. N. S. 170, 26 L. T. N. S. 797, 20 Week. Rep. 777, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 339; Greenshields v. Stevens [1908] 1 K. B. 51, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 124, 98 L. T. N. S. 89, 52 Sol. Jo. 727, 13 Com. Cas. 91, 10 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 597, [1908] A. C. 431, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 985, 99 L. T. N. S. 597, 24 Times L. R. 880, 13 Ann. Cas. 245; De Hart v. Compania Anonima de Seguros, 8 Com. Cas. 42, [1903] 1 K. B. 109, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 64, 51 Week. Rep. 318, 87 L. T. N. S. 716, 19 Times L. R. 16, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 345, 8 Com. Cas. 314, [1903] 2 K.

B. 503, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 818, 52 Week. Rep. 36, 87 L. T. N. S. 154, 19 Times L. R. 642, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 454; The Santa Ana, 84 C. C. A. 312, 154 Fed. 800; Anglo-Argentine Live Stock & Produce Agency v. Temperley Shipping Co. [1899] 2 Q. B. 408, 68 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 900, 48 Week. Rep. 64, 81 L. T. N. S. 296, 15 Times L. R. 472, 4 Com. Cas. 281, 8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 595; The Rossija, 21 Revue Internationale du Droit Maritime, 215, 217.

It is implied in every contract for the carriage of goods from or to a port in the United States that the shipment is to be carried and delivered subject to the terms and provisions of the Harter act. This is the rule, even though the goods are carried under an express contract which makes no mention of the act.

The Silvia, 171 U. S. 462, 463, 465, 43 L. ed. 241-243, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7.

It is also implied in every such contract that the parties will mutually contribute and pay their just share and proportion, in respect of their several interests, of any general-average loss that may arise or happen during the voyage.

Burton v. English, L. R. 12 Q. B. Div. 223, 53 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 133, 49 L. T. N. S. 768, 32 Week. Rep. 655, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 187, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 491; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 396, 397, 39 L. ed. 747, 748, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Anderson v. Ocean S. S. Co. L. R. 10 App. Cas. 112, 54 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 192, 52 L. T. N. S. 441, 33 Week. Rep. 433, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 401, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 409.

The master, in an emergency arising from stranding, due to a sea peril for which the shipowner is not responsible, may jettison goods or the ship's materials.

Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 397, 39 L. ed. 742, 748, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 240, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 277; Anglo-Argentine Live Stock & Produce Agency v. Temperley Shipping Co. [1899] 2 Q. B. 409, 68 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 900, 48 Week. Rep. 64, 81 L. T. N. S. 296, 15 Times L. R. 472, 4 Com. Cas. 281, 8 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 595; Carver, Carriage by Sea, 5th ed. 1909, §§ 294, 295.

He [the master] has authority in an emergency to incur extraordinary expenses to promote the general safety of the associated interests, at the common expense of those interests.

McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 366, 18 L. ed. 155, 159; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. ed. 638, 645.

Damage voluntarily done to the framework or appurtenances of the ship, or by the extraordinary use of the machinery, is also the subject of contribution as a sacrifice.

Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 393, 39 L. ed. 746, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Birkley v. Presgrave, 1 East, 220, 6 Revised Rep. 256; The Bona [1895] P. 129, 64 L. J. Prob. N. S. 62, 11 Reports, 707, 71 L. T. N. S. 870, 43 Week. Rep. 290, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 557, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 376; Robinson v. Price, L. R. 2 Q. B. Div. 91; International Nav. Co. v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. 100 Fed. 312; Watson v. Marine Ins. Co. 7 Johns. 62; Providence & S. S. S. Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 89 N. Y. 559.

Since the shipowner was not legally responsible for the fault which produced the stranding, and was not legally bound to make the sacrifices, nor to incur the extraordinary expenditures, such sacrifices and expenditures were entirely voluntary, and were not made or incurred in pursuance of any duty. Therefore, as the shipowner was not legally responsible for the original disaster, and was not legally bound to make the sacrifices, nor to incur the extraordinary expenditures, it seems just and reasonable that the parties should be permitted to contract that such sacrifices and expenditures shall be the subject of general-average contribution.

Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 301, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427; Green-shields v. Stevens, [1908] 1 K. B. 51, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 124, 98 L. T. N. S. 89, 52 Sol. Jo. 727, 13 Com. Cas. 91, 10 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 597; The Enrique, 5 Hughes, 275, 7 Fed. 490; The Bodo, 156 Fed. 980; The Santa Ana, 84 C. C. A. 312, 154 Fed. 801; De Hart v. Compania Anonima de Seguros, 8 Com. Cas. 42, [1903] 1 K. B. 109, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 64, 51 Week. Rep. 318, 87 L. T. N. S. 716, 19 Times L. R. 16, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 345, 8 Com. Cas. 317, [1903] 2 K. B. 503, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 818, 52 Week. Rep. 36, 87 L. T. N. S. 154, 19 Times L. R. 642, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 454; Stewart v. West India & P. S. S. Co. L. R. 8 Q. B. 88, affirmed in L. R. 8 Q. B. 362, 42 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 191, 28 L. T. N. S. 742, 21 Week. Rep. 953, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 528; Harris v. Scaramanga, L. R. 7 C. P. 481, 41 L. J. C. P. N. S. 170, 26 L. T. N. S. 797, 20 Week. Rep. 777, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 339.

The Harter act modifies the previously existing public policy.

The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 187, 193, 43 L. ed. 130, 132, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

The reason why the shipowner was required to bear his own sacrifices prior to the Harter act was that, if he had not made them, and the property had been lost, he would have been responsible for the whole loss, subject only to his statutory limitation of liability.

Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. New York, H. & R. Min. Co. 69 Fed. 414, 20 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 1, 74 Fed. 564.

Though the Harter act, as construed in the Irrawaddy, does not deal with general average, and neither creates nor takes away any rights in that regard, it affects the law of general average indirectly by modifying the relations which previously existed between the shipper and the shipowner. It thus varies the position of the parties with regard to general-average claims.

The Mary Thomas [1894] P. 117, 63 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 6 Reports, 792, 71 L. T. N. S. 104, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 495.

Even if an incidental effect of the general-average clause would be to relieve the shipowner from a portion of a sacrifice that he might be willing, though not bound, to make, to avoid a total loss of all interests, as a consequence of nautical faults, this result would not make the clause equivalent to a stipulation exonerating him from faults for which he would otherwise be responsible to the goods, within the meaning of the rule that formerly declared such clauses void. A clause of which the main intent and purpose is not to relieve the carrier from negligence in the performance of his essential duties may be supported as reasonable and valid, even though its incidental or contingent effect may be to relieve him, in some measure, from the consequences of acts of servants for which, in its absence, he would be responsible.

Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Hohl v. Norddeutscher Lloyd, 99 C. C. A. 166, 175 Fed. 544; Pacific Coast S. S. Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co. 36 C. C. A. 135, 94 Fed. 180, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. ed. 419, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 278; The Persiana, 107 C. C. A. 416, 185 Fed. 396; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 117 U. S. 312, 29 L. ed. 873, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, 1176.

Regulation of general average by agreement is permitted by the laws of a great majority of the leading maritime countries.

Simonds v. White, 2 Barn. & C. 805, 4 Dowl. & R. 375, 2 L. J. K. B. 159, 26 Revised Rep. 560, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 422; De Hart v. Compañía Anonima de Seguros, 8 Com. Cas. 314, [1903] 2 K. B. 503, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 818, 52 Week. Rep. 36, 87 L. T. N. S. 154, 19 Times L. R. 642, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 454; Strang v. Scott, 56 L. ed.

L. R. 14 App. Cas. 601, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427; Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. pp. 422, 427, 463, 597, 602; Crowley v. Saint Freres, 10 Revue Internationale, 147; 5 Valroger, 10, 11; 4 Desjardins, Droit Maritime, pp. 121, 122; 2 Lyon-Caen & Renault, Droit Maritime, pp. 92, 93; The Rossijsa, Judgment of the Reichs-Gericht, 1905, 21 Revue Internationale, 215; Navire Llansannor, 22 Revue Internationale du Droit Maritime, 534; The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 200, 201, 43 L. ed. 134, 135, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; Compagnie v. De Giovanni, 21 Revue Internationale du Droit Maritime, 689.

Reasons of sound policy and of convenience favor the enforcement of the contract.

Proceedings, International Law Asso. 21 Rep. Antwerp, 1903, p. 231; Carver, Carriage by Sea, 5th ed. p. 980; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 230, 19 L. ed. 638, 645; Marwick v. Rogers, 163 Mass. 50, 47 Am. St. Rep. 436, 39 N. E. 780; Johnson v. Chapman, 19 C. B. N. S. 582, 35 L. J. C. P. N. S. 23, 15 L. T. N. S. 70, 14 Week. Rep. 264, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 414.

As the master has the right to choose what property shall be sacrificed, what would he be likely to cast overboard if he had reason to believe that sacrifices of the shipowner's property would not receive contribution? It would be only natural that he should jettison the cargo. And since the law imposes the duty on the master of making such choice, and it is presumed his choice was correctly made (The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 220, 231, 19 L. ed. 638, 642, 645; Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 109, 110, 15 L. ed. 58, 62), what chance would the cargo owner ordinarily have, as a practical matter, even in an action against the master, of showing that his action was improper?

The cargo owners have a right to contribution from the shipowner for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to a negligent stranding, in order to save the joint interests from common peril.

Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. p. 734.

The analogy of decisions under the fire statute, holding that contribution must be made by the shipowner to damage suffered by cargo by water taken into the ship to extinguish fire, should lead to this conclusion.

The Roanoke, 46 Fed. 297, 53 Fed. 270, affirmed in 8 C. C. A. 67, 18 U. S. App. 407, 59 Fed. 161; The Rapid Transit, 52 Fed. 320; The Santa Ana, 84 C. C. A.

312, 154 Fed. 800; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 413, 414, 39 L. ed. 742, 753, 754, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Schmidt v. Royal Mail S. S. Co. 45 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 646, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 217, note; Whitecross Wire Co. v. Savill, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 653, 151 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 426, 46 L. T. N. S. 643, 30 Week. Rep. 588, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 531; Greenshields v. Stephens [1908] 1 K. B. 51, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 124, 98 L. T. N. S. 89, 52 Sol. Jo. 727, 13 Com. Cas. 91, 10 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 597, affirmed in [1908] A. C. 431, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 985, 99 L. T. N. S. 597, 24 Times L. R. 880, 13 Ann. Cas. 245.

This court, in Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 117 U. S. 312, 29 L. ed. 873, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, 1176, specifically allowed an underwriter, suing in the right of the cargo owner by subrogation, to recover from the shipowner a general-average contribution where the general average grew out of a stranding by negligence.

A general average in which the shipowner should be required to contribute to the sacrifices of the cargo, but in which the cargo should not contribute to the sacrifices of the shipowner, would be a contradiction in terms.

Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. pp. 1, 42; The Strathdon, 94 Fed. 206; Birkley v. Presgrave, 1 East, 228, 6 Revised Rep. 256; Svensden v. Wallace, L. R. 13 Q. B. Div. 73, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 445; Robinson v. Price, L. R. 2 Q. B. Div. 91; The Bona [1895] P. 129, 64 L. J. Prob. N. S. 62, 11 Reports, 707, 71 L. T. N. S. 870, 43 Week. Rep. 290, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 557, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 376; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 331, 338, 10 L. ed. 186, 190; McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 366, 18 L. ed. 155, 159; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. ed. 638, 645; Sturges v. Cary, 2 Curt. C. C. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 13,572, 2 Curt. C. C. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 13,573; Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 27, Fed. Cas. No. 11,335; International Nav. Co. v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. 100 Fed. 312; Watson v. Marine Ins. Co. 7 Johns. 62; Providence & S. S. S. Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 89 N. Y. 559.

The only important exceptions to the doctrine of reciprocity of contribution that have been admitted in practice, in England, or in this country, relate to passengers' baggage and to deck loads; and these exceptions are not based on equitable principles.

Heye v. North German Lloyd, 33 Fed. 60, 2 L.R.A. 287, 36 Fed. 705; Lowndes, General Average, 5th ed. pp. 59, 71, 375, 745; Arnould, Marine Ins. 8th ed. p. 936; Brown v. Cornwell, 1 Root, 60; Johnson

v. Chapman, 19 C. B. N. S. 563, 35 L. J. C. P. N. S. 23, 15 L. T. N. S. 70, 14 Week. Rep. 264, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 414; Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 609, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427; Wright v. Marwood, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 67, 50 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 643, 45 L. T. N. S. 297, 29 Week. Rep. 673, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 451.

Mr. Lawrence Kneeland argued the cause and filed a brief for Arbuckle et al.:

Whether this bill of lading clause is valid or invalid depends upon whether it is, in the language of this court in Florida Exp. Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall. 264, 22 L. ed. 556, "such as the law can recognize as reasonable, and not inconsistent with sound public policy."

No one can make a claim for general-average contribution if the danger to avert which the sacrifice was made has arisen from the fault of the claimant or of someone for whose acts the claimant has made himself, or is made by law, responsible to the co-contributors.

Gourlie, General Average, p. 15; The Ontario, 37 Fed. 220; Snow v. Perkins, 39 Fed. 334; Schloss v. Heriot, 14 C. B. N. S. 59, 32 L. J. C. P. N. S. 211, 10 Jur. N. S. 76, 8 L. T. N. S. 246, 11 Week. Rep. 596; Phipps v. The Nicanor, 44 Fed. 509; Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 601, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427.

While such limitation of the right to contribution was well established, the question arose as to the reasons therefor. One view was that the right to contribution was refused to avoid circuitry of action, and that it would be futile to permit the shipowner to recover a sum as contribution which would be immediately reclaimable by the cargo.

Schloss v. Heriot, 14 C. B. N. S. 59, 32 L. J. C. P. N. S. 211, 10 Jur. N. S. 76, 8 L. T. N. S. 246, 11 Week. Rep. 596.

A second view was that the fault or negligence which debars participation in the contribution must be a fault which gives the innocent interest a right of action for damages, either in tort or for breach of the contract to carry safely.

The Carron Park, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 403, 59 L. J. Prob. N. S. 74, 63 L. T. N. S. 356, 29 Week. Rep. 191, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 543; Milburn v. Jamaica Fruit Importing & Trading Co. [1900] 2 Q. B. 540, 69 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 860, 83 L. T. N. S. 321, 16 Times L. R. 515, 5 Com. Cas. 346, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 122; The Mary Thom- as [1894] P. 108, 63 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 6 Reports, 792, 71 L. T. N. S. 104, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 495.

A third view is that it would be unjust and inequitable to permit the person whose fault has occasioned the peril to recover indemnity for any part of his losses sustained in rescuing the endangered property, and that the allowance of such right would be unreasonable and not consistent with public policy, in that it would tend to relieve shipowners, to some extent, from care in the selection of the master and crew.

The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. ed. 130, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

This court has therefore declared that, prior to the enactment of the Harter act, sound public policy forbade the participation by a shipowner in a general-average contribution when the danger which necessitated the general-average sacrifices was occasioned by the negligence of the shipowner's servants, and that the act has not changed the law in that respect.

The conclusion so forcibly contended for by the shipowners in the court below, referred to in its opinion, clearly overlooks and disregards a manifest distinction between an agreement made by the cargo owner after learning of the disaster, and one inserted in a bill of lading.

Phipps v. The Nicanor, 44 Fed. 504; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 441, 32 L. ed. 792, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

It is the duty of the master, when confronted by a situation of danger, to exert himself to the utmost in caring for and saving the property intrusted to his care, and this duty is just as imperative when his own fault, whether actionable or not, has occasioned the danger.

The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. 682-687, 19 L. ed. 754-756.

Neither exemptions in a bill of lading nor statutory exemptions from liability relieve a shipowner from contribution to general-average sacrifices of cargo.

Schmidt v. Royal Mail S. S. Co. 45 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 646, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 217, note; Crookes v. Allen, L. R. 5 Q. B. Div. 38, 49 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 201, 41 L. T. N. S. 800, 28 Week. Rep. 304, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 216; Burton v. English, L. R. 12 Q. B. Div. 218, 53 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 133, 49 L. T. N. S. 768, 32 Week. Rep. 655, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 187, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 491; The Roanoke, 8 C. C. A. 67, 18 U. S. App. 407, 59 Fed. 161.

Neither U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4282, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2943, nor clauses in the bill of lading, providing that the carrier should not be liable for loss or damage arising from fire or wetting, and that the carrier should have the benefit of any insurance on the property, released the carrier from liability to contribute towards general average.

The Santa Ana, 84 C. C. A. 312, 154 Fed. 800; The W. J. Quillan, 175 Fed. 207.

It is true that in none of the cases cited did the danger result from negligence; but can negligence of the carrier's servants affect his liability to contribute?

The Strathdon, 94 Fed. 208; Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 609, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427.

Although reciprocity is ordinarily the rule in general average, it is, as is said in Heye v. North German Lloyd, 33 Fed. 64, rather a circumstance in the usual application of general average, than an indispensable part of the principle upon which general average is founded.

The decision in The Strathdon, 94 Fed. 206, violates a fundamental principle of the law of general average; namely, that all losses shall be borne equally.

Lowndes, General Average, 4th ed. pp. 38, 39; Arnould, Marine Ins. 8th ed. § 974.

It treats the statute as blotting out the fault of the shipowner, and placing him in the position of an innocent party.

The Ettrick, L. R. 6 Prob. Div. 127, 45 L. T. N. S. 399, 4 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 465; The Hector, L. R. 8 Prob. Div. 218, 52 L. J. Prob. N. S. 51, 37 Week. Rep. 491, 5 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 1013.

The Strathdon decision fails to distinguish between damages caused directly by the negligent navigation and the general-average sacrifices of the cargo to avert further loss.

The Roanoke, 8 C. C. A. 67, 18 U. S. App. 407, 59 Fed. 164; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. New York, H. & R. Min. Co. 20 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 1, 74 Fed. 568.

The shipowner in this case claims the right to set off a claim which this court has held invalid when asserted in an affirmative action.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 267; Carver, Carriage by Sea, 4th ed. § 103f, note (k).

The confusion which has arisen upon this question is due to the failure to recognize that it is the law not only that no one can recover general-average contribution if the danger to avert which a sacrifice was made has arisen from the fault of the claimant or his servants, but that those who are innocent can recover contribution from the guilty; that this latter right exists notwithstanding and irrespective of the liability in damages of the negligent shipowner, and that it is only the shipowner's liability in damages which has been affected by the Harter act.

Lowndes, General Average, p. 34; Strang v. Scott, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 601, 59 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 61 L. T. N. S. 597, 38 Week. Rep. 452, 6 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 419, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 427; Carver, Carriage by Sea, 5th ed. § 373a; Chrystal v. Flint, 82 Fed. 475.

The principle for which the cargo owners contend, namely, that the negligence of his servants bars any claim by the shipowner for contribution to his sacrifices, but leaves his liability to contribute to the sacrifices of others unaffected, is the same principle that has been applied for more than a hundred years to cases of jettison of deck cargo.

2 Parsons, Marine Ins. 217; 3 Kent, Com. 3d ed. p. 240; Phillips, Ins. § 1396; MacLachlan, Merchant Shipping, 5th ed. p. 766.

Whenever the safety of the property intrusted to the shipowner is menaced, or the voyage interrupted, whether such peril or interruption be occasioned by vis major or by fault, and whether such fault be or be not of such character as to fall within an exception in the contract of carriage, or within the 3d section of the Harter act, the master is, nevertheless, bound to exert every effort to save the property, and if he fail in this duty, his owners are liable to the cargo for the resulting loss. When the performance of this duty calls for the sacrifice of a part of the property to save the rest, the master is bound to make such sacrifice; and whether such sacrifice gives rise to the equitable right of contribution will depend upon whether all of the circumstances connected with the original disaster or interruption of the voyage, as well as those connected with the sacrificial act itself, are such as will justify a contribution.

Notara v. Henderson, L. R. 7 Q. B. 225, 41 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 158, 26 L. T. N. S. 442, 20 Week. Rep. 442, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 278; The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. 435-459, 19 L. ed. 772-781; The Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. 7-28, 16 L. ed. 41-48; King v. Shepherd, 3 Story, 349, Fed. Cas. No. 7,804; The Shand, 10 Ben. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 12,702.

It has been said in many cases (Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 13 Pet. 338, 10 L. ed. 190; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 229, 19 L. ed. 645; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 394, 39 L. ed. 747, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657) that to constitute a valid claim to general-average contribution there must be a voluntary sacrifice of a part for the benefit of the whole; but the word "voluntary," as here used, does not signify that it is optional with the master to make a sacrifice when such sacrifice is the only means of saving the adventure.

Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 393, 39 L. ed. 746, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

It is the duty of the master to make that sacrifice which, in his honest judgment, will save the adventure with the smallest immediate loss. Having determined that, he has no option.

L'Amerique, 35 Fed. 845; The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 428, 27 L. ed. 599, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

That the facts present a case of general average within the meaning of the clause embodied in the bills of lading is entirely clear. There was a common, imminent peril *involving ship and cargo, followed by [49 a voluntary and extraordinary sacrifice of property (including extraordinary expenses), necessarily made to avert the peril, and a resulting common benefit to the adventure. McAndrews v. Thatcher, 3 Wall. 347, 365, 18 L. ed. 155, 159; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 228, 19 L. ed. 638, 645; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 394, 39 L. ed. 742, 747, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

The principal controversy is upon the question of the validity of the agreement that if the shipowner "shall have exercised due diligence to make said ship in all respects seaworthy, and properly manned, equipped, and supplied," then, in case of danger, damage, or disaster resulting from (inter alia) negligent navigation, the cargo owners shall not be exempted from liability for contribution in general average, but, with the shipowner, shall contribute as if such danger, damage, or disaster, had not resulted from negligent navigation. The facts show that the shipowner had fulfilled the condition imposed upon him by this clause; that is, he had "exercised due diligence to make said ship in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied." The question presented for solution turns upon the effect of the 3d section of the act of Congress approved February 13, 1893, chap. 105, 27 Stat. at L. 445, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2946, known as the Harter act, and of the decision of this court in the case of The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. ed. 130, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

Prior to the Harter act it was established that a common carrier by sea could not, by any agreement in the bill of lading, exempt himself from responding to the owner of cargo for damages arising from the negligence of the master or crew of the vessel. Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 398, 438, 32 L. ed. 788, 791, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; following New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627.

But of course the responsibilities of the carrier were subject to modification by law, and with respect to vessels transporting merchandise from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports, they were 50]substantially *modified by the Harter act. The first three sections of this enactment are pertinent to the present discussion, and are set forth in full in the margin.†

Section 1 deals with the shipowner's responsibility for the proper loading, stowage, custody, care, and delivery of the cargo, prohibits the insertion in any bill of lading of an agreement relieving him from responsibility for negligence in respect of these duties, and declares such agreements null and void. Section 2 prohibits the insertion in any bill of lading of an agreement lessening or avoiding the obligation of the shipowner to "exercise due diligence (to) properly equip, man, provision, and outfit said vessel and to make said vessel seaworthy." etc. Section 3 proceeds to limit the responsibility of a shipowner who shall have exercised due diligence to make his vessel seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied. Instead of merely sanctioning covenants and agreements limiting his liability, Congress went further *and ren-51 dered such agreements unnecessary by repealing the liability itself, declaring that if the shipowner should exercise due diligence to make the vessel in all respects seaworthy, and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, neither the vessel, her owner or owners, etc., should be responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of the vessel, etc., etc. The antithesis is worth noting. Congress says to the shipowner: "In certain respects you shall not be relieved from the responsibilities incident to your public occupation as a common carrier, although the cargo owners agree that you shall be relieved; in certain other respects (provided you fulfil conditions specified) you shall be relieved from responsibility, even without a stipulation from the owners of cargo."

In the case now before us it is argued in behalf of the shipowner that since by the 3d section of the Harter act he is absolved from responsibility for the negligence *of his master and crew under the52 circumstances existing, there is nothing in the policy of the law to debar him from bargaining with the owners of cargo for a participation in the general average contribution. In behalf of the cargo owners it is insisted that the construction placed upon the legislation in question by this court in The Irrawaddy, supra, leaves the shipowner still disabled from making

†The title and first three sections of the Harter act are as follows:

"An Act Relating to Navigation of Vessels, Bills of Lading, and to Certain Obligations, Duties, and Rights in Connection with the Carriage of Property.

"Be it enacted, etc., that it shall not be lawful for the manager, agent, master, or owner of any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports to insert in any bill of lading or shipping document any clause, covenant, or agreement whereby it, he, or they shall be relieved from liability for loss or damage arising from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, stowage, custody, care, or proper delivery of any and all lawful merchandise or property committed to its or their charge. Any and all words or clauses of such import inserted in bills of lading or shipping receipts shall be null and void and of no effect.

"Sec. 2. That it shall not be lawful for any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States of America and foreign ports, her owner, master, agent, or manager, to insert in any bill of lading or shipping document any covenant or agreement whereby the obligations of the owner or owners of said vessel to exercise due diligence, properly equip, man, provision, and outfit said vessel, and to make said vessel seaworthy and capable of performing her intended voyage, or whereby the obligations of the master, officers, agents, or servant to carefully handle and stow her cargo, and to care for and properly deliver same, shall in any wise be lessened, weakened, or avoided.

56 L. ed.

"Sec. 3. That if the owner of any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port of the United States of America shall exercise due diligence to make the said vessel in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, neither the vessel, her owner or owners, agent, or charterers, shall become or be held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel, nor shall the vessel, her owner or owners, charterers, agent, or master be held liable for losses arising from dangers of the sea or other navigable waters, acts of God, or public enemies, or the inherent defect, quality, or vice of the thing carried, or from insufficiency of package, or seizure under legal process, or for loss resulting from any act or omission of the shipper or owner of the goods, his agent or representative, or from saving or attempting to save life or property at sea, or from any deviation in rendering such service."

an agreement with the cargo owners for a participation with them in general average contributions resulting from negligent navigation or management of the ship by its master and crew.

The latter view was adopted by the district court in New York & C. Mail S. S. Co. v. Ansonia Clock Co. 139 Fed. 894, where a clause identical with the one now under consideration was held invalid. This decision was apparently followed, although not cited, by the same court (162 Fed. 56), and by the circuit court of appeals (101 C. C. A. 628, 178 Fed. 414, 416), in the case now under review. In reaching this result the courts below have, as we think, misconceived the effect of the language used by Mr. Justice Shiras, speaking for this court, in The Irrawaddy, and have given to that decision an import quite beyond its legitimate scope. In that case there was no agreement between shipowner and cargo owner respecting general average, nor respecting the consequences of a stranding or other peril that might result from the negligence of the master or crew of the vessel. On familiar grounds, all of the expressions employed in the opinion are to be construed in the light of the facts of the case and the question actually presented for decision. This was, whether § 3 of the Harter act, proprio vigore, gave to the shipowner, under the circumstances, a right to general average contribution for sacrifices made by him subsequent to the stranding of the vessel, in successful efforts to save her and her freight and cargo. It was pointed out in the opinion that previous to that enactment, in the case of a loss arising from the ship's fault, the shipowner was excluded from contribution by way of general average, and was also legally responsible to the owner of the cargo for loss and damage so occasioned; and that it was against the policy of the law to allow stipulations that would relieve a carrier from such liability. It was, however, recognized that it was "competent for Congress to make a change in the standard of duty." It was remarked that by the 1st and 2d sections of the Harter act, shipowners were prohibited from inserting in their bills of lading agreements limiting their liability in other respects. The opinion, after stating that, as the law stood before the passage of the act, the shipowner could not contract against his liability and that of his vessel for loss occasioned by negligence or fault in officers and crew, and that in this particular the owners of American vessels were at a disadvantage as compared with the owners of foreign vessels, who might so contract, proceeded to say that "Congress thought fit to remove the disadvantage, not by declaring that it should be competent for the owners of vessels to exempt themselves from liability for the faults of the master and crew by stipulations to that effect, contained in bills of lading, but by enacting that, if the owners exercised due diligence in making their ships seaworthy and in duly manning and equipping them, there should be no liability for the navigation and management of the ships, however faulty."

This language is laid hold of as indicating that the decision proceeded upon the ground that Congress thought it improper to permit owners of vessels to contract for exemption from liability. What it really means, as will be observed, is, that Congress went further, and by its own enactment exempted them from liability, under given conditions, for the consequences of faulty navigation.

*The point of the decision in The Irrawaddy (and as an authority the case goes no further) is, that while the Harter act relieved the shipowner from liability for his servant's negligence, it did not of its own force entitle him to share in a general average rendered necessary by such negligence.

It is, however, further insisted in behalf of the cargo owners that the agreement in question is contrary to public policy in another respect; namely, in that it attempts to relieve the shipowner from one of the essential duties arising out of the relation of carrier and shipper, and from which the Harter act has not relieved him. The argument is that although that act exempts him from the consequences of the negligent stranding, it leaves him still under the duty and obligation of caring for and preserving the cargo, after the stranding; that whenever the safety of the property intrusted to the shipowner is menaced, whether the peril be occasioned by vis major or by fault, and whether such fault be or be not of such character as to fall within the 3d section of the Harter act, "the master is nevertheless bound to exert every effort to save the property, and if he fail in his duty, his owners are liable to the cargo for the resulting loss." If by "every effort" is meant every reasonable effort, we see no occasion to question the soundness of the reasoning. But it is further insisted that the duty of the master to save the imperiled property extends so far as to call for a sacrifice of a part of the owner's property if necessary to save the cargo. In our opinion the master's duty as agent of the owner is not so extensive. If it were, there would be an end at once of all contribution in general average for ship's sacrifices, for such sacri-lices could not be deemed voluntary and extraordinary, if made in performance of the owner's general duty to his cargo.

The cases cited do not support the con- 55]tention of counsel *for the cargo owners in this behalf. The Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. 7, 28, 16 L. ed. 41, 48, holds that although the vessel be stranded, "the master is bound to the utmost exertions in his power to save the goods from the impending peril, as it is no more than a prudent man would do under like circumstances." The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. 435, 458, 19 L. ed. 772, 780, holds that when the vessel is wrecked or otherwise disabled in the course of the voyage, and cannot be repaired without too great delay and expense, it is the duty of the master to transship the goods and send them forward, if another vessel can be had in the same or a contiguous port or within a reasonable distance, and that upon so doing he is entitled to charge the goods with the increased freight arising from the hire of the vessel so procured. In The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 230, 19 L. ed. 638, 645, it is pointed out that the duty imposed upon the master, in case of a peril arising to the common adventure, is "to judge and determine at the time whether the circumstances of danger in such a case are or are not so great and pressing as to render a sacrifice of a portion of the associated interests indispensable for the common safety of the remainder." The duty to make a sacrifice of such portion of the associated interests as, in the judgment of the master, will save the common adventure, is obviously inconsistent with the suggested duty to first sacrifice the owner's property for the safety of the cargo. The other cases cited upon this point require no mention.

In our opinion, so far as the Harter act has relieved the shipowner from responsibility for the negligence of his master and crew, it is no longer against the policy of the law for him to contract with the cargo owners for a participation in general average contribution growing out of such negligence; and since the clause contained in the bills of lading of the Jason's cargo admits the shipowner to share in the general average only under circumstances where by the act he is relieved from responsibility, 56]the *provision in question is valid, and entitles him to contribution under the circumstances stated.

The second question is whether, under the like circumstances, the cargo owners can recover contribution from the shipowner for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the stranding, for the common benefit and safety of ship, cargo, and freight.

This question was dealt with in The 56 L. ed.

Strathdon, 94 Fed. 206, 41 C. C. A. 515, 101 Fed. 600; where, however, there seems to have been no general average clause such as we have in the case before us; and by the same courts in this case (162 Fed. 56, 101 C. C. A. 628, 178 Fed. 414), where the general average clause was dealt with as invalid, and therefore, of course, was given no influence in the determination of the present point. The circuit court of appeals expressed the view that if the cargo owner were allowed to obtain indirectly through a general average adjustment, compensation for losses attributable to the faulty navigation of the ship, and which therefore he could not recover directly, because of § 3 of the Harter act, the result would be a judicial repeal of that section, and that therefore the cargo owner could not bring the shipowner as a contributing interest into a general average adjustment that might result in a claim which the Harter act disallows. With this view we have no present concern, because it seems to us that the response we are to make to the second question certified must depend upon the construction of the agreement between the parties. Having already held that the general average clause contained in the bill of lading is valid as against the cargo owner, it follows ex necessitate that it is valid in his favor; indeed, no ground is suggested for disabling the shipowner from voluntarily subjecting himself or his ship to liability to respond to the cargo in an action or in a general average adjustment, for the consequences of the negligence of his master or crew, even *though, by the[57 Harter act, he is relieved from responsibility for such negligence. Therefore we have only to determine whether, by the language of the general average clause, the cargo owners are entitled to contribution from the ship for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the stranding, for the common benefit and safety. The language is that in the circumstances presented, "the consignee or owners of the cargo shall not be exempted from liability for contributions in general average, or for any special charges incurred, but, with the shipowner, shall contribute in general average, and shall pay such special charges, as if such danger, damage, or disaster had not resulted from such default, negligence," etc. This language clearly imports an agreement that the shipowner shall contribute in general average. The opposite view would render the clause inconsistent with the principles of equity and reciprocity upon which the entire law of general average is founded.

The foregoing considerations compel a negative answer to the third question. In view of the valid stipulations contained in the bill of lading, it would be a contradiction of terms to permit the cargo owners to recover contribution from the ship in respect of general average sacrifices of cargo, without on their part contributing to the general average sacrifices and expenditures of the shipowner, made for the same purpose. This would not be general average contribution, the essence of which is that extraordinary sacrifices made and expenses incurred for the common benefit and safety are to be borne proportionately by all who are interested.

Our conclusion, accordingly, is that of the questions certified to us by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the first question should be answered in the affirmative, the second question should be answered in the affirmative, and the third question should be answered in the negative; and it is so ordered.

58] *RAMON VALDES, Appt.,
v.

CENTRAL ALTAGRACIA, Incorporated, and Nevers & Callaghan. (No. 193.)

CENTRAL ALTAGRACIA, Incorporated, Appt.,
v.

RAMON VALDES, George B. Ackerson and James G. Callaghan, Copartners under the Firm Name of Nevers & Callaghan.
(No. 196.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 58-79.)

Appeal — reversible error — setting case for trial.

1. Forcing to trial a consolidated cause arising out of the financial difficulties of a corporation whose property is in the hands of a receiver, without affording the corporation the time to plead allowed by the equity rules, is not reversible error, where the proceedings leading up to the appointment of the receiver and the power given to administer the property were largely the result of the assent of the corporation, and where the steps taken by the court for the purpose of bringing the cause to a speedy conclusion and thus avoiding further loss were also acquiesced in by all the parties in interest, who complied with the terms of the order setting the cause for trial, and took advantage of the rights which it conferred, and where the corporation's objection was the result of a change of front because of the action of the court in refusing a continuance based upon the absence of witnesses.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — discretion — continuance.

2. Refusing to grant a continuance of a consolidated cause arising out of the financial difficulties of a corporation whose property is in the hands of a receiver, based upon an affidavit as to the absence of material witnesses, is not an abuse of discretion, where the matter had been pending for more than a year, and all the parties in interest had acquiesced in the steps taken by the court for the purpose of bringing the cause to a speedy conclusion and thus avoiding further loss, and had complied with the terms of the order setting the cause for trial, and taken advantage of the rights which it conferred.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — to explain writing — conditional sale or pledge.

3. The real character of a contract between a corporation and a creditor in the form of a conditional sale from the latter to the former may be shown in a case in Porto Rico which presents not only a controversy between the parties to the contract, but its effect and operation upon the creditors of the corporation,—especially where such contract was never inscribed upon the public records so as to bind third persons.

[For other cases, see Evidence, VI. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Fixtures — machinery — installation by tenant.

4. Machinery is placed in a plant by the owner within the meaning of Porto Rico Code, § 335, defining the conditions under which property, movable in its nature, becomes immobilized, where it is installed by a tenant under a stipulation in the lease that it shall become a part of the plant belonging to the owner, without compensation to the lessee.

[Matters as to fixtures, see Fixtures, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Real property — recording law — transfer of lease.

5. A transfer of a lease of real property which, among other obligations imposed on the lessee, stipulates for the immobilization of machinery to be installed by the tenant, is a contract concerning real rights to immovable property, within the meaning of P. R. Civ. Code, § 613, relating to the registration of property.

[Records of title, see Real Property, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Execution — priority over secured creditor — fixtures.

6. Judgment creditors of a corporation operating a sugar factory in Porto Rico ty—see note to Muir v. Jones, 19 L.R.A. 441.

On lease as conveyance within meaning of recording statutes—see note to Eadie v. Chambers, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 879.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes fixtures between landlord and tenant—see note to Van Ness v. Pacard, 7 L. ed. U. S. 374. and Overman v. Sasser, 10, L.R.A. 722.

On the effect of an agreement to prevent fixtures from becoming part of real-under lease, who were not parties to the lease, and had no legal notice of a condition therein by which machinery installed by the lessee was to become the lessor's property, acquired rights in such machinery by the levy of an execution thereon, which are superior to those of a secured creditor of the corporation who claims under the lease and expressly assumed its obligations, since, as to such judgment creditors, the machinery remained movable property, while as to him it was a part of the realty, which, as a result of his obligations under the lease he could not proceed separately against for the purpose of collecting his debt.

[Priorities under levy, see Execution, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 193 and 196.]

Submitted March 6, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

TWO APPEALS from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree in a consolidated cause arising out of the financial difficulties of a corporation, which fixes the rights and priorities of the various creditors of the corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 5 Porto Rico, Fed. Rep. 155.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis, Hugo Kohlmann, and Martin Travieso, Jr., submitted the cause for Valdes:

The conditional sale from Valdes to Central Altagracia, Incorporated, was clearly valid under the Porto Rican law, and, pursuant to it, Valdes was entitled to the possession and ownership of the properties as against the levy under the Nevers-Callaghan judgment.

Blanchart v. Redondo, 75 Jurisprudencia Civil, Tribunal Supremo de Justicia, p. 215; 8 Manresa, Commentaries on the Spanish Civil Code, p. 607; Urrea v. Perez, 80 Jurisprudencia del Tribunal Supremo, pp. 254, 258.

The general rule of law laid down by the United States Supreme Court as applicable in the absence of local statutes or decisions also sustains the validity of this conditional sale, both as between the parties and as against creditors of the vendee.

Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 30 L. ed. 285, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; William W. Bierce v. Hutchins, 205 U. S. 340, 51 L. ed. 828, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 53 L. ed. 997, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Coggill v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 3 Gray, 545; The Marina, 19 Fed. 760; Blackwell v. Walker, 2 McCrary, 33, 5 56 L. ed.

Fed. 419; Rodgers v. Bachman, 109 Cal. 552, 42 Pac. 448; Kohler v. Hayes, 41 Cal. 455; Sargent v. Metcalf, 5 Gray, 306, 66 Am. Dec. 368; Deshon v. Bigelow, 8 Gray, 159; Hirschorn v. Canney, 98 Mass. 149; Sere v. McGovern, 65 Cal. 244, 3 Pac. 859; Herring v. Hoppock, 15 N. Y. 409; Ballard v. Burgett, 40 N. Y. 314; Cole v. Mann, 62 N. Y. 1; Bean v. Edge, 84 N. Y. 510.

In the absence of any statute requiring registration, such contract of conditional sale is valid without being recorded.

Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 291, 53 L. ed. 997, 1002, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Journey v. Priestly, 70 Miss. 584, 12 So. 799.

The transfer from Central Altagracia, Incorporated, to Valdes, and the conditional sale from the latter to the former, being clear on their face, and representing a transaction valid in every respect, no extraneous evidence of any intention to effect a transaction different from that represented by these instruments can be considered.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 548; Shankland v. Washington, 5 Pet. 590, 8 L. ed. 166; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 231, 20 L. ed. 621; Hancock v. Cossett, 45 Fed. 754; Burnes v. Scott, 117 U. S. 582, 29 L. ed. 991, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Beall v. Fisher, 95 Cal. 568, 30 Pac. 773; Thomas v. Scutt, 127 N. Y. 133, 27 N. E. 961; Brady v. Nally, 151 N. Y. 258, 45 N. E. 547; Chapin v. Dobson, 78 N. Y. 74, 34 Am. Rep. 512; Perry v. Bigelow, 128 Mass. 129; Frost v. Brigham, 139 Mass. 43, 29 N. E. 217; McGuinness v. Shannon, 154 Mass. 86, 27 N. E. 881.

Having availed itself of the provisions of the order of July 21st, 1909, by filing an answer and an amended bill of complaint, Central Altagracia cannot complain of the conditions upon which said order granted the permission to file such additional pleadings.

Smith v. Rathbun, 75 N. Y. 126; Hill v. Phelps, 41 C. C. A. 569, 101 Fed. 650; Chase v. Driver, 34 C. C. A. 668, 92 Fed. 786; Burkholder v. Farmers' Bank, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2449, 67 S. W. 832; McClure v. Bigstaff, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 601, 37 S. W. 294, 38 S. W. 431; Burgin v. Giberson, 23 N. J. Eq. 403; Supreme Lodge, K. H. v. Davis, 26 Colo. 252, 58 Pac. 595.

The continuance of the trial on account of the absence of the testimony of material witnesses has always been held to be in the discretion of the trial court.

Barrow v. Hill, 13 How. 54, 14 L. ed. 48; Cox v. Hart, 145 U. S. 376, 36 L. ed. 741, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Isaacs v. United States, 159 U. S. 487, 40 L. ed.

229, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Nelson, 1 C. C. A. 688, 2 U. S. App. 213, 50 Fed. 814; Drexel v. True, 20 C. C. A. 265, 36 U. S. App. 611, 74 Fed. 12.

Central Altagracia, Incorporated, cannot complain of the decision below on the ground that it declared the transaction between it and Valdes an equitable mortgage in favor of Valdes, rather than a sale by it to Valdes, with a subsequent conditional sale from Valdes to the corporation, or on the ground that it ordered a sale of the property, instead of placing Valdes in possession thereof.

Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 49 L. ed. 263, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Tayloe v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co. 9 How. 390, 13 L. ed. 187; Patrick v. Isenhardt, 20 Fed. 339; London & S. F. Bank v. Dexter Horton & Co. 61 C. C. A. 515, 126 Fed. 593.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill and Frederick L. Cornwell submitted the cause for Central Altagracia:

Equity courts are not a law unto themselves, but are subject to the equity rules, which parties are entitled to depend upon and assert as the measure of their rights, and the substantial violation of which must lead to reversal of any decree so obtained.

Bank of United States, v. White, 8 Pet. 262, 269, 8 L. ed. 938, 941; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. 359, 368, 10 L. ed. 200, 204; Betts v. Lewis, 19 How. 72, 15 L. ed. 576; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Keith, 23 C. C. A. 196, 40 U. S. App. 706, 77 Fed. 374; Ingle v. Jones, 9 Wall. 486, 19 L. ed. 621; Jewell v. State L. Ins. Co. 99 C. C. A. 372, 176 Fed. 64.

The creation of an equitable lien seems to result from an express agreement of the parties or from a finding by the court that the party claiming such lien has proved that both he and the other party intended to create it; but here no one was making such a claim.

Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 999; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

It is, of course, elementary that decrees must bear a logical relation to the allegations and proofs.

Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Washington) 10 Wall. 299, 19 L. ed. 894; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. ed. 566; Seamster v. Blackstock, 83 Va. 232, 5 Am. St. Rep. 262, 2 S. E. 36; Wayne Pike Co. v. Hammons, 129 Ind. 368, 27 N. E. 487; Beach v. Atkinson, 87 Ga. 288, 13 S. E. 591; Bunch v. Potts, 57 Ark. 257, 21 S. W. 437; Gille v. Emmons, 58 Kan.

118, 62 Am. St. Rep. 609, 48 Pac. 569; Hendryx v. Perkins, 52 C. C. A. 435, 114 Fed. 801.

The lien of an equitable mortgage is confined to the property described in the contracts creating it.

Woodworth v. Blair, 112 U. S. 8, 28 L. ed. 615, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Maxwell v. Wilmington Dental Mfg. Co. 77 Fed. 938; Mallory v. Maryland Glass Co. 131 Fed. 111.

This court has held that upon a bill filed to foreclose a legal mortgage, it being proved that the mortgage was defective in execution and could create only an equitable lien, relief could not be granted by amendment in that suit, but it must be dismissed and complainant allowed to begin anew in the proper way.

Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. 2 Black, 715, 17 L. ed. 339.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter submitted the cause for Nevers & Callaghan.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases were consolidated below, tried together, a like statement of facts was made applicable to both, and the court disposed of them in one opinion. We shall do likewise. Stating only things deemed to be essential as shown by the pleadings and documents annexed to them and the finding of facts made below, the case is this: Joaquin Sanchez owned in Porto Rico a tract of land of about 22 acres (cuerdas) on which was a sugar house containing a mill for crushing cane and an evaporating apparatus for manufacturing the juice of the cane into sugar. All of the machinery was antiquated and of a limited capacity. The establishment was known as the Central Altagracia, and Sanchez, while not a cane grower, carried on the business of a central,—that is, of acquiring cane grown by others and manufacturing it into sugar at his factory. On the 18th day of January, 1905, Sanchez leased his land and plant to Salvador Castello for a period of ten years. The lease gave to the tenant (Castello), the right to install in the plant "such machinery as he may deem convenient, which said machinery, at the end *of the years mentioned (the[60 term of the lease) shall become the exclusive property" of the lessor, Sanchez. The tenant was given one year in which to begin the work of repairing and improving the plant, and it was provided that "upon the expiration of this term, if the necessary improvements shall not have been begun by him (Castello), then this contract shall be null and void, and no cause of action shall accrue to any of the contracting parties by reason thereof." Further agreeing on the subject of the improved machinery which was to be placed in the plant, the contract provided: "Upon the expiration of the term agreed on under this contract, any improvement or machinery installed in the said central shall remain for the benefit of Don Joaquin Sanchez, and Don Salvador Castello shall have no right to claim anything for the improvements made." The rental was thus provided for: "After each crop such profits as may be produced by the Central Altagracia shall be distributed and twenty-five per cent (25%) thereof shall be immediately paid to Don Joaquin Sanchez as equivalent for the rental of said central and of the twenty-two (22) cuerdas of land surrounding the same. The remaining seventy-five per cent (75%) shall belong to Don Salvador Castello, who may interest therein whomsoever he may wish, either for the whole or part thereof." It was stipulated, however, that in fixing the profits no charge should be made for repairs of the existing machinery or for new machinery put in, as the entire cost of these matters was to be borne by the lessee, Castello. The lease provided, moreover, that in case of the death of Sanchez the obligations of the contract should be binding on his heirs, and in the case of the death of Castello, his brother, Gerardo Castello, should take his place "and be a contracting party if he so desired. Otherwise the plantation, in such a condition as it may be at his death, shall immediately pass into the possession of its owner, Don Joaquin Sanchez." In June, 1905, "by a supplementary contract, the lease was extended without change of its terms and conditions for an additional period of ten years, making the total term twenty years. Although executed under private signature, this lease, conformably to the laws of Porto Rico, was produced before a notary and made authentic, and in such form was duly registered on the public records, as required by the Porto Rican laws.

On the 1st day of July, 1905, Salvador and Gerardo Castello transferred all their rights acquired under the lease, as above stated, to Frederick L. Cornwell for "the corporation to be organized under the name of Central Altagracia, of which he is the trustee." This transfer bound the corporation to all the obligations in favor of the original lessor, Sanchez, provided that the corporation should issue to Castello a certain number of paid-up shares of its capital stock and a further number of shares as the output of sugar from the plant increased as the result of its enlarged capacity consequent upon the improvement of the machinery by the corporation. The lease further provided for the employment of Castello as superintendent at a salary, for a substitution of Gerardo Castello, in the event of the absence or death of his brother Salvador, and, for this reason, it is to be assumed Gerardo made himself a party to the transfer of the lease. This transfer of the lease to the corporation was never put upon the public records. The corporation was organized under the laws of the state of Maine, and under the transfer took charge of the plant. The season for grinding cane and the manufacture of sugar in Porto Rico usually commences "about the month of December of each year, and terminates in the months of May, June, or July of the year following, according to the amount of cane to be ground." Central factories in Porto Rico usually "make contracts with the people (colonos) growing cane, so that growers of cane will deliver the same to be ground, and such contracts* are usually made and entered into in the months of June, July, and August." In other words, on the termination of one grinding season, in the months of June or July, it is usual in the ensuing August to make new contracts for the cane to be delivered in the following grinding season, which, as we have said, commences in December. The contract transferring the lease to the Central Altagracia, Incorporated, was made in July, 1905, at the end, therefore, of the grinding season of that year. To what extent the corporation contracted for cane to be delivered to it for grinding during the season of 1905-06, which began in December, 1905, does not appear. It is inferable, however, that the corporation began the work of installing new machinery to give the plant a larger capacity within the year stipulated in the lease from Sanchez to Castello. We say this because it is certain that in the fall of 1906 (October) the corporation borrowed from the commercial firm of Nevers & Callaghan in New York city, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) to enable the corporation to pay for new and enlarged machinery which it had ordered, and which was placed in the factory in time to be used in the grinding season of 1906-07, which began in December, 1906. While such grinding season was progressing, on April 11, 1907, the corporation, through its president, under the authority of its board of directors, sold to one Ramon Valdes all its rights acquired under the lease transferred by Castello. This transfer expressly included all the machinery previously placed by the corporation in the sugar house, as well as machinery which might be thereafter installed during the term of redemption hereafter to be referred to, and which, it was declared, conformably to the original lease, "shall be a part of said factory for the manufacture of sugar." The consideration for the sale was stated in the contract to be "thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000) received by the corporation, twenty-five thousand four hundred dollars 63] ($25,400) *whereof had been paid prior to this act (of sale), and to its entire satisfaction, and the balance of nine thousand six hundred dollars ($9,600) shall be turned over to the vendor corporation by Señor Valdes immediately upon being required to do so by the former." This sale was made subject to a right to redeem the property within a year on paying Valdes the entire amount of his debt. There was a stipulation that Valdes assumed all the obligations of the lease transferred by Castello to the company.

The undoubted purpose was not to interfere with the operation of the plant by the corporation, since there was a provision in the contract binding Valdes to lease the property to the corporation pending the period of redemption. This sale was passed in Porto Rico before a notary public, but was never put upon the public records. At the time it was made there was a very considerable sum unpaid on the debt of Nevers & Callaghan. This fact, joined with the period when the sale with the right to redeem was made, that is, the approaching end of the sugar-making season of 1906 and 1907, coupled with other facts to which we shall hereafter make reference, all tend to establish that at that time, either because insufficient capital had been put into the venture, or because the business had been carried on at a loss, the affairs of the corporation were embarrassed, if it was not insolvent. A short while before the commencement of the grinding season of 1907-1908, in October, 1907, in the city of New York, the corporation, through its president, declaring himself to be authorized by the board of directors, sanctioned by a vote of the stockholders, apparently made an absolute sale of all the rights of the corporation under the lease, and all its title to the machinery which the corporation had put into the plant. This sale was declared to be for a consideration of sixty-five thousand ($65,000) dollars which the company acknowledged to have received from Valdes, first, 64] by the payment of the thirty-five thousand ($35,000) dollars cash, as stated in the previous sale made subject to the equity of redemption, and thirty thousand ($30,000) dollars which "the company has received afterwards in cash from Valdes." There was a provision in the contract to the effect that as the purpose of the previous contract of sale, which had been made subject to the equity of redemption, was accomplished by the new sale, the previous sale was declared to be no longer operative.

A few days afterwards, likewise in the city of New York (on November 2, 1907), Valdes sold to the company all the rights which he had acquired from it by the previous sale, the price being sixty-five thousand ($65,000) dollars, payable in instalments falling due in the years 1908, 1909, 1910, and 1911, respectively. This transfer was put in the form of a conditional sale which reserved the title in Valdes until the payment of the deferred price, and upon the stipulation that any default by the corporation entitled Valdes ipso facto to take possession of the property. Neither this act of sale from Valdes to the corporation nor the one made by the corporation to Valdes were ever put upon the public records.

Prior to the making of the sales just stated, or about that time, the corporation defaulted in the payment of a note held by Nevers & Callaghan for a portion of the money which they had loaned the corporation under the circumstances which we have previously stated, and that firm sued in the court below the corporation to recover the debt.

The grinding season of 1907-1908 commenced in December, 1907, and was obviously not a successful one, for the debt of Nevers & Callaghan was not paid, and in May, 1908, a judgment was recovered by them against the corporation for about $17,000, with interest, and in the same month execution was issued and levied upon the machinery in the sugar house. Previous to, or not long subsequent to, the time Nevers & Callaghan *commenced their suit, the 65 precise date not being stated in the record, the heirs of Sanchez, the original lessor, brought a suit in the court below against the corporation. The nature of the suit and the relief sought is not disclosed, but it is inferable from the facts stated that the suit either sought to recover the property on the ground that there was no power in Castello to transfer the lease, or upon the ground of default in the conditions as to payment of profits as rental which the lease stipulated. It would seem also at about the same time either one or both of the Castellós brought a suit against the company, presumably upon the theory that there had been a default in the obligations assumed in their favor by the corporation at the time it took the transfer of the lease. In the meanwhile also, probably as the result of the want of success of the corporation, discord arose between its stockholders, and a suit growing out of that state of things was brought in the lower court.

This litigation was commenced in June, 1908, by the bringing by Valdes of an action at law in the court below to recover the plant on the ground that, by the default in paying one of the instalments of the price stated in the conditional sale, the right to the relief prayed had arisen. On the same day Valdes commenced a suit in equity against the corporation in aid of the suit at law. The bill alleged the default of the corporation, the bringing of the suit at law, the confusion in the affairs of the corporation, the judgment and levy of the execution by Nevers and Callaghan, and the threat to sell the machinery under such execution; the refusal of the corporation to deliver possession of the property, the waste and destruction of the value of the property which would result if there was no one representing the corporation having power to contract for cane to be delivered during the next grinding season, etc., etc. The prayer was for the appointment of a receiver to take charge [66] of the property, with authority *to carry on the same, make the necessary contracts for cane for the future, it being prayed that the receiver should be empowered to issue receiver's certificates to the extent necessary to the accomplishment of the purposes which the bill had in view.

On the same day a bill was filed on behalf of the corporation against Valdes. This bill attacked the sale made to Valdes and by him to the corporation. It was charged that the price stated to have been paid by Valdes as a consideration of the conditional sale was fictitious, and that the only sum he had advanced at that time was the $35,000 which it was the purpose to secure by means of the sale with the equity of redemption. That at that time Valdes exacted as a consideration for his loan that he be made a director and vice president of the company. The bill then stated that, it having become evident in the following autumn that the corporation would require more money to increase its plant, to pay off the sum due Nevers & Callaghan, and for the operation of the plant, Valdes agreed to advance the money if he were made president of the company at a stipulated salary, given a bonus in the stock of the company, and upon the condition that the papers be executed embodying the so-called sale of the company to Valdes and the practically simultaneous conditional sale by Valdes to the company. The bill then alleged that Valdes, having thus become the president of the company, failed to carry out his agreement to advance the money, failed to provide for the debt of Nevers & Callaghan, mismanaged the affairs of the property in many alleged particulars, and did various acts to the prejudice of the company and to his own wrongful enrichment, which it is unnecessary to recapitulate. The necessity of contracting for cane during the contract season, in order that the plant might continue during the next operating season to be a going concern, and the waste and loss which would otherwise *be occasioned, were fully [67] alleged. Valdes and the firm of Nevers & Callaghan and the individual members of that firm were made defendants. The prayer was for the appointment of a receiver and with power to carry on the business of the central, with power, for that purpose, to contract for cane for the coming season, with authority to issue receiver's certificates for the purpose of borrowing the money which might be required.

The judge, being about to leave Porto Rico for a brief period, declined to appoint a permanent receiver, but named a temporary one to keep the property together until a further hearing could be had, interference in the meanwhile with the custodian being enjoined. Shortly thereafter creditors of the corporation intervened and joined in the prayer made by both of the complainants for the appointment of a receiver. In July the two suits were by order consolidated, and after a hearing a receiver was appointed and authority given him to continue the property as a going concern and to borrow a limited amount of money on receiver's certificates, if necessary, to secure contracts for cane for the coming crop season. The execution of the Nevers & Callaghan judgment was stayed pending an appeal which had been taken to this court. The only difference which seems to have arisen concerning the appointment of the receiver grew out of the fact that a prayer of the Central Altagracia, asking the court to appoint as receiver Mr. Pettingill, a member of the bar and one of the counsel of the corporation, and who was also its treasurer, was denied. Despite this, the fair inference is that the ultimate action of the court was not objected to by anyone, because of the hope that the result of a successful operation of the plant during the coming crop season might ameliorate the affairs of the corporation, and thus prevent further controversies. We say this, not only because of the conduct of the parties prior to the order appointing the receiver, but because, after that order, [68] the solicitors of the Altagracia Company and Valdes put a stipulation of record that until the following October no steps whatever should be taken in the proceedings, and not even then unless the attorneys for both parties should be in Porto Rico.

The hope of a beneficial result from the operation of the plant by the receiver proved delusive. As a result of such operation there was a considerable loss represented by outstanding receiver's certificates, with no means of paying except out of the property. Obviously, for this reason, the record contains a statement that on July 12, 1909, a conference was had between the court and all parties concerned, to determine what steps should be taken to meet the situation. It appears that at that conference the counsel representing the heirs of Sanchez and of Nevers & Callaghan stated their opposition to a continuance of the receivership.

On July 17, 1909, the court placed a memorandum on the files, indicating its purpose to bring the litigation, receivership, etc., to an end, and to cause "immediate issue to be raised on the pleadings for that purpose." This memorandum was entitled in all the pending causes concerning the property. It directed that demurrers which had been filed in the consolidated cause of Valdes against the corporation and of the corporation against Valdes be overruled, and the defendants were required to answer on or before Monday, July 26, in order that upon the following day, the 27th of July, the issues raised might be tried before the court without the intervention of a master. It was provided in the order, however, that nothing in this direction should prevent the parties from filing such additional pleadings as it is deemed necessary for the protection of their rights by way of cross bill or amendment, etc. To make the order efficacious it was declared that nothing would be done in the suit of the heirs of Sanchez against 69]Castello and the Altagracia, *which was pending on appeal, and that a demurrer filed to the suit of Castello against the central would be overruled; that the demurrer in the suit at law of Valdes would remain in abeyance to await the final action of the court on the trial of all the issues in the equity causes, and that a stay of the Nevers & Callaghan execution would be also disposed of when the equity cases came to be decided. This order was followed by a memorandum opinion filed on July the 21st, stating very fully the position of the respective suits, the necessity for action in order to preserve the property from waste, and reiterating the view that whatever might be the rights of the Central Altagracia or of Valdes under the lease, those rights would be subordinate to the ultimate determination of the suit brought by the heirs of Sanchez. To the action of the court, as above stated, no objection appears to have been made. On the contrary, between the time of that order and the period fixed for the commencement of a hearing, the Central Altagracia, Valdes, and Nevers & Callaghan modified their pleadings to the extent deemed by them necessary to present for trial the issues upon which they relied. In the case of the Central Altagracia this was done by filing, on July 22, an amended bill of complaint in its suit against Valdes, and on July 26 its answer in the suit of Valdes. The acceptance by Valdes of the terms of the order was shown by an answer filed to the bill in the suit of the company and the cross bill in the same cause; and Nevers & Callaghan manifested their acquiescence by obtaining leave to make themselves parties, and asserting their rights by cross bill and answers, which it is unnecessary to detail.

When the consolidated cause was called for trial on the morning of July 27, the counsel for the Central Altagracia moved a continuance in order to take the testimony of certain witnesses in Philadelphia and New York for the purpose of proving some of the allegations of the complaint *as[70 to the wrongdoing of Valdes in administering the affairs of the corporation. This application was supported by the affidavit of Mr. Pettingill, the counsel of the corporation. The record states that the request for continuance was opposed by all the other counsel, and the application was denied. In doing so the court stated: "That the matter has been pending for more than a year, and that counsel had full notice of the court's intention to press the matters to issue and trial, and that it is not disposed to delay matters at this time, when the admissions of the pleadings are so broad that the proofs available here in Porto Rico are probably sufficient, and the amended complaint already on file in suit No. 565,—Valdes v. Central Altagracia,—and the answer thereto and the answer recently filed in suit No. 564,—Central Altagracia v. Valdes [5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 155],—as well as the cross bill also recently filed in suit No. 465, make so many allegations and admissions as that the real issue between the parties can be plainly seen, and that, in the opinion of the court, enough proof is available here in Porto Rico." The court thereupon declared that the Altagracia Company might by the next day, if it so desired, file exceptions to the answer in suit 565 and an answer to the cross complaint; indeed, that the corporation might, if it wished, treat them as filed, and proceed with the cause and file them at any convenient time thereafter. Thereupon the record states: "Said counsel for the Central Altagracia stated that he desired time to file exceptions to the answer and an answer to the cross bill in suit No. 565; and the court granted until the morning of July 28 for such purpose. Later in the day of July 27, one of the counsel for Valdes having requested the court to postpone the hearing of the cause until the morning of the 29th, because of an unexpected professional engagement elsewhere, the request was communicated by the court to the other counsel in the cause." Thereupon the record again recites: "Messrs. Pettingill & *Cornwell, attorneys for the Central Altagracia, stated that they withdrew any statement they have hitherto made in the cause in that regard, and desired to be understood that they would not except to the answer in suit No. 565, or plead or answer to the cross bill therein, save and except within the time which they contended the rules governing this court of equity gave them, and would stand upon what they considered their rights in that regard." When the court assembled the next day, on the morning of the 28th, a statement concerning the occurrence of the previous day as to the continuance, etc., just reviewed, was read by the court in the presence of all the counsel, whereupon the record recites: "N. B. Pettingill, counsel for the Central Altagracia, in response to the same, stated that he objected to proceeding to take any evidence in any of the causes at that time, or the testimony of any witnesses, because the same was not at issue or in condition for the taking of evidence, and objected to the taking of such evidence until the issues of said causes are made up in accordance with the rules of practice applicable to equity causes." The record further recites: "Which objection was overruled by the court on the ground that the action called for thereby is not necessary. That the bill was amended within three days; an answer was immediately filed to it and a cross bill also filed, the said cross bill making only the same claims as were made in suit No. 563 at law, and that any way the issue could be tried on the bill and answer in both suits." . . . This ruling of the court having been excepted to, the trial proceeded from day to day, the counsel for the Central Altagracia taking no part in the same, and virtually treating the proceedings as though they did not concern that corporation.

In substance, the court decided: First, that as the result of the contracts between Valdes and the Central Altagracia, he was not the owner of the rights of that corporation under the lease, or of the machinery which *had been placed in the sugar house by the Altagracia Company, or of the other assets of the corporation, but that he was merely a secured creditor. The sum of 56 L. ed.

the secured debt was fixed after making allowances for some not very material credits which the corporation was held to be entitled to. Second, that the judgment in favor of Nevers & Callaghan was valid, and that that firm, by virtue of its execution and levy upon the machinery, had a prior right to Valdes. Third, the sums due to various creditors of the corporation were fixed and the equities or priorities were classified as follows: (a) Taxes due by the corporation and the sum of the receiver's certificates and certain costs; (b) the judgment of Nevers & Callaghan; and (c) the debt of Valdes; (d) debts due the other creditors. Without going into details it suffices to say that for the purpose of enforcing these conclusions the decree directed a sale of all the rights of the Central Altagracia in and to the lease, machinery, contract, etc., and imposed the duty upon Valdes, if he became the purchaser, to pay enough cash to discharge the costs, taxes, receiver's certificates, and the claim of Nevers & Callaghan.

These appeals were then prosecuted, the one by the Central Altagracia and the other by Valdes. We shall endeavor as briefly as may be to dispose of the contentions relied upon to secure a reversal.

1. The Central Altagracia appeal.—The alleged errors insisted on in behalf of that company relate to the asserted arbitrary action of the court in forcing the cause to trial without affording the time which it insisted the corporation was entitled to under the equity rules applicable to the subject; and, second, the refusal of the court to grant a continuance upon the affidavit as to the absence of material witnesses.

We think all the contentions on this subject are demonstrated to be devoid of merit by the statement of the case which we have made. In the first place, it is manifest *from that statement that the proceed-[73 ing leading up to the appointment of a receiver and the power given to administer the property was largely the result of the assent of the corporation. In the second place, when the unsuccessful financial issue of the receivership had become manifest, we think the statement makes it perfectly clear that the steps taken by the court for the purpose of bringing the case to a speedy conclusion, and thus avoiding the further loss which would result to all interests concerned, were also acquiesced in by all the parties in interest who complied with the terms of that order and took advantage of the rights which it conferred. We think also the statement makes it apparent that the refusal on the part of the corporation to proceed with the trial, upon the theory that the time to plead allowed by the equity rules had not elapsed, was the result of a change of view because of the action of the court in refusing the continuance on account of the absent witnesses,—a change of front which was inconsistent with the rights which the corporation had exercised in accord with the order setting the cause for trial, and with the rights of all the other parties to the cause which had arisen from that order and from the virtual approval of it, or at least acquiescence in it, by all concerned.

Considering the assignments of error in so far as they relate alone to overruling of the application for continuance, based upon the absence of witnesses, it suffices to say that the elementary rule is that the granting of a continuance of the cause was peculiarly within the sound discretion of the court below,—a discretion not subject to be reviewed on appeal except in case of such clear error as to amount to a plain abuse springing from an arbitrary exercise of power. Instead of coming within this latter category, we think the facts as to the refusal to continue and the conduct of the parties make it clear that there was not only no abuse but a just exercise of discretion.

74] *2. As to the Appeal of Valdes.—Two propositions are relied upon: First, that error was committed in treating Valdes merely as a secured creditor, and in not holding him to be the absolute owner of the rights and property alleged to have been transferred by the so-called conditional sale. Second, that in any event error was committed in awarding to Nevers & Callaghan priority over Valdes.

The first proposition is supported by a reference to the Porto Rican Code and decisions of the Supreme Court of Spain and the opinions of Spanish law writers. But the contention is not relevant, and the authorities cited to sustain it are inapposite to the case to be here decided, because the argument rests upon an imaginary premise: that is, that the ruling of the court below denied the right under the Spanish law to make a conditional sale, or held that such a sale if made would not have the effect which the argument insists it was entitled to. This is true because the action of the court was solely based upon a premise of fact: viz., that under the circumstances of the case, and in view of the prior sale with the equity of redemption, the cancelation of that sale, and the transfer made by the corporation to Valdes, and the immediate transfer of the same rights by him to the corporation in the form of a conditional sale, the failure to register any of the contracts, and the relation of Valdes to the corporation at the time the contracts were made, it resulted that whatever might be the mere form, in substance and effect no conditional sale was made, but a mere contract was entered into which the parties intended to be a mere security to Valdes for money advanced and to be advanced by him. This being the case, it is manifest that it is wholly irrelevant to argue that error was committed in not applying the assumed principles of the Porto Rican and Spanish law governing in the case of a conditional sale, when the ruling which the court made proceeded upon the conclusion that there was no conditional sale.

*The contention that, under the Porto Rican law, the form was controlling because proof of the substance was not admissible, seems not to have been raised below, but, if it had been, is obviously without merit, as the case as presented involved not a controversy alone between the parties to the contract, but the effect and operation of the contract upon third parties, the creditors of the corporation. The contention is additionally without merit, since it assumes that the mere form of the contract excluded the power of creditors to inquire into its reality and substance, even although the contract was never inscribed upon the public records so as to bind third parties. That its character was such as to require inscription we shall in a few moments demonstrate in coming to consider the second proposition: that is, upon the hypothesis that Valdes was but a secured creditor, was error committed in subordinating his claim to the prior claim of Nevers & Callaghan under their judgment and execution?

To determine this question involves fixing the nature and character of the property from the point of view of the rights of Valdes, and its nature and character from the point of view of Nevers & Callaghan as a judgment creditor of the Altagracia Company, and the rights derived by them from the execution levied on the machinery placed by the corporation in the plant. Following the Code Napoleon, the Porto Rican Code treats as immovable (real) property, not only land and buildings, but also attributes immovability in some cases to property of a movable nature; that is, personal property, because of the destination to which it is applied. "Things," says § 334 of the Porto Rican Code, "may be immovable either by their own nature or by their destination, or the object to which they are applicable." Numerous illustrations are given in the 5th subdivision of article 335, which is as follows: "Machinery, vessels, instruments, or *implements[76 intended by the owner of the tenements for the industry or works that they may carry on in any building or upon any land, and which tend directly to meet the needs of the said industry or works." See also Code Napoleon, articles 516, 518, et seq., to and inclusive of article 534, recapitulating the things which, though in themselves movable, may be immobilized. So far as the subject-matter with which we are dealing,—machinery placed in the plant,—it is plain, both under the provisions of the Porto Rican law and of the Code Napoleon, that machinery which is movable in its nature only becomes immobilized when placed in a plant by the owner of the property or plant. Such result would not be accomplished, therefore, by the placing of machinery in a plant by a tenant or a usufructuary or any person having only a temporary right. Demolombe, Tit. 9, No. 203; Aubry et Rau, Tit. 2, p. 12, § 164; Laurent, Tit. 5, No. 447; and decisions quoted in Fuzier-Herman ed. Code Napoleon, under article 522 et seq. The distinction rests, as pointed out by Demolombe, upon the fact that one only having a temporary right to the possession or enjoyment of property is not presumed by the law to have applied movable property belonging to him so as to deprive him of it by causing it, by an act of immobilization, to become the property of another. It follows that, abstractly speaking, the machinery put by the Altagracia Company in the plant belonging to Sanchez did not lose its character of movable property and become immovable by destination. But, in the concrete, immobilization took place because of the express provisions of the lease under which the Altagracia held, since the lease in substance required the putting in of improved machinery, deprived the tenant of any right to charge against the lessor the cost of such machinery, and it was expressly stipulated that the machinery so put in should become a part of the plant belonging to the owner without compensation of the lessee. *Under such conditions the tenant, in putting in the machinery, was acting but as the agent of the owner, in compliance with the obligations resting upon him, and the immobilization of the machinery which resulted arose in legal effect from the act of the owner in giving by contract a permanent destination to the machinery. It is true, says Aubry and Rau, vol. 2, § 164, ¶ 2, p. 12, that "the immobilization with which the article is concerned can only arise from an act of the owner himself or his representative. Hence the objects which are dedicated to the use of a piece of land or a building by a lessee cannot be considered as having become immovable by destination except in the case where they have been applied for account of the proprietor, or in execution of an obligation imposed by the lease." It follows that the machinery placed by the corporation in the plant, by the fact of its being so placed, lost its character as a movable, and became united with and a part of the plant as an immovable by destination. It also follows that as to Valdes, who claimed under the lease, and who had expressly assumed the obligations of the lease, the machinery, for all the purposes of the exercise of his rights, was but a part of the real estate,—a conclusion which cannot be avoided without saying that Valdes could at one and the same time assert the existence in himself of rights, and yet repudiate the obligations resulting from the rights thus asserted.

Nevers & Callaghan were creditors of the corporation. They were not parties to nor had they legal notice of the lease and its conditions from which alone it arose that machinery put in the premises by the Altagracia became immovable property. The want of notice arose from the failure to record the transfer from Castello to the Altagracia, or from the Altagracia to Valdes, and from Valdes apparently conditionally back to the corporation,—a clear result of § 613 of the Civil Code of Porto Rico, providing, "The titles of ownership or of other real rights relating *to immovables[78 which are not properly inscribed or annotated in the registry of property shall not be prejudicial to third parties." It is not disputable that the duty to inscribe the lease by necessary implication resulted from the general provisions of article 2 of the mortgage law of Porto Rico, as stated in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 thereof, and explicitly also arose from the express requirement of paragraph 6, relating to the registry of "contracts for the lease of real property for a period exceeding six years. . . ." It is true that, in a strict sense, the contracts between Castello and the Altagracia Company and with Valdes were not contracts of lease, but for the transfer of a contract of that character. But such a transfer was clearly a contract concerning real rights to immovable property within the purview of article 613 of the Civil Code, just previously quoted. Especially is this the case in view of the stipulations of the lease as to the immobilization of movable property placed in the plant, and the other obligations imposed upon the lessee. "The sale which a lessee makes to a third person to whom he transfers his right of lease is the sale of an immovable right, and not simply a sale of a movable one." See numerous decisions of the courts of France, beginning with the decision on February 2, 1842, of the court of cassation (Journal du Palais [1842] vol. 1, 171). See also numerous authorities collected under the heading above stated in paragraph 21, under articles 516, 517, and 518 of the Code Napoleon. Fuzier-Herman ed. of that Code, p. 643.

The machinery levied upon by Nevers & Callaghan, that is, that which was placed in the plant by the Altagracia Company, being, as regards Nevers & Callaghan, movable property, it follows that they had the right to levy on it under the execution upon the judgment in their favor, and the exercise of that right did not in a legal sense conflict with the claim of Valdes, since as to him the property was a part of the real-79]ty, which, as the result *of his obligations under the lease, he could not, for the purpose of collecting his debt, proceed separately against.

As a matter of precaution we say that nothing we have said affects the rights, whatever they may be, of the heirs of Sanchez, the original lessor.

Affirmed.

CHARLES A. CHASE, Appt.,

v.

EMIL WETZLAR, Surviving Executor of the Estate of Gustave J. Wetzlar, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 79-89.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction.

1. The dismissal of a bill filed against nonresident aliens in a Federal circuit court because complainant offered no proof to establish the fact that the property sought to be affected was within the district, as contemplated by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513), § 8, which authorizes the exertion of jurisdiction as to the property of absent defendants, the bill's averment in this regard having been traversed by plea, involves a question as to the power of the court as a Federal court, reviewable by direct appeal to the Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 895-902, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — burden of proof — averment of jurisdictional facts.

2. Complainant invoking the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit against nonresident aliens, under the act of March 3, 1875, § 8, which authorizes the exercise of jurisdiction as to property of absent defendants, is charged with the burden of proving the jurisdictional fact that the property sought to be affected is within the jurisdiction, where the averments of the bill in this respect are traversed by plea.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II.b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — territorial jurisdiction — nonresident defendants in local suit — constructive presence.

3. A Federal circuit court sitting in New York cannot take jurisdiction of a suit against nonresident aliens to establish an equitable title to certain bonds held by them as executors, on the theory that such bonds were within the district, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1875, § 8, which authorizes the exertion of jurisdiction as to property of absent defendants, because that state, by virtue of the probate therein of the testator's will and the appointment there of defendants as executors, may have the power to treat both them and the estate as constructively present and subject to its jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Courts, 956-959, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 1045.]

Submitted April 22, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a bill filed against nonresident aliens to establish title to personal property held by them as executors. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Burr submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. Frederick W. Frost was on the brief:

The bill was filed in accordance with the decisions in Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 53 L. ed. 208, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; and Waterman v. Canal-Louisiana Bank & T. Co. 215 U. S. 33, 54 L. ed. 80, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; which hold that in a suit between citizens of different states, or in a suit to which an alien is a party, the right and title to a legacy may be determined in the Federal court of the district where administration of the estate is had, and that the decree of the court operates to establish the right, which must be thereafter recognized and enforced in the appropriate surrogate proceedings in the state court.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 40 L. ed. U. S. 741; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333; and B. Atiman & Co. v. United States, ante, 894.

On jurisdiction of Federal courts to enforce or remove liens or encumbrances on property of parties not inhabitants of nor found in district of suit—see note to Jones v. Gould, 80 C. C. A. 7.

It is not a question of fact to be determined in any case where it is sought to sue an executor, whether or not he has the personal assets of the estate physically within the state of his appointment. The practice is quite otherwise. The executor cannot even be sued where he is found outside of the state of his appointment. He must be sued in that state.

Story, Conf. L. § 513; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 639.

The assets of a decedent's estate must be regarded in the eye of the law as in the possession of the court appointing the executor. His possession is the possession of the court, as the possession by a receiver is the possession of the court. He is the officer of the court, and subject to its jurisdiction.

Williams v. Benedict, 8 How. 107, 12 L. ed. 1007; Yonley v. Lavender, 21 Wall. 276, 22 L. ed. 536.

This action is not an action in personam. It is not an action strictly in rem. It is an action quasi in rem.

Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 30 L. ed. 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

The question is not one for a strict construction of the statute. It is a remedial statute, to be liberally construed.

IBBS v. ARCHER, 107 C. C. A. 141, 185 Fed. 37.

The plea to the jurisdiction was not established by any evidence, and the issue should therefore have been resolved in favor of complainant.

SHEPPARD v. GRAVES, 14 How. 505, 14 L. ed. 518; De Sobry v. Nicholson, 3 Wall. 420, 18 L. ed. 263; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115, 42 L. ed. 682, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. 205 U. S. 322, 51 L. ed. 821, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Hill v. Walker, 92 C. C. A. 633, 167 Fed. 241.

Inasmuch as issue has been joined, the decree to be entered should be a final decree in favor of the complainant.

Kennedy v. Creswell, 101 U. S. 641, 25 L. ed. 1075; Lilienthal v. Washburn, 4 Woods, 65, 8 Fed. 707; Earll v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 87 Fed. 528; Eagle Oil Co. v. Vacuum Oil Co. 89 C. C. A. 463, 162 Fed. 671.

Mr. Howard S. Gans submitted the cause for appellee Messrs. Paul M. Herzog and Julius Wallerstein were on the brief:

The appeal should be dismissed because the jurisdiction of the court below was never in question within the meaning of the act of March 3d, 1891, under which this appeal is taken.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; 56 L. ed.

Baehre v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 525, 48 L. ed. 774, 775, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547; United States v. Larkin, 208 U. S. 333, 52 L. ed. 517, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The circuit court had control neither of the person of the defendant nor of the property sought to be affected.

Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 188, 30 L. ed. 372, 373, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Cella Commission Co. v. Bohlinger, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 537, 78 C. C. A. 467, 147 Fed. 419; Ward v. Boyce, 152 N. Y. 191, 36 L.R.A. 549, 46 N. E. 180; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 49 Fed. 300; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Lowell & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 34 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell, 143 Fed. 1005; Klenk v. Byrne, 143 Fed. 1009.

This proceeding being in the nature of a proceeding in rem, the situs of the property is where it is actually located.

Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 187, 30 L. ed. 372, 373, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; 1 Parmele's Wharton, Conf. L. 3d ed. § 368 B.

The plea being a negative one, the burden of proof as to the issue raised by the replication was upon the complainant.

Street, Fed. Eq. Pr. § 896; Vacuum Oil Co. v. Eagle Oil Co. 154 Fed. 867, affirmed in 89 C. C. A. 463, 162 Fed. 671; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell, 143 Fed. 1004; Gibson, Suit in Ch. 2d ed. §§ 323, 837, 838.

The plea having been previously adjudged sufficient in point of law, and because of the failure of the complainant to offer proof, correctly decreed true in point of fact, nothing remained for the court to do but to dismiss the bill.

Street, Fed. Eq. Pr. § 904; Eveleth v. Southern California R. Co. 123 Fed. 836.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Suing as a citizen of Pennsylvania, Chase, who was complainant below, made defendants to the bill by which this cause was commenced Emil Wetzlar and William P. Bonn, alleged to be "alien subjects of the Emperor of Germany, residing in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, executors of the estate of Gustave J. Wetzlar, deceased." It was averred that the testator, a naturalized citizen of the United States and a resident of the city of New York, died in 1898; that his will was probated on February 1, 1899, in the surrogate's court of the county of New York, and that letters testamentary were duly issued to the defendants. It was further averred that, by virtue of the fourth paragraph of the will, Julius G.

Wetzlar, a son of the testator, was entitled, on reaching the age of twenty-five years, to receive a sixth part of the principal of the residuary estate; that such share was invested by the defendants, as executors, in railroad bonds, and they "held the said bonds in the city of New York, as executors, subject to the jurisdiction of your honorable court" (the circuit court). It was further averred that Julius G. Wetzlar 81]*reached the age of twenty-five years on August 23, 1908, at which time the one-sixth part of the entire residuary estate exceeded in value the sum of $100,000; and that about three years theretofore Julius had mortgaged an undivided one-third interest of such share, to secure the payment of a promissory note for $5,000, bearing interest. On default in payment, it was alleged, the interest so mortgaged was sold in February, 1909, at public auction, for the sum of $3,000; and Chase, claiming through the purchaser at the sale, became vested on June 20, 1910, with and entitled to the immediate possession of the said one third of one sixth of such residuary estate. The defendants, as executors, it was charged, neglected and refused to pay to Chase the share of the estate in question. A copy of the will was attached to the bill as a part thereof. In the will the defendants were stated to be residents of the German Empire, and express power was conferred upon them to remove the trust estate at any time from the state of New York. The specific relief asked was that complainant might be declared entitled to the immediate possession of one third of one sixth of the residuary estate of Gustave J. Wetzlar, deceased, and also to payments of income of the said one-third interest from August 23, 1908, "and may pay your orator the said portion of the said share of Julius G. Wetzlar as may be found to have been unlawfully withheld or diverted from him." There was also a prayer for general relief.

To obtain an order for service outside of the district, an affidavit was made in which it was averred that the bill had been filed to determine disputed claims to a fund which the defendants, as executors and trustees, held within the jurisdiction of the court, and that defendants were alien subjects of the Emperor of Germany, and resided within that Empire, and that neither was within the district, and neither had voluntarily appeared in the action. 82]*The court, reciting that it appeared "both by the averments contained in the bill . . . and by the affidavit of . . . complainant . . . that the suit was commenced to enforce equitable liens upon, or claims to the title of, personal property within this district, and that all of the defendants are not inhabitants thereof," entered an order on October 25, 1910, requiring the defendants, on or before a date named, to appear, plead, answer, or demur to the bill, and that on or before a named date a certified copy of the order and of the bill should be served upon them wherever found. Presumably in consequence of such service having been made upon him at his residence in Germany, Emil Wetzlar, one of the defendants, appearing specially for the sole purpose of challenging the jurisdiction of the court, filed a plea verified by his attorney, and moved the dismissal of the cause upon the ground "that no portion of the property of the estate of Gustave J. Wetzlar, and no portion of the trust fund of said estate referred to in the bill herein, is now or has been, for at least five years prior hereto, within the city, county, or state of New York, nor within the southern district of New York, nor within the United States, but is and has been in Germany, in the possession and control of the said Emil Wetzlar, there residing." Argument was heard before Circuit Judge Lacombe upon the sufficiency of the plea. It was held to be "sufficient in law and form." and complainant was allowed to file a general replication thereto.

No proceeding for the examination of witnesses out of court having been taken by either party within thirty days after replication, the complainant set the cause down for hearing upon the pleadings, as authorized by court rule 109. The case was heard before Hazel, District Judge. The previous ruling of Judge Lacombe was followed. It was held that the plea was but a negative one, and that the burden was on the complainant to establish the existence *of the essential jurisdictional facts[83 which the plea traversed, and that, as no proof had been offered by the complainant, there was an absence of jurisdiction, and the bill was dismissed. This direct appeal was then taken, the assignments of error being as follows:

"First. That the court erred in sustaining the sufficiency of the plea to the bill in the above-entitled cause.

"Second. The court erred in dismissing the bill after hearing upon bill, plea, and replication.

"Third. The court erred in refusing to maintain jurisdiction of the above-entitled cause.

"Fourth. The court erred in dismissing the bill in the above-entitled cause for lack of jurisdiction."

The court also filed a certificate to the effect that the bill had been dismissed for want of jurisdiction, and that an appeal was allowed solely to review such question.

At the threshold it is insisted that there is a want of authority to entertain this direct appeal because the bill was dismissed for lack of proof, and not because of the want of power of the circuit court as a Federal court. The contention is without merit. United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, ante, 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44. As the defendants were without the territorial jurisdiction of the circuit court, its authority was dependent upon the property sought to be affected being within the district, as contemplated by § 8 of the act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L. 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513, which authorizes the exertion of jurisdiction as to property of absent defendants. The ruling clearly, therefore, concerned the power of the court as a Federal court—that is, under the statute—to entertain the case under the circumstances presented.

As, in order to dispose of the merits, it becomes essential to fix the meaning of § 8 of the act of 1875 above referred to, the section is excerpted in the margin.†

84] *All the errors pressed upon our attention will be disposed of by considering two questions,—the correctness of the ruling of the court below as to the burden of proof, and whether, under the hypothesis that the court correctly held that the burden was on the complainant, *nevertheless error was committed in dismissing the bill, in view of the averments therein contained and the admissions made by the plea.

First. As to the burden of proof.

On this subject the contention is that although the averment of the bill that the property sought to be affected was within the district was traversed by the plea, nevertheless the defendant was bound to prove the allegations of his plea, and hence it was error, in the absence of proof, to dismiss the bill on the assumption that the burden was on the complainant to prove that the case was within the jurisdiction of the court. The theory as to the burden of proof being on the defendant, on which this proposition proceeds, it is insisted, is sanctioned by the following decisions of this court: Sheppard v. Graves (1852) 14 How. 505, 14 L. ed. 518; De Sobry v. Nicholson (1865) 3 Wall. 420, 18 L. ed. 263; Wetmore v. Rymer (1898) 169 U. S. 115, 42 L. ed. 682, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293, and Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. (1907) 205 U. S. 322, 51 L. ed. 821, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529. And a decision of the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit in Hill v. Walker, 92 C. C. A. 633, 167 Fed. 241, is also referred to as containing a full summary of the decided cases on the subject. None of the cases relied upon, however, involved a question of jurisdiction under § 8 of the act of 1875. On the contrary, they all concerned merely the sufficiency or verity of allegations as to the citizenship of parties †Section 8 of act March 3, 1875, chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L. 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513.

Sec. 8. That when in any suit commenced in any circuit court of the United States, to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon, or claim to, or to remove any incumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district where such suit is brought, one or more of the defendants therein shall not be an inhabitant of, or found within, the said district, or shall not voluntarily appear thereto, it shall be lawful for the court to make an order directing such absent defendant or defendants to appear, plead, answer, or demur, by a day certain to be designated, which order shall be served on such absent defendant or defendants, if practicable, wherever, found, and also upon the person or persons in possession or charge of said property, if any there be: or where such personal service upon such absent defendant or defendants is not practicable, such order shall be published in such manner as the court may direct, not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks; and in case such absent defendant shall not appear, plead, answer, or demur within the time so limited, or within some further time, to be allowed by the court, in its discretion, and upon proof of the service of publication of said order, and of the performance of the directions contained in the same, it shall be lawful for the court to entertain jurisdiction, and proceed to the hearing and adjudication of such suit in the same manner as if such absent defendant had been served with process within the said district; but said adjudication shall, as regards said absent defendant or defendants without appearance, affect only the property which shall have been the subject of the suit and under the jurisdiction of the court therein, within such district. And when a part of the said real or personal property against which such proceeding shall be taken shall be within another district, but within the same state, said suit may be brought in either district in said state: Provided, however, that any defendant or defendants not actually personally notified as above provided may, at any time within one year after final judgment in any suit mentioned in this section, enter his appearance in said suit in said circuit court, and thereupon the said court shall make an order setting aside the judgment therein, and permitting said defendant or defendants to plead therein on payment by him or them of such costs as the court shall deem just; and thereupon said suit shall be proceeded with to final judgment according to law.

or the value of the matter in dispute. The cases rested, therefore, upon the proposition that averments concerning such matters were prima facie to be taken as true, and hence the burden of proof was cast upon the one assailing the sufficiency or want of verity of such averments. We do not deem it necessary to now consider the conflict of opinion which has sometimes arisen concerning whether the doctrine of the cases relied upon and the fundamental conception upon which those cases rested entirely harmonizes with the provision of the act of 1875, requiring a Federal court of its own [86] motion to dismiss a pending suit *when it is found not to be really within its jurisdiction,—see Roberts v. Lewis, 144 U. S. 653, 36 L. ed. 579, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781, and the cases cited in the dissenting opinion in Hill v. Walker, supra,—because we think, in any view, the doctrine is here inapplicable. We say this because, while questions concerning the sufficiency or verity of averments as to citizenship or amount in dispute assail the jurisdiction of the court, they do not address themselves to the want of all foundation for judicial action because of an entire absence of elements which are essential to the existence of any jurisdiction whatever,—that is, the presence of persons or property within the jurisdiction of the court, over which its authority may be exerted. The character of the questions involved in the cases relied on, and the nature of the rule as to prima facie presumption as to the adequacy of averments concerning such subjects, and the resultant burden of proof, is at once demonstrated by the well-settled rule that questions of that character do not go to the power of the court to make a binding decree. Butler v. Huston, 158 U. S. 423, 430, 39 L. ed. 1040, 1042, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 188, 198, 49 L. ed. 1008, 1016, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

On the other hand, in a case like the one at bar, the existence of the property within the jurisdiction is essentially necessary to the exertion of the power of the court to render a binding decree. The statute does not leave this to implication, since it expressly provides that the decree to be rendered shall be limited to the property within the jurisdiction which therefore forms the sole basis of the power to judicially act. The prerequisite and absolute limitation on power which arises from these considerations is aptly illustrated by the rule enunciated in Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897, and Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565, and the numerous cases which have enforced the doctrine there laid down. And this wide distinction, in the very nature of things, precludes the possibility of the application here of the prima facie presumption *upon which the cases relied upon [87] proceeded, and therefore also demonstrates the inapplicability of the theory of burden of proof, applied in those cases. In other words, even putting aside, for the sake of argument, the effect on the doctrines announced in the decisions relied upon of the enactment of the act of 1875 as to the duty to dismiss to which we have referred, the burden of proof to establish that the court was vested with power to act, we think, in a case like this, in the nature of things, rested upon the complainant.

Second. Even although the court rightly applied the burden of proof, did it nevertheless err in dismissing the bill?

The insistence on this subject is in substance this: That as the plea admitted the probate of the will, the appointment of the executors in New York, and the purchase and possession of the bonds, even although there was no proof that the bonds were actually within the district, the pleadings were adequate to show property within the district, even under the requirements of § 8 of the act of 1875. Asserting that what was sought was a decree establishing “the title” of the complainant to property within the district, counsel argue as follows:

“This narrows the question down to what is meant by property within the district; and it is submitted that for all purposes connected with the administration of an estate, at least that portion of the personal property which was received by the executor within the district is, within the meaning of the law, within that district. . . . The decree sought is only a determination of the rights of complainant against the estate of Gustave J. Wetzlar, deceased. This estate is, in the eye of the law, within the county of New York, where any and all suits pertaining to the distribution of the estate, and to accounting therefor, must be brought. Respondent cannot, certainly by setting up an absolutely illegal act (removing the property to Germany), be heard to deny that, within the *contemplation [88] of law, the estate is, for the purposes of distribution, within the county of New York. . . . The proceeding in this case is a proceeding to enforce an equitable lien upon personal property which is, within the intendment of the law, in gremio legis within this district, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York.”

It requires no close analysis to sustain the interpretation given by the court below to the statute, viz., that it exclusively deals with property which is within the district where a suit is brought, and which property is therefore capable of being made subject to the dominion and resulting control of the court. No other interpretation is in reason possible in view of the terms of the section, causing its provisions to come into play only when there is "real or personal property within the district where such suit is brought." The meaning is additionally illustrated by the requirement that the service of the order to appear, etc., must be made not only upon the absent defendant or defendants "wherever found," but also "upon the person or persons in possession or charge of said property;" that is, the property within the district and within the dominion of the court, which is made the essential foundation for the jurisdiction to be exercised over the property in a case where the court cannot acquire personal jurisdiction because of the absence of the defendant. The meaning of the statute and the limited jurisdiction which it confers is further clearly shown by the provision that an adjudication against an absent defendant or defendants shall "affect only the property which shall have been the subject of the suit and under the jurisdiction of the court therein, within such district."

We think there is no basis for the contention that the section contemplates the exercise of jurisdiction by a Federal court upon the assumption of its control over property when there is no property subject to [89] control within the jurisdiction. In other words the power conferred rests upon a real, not an imaginary, base. This being true, we are of opinion that a Federal court has not jurisdiction over a person not within its territorial jurisdiction, or over property in the custody of such person, not within such territorial jurisdiction, merely because a state court may, as to such person and such property, because of some proceeding pending before it, have the authority to treat both the persons and property as constructively present and subject to its jurisdiction. The power which a state court may exert in a particular contingency affords no basis for the assumption that the act of Congress extends to a subject which the language of the act does not embrace. Indeed, if, because a state court had the power to treat in a given case a person and his property outside of the territorial jurisdiction as constructively within it, in order to afford particular relief, a like power must be imputed to a Federal court under the act of Congress, it would result that in such a case the act of Congress would become inapplicable, since there would be no absent defendant, as the person as well as the property would be constructively present.

Affirmed.

*LAWRENCE E. SEXTON, as Trustee [90 in Bankruptcy of Alfred Kessler, Rudolf E. F. Flinsch, and William K. Gillette, Composing the Firm of Kessler & Company, and of the said Kessler & Company, Appt.,

v.

KESSLER & COMPANY, Limited, and Frank Youatt, Liquidator.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 90-99.)

Bankruptcy — preference — equitable lien.

A creditor who, within four months of the bankruptcy of his debtor, takes possession of securities negotiable by delivery or indorsed in blank, contained in a separate package in the debtor's safe deposit vaults, marked "escrow" for the creditor's account, does not obtain a preference voidable under the bankruptcy law, where these securities, or others for which they had from time to time been substituted, were so set apart years before, at the creditor's request, to secure the debtor's drawing credit, since an equitable lien was thus created, and in taking the securities the creditor only exercised an equitable right to possession that had been created in good faith long before the bankruptcy.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 193-201, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 92.]

Argued December 12 and 13, 1911. Decided May 27, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, dismissed the bill in a suit brought by the trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent preference. Affirmed.

See same case below, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John Larkin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alexander S. Andrews, filed a brief for appellant:

There was no valid legal pledge to the defendants because possession was not given until October 25, 1907.

Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L.

NOTE.—On avoidability of transfer within four months' period, pursuant to agreement antedating that period—see note to Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 17 L.R.A. (N.S.) 935.

ed. 779; Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 446, 51 Am. Dec. 307; Buffalo German Ins. Co. v. Third Nat. Bank, 162 N. Y. 170, 48 L.R.A. 107, 56 N. E. 521; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 429, 51 L. ed. 1117, 1121, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Casey v. National Park Bank, 96 U. S. 492, 24 L. ed. 789; Casey v. Schnehardt, 96 U. S. 494, 24 L. ed. 790; Christian v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. 133 U. S. 233, 33 L. ed. 589, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260.

The necessary basis for an equitable lien is an express agreement to subject certain property thereto. As possession is a sine qua non for a legal pledge, so an express agreement to deliver possession is a sine qua non for an equitable lien in the nature of pledge.

Re Great Western Mfg. Co. 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 53 L. ed. 332, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co. 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 552, 96 C. C. A. 629, 172 Fed. 177; Re Sheridan, 98 Fed. 406; Copeland v. Barnes, 147 Mass. 388, 18 N. E. 65; Second Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 394, 20 L. ed. 190; Griswold v. Sheldon, 4 N. Y. 581; Wood v. Lowry, 17 Wend. 492.

Will a court of equity uphold, on the theory of equitable lien, an attempted pledge which fails at law, when the rights of creditors are involved?

Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 779; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 446, 51 Am. Dec. 307; Buffalo German Ins. Co. v. Third Nat. Bank, 162 N. Y. 163, 48 L.R.A. 107, 56 N. E. 521; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664; Re Sheridan, 98 Fed. 406; Nisbet v. Macon Bank & T. Co. 4 Woods, 464, 12 Fed. 686; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co. 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 552, 96 C. C. A. 629, 172 Fed. 177; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 271, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; Van Zile, Bailments & Carriers, § 237a; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 88, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 529, 51 L. ed. 915, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596.

Even if the parties had intended to make a mortgage, it would have been invalid (a) in so far as it purported to cover after-acquired property; and (b) in toto because of provisions in it, and in the method of carrying it out, that made it fraudulent in law and absolutely void as to creditors.

Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 271, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 86, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790.

To constitute a declaration of trust where the property remains in the possession of the declarant or settlor, the latter must intend to divest himself of all beneficial interest in the property, and to hold it thereafter as trustee for the benefit of another.

Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 137, 31 Am. Rep. 446; Re Totten, 179 N. Y. 112, 70 L.R.A. 711, 71 N. E. 748, 1 Ann. Cas. 900; Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 422, 36 Am. Rep. 634; Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 306, 50 Am. Rep. 677; Re Bolin, 136 N. Y. 177, 32 N. E. 626; Locke v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 140 N. Y. 141, 35 N. E. 578.

If a pledge, imperfect or invalid because of want of delivery of the pledged property, can be sustained as a declaration of trust, the result will practically be to abolish technical pledges whose very essence is the possession of the pledged property by the pledgee.

Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 437, 36 Am. Rep. 634.

The transaction between Kessler & Company of New York and Kessler & Company of Manchester was inequitable and in bad faith, and deceived existing as well as prospective creditors.

Martin v. Mathiot, 14 Serg. & R. 214, 16 Am. Dec. 491; H. K. Porter Co. v. Boyd, 96 C. C. A. 197, 171 Fed. 305; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 273, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Bowdish v. Page, 153 N. Y. 109, 47 N. E. 44; Hangen v. Hachmeister, 114 N. Y. 566, 5 L.R.A. 137, 11 Am. St. Rep. 691, 21 N. E. 1046; Southard v. Benner, 72 N. Y. 424; Potts v. Hart, 99 N. Y. 168, 1 N. E. 605; Russell v. Winne, 37 N. Y. 591, 97 Am. Dec. 755; Mandeville v. Avery, 124 N. Y. 376, 21 Am. St. Rep. 678, 26 N. E. 951; Wood v. Lowry, 17 Wend. 492; Chatham Nat. Bank v. O'Brien, 6 Hun, 231; Griswold v. Sheldon, 4 N. Y. 584; Gardner v. McEwen, 19 N. Y. 123; Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 214; Bainbridge v. Richmond, 17 Hun, 391; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Seherl v. Flam, 129 App. Div. 561, 114 N. Y. Supp. 86.

When an agreement for security or protection is thus fraudulent in law, and void, it may be attacked by any creditor, whether having a judgment or not, if it is impracticable or useless to obtain a judgment.

Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 86, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Russell v. St. Mart, 180 N. Y. 359, 73 N. E. 31; Karst v. Gane, 136 N. Y. 323, 32 N. E. 1073; Stephens v. Perrine, 143 N. Y. 476, 39 N. E. 11.

Messrs. Abram I. Elkus and Frederick C. McLaughlin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Rufus W. Sprague, Jr., filed a brief for appellees:

The distinctions between a pledge and a mortgage of goods and chattels at common law are that (1) a mortgage is a conveyance which transfers the general property, while a pledge transfers only a special property by delivery of possession; (2) in the case of a mortgage which transfers the general property, possession in the creditor is not essential, whereas possession in the creditor is of the very essence of a pledge; (3) a mortgagee's title becomes absolute upon default, while a pledgee can sell after default only upon notice to the pledgeor.

Story, Bailm. 9th ed. § 287; Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Buffalo German Ins. Co. v. Third Nat. Bank, 162 N. Y. 170, 48 L.R.A. 107, 56 N. E. 521; Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443, 51 Am. Dec. 307.

The only substantial difference between a mortgage and a pledge of incorporeal personalty is in the contract. If the contract gives the debtor a legal right to redeem upon payment of the debt at any time before actual sale, although after default, it is a pledge. Otherwise it is a mortgage.

Wilson v. Little, supra.

A pledge of stock is therefore like a mortgage, a transfer of the stock, and there can be no manual delivery. Possession of a script is of no importance. Physical possession of goods and chattels is an indicia of ownership. The statutes of New York, following the common law, emphasize the distinction.

Niles v. Mathusa, 162 N. Y. 546, 57 N. E. 184; Booth v. Kehoe, 71 N. Y. 341; Young v. Upson, 115 Fed. 192; National Hudson River Bank v. Chaskin, 28 App. Div. 311, 51 N. Y. Supp. 64.

Aside from the provisions of the bankrupt law prohibiting preferences, and subject to the rules of law relative to transfers of goods and chattels, debtors may transfer and pledge their personal property to their creditors in any manner they see fit, and any attempt to apply fixed rules for the transaction of the business would interfere with this undoubted right.

56 L. ed.

Stackhouse v. Holden, 66 App. Div. 423, 73 N. Y. Supp. 203.

Even in the case of goods and chattels, where the presumption of fraud is rebutted, there is not the slightest doubt, under the New York decisions, that sales and transfers by way of security (other than mortgages), without change of possession (the possession remaining in the debtor), are valid as against creditors or even bona fide purchasers without notice.

Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Logan, 74 N. Y. 568; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497, 55 Am. Dec. 290; Moors v. Kidder, 106 N. Y. 32, 12 N. E. 818; Munroe v. Bonanno, 31 Abb. N. C. 1, 28 N. Y. Supp. 375; Carter v. Arguimbau, 31 Abb. N. C. 3; English Bank v. Barr, 31 Abb. N. C. 7; Dennistown v. Barr, 31 Abb. N. C. 21, 28 N. Y. Supp. 255; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922.

By the common law, all that was required to give validity to a sale of personal property, whatever may have been the amount or value, was the mutual assent of the parties to the contract.

Benjamin, Sales, 7th ed. § 3.

Of course, the act constituting the transfer must be consummated, and not remain incomplete or rest in mere intention.

Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 137, 31 Am. Rep. 446.

The contract was at all times enforceable in equity against the specific property set aside.

Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story, 630, Fed. Cas. No. 9,673; Holroyd v. Marshall, 10 H. L. Cas. 191, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 193, 9 Jur. N. S. 213, 7 L. T. N. S. 172, 11 Week. Rep. 171, 10 Eng. Rul. Cas. 426; McCaffrey v. Woodin, 65 N. Y. 459, 22 Am. Rep. 644; Central Trust Co. v. West India Improv. Co. 169 N. Y. 314, 62 N. E. 387; Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. §§ 1234, 1235; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 368, 53 L. ed. 208, 229, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Howard v. Delgado, 57 C. C. A. 270, 121 Fed. 30; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co. 102 Fed. 755; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922; Hamilton Trust Co. v. Clemes, 163 N. Y. 423, 57 N. E. 614; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475; Coats v. Donnell, 94 N. Y. 168; Spring v. Short, 90 N. Y. 538; Husted v. Ingraham, 75 N. Y. 251; Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497, 55 Am. Dec. 290.

Physical delivery was not essential.

Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443, 51 Am. Dec. 307; Knox v. Eden Musee American Co. 148 N. Y. 441, 31 L.R.A. 779, 51 Am. St. Rep. 700, 42 N. E. 988; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592, 34 N. Y. 30; Moore v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 55 N. Y. 41, 14 Am. Rep. 173; Weaver v. Barden, 49 N. Y. 286; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1233; Parker v. Muggridge, 2 Story, 334, Fed. Cas. No. 10,743; Re National Cash Register Co. 98 C. C. A. 425, 174 Fed. 579; Lowell, Bankr. 3d ed. p. 66, § 86.

A promise to give security at some future, indefinite time, or when required, or a general covenant for further security, will not authorize the debtor to give, and the creditor to receive, security under circumstances which would make it a preference. In other words, a general and indefinite promise is disregarded. A bona fide engagement to convey specific property, amounting to an equitable lien, will, however, be valid, and this is the test.

Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 579, 53 L. ed. 332, 334, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 368, 53 L. ed. 208, 229, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Arnold v. Maynard, 2 Story, 358, Fed. Cas. No. 561; Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 534, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; Ex parte Ames, 1 Low. Dec. 564, Fed. Cas. No. 323; Second Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. ed. 190; Brett v. Carter, 2 Low. Dec. 458, Fed. Cas. No. 1,844; Barron v. Morris, 14 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 1,055; Lloyd v. Strobridge, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 8,435; Burdick v. Jackson, 7 Hun, 488, 15 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 318; Holmes v. Winchester, 135 Mass. 299; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922.

Possession taken even of goods and chattels, under a contract for security, relates back so as to cut off all except creditors who had intervened by execution or attachment, and bona fide purchasers.

Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 935, 59 S. E. 154; Fisher v. Zollinger, 79 C. C. A. 76, 149 Fed. 54; Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 80 C. C. A. 328, 150 Fed. 510; First Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania Trust Co. 60 C. C. A. 100, 124 Fed. 968.

An equitable lien under the law of New York is always preferred over general creditors, subsequent judgment creditors, mechanics' lienors, and everyone except purchasers for value.

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher, 145 N. Y. 552, 27 L.R.A. 757, 40 N. E. 206; Re Howe, 1 Paige, 125, 19 Am. Dec. 395; Payne v. Wilson, 74 N. Y. 348; Hamilton Trust Co. v. Clemes, 163 N. Y. 423, 57 N. E. 614; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922.

The local law governs.

Hiscoek v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 38, 51 L. ed. 945, 952, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Bryant v. Swoford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 290, 53 L. ed. 997, 1002, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614.

The trustee does not have the rights of attachment or execution creditors.

Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. pp. 423, 450; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 132, 53 L. ed. 729, 733, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Re Chase, 59 C. C. A. 631, 124 Fed. 753.

The taking possession on October 25, 1907, was not a preference.

Sawyer v. Turpin, 91 U. S. 114, 23 L. ed. 235; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 94, 49 L. ed. 958, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

A valid pledge of securities is usually secret.

Stackhouse v. Holden, 66 App. Div. 426, 73 N. Y. Supp. 203.

A general creditor cannot attack a legal or equitable assignment of property of this character where there is no actual fraud.

Niles v. Mathusa, 162 N. Y. 546, 57 N. E. 184; McNeeley v. Welz, 166 N. Y. 124, 59 N. E. 697; Central Trust Co. v. West India Improv. Co. 169 N. Y. 314, 62 N. E. 387; Young v. Upson, 115 Fed. 192.

An equitable lien is not in the nature of a pledge. It is in the nature of a mortgage.

Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1233, 1234; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075.

Equity enforces the contract, not the pledge. A contract for a pledge, ineffective for want of delivery under it, is not void against creditors.

Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075. See also Payne v. Wilson, 74 N. Y. 348.

It is only in cases of fraud or express statutory inhibition that the rights of general creditors may be said to intervene in equity.

Parshad v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Payne v. Wilson, 74 N. Y. 348; McCaffrey v. Woodin, 65 N. Y. 459, 22 Am. Rep. 644; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher, 145 N. Y. 552, 27 L.R.A. 757, 40 N. E. 206; Niles v. Mathusa, 162 N. Y. 546, 57 N. E. 184; Hamilton Trust Co. v. Clemes, 163 N. Y. 423, 57 N. E. 614; National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481.

It is not necessary that appellees' title should have been enforceable in an action at law four months before bankruptcy. Nor was the test whether the appellees could have then maintained an action of replevin.

Ibid.

The statement of the learned district judge, that the property was not sufficiently identified to create an equitable lien, is hopelessly inconsistent with his statement that the agreement was and is valid in equity inter partes.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1234.

The enforcement of an equitable lien will not be denied because it is an infraction of the law of pledge.

Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504.

Appellees have a valid legal title against which the trustee cannot prevail. This legal title is not a voidable preference because it was exchanged for an equally valid equitable title.

Sawyer v. Turpin, 91 U. S. 114, 23 L. ed. 235; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567.

Under the New York law, such a contract concededly being enforceable in equity inter partes, it was enforceable against the trustee in bankruptcy, who only represented the bankrupts and their general creditors. The contract was not void against general creditors.

Humphrey v. Tatman, supra.

Messrs. Henry Wollman and Kurnal R. Babbitt filed a brief in support of a motion by John Gorlow for leave to intervene.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent preference. The circuit court of appeals reversed a decree of the district court for the plaintiffs, and dismissed the bill. 56 L. ed.

— L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535. It will be enough for our decision to state the following facts: The appellee was an English company and the bankrupts a New York firm, intimately connected with it, which for many years had drawn upon it. In February, 1903, the English house requested the New York firm to set aside securities for their drawing credit. The New York firm wrote on June 30 that they had that day placed in a separate package in their safe deposit vaults certain securities named, the package being marked, "Escrow for account of Kessler & Co., Limited, Manchester;" adding, "This escrow is intended as a protection against our long drawings against your good selves." This letter was acknowledged, and it was added, "If at any time you have the opportunity to realizing these securities or any part of them, you are at liberty to take them and to replace them by others of equal value, though in that case we should, of course, like to see rather better quality." In *December[96 of the same year the English house suggested a form of certificate as follows: "We certify that we have specially set aside and hold for your account, on this, the 31st day of December, '03, as security for the drawing credit which you accord us, the following securities. Name secs. and market value." This was conformed to and the New York house also entered the securities and all substitutions on their loan book. Substitutions were made from time to time and the English house notified. The securities always were either negotiable by delivery or indorsed in blank. They were marked and kept as stated in the letter upon a separate shelf of the New York firm's vault, and they never were removed except in 1905 and 1906, when they were taken to the office to be examined and checked off by representatives of the English company. Business went on in this way until the panic of 1907. On October 25 of that year, the stability of the New York firm being in doubt, it handed over the escrow securities to an agent of the English company then in New York, and he deposited them in a safe deposit vault in the name of the company. On November 8 a petition of bankruptcy was filed, and on November 27 the New York firm was adjudged bankrupt. Notwithstanding arguments to the contrary, it may be assumed that the arrangement between the parties was made in good faith and intended and believed to be valid, and, on the other hand, that, at the time of the change of custody on October 25, within four months of the petition, the New York firm was insolvent, and that the English company had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended if its rights began only on that date.

So far as the interpretation of the transaction is concerned, it seems to us that there is only one fair way to deal with it. The parties were business men, acting without lawyers, and in good faith attempting to create a present security out of specified bonds and stocks. Their *conduct should be construed as adopting whatever method consistent with the facts and with the rights reserved is most fitted to accomplish the result. If an express declaration of an equitable lien, or, again, a statement that the New York firm constituted itself the servant of the English company to maintain possession for the latter, or that it held upon certain trusts, or that a mortgage was intended, or any other form of words, would effect what the parties meant, we may assume that it was within the import of what was done, written, and said. So the question is whether anything in the situation of fact or the rights reserved prevents the intended creation of a right in rem, or, at least, on that is to be preferred to the claim of the trustee.

The bankruptcy law by itself does not avoid the transaction. Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 95, 45 L. ed. 956, 958, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567. A trustee in bankruptcy does not stand like an attaching creditor; he gets no lien by the mere fact of his appointment. York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 216 U. S. 134, 138, 54 L. ed. 418, 419, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368. The most obvious objection is that the continued physical power of the New York firm over the securities, and its right to withdraw and substitute, admittedly reserved, are inconsistent with a title or lien of the English house in any form. But the decisions of this court and of New York agree that there may be title in a stronger case than this. When a broker agrees to carry stock for a customer, he may buy stocks to fill several orders in a lump; he may increase his single purchase by stock of the same kind that he wants for himself; he may pledge the whole block thus purchased for what sum he likes, or deliver it all in satisfaction of later orders, and he may satisfy the earlier customer with any stock that he has on hand, or that he buys when the time for delivery comes. Yet, as he is bound to keep stock enough to satisfy his contracts, 98]as the New York *firm in this case was bound to substitute other security if it withdrew any, the customer is held to have such an interest that a delivery to him by an insolvent broker is not a preference. Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 52 L. ed. 835, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, 14 Ann. Cas. 981; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235. So, a depositor in a grain elevator may have a property in grain in a certain elevator, although the keeper is at liberty to mix his own or other grain with the deposit, and empty and refill the receptacle twenty times before making good his receipt to the depositor concerned.

Whether enough has been done to give a right of any kind in certain property is a question of more or less. See Union Trust Co. v. Wilson, 198 U. S. 530, 537, 49 L. ed. 1154, 1156, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766. In the case of ordinary goods and chattels, where, for instance, a man mortgages his stock in trade as it may be from time to time, retaining possession and full power to sell and replace or not, as he sees fit, it well may happen that the security fails. Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 267, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127. So, a general promise to give security in the future is not enough. But the present was a more limited and cautious dealing. It was confined to specific identified stocks and bonds on hand, and purported to give an absolute present right, qualified only by possible substitution and perhaps by a right of partial withdrawal of the remaining securities had risen sufficiently in value. It purported not to promise, but to transfer; and the subject-matter was not goods and chattels in the sense of the New York mortgage law, as we understand that law to be interpreted by the New York courts. The transaction was not void as against creditors, irrespective of attachment, as in Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Niles v. Mathusa, 162 N. Y. 546, 57 N. E. 184. There can be no doubt, as was said by the court below, that before the bankruptcy the English house had an equitable right, at least, to possession if it wanted it. While the phrase "equitable lien" *may not carry the reasoning further[99 or do much more than express the opinion of the court that the facts give a priority to the party said to have it, we are of opinion that the agreement created such a lien at least; or, in other words, that there is no rule of local or general law that takes from the transaction the effect it was intended to produce. Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 134, 53 L. ed. 729, 734, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466. When the English firm took the securities, it only exercised a right that had been created long before the bankruptcy, and in good faith.

Such we understand to be the law of New York; and in the absence of any controlling statute to the contrary, such we understand to be what the law should be. Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18. National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922.

Decree affirmed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BURLINGTON LUMBER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 99, 100.)

Commerce — state regulation of carrier — conflicting Federal regulation.

Congress has so completely taken control of the subject of railroad rate making and charging as to invalidate the provisions of a state statute so far as they penalize the refusal of a railway carrier to receive a tender of freight for transportation to a point on the line of another carrier outside the state, where the carrier had no rate for such shipment.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 236.]

Argued and submitted May 3, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to deview a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Alamance County, in that state, enforcing a state statute penalizing the refusal of a carrier to accept a tender of an interstate shipment. Reversed.

See same case below, 152 N. C. 70, 67 S. E. 167.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John K. Graves argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alfred P. Thom, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The test is not whether the state legislature might have enacted a valid statute under which the penalty in question could lawfully have been visited upon the plaintiff in error for the acts or omissions on account of which this case was instituted, but whether the state has enacted a law which, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, is valid as applied to all cases falling within it.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 144, 53 L. ed. 441, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Richmond v. Model Steam Laundry, 111 Va. 760, 69 S. E. 932; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 25 L. ed. 550; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 30 L. ed. 766, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 51 L. ed. 298, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Employer's Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 223 U. S. 1, ante, 327, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 530, 531, 50 L. ed. 597, 583, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 4 Ann. Cas. 1174.

The statute is invalid in that it seeks to regulate a subject the control of which has been assumed by Congress, and in that it imposes a burden upon interstate commerce.

Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 437, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

Assuming, for the sake of the argument, that legislation by Congress plays no part in this case, the North Carolina statute contravenes the commerce clause of the Constitution because it seeks to regulate, and, if enforced, will impose a burden upon, interstate commerce.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat, 1, 189, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 68, 73; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 150, 54 L. ed. 698, 705, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McAnna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. 56 L. ed.

Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baekus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 435, ante, 257, 259, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

The decisions of this court clearly lay down the principles to be applied in the determination of whether a statute of the sort here involved does or does not contravene the Federal Constitution. Among others, the following may be cited as showing where the line is to be drawn:

Statutes upheld.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Statutes condemned:

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 30 L. ed. 1187, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

The common-law duty of the carrier in respect to the receiving of goods for transportation is to receive them upon reasonable request therefor (See Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Swift, 12 Wall. 262, 270, 20 L. ed. 423, 428); and this is likewise the national policy in respect to the regulation of interstate commerce.

The statute cannot be saved from invalidity by the exercise or by the promised exercise by the judicial department of the state of a power analogous to the pardoning power vested in the Executive.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 134, 53 L. ed. 441, 442, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Roller v. Hardy, 176 U. S. 398, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

Mr. Lee S. Overman submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. W. H. Carroll was on the brief:

The duty to receive freight whenever tendered was a common-law duty.

Alsop v. Southern Exp. Co. 104 N. C. 1002

278, 6 L.R.A. 271, 10 S. E. 297; Garrison v. Southern R. Co. 150 N. C. 582, 64 S. E. 578.

Interstate commerce does not and cannot begin until the goods are accepted for shipment and a bill of lading issued.

Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 94, 47 L. ed. 399, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

The statutory enforcement, under penalty, of the common-law duty to accept freight whenever tendered, is not within the scope or terms of any act of Congress, and is neither an interference with nor a burden upon interstate commerce, but in aid of it.

Burlington Lumber Co. v. Southern R. Co. 152 N. C. 70, 67 S. E. 169. See also Harrill Bros. v. Southern R. Co. 144 N. C. 532, 57 S. E. 383.

Refusing to receive for shipment is an act done wholly within this state; it is not a part of the act of transportation.

Bagg v. Wilmington, C. & A. R. Co. 109 N. C. 279, 14 L.R.A. 596, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 803, 26 Am. St. Rep. 569, 14 S. E. 79; Currie v. Raleigh & A. A. L. R. Co. 135 N. C. 536, 47 S. E. 654; Walker v. Southern R. Co. 137 N. C. 168, 49 S. E. 84.

Notwithstanding the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the delegation to it by Congress of the control of certain matters, the state may, in the absence of express action by Congress or by such Commission, regulate, for the benefit of its citizens, local matters indirectly affecting interstate commerce.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Reid v. Southern R. Co. 150 N. C. 764, 64 S. E. 874, 17 Ann. Cas. 247.

The right of the state to establish regulations for the public-service corporations, and over business enterprises in which the owners, corporate or individual, have devoted their property to a public use, and to enforce these regulations by appropriate penalties, is now and has long been too firmly established to require or admit discussion.

Efland v. Southern R. Co. 146 N. C. 146, 59 S. E. 355; Harrill Bros. v. Southern R. Co. 144 N. C. 532, 57 S. E. 383; Stone v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 144 N. C. 220, 56 S. E. 932; Walker v. Southern R. Co. 137 N. C. 168, 49 S. E. 84; McGowan v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 95 N. C. 417; Branch v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 77 N. C. 347; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 261, 51 L. ed. 175, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 513, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 562, 43 L. ed. 554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 286, 42 L. ed. 1040, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Until some action by Congress, the legislation of a state, not directed against commerce, but relating to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, is of obligatory force within the territorial jurisdiction, although it may indirectly and remotely affect the operations of foreign or interstate commerce, or persons engaged in such commerce.

Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819.

When the subjects within the commercial power of Congress are local in their nature or operation, or constitute mere aids to commerce, the states may provide for their regulation and management until Congress intervenes and supersedes their action.

Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 28 L. ed. 959, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

The regulation of commerce applies to the subjects of commerce, and not to matters of internal police.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 1022, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 597, 43 L. ed. 297, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The Federal power to regulate commerce does not supersede the power of the states to legislate with reference to matters within the state which can be most advantageously regulated by the state itself, such as quarantine, inspection, health, internal communication, and the like.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

The independence of the commercial power and of the police power, and the limitations between them, must always be recognized and observed.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Boyer, 85 Fed. 434; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 93 Va. 749, 56 L. ed.

34 L.R.A. 109, 57 Am. St. Rep. 827, 24 S. E. 837.

Statutes passed under admitted police powers, and necessarily affecting interstate commerce, are not for that reason alone invalid, and, if not for some other reason invalid, will be respected until Congress acts upon the matter.

Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086.

In local matters concerning the public policy of a state, though incidentally affecting interstate commerce, regulations by the state in the exercise of its police powers are valid, in the absence of action by Congress.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The power, whether called police, governmental, or legislative, exists in each state, by appropriate enactments, not forbidden by the Constitution, to regulate the relative rights of all persons and corporations within its jurisdiction, and therefore to provide for the public convenience and the public good.

Ibid.; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 398, 46 L. ed. 611, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the [100 opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover penalties under a statute of North Carolina for refusal to receive goods for shipment. As the statute is the same that was held bad, so far as it concerns commerce among the states, in Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, and Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 444, ante, 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145, a short statement will be enough. On January 26, 1907, the Burlington Lumber Company tendered to the railway company at Burlington, North Carolina, certain machinery for shipment to Saginaw, Michigan, on a through bill of lading. Saginaw was not on the railway company's line, the company had no rates to Saginaw, and the agent had to delay in order to inquire of his superiors. The result was that the through bill of lading was not issued until April 3. The suit, as we have said, is for the penalty, and nothing else. The supreme court of the state decided against the railway on the same ground that it did in the decisions already reversed. In the circumstances it seems unnecessary to discuss the case more at length.

Judgment reversed.

101]*RAILROAD COMMISSION OF OHIO, Appt.,
v.

B. A. WORTHINGTON, Receiver of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 101-111.)

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals —diverse citizenship—Federal question.

1. An appeal lies to the appropriate Federal circuit court of appeals from a final decree of a circuit court in a suit in which jurisdiction was invoked both because the case was ancillary to a receivership suit which depended upon diverse citizenship, and upon grounds which involved alleged infractions of the Federal Constitution and rights secured thereby which might have warranted a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 727-742, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals
—jurisdiction below.

2. The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit brought by the receiver of a railway company appointed in another suit in that court, by which he seeks to enjoin the enforcement of an order of a state railroad commission, regulating freight rates, as interfering with interstate commerce, as depriving the owners of the receivership estate of their property without due process of law and without compensation, and as denying them the equal protection of the laws, was not dependent entirely upon diverse citizenship, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), making the decrees of the circuit courts of appeals final in such cases.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 780-784, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce—state regulation—rates —lake-cargo coal.

3. An unconstitutional attempt directly to regulate and control interstate commerce is made by an order of the Ohio Railroad Commission establishing a freight rate on "lake-cargo coal" billed from Ohio coal fields to Ohio ports on Lake Erie, where such rate is applicable only to such coal as is in fact placed upon vessels at those ports for carriage to points outside the state, and covers the actual placing of such coal upon the vessels, and the trimming or distributing of it in the holds so that the vessels may safely proceed on their interstate journey.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 46-48, 191-203, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 776 and 505.]

Argued April 15 and 16, 1912. Decided
May 27, 1912.

A PPEAL from, and PETITION for a Writ of Certiorari to, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Ohio Railroad Commission, fixing a rate on lake-cargo coal. Affirmed on appeal; petition for Writ of Certiorari denied. Also an

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, to review the decree of that court. Dismissed.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 85, 187 Fed. 965.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thomas H. Hogsett argued the cause, and, with Mr. Timothy S. Hogan, Attorney General of Ohio, and Messrs. Frank Davis, Jr., and Charles C. Marshall, filed a brief for appellant:

The movement in question was intra-state, because the contract of carriage between the shipper and the carrier called only for carriage between two points, both within the state of Ohio, and the delivery of the coal at the point of destination to the shipper or his order.

Cooke, Commerce Clause of Fed. Const. §§ 26, 55; Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 63 Iowa, 732, 18 N. W. 903; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Carrier v. Gordon, 21 Ohio St. 605; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Becker, 32 Fed. 849; Missonri & I. R. Tie & Lumber Co. v. Cape Girardeau & S. W. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 30; New Jersey Fruit Exch. v. Central R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 142, 1 Drinker. Interstate Commerce Act, 84; Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Whitehead, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 595, 26 S. W. 172; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; and Paducah v. East Tennessee Telegraph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333.

On appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Noble v. Chicago, St. P. R. Co. 1 Wis. R. Com. Rep. 767; Elbertson v. Chicago & St. P. R. Co. 2 Wis. R. Com. Rep. 593; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 43 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; United States v. Geddes, 65 C. C. A. 320, 131 Fed. 452; White v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 86 S. W. 962; Larabee Flour Mills Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 74 Kan. 808, 88 Pac. 72, 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 173 Ind. 469, 87 N. E. 1030, 90 N. E. 1011; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 266; Laning-Harris Coal & Grain Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 154; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Brooks, 84 Ark. 233, 105 S. W. 93; Augusta Brokerage Co. v. Central R. Co. 5 Ga. App. 187, 62 So. 996; Kurtz v. Pennsylvania Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 14; Dobbs v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 210; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 121 S. W. 256; Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 129 S. W. 198; Wood, Hagenbarth Cattle Co. v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 130 S. W. 857; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Taylor, 103 Tex. 367, 126 S. W. 1117, 1200; Wells-Higman Co. v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 19 Inters. Com. Rep. 487; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 180 Fed. 253; Re Transportation by Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 21 Inters. Com. Rep. 207.

But assuming that the commerce in question is interstate, and further assuming, contrary to the express provisions of the interstate commerce act, that Congress by that act authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate this traffic, then, if the state, prior to the passage of the act to regulate commerce, had power, as suggested by the court of appeals, to make the order attacked, the state still retained and retains that power, owing to the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission has never acted in the premises; for this court has expressly held that the mere delegation of power to the Interstate Commerce Commission is not such an act of Congress as will effect a change from state to Federal control.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

56 L. ed.

Messrs. W. M. Duncan and William B. Sanders argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The transportation of lake cargo coal from the No. 8 district is interstate commerce.

Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. ed. 310, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 183 Fed. 1005; Cutting v. Florida R. & Nav. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 665, 46 Fed. 641; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 564, 19 L. ed. 999, 1001; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 228, 52 L. ed. 754, 764, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; J. Rosenbaum Grain Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & T. R. Co. 130 Fed. 46; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 893; Ex parte Koehler, 30 Fed. 867; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 238, 30 L. ed. 888, 892, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Houston Direct Nav. Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 89 Tex. 1, 30 L.R.A. 713, 59 Am. St. Rep. 17, 32 S. W. 889; State v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 44 S. W. 542; State v. Southern Kansas R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 49 S. W. 252; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Fort Grain Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 72 S. W. 419; Porter v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 78 Ark. 182, 95 S. W. 453; Mattingly v. Pennsylvania Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 592; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, §§ 896, 898; Massillon Coal Min. Co. v. Railroad Commission, S. D. E. D. Ohio.

The lake-cargo rate applies to a service that is either wholly interstate or in part interstate, and the regulation of it falls within the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress, because rate-making is national in its character and admits of only one uniform system.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 577, 30 L. ed. 244, 251, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Kaeiser v. Illinois C. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 496, 18 Fed. 153; 4 Harvard L. Rev. 221, 223; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania. 122 U. S. 326, 338, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1202, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299-319, 13 L. ed. 996-1005; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 219, 38 L. ed. 962, 969, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 247, 30 L. ed. 888, 895, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 689, 31 L. ed. 841, 843, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; 9 Harvard L. Rev.

324, 336; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 893; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, §§ 1336, 1339.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The case originated in a bill filed in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Ohio, eastern division, against the Railroad Commission of Ohio and 103]*other parties, to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the commission, fixing and establishing a rate of 70 cents a ton on what is called "lake-cargo coal," transported from the No. 8 coal field, in eastern Ohio, to the ports of Huron and Cleveland, Ohio, on Lake Erie, for carriage thence by lake vessels. A permanent injunction was granted in the circuit court against the enforcement of the rate, on the ground that it was a regulation of interstate commerce. An appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, and that court affirmed the decree of the circuit court. 110 C. C. A. 85, 187 Fed. 965. From the decree of the circuit court of appeals an appeal was taken to this court. An appeal was also prayed and allowed from the circuit court directly to this court, being case No. 505 on the docket of this term, which is submitted with the present case. A petition for a writ of certiorari to review the decree of the circuit court of appeals has also been filed and submitted upon briefs.

The first question to be dealt with is one of jurisdiction. The question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals was raised and decided in that court, which held that it had jurisdiction of the case, also intimating that there were grounds of jurisdiction which might have warranted a direct appeal to this court, and that court allowed the present appeal to this court.

The argument that the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals is final is based upon the contention that, as Worthington, the complainant in the present case, was appointed receiver of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company in a suit in equity in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, eastern division, wherein jurisdiction depended upon diversity of citizenship, and since the jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in an ancillary proceeding is that of the original case, therefore, under the circuit court of appeals act, *the decree of the court[104 of appeals is final. It is undoubtedly true that in cases of intervention in foreclosure suits, where jurisdiction depends upon diverse citizenship, jurisdiction of the intervening petition is determined by that of the original case. It is equally true that petitions in original proceedings to enforce rights and to protect the exercise of the jurisdiction of the court take their jurisdiction from that of the original case (St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. ed. 752, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510), and the many previous cases in this court therein cited.

An examination of the bill in this case, which was filed under the authority of the circuit court, shows that the order of the commission was attacked, not only upon the ground that its findings were alleged to be unsupported by the testimony and to have been made upon improper consideration of the facts, but also because the order affected and interfered with interstate commerce, in which the complainant was engaged and over which the Railroad Commission of Ohio had no authority because of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. It further was alleged that the owners of the property constituting the receivership estate would be deprived thereof without due process of law; that they would be denied the equal protection of the laws, and that their property would be taken without compensation. It thus appears that jurisdiction was invoked, not only because the present case is ancillary to the receivership suit, which depended upon diverse citizenship, but upon grounds which involve alleged infractions of the Federal Constitution and rights secured thereby. The case was therefore one which might have been taken to the circuit court of appeals, and the fact that it involved grounds which might have warranted a direct appeal to this court did not deprive the circuit court of appeals of jurisdiction. American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

*The question, then, is: Is this one[105 of the cases made final in the circuit court of appeals by the act creating that court? The 6th section of that act provides that the judgment of the circuit court of appeals "shall be final in all cases in which the jurisdiction is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being aliens and citizens of the United States or citizens of different states; also in all cases arising under the patent laws, under the revenue laws, and under the criminal laws, and in admiralty cases." [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550.] In all other cases there is a right of review by this court if the matter in controversy exceeds $1,000. It is averred in the bill and admitted in the answer that the amount in dispute exceeds in value the sum of $5,000. The case is therefore one not made final in the circuit court of appeals, and the appeal to this court was properly allowed. Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 294, 53 L. ed. 801, 802, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Standard Paint Co. v. Trinidad Asphalt Mfg. Co. 220 U. S. 446, 460, 55 L. ed. 536, 543, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

Case No. 505 is dismissed and the petition for writ of certiorari is denied.

Coming now to the merits of the case, the circuit court found the facts to be as follows:

"It appears that bituminous coal, such as is mined in the No. 8 district, is classified by the complainant, for tariff purposes, as (a) railway fuel, being coal sold to railroad companies; (b) lake-cargo coal, that is, coal intended for shipment by lake to points in the northwest; and (c) commercial coal, comprising coal for commercial and domestic use, not included in the first two classes.

"The No. 8 coal district of Ohio is situated in Jefferson, Harrison, and Belmont counties, and the members of the Pittsburgh Vein Operators' Association of Ohio are interested in mining coal in that district. The traffic is large, about 400,000 tons of [106]lake-cargo coal being shipped over *the complainant's railroad from that district in 1909, and transhipped by vessel to points in the northwest.

"At and prior to the time of the complaint being lodged with the Railroad Commission by the Operators' Association, the tariff rate in force on the complainant's railroad on lake-cargo coal from the No. 8 district to Huron and Cleveland, Ohio, f. o. b. vessel, was 90 cents per ton. The rate covers, in addition to the rail transportation, the service of unloading the coal from the cars into vessels and trimming it in the holds of the vessels, so that they can safely proceed.

"The rate on commercial coal to Huron or Cleveland is $1 per ton.

"The vessels for lake-cargo coal are generally furnished by the operators, but the coal is sometimes sold f. o. b. vessel, the title to the coal in that case passing to 56 L. ed.

the purchaser upon being properly loaded into the vessel.

"The coal in question is shipped from the mines to Huron or Cleveland, principally Huron, where the complainant has large dock facilities and expensive machinery and appliances for unloading coal into vessels, during the season of navigation, simply marked 'Lake coal,' consigned to the operator, or to some office employee whose name is used as a mere matter of convenience for the purpose of designating a particular grade of coal. The operator notifies the railroad that at a certain time a vessel will be at Huron to load so many tons of a particular grade of coal. The railroad then picks up such cars of the operator's coal as are necessary to fill the cargo, and moves them onto the dock alongside of the vessel, loads the vessel, trims or distributes the coal properly in her hold, and furnishes the shipper with a cargo statement showing the car numbers and weights and total tons of coal in the vessel, on which information the bill of lading for the vessel shipment is made out.

"It appears that all the coal shipped at the lake-cargo *rate remains on the [107 cars of the complainant until unloaded into a vessel, unless it should be diverted en route and devoted to some other purpose, but in that case the lake-cargo rate does not apply. For instance, if it should be diverted to commercial use at Huron, the rate on commercial coal, which is $1 a ton, would govern.

"There is testimony to the effect that when the coal leaves the times it is not known in what vessel it will be loaded, nor to what particular ultimate destination it will go; and that sometimes such coal is sold and vessels arranged for after the coal is at Huron, but it is subject to demurrage charge if it remains on the cars beyond a specified time.

"All coal thus loaded in vessels is, and must practically be, carried to points in other states—or to Canada. The lake ports in Ohio receive coal by rail from interior points, but not by boat from other Ohio ports. It might be that a quantity of coal, so small as to be negligible, is unloaded on one of the Ohio islands in Lake Erie, but no substantial importance is claimed for this circumstance nor could be given to it."

This finding of fact was practically approved and adopted in the circuit court of appeals, and we have no occasion to dissent from its correctness.

The question thus presented is: Was the Railroad Commission of Ohio authorized to put in force the rate in question as to lake-cargo coal? It is not necessary to review the cases in this court which have settled beyond peradventure that the national government has exclusive authority to regulate interstate commerce under the Constitution of the United States; nor to do more than reaffirm the equally well-settled proposition that over interstate commerce transportation rates the state has no jurisdiction, and that an attempt to regulate such rates by the state or under its authority is void. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 108]416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. *And an order made by a state commission under assumed authority of the state, which directly burdens or regulates interstate commerce, will be enjoined. McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

The question is, then, one of fact. Does the transportation which the rate prescribed by the Railroad Commission of Ohio covers constitute interstate commerce?

It is true that the shipper transports the coal ordinarily upon bills of lading to himself, or to another for himself, at Huron on Lake Erie. The so-called "lake-cargo coal" is necessarily shipped beyond Huron. If it stops there, another and higher rate applies. Practically all of it is put on vessels for carriage beyond the state, usually to upper lake ports, and then, and only then, the 70 cent rate fixed by the commission applies. This 70 cent rate covers the transportation of the coal to Huron, the placing of it on board vessels, and, if necessary, trimming it for the continuance of its interstate journey. It is true, as argued by the learned counsel for the commission, that this coal may be accumulated in large quantities at Huron, and only taken out of the accumulated lots from time to time, when it is to be put upon vessels and shipped out of the state, but it must always be remembered that this 70 cent rate applies solely to such coal as is in fact placed upon vessels for carriage to beyond the state points; and, as the circuit court said, the substance of things is not changed by the fact that a small part may be unloaded at one of the Ohio islands in Lake Erie. The situation then comes to this: that the rate put in force is applicable only to coal which is to be carried from the mine in Ohio to the lake, there placed upon vessels, and thence carried to upper lake ports beyond the state. By every fair test the transportation of this coal from the mine to the upper lake ports is an interstate carriage, intended by the parties to be such, and the rate fixed by the commission, which is in controversy here, is applicable *alone[109 to coal which is thus, from the beginning to the end of its transportation, in interstate carriage, and such rate is intended to and does cover an integral part of that carriage, the transportation from the mine to the Lake Erie port, the placing upon the vessel, and the trimming or distributing in the hold, if required, so that the vessel may complete such interstate carriage.

Much stress is laid in argument for the commission upon the fact that the coal is billed only to Huron, and it is said that in that aspect of the case it is controlled by Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360. There it was sought to hold a railroad company upon a shipment of corn from Texarkana to Goldthwaite, Texas, for a violation of the regulations of the state railroad commission applicable to intrastate carriers. The company contended that the shipment was in fact an interstate carriage from Hudson, South Dakota, to Goldthwaite, Texas. The facts showed that the corn was carried upon a bill of lading from Hudson to Texarkana, and that afterwards, some five days later, it was shipped from Texarkana to Goldthwaite, both points in the state of Texas. This was held to be an intrastate shipment unaffected by the fact that the shipper intended to reship the corn from Texarkana to Goldthwaite, for, as this court held, the corn had been carried to Texarkana upon a contract for interstate shipment, and the reshipment five days later upon a new contract was an independent intrastate shipment. It is evident from this statement of facts that the case is quite different from the one under consideration. There a new and independent contract for intrastate shipment was made, the interstate transportation having been completely performed; here a rate is fixed on that part of an interstate carriage which includes the actual placing of the coal into vessels ready to be carried beyond the state destination.

*That the test of through billing is[110 not necessarily determinative is shown in the late case of Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. ed. 310, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279. In that case Young bought cottonseed cakes at various points in Texas and shipped them to himself at the port of Galveston, where they were prepared for export. This court held that such transportation was within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that the special privileges given by the Southern Pacific Terminal Company to Young on the wharf at Galveston were undue preferences in his favor. As to the fact that the shipments were not made on through bills of lading, but were to Galveston from other places in Texas, this court said:

"It makes no difference, therefore, that the shipments of the products were not made on through bills of lading, or whether their initial point was Galveston or some other place in Texas. They were all destined for export, and by their delivery to the Galveston, Harrisburg, & San Antonio Railway they must be considered as having been delivered to a carrier for transportation to their foreign destination, the terminal company being a part of the railway for such purpose. The case, therefore, comes under Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475, where it is said that goods are in interstate, and necessarily as well in foreign, commerce, when they have 'actually started in the course of transportation to another state, or delivered to a carrier for transportation.'"

It is contended that this transportation of the coal under the rate fixed by the Railroad Commission is not within the power and authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission under § 1 of the act to regulate commerce, which makes the provisions of the act inapplicable to the transportation of property wholly within one state and not shipped to or from a foreign country, from or to a state or territory; and, 111] furthermore, that a transportation *of the character here in question is only within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission when it is a transportation partly by railroad and partly by water, when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment; and therefore that the subject-matter in question is left within the state jurisdiction. On the other hand, it is contended that this transportation is within the jurisdiction of the Commission under the act to regulate commerce. It is enough to now hold, as we do, that the establishing of the rate in question is an attempt to regulate interstate commerce, and is therefore beyond the power of the state or a commission assuming to act under its authority.

We therefore reach the conclusion that, under the facts shown in this case, the Railroad Commission, in fixing the rate of 70 cents for the transportation above described, attempted to directly regulate and control interstate commerce, and, for that reason, the enforcement of its order should be enjoined.

Decree affirmed.

ALBERT S. BIGELOW, Plff. in Err.,
v.

OLD DOMINION COPPER MINING &
SMELTING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 111-142.)

Judgment — estoppel — joint tortfeasor — participation in suit.

1. The assistance by one of two joint tortfeasors in the defense of a suit against the other, because of interest in the decision as a judicial precedent which might influence the decision in his own case, will not create an estoppel by the judgment as to him.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 775-780, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — full faith and credit — joint tortfeasors.

2. A decree of a Federal circuit court sitting in New York, dismissing a suit in personam brought against one of two joint tortfeasors, is not denied full faith and credit by the refusal of a Massachusetts court to give it effect as a bar to a suit upon the same facts against the other, who was not a resident of New York, and not a party to the first suit, where such refusal was rested upon the ground that, under the general law,—whatever might be the rule in New York,—the relationship between two joint tortfeasors was not such as to make the one not sued a party by either privity or representation, this being a jurisdictional question which the Massachusetts court was at liberty to determine for itself.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 191 and 192.]

Argued March 5 and 6, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review decrees which enforced the liability to a corporation of one of its two joint promoters for secret profits made out of the sale of property to the corporation, notwithstanding a decree of a Federal court, sitting in New York, in favor of the other promoter, which was pleaded in bar. Affirmed.

NOTE.—As to the effect of a judgment against one joint tortfeasor upon the liability of the other—see note to Blackman v. Simpson, 58 L.R.A. 410.

As to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L.R.A. 79; Cumington v. Belchertown, 4 L.R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; and Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

See same case below, 203 Mass. 159, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 89 N. E. 193.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Spooner argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George Rublee and Joseph P. Cotton, Jr., filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The maxim, Interest reipublicæ ut sit finis litium, which is as old as the law, is the foundation of the law of res judicata.

Jeter v. Hewitt, 22 How. 352, 364, 16 L. ed. 345, 348; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 662, 18 L. ed. 427, 428; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 268, 269, 35 L. ed. 464, 468, 469, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Marsh v. Pier, 4 Rawle, 273, 26 Am. Dec. 131.

When a judgment from another state is presented to a court, the only open question in regard to that judgment is whether the court which rendered it had jurisdiction. If it had, then exactly the same effect must be given to the judgment that it has in the state in which it was rendered.

Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

The question of jurisdiction is not to be determined by the law of Massachusetts.

Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 231, 48 L. ed. 417, 419, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 48 L. ed. 373, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.

The question of jurisdiction must be determined by this court in accordance with principles of general jurisprudence by which the Massachusetts rule that estoppel by judgment depends upon mutuality of estoppel is not recognized.

Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 63; Krolik v. Curry, 148 Mich. 214, 111 N. W. 761; State use of Hempstead v. Coste, 36 Mo. 437, 88 Am. Dec. 148; Hesselbach v. St. Louis, 179 Mo. 505, 78 S. W. 1009; Delaplain v. Kansas City, 109 Mo. App. 107, 83 S. W. 71; Montfort v. Hughes, 3 E. D. Smith, 591; Indiana Nitroglycerine & Torpedo Co. v. Lippincott Glass Co. 165 Ind. 361, 75 N. E. 649; Hayes v. Chicago Teleph. Co. 218 Ill. 414, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 764, 75 N. E. 1003; Bradley v. Rosenthal, 154 Cal. 420, 129 Am. St. Rep. 171, 97 Pac. 875; Logan v. Atlantic & C. Air Line R. Co. 82 S. C. 518, 64 S. E. 515; Rookard v. Atlantic & C. Air Line R. Co. 84 S. C. 190, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 435, 137 Am. St. Rep. 839, 65 S.

E. 1047; Spencer v. Dearth, 43 Vt. 98; Atkinson v. White, 60 Me. 396.

The same question as to jurisdiction would arise if the plaintiff should claim that a decision by a New York court that the Lewisohn decree was a bar to a suit by the plaintiff against Bigelow was not due process of law. In that case there could be no claim that the question of jurisdiction should be determined by the law of Massachusetts.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.

If the Massachusetts doctrine as to jurisdiction is correct, a judgment in favor of a principal debtor in Iowa which would bar an action against a surety there, or in any of the states where the general rule prevails, would not have that effect if the surety were sued in Arkansas, because the courts in Arkansas would be at liberty to hold that, by the law of Arkansas, the Iowa court had no jurisdiction to protect the surety by its judgment.

2 Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, § 572; Jackson v. Griswold, 4 Hill, 522; Ames v. Maelay, 14 Iowa, 281; Michener v. Springfield Engine & Thresher Co. 142 Ind. 130, 31 L.R.A. 59, 40 N. E. 679; Hill v. Morse, 61 Me. 541; State v. Parker, 72 Ala. 181; Crum v. Wilson. 61 Miss. 233; Gill v. Morris, 11 Heisk. 614. 27 Am. Rep. 744; Brown v. Bradford, 30 Ga. 927; State Bank v. Robinson, 13 Ark. 214.

The adoption of the Massachusetts doctrine would have a very disturbing effect upon the settled law as to the statutory liability of stockholders. The general rule is that where the statute requires the recovery of a judgment against the corporation as a condition precedent to the enforcement by a creditor of the statutory liability of stockholders, such a judgment against the corporation is conclusive in an action against a stockholder who was not a party to the action against the corporation. In New York, however, the law is otherwise.

McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155; Stephens v. Fox, 83 N. Y. 317.

Under the law of Kansas a former judgment against a corporation is res judicata as to the existence of a corporate debt in an action to enforce the statutory liability of a stockholder. Suppose a stockholder of a Kansas corporation to be sued in a New York court by a creditor who had recovered judgment against the corporation in Kansas, and had had execution returned unsatisfied. Could the New York court decide that the Kansas judgment was not res judicata as to the defendant stockholder who was not a party to the former action in Kansas?

Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

By the law and usage of the state of New York the claim asserted in the present suits against Bigelow, had they been pending in New York, would have been barred by the decree of the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York in favor of Lewisohn's executors.

Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401; People v. Stephens, 51 How. Pr. 235; Featherston v. Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road, 71 Hun, 109, 24 N. Y. Supp. 603; Woodhouse v. Duncan, 106 N. Y. 527, 13 N. E. 334; Bates v. Stanton, 1 Duer, 79.

In New York there is no absolute rule of law that estoppel by judgment must be mutual.

Tyng v. Clarke, 9 Hun, 269; Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 137; Jackson v. Griswold, 4 Hill, 522.

Trustee and cestui que trust are in privity with one another, and a judgment for or against a trustee is binding upon the beneficiary of the trust, although the latter was not a party to the action in which it was rendered.

Re Straut, 126 N. Y. 201, 27 N. E. 259; Bracken v. Atlantic Trust Co. 36 App. Div. 67, 55 N. Y. Supp. 506, affirmed in 167 N. Y. 510, 82 Am. St. Rep. 731, 60 N. E. 772; Russell v. Lasher, 4 Barb. 232.

Where an agent in a transaction is sued after the termination of his agency, and, upon a trial of the merits, the issue is determined against the plaintiff, the principal, though not a party to the suit, can avail himself of the judgment as a bar, when he is sued by the same plaintiff on the same cause of action.

Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401. See also Castle v. Noyes, 14 N. Y. 329; Featherston v. Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road, 71 Hun, 109, 24 N. Y. Supp. 603.

If the decree in the Lewisohn suit had been against the defendants, and they had satisfied it, they would have had a right to contribution against Bigelow, who, having had notice of the former suit, and having participated in the defense thereof, would have been bound by the decree in a proceeding against him by the former defendants for contribution.

Jacobs v. Pollard, 10 Cush. 288, 57 Am. Dec. 105; Palmer v. Wick Steam Shipping Co. [1894] A. C. 318, 6 Reports, 245, 71 L. T. N. S. 163; Armstrong County v. Clarion County, 66 Pa. 218, 5 Am. Rep. 368; First Nat. Bank v. Avery Planter Co. 69 Neb. 329, 111 Am. St. Rep. 541, 95 56 L. ed.

N. W. 622; Eaton & P. Co. v. Mississippi Valley Trust Co. 123 Mo. App. 117, 100 S. W. 551; Coventry v. Barton, 17 Johns. 142, 8 Am. Dec. 376; Stone v. Hooker, 9 Cow. 154; Getty v. Devlin, 70 N. Y. 511, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 119.

The right to contribution which Lewisohn's executors would have had against Bigelow in case the decree had been against them gave Bigelow a legal interest to defend in the Lewisohn suit.

Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Campania Transatlantica, Espanola, 144 N. Y. 663, 39 N. E. 360.

As he had notice of the suit and participated in the defense, he was, under the law of New York, a privy to the decree, and would have been bound by it, if it had been the other way. In a suit by Lewisohn's executors against him for contribution, Bigelow would have been concluded by the former decree against them.

Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Compania Transatlantica Espanola, 134 N. Y. 461, 30 Am. St. Rep. 685, 31 N. E. 987; Castle v. Noyes, 14 N. Y. 329; Carleton v. Lombard, A. & Co. 149 N. Y. 137, 43 N. E. 422.

A decree upon demurrer, if it goes to the merits, is as conclusive in bar as one founded upon a hearing of evidence.

Yates v. Utica Bank, 206 U. S. 181, 51 L. ed. 1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646 Northern P. R. Co. v. Slaght, 105 U. S. 122, 130, 51 L. ed. 738, 741, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 124 U. S. 225, 31 L. ed. 411, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 533, 23 L. ed. 418; Alley v. Nott, 111 U. S. 472, 28 L. ed. 491, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Bouchaud v. Dias, 3 Denio, 244; People v. Stephens, 51 How. Pr. 235.

The decree of a Federal court in New York is entitled to the same faith and credit in every state of the Union as a decree of a state court of New York.

Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 645, 44 L. ed. 619, 621, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 188, 49 L. ed. 1008, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

It is also settled that a decree of a Federal court in a state must be given the same effect by the courts of that state as it has in the Federal court.

Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

The fact that the suits in Massachusetts were begun before the commencement of the Lewisohn suit, in which the decree relied on as a bar was rendered, is not material.

Mitchell v. First Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; United States v. Dewey, 6 Biss. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 14,956; Nugent v. Philadelphia Traction Co. 87 Fed. 251; Rogers v. Odell, 39 N. H. 452; Sharon v. Hill, 26 Fed. 344.

Messrs. Charles H. Tyler, Owen D. Young, Burton E. Eames, and William C. Rice also filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The fact that the Lewisohn decree is a decree of a Federal court, and not of a New York state court, does not detract from its efficacy as a bar, as it is well settled that the judgment of a Federal court, sitting within the state of New York, is entitled in another state to the same faith and credit as the decree of a state court of New York; certainly when the Federal jurisdiction is based on diverse citizenship.

Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 38 L. ed. 861, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 134, 135, 22 L. ed. 588, 590, 591; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Long Island Loan & T. Co. 172 U. S. 493, 43 L. ed. 528, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

The Lewisohn decree is entitled to the same faith and credit and to the same force and effect in the state of New York as if it were a decree of one of the state courts of New York.

Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 147, 30 L. ed. 614, 617, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 676, 38 L. ed. 861, 863, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Steinbach v. Relief F. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 498, 33 Am. Rep. 655; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Compañia Transatlantica Española, 134 N. Y. 461, 30 Am. St. Rep. 685, 31 N. E. 987.

The fact that the Lewisohn decree was rendered upon a demurrer does not in any way detract from its efficacy as a bar to these proceedings, inasmuch as the demurrer went to the merits, and the decision shows that the bill was dismissed for want of equity.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Slaght, 205 U. S. 122, 130, 51 L. ed. 738, 741, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 124 U. S. 225, 31 L. ed. 411, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416; Yates v. Utica Bank, 206 U. S. 181, 183, 184, 51 L. ed. 1015-1017, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Wrightman v. Shankland, 18 How. Pr. 79; Alley v. Nott, 111 U. S. 472, 28 L. ed. 491, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Bouchaud v. Dias, 3 Denio, 238; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 234, 46 L. ed. 157, 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 124, 45 L. ed. 776, 779, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 688, 39 L. ed. 859, 862, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 205.

The question of the force and effect of the decree by law or usage in New York will be determined by this court on the evidence introduced below.

Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 43, 57, 52 L. ed. 95, 101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Harding v. Harding, 198 U. S. 317, 331, 335, 49 L. ed. 1066, 1072, 1074, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 340, 47 L. ed. 389, 843, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Williamson, 189 U. S. 122, 127, 47 L. ed. 735, 740, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

Under the full faith and credit clause such effect must be given the Lewisohn decree as it has by law or usage in the state of New York, not only as regards what is decided, but also as to who is entitled to the benefit.

Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 223, 49 L. ed. 1023, 1026, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, 3 Ann. Cas. 1084; Needham v. Thayer, 147 Mass. 536, 18 N. E. 429; Mitchell v. First Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Hekking v. Pfaff, 82 Fed. 403; Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 43, 52 L. ed. 95, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

This result cannot be defeated by the technical rule, peculiar to Massachusetts, which denies to alleged joint tortfeasors the benefits of a former adjudication as a bar.

Renaud v. Abbott, 116 U. S. 277, 29 L. ed. 629, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Laing v.

Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 52 L. ed. 1039, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641.

The Lewisohn decree, being entered in an action where the subject-matter of the controversy was the same, determined not merely that Lewisohn was under no liability, but also that the defendant in error had no cause of action arising out of the transaction in question.

People v. Stephens, 51 How. Pr. 235, affirmed in 71 N. Y. 527; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 408; Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 63; Spencer v. Dearth, 43 Vt. 98; Williams v. McGrade, 13 Minn. 46, Gil. 39; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; Sonnentheil v. Moody, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 56 S. W. 1001; Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. 21 C. C. A. 390, 41 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 350, affirmed in 172 U. S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Sonnentheil v. Texas Guarantee & T. Co. 23 Tex. Civ. App. 436, 56 S. W. 143; Atkinson v. White, 60 Me. 398; Hill v. Bain, 15 R. I. 75, 2 Am. St. Rep. 873, 23 Atl. 44; Ferrers v. Arden, Cro. Eliz. pt. 2, p. 668; Mitchell v. First Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; 2 Black, Judgm. 1902, 2d ed. § 781.

There is no requirement of mutuality of estoppel in such cases as the present, where the plaintiff, after failing on the merits to maintain one suit, brings a second suit upon the same cause of action, against another defendant, who acted jointly with the first defendant in the transaction. The reason for the general rule that estoppels must be mutual fails in such cases, and they constitute a recognized exception to the rule.

Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 68; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401; Spencer v. Dearth, 43 Vt. 98; Williams v. McGrade, 13 Minn. 46, Gil. 39; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; Sonnentheil v. Moody, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 56 S. W. 1001; 2 Black, Judgm. 1902, 2d ed. § 781; Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109; Atkinson v. White, 60 Me. 396; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. 35; Thomas v. Hubbell, 15 N. Y. 405, 69 Am. Dec. 619; Jackson v. Griswold, 4 Hill, 522; Woodhouse v. Dancan, 106 N. Y. 527, 13 N. E. 334; Carter v. Bowe, 41 Hun, 516; Featherston v. Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road, 71 Hun, 109, 24 N. Y. Supp. 603; Gleason v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. 56 L. ed.

Co. 189 N. Y. 100, 81 N. E. 777; Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 137; McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155; Moss v. McCullough, 5 Hill, 131; Tyng v. Clarke, 9 Hun, 269; Calkins v. Allerton, 3 Barb. 171; Castle v. Noyes, 14 N. Y. 329; Doremus v. Root, 23 Wash. 710, 54 L.R.A. 656, 63 Pac. 572; Emery v. Fowler, 39 Me. 326, 63 Am. Dec. 627; People v. Stephens, 51 How. Pr. 235.

This exception to the rule of mutuality is also expressly applied in cases of joint tortfeasors, or where the liability claimed to exist is a liability ex delicto.

Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 68; Atkinson v. White, 60 Me. 396; Williams v. McGrade, 13 Minn. 46, Gil. 39; Sonnentheil v. Moody, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 56 S. W. 1001; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401; Ferrers v. Arden, Cro. Eliz. pt. 2, p. 668; 1 Greenl. Ev. p. 663; Featherston v. Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road, 71 Hun, 109, 24 N. Y. Supp. 603; Biggs v. Benger, 2 Ld. Raym. 1372; Marks v. Sullivan, 8 Utah, 410, 20 L.R.A. 590, 32 Pac. 668; New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Jopes, 142 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 919, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Hill v. Bain, 15 R. I. 75, 2 Am. St. Rep. 873, 23 Atl. 44; Doremus v. Root, 23 Wash. 710, 54 L.R.A. 649, 63 Pac. 572; Stevieck v. Northern P. R. Co. 39 Wash. 501, 81 Pac. 999; Anderson v. Fleming, 160 Ind. 597, 66 L.R.A. 119, 67 N. E. 443; Anderson v. West Chicago Street R. Co. 200 Ill. 329, 65 N. E. 717; Muntz v. Algiers & G. Street R. Co. 116 La. 236, 40 So. 688; McGinnis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 200 Mo. 347, 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 880, 118 Am. St. Rep. 661, 98 S. W. 590, 9 Ann. Cas. 656; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. McManigal, 73 Neb. 580, 103 N. W. 305, 107 N. W. 243; 2 Black, Judgm. 1902, 2d ed. § 781.

These cases are clearly to be distinguished from cases where the facts alleged, if proved, would amount to a tort, since it has been decided in the Lewisohn case that all the facts set up do not state a cause of action.

Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. v. Lewisohn, 210 U. S. 206, 52 L. ed. 1025, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

Cases of promoters' liability in any event involve only fiduciary obligation, and in the absence of moral turpitude there is a right to contribution between promoters.

Jacobs v. Pollard, 10 Cush. 287, 57 Am. Dec. 105; Andrews v. Murray, 33 Barb. 354; Peck v. Ellis, 2 Johns. Ch. 136; Kolb v. National Surety Co. 176 N. Y. 233, 68 N. E. 247; Getty v. Devlin, 54 N. Y. 403, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 29; Insurance Press v. Montauk Fire Detecting Wire Co. 103 App. Div. 472, 93 N. Y. Supp. 134; Re Cape Breton Co. L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 229, L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 795, L. R. 12 App. Cas. 652, 57 L. J. Ch. N. S. 552, 57 L. T. N. S. 773, 36 Week. Rep. 641; Arkwright v. Newbold, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 320, 50 L. J. Ch. N. S. 372, 44 L. T. N. S. 393, 29 Week. Rep. 455; Loudenslager v. Woodbury Heights Land Co. 58 N. J. Eq. 556, 43 Atl. 671; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Grant, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 940, 40 L. T. N. S. 804.

There is no jurisdictional or other constitutional objection to giving effect to the Lewisohn decree as an estoppel in favor of the plaintiff in error in Massachusetts.

Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401.

The jurisdiction assumed by the foreign court is not to be denied unless it falls short of the standard of jurisdiction as determined by the general and settled principles of general jurisprudence.

D'Arey v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 175, 176, 13 L. ed. 648, 652, 653; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 289, 32 L. ed. 239, 243, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Renaud v. Abbott, 116 U. S. 277, 288, 29 L. ed. 629, 632, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. McDonough, 204 U. S. 8, 51 L. ed. 345, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 46, 38 L. ed. 896, 902, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

There is sufficient privity between Bigelow and the Lewisohn defendants to entitle Bigelow to the benefit of said decree, not only under the law of New York, but under the general principles of law.

(1) The cause of action in the Lewisohn suit was based upon the identical subject-matter and transaction as in the cases at bar. Bigelow was therefore privy with Lewisohn in the act complained of.

Ferrers v. Arden. Cro. Eliz. pt. 2, p. 668.

(2) The defendant in error, by its own choice, both of forum and of remedy, has litigated and determined that the title to the shares of stock which it claims were wrongfully issued to Bigelow and Lewisohn was rightfully in them, free from any interest or equity in its favor.

Bates v. Stanton. 1 Duer, 79; Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. ed. 1065, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Bush v. Knox, 2 Hun, 578; Ferrers v. Arden. Cro. Eliz. pt. 2, p. 668; 1 Greenl. Ev. p. 663; Williams v. McGrade, 13 Minn. 46, Gil. 39; Atkinson v. White, 60 Me. 396; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401.

(3) Lewisohn was the trustee, agent, and representative of Bigelow in the transaction complained of.

King v. Barnes, 109 N. Y. 267, 16 N. E. 332; Wilcox v. Pratt, 125 N. Y. 688, 25 N. E. 1091; Getty v. Devlin, 54 N. Y. 403, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 29, 70 N. Y. 504, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 119; Castle v. Noyes, 14 N. Y. 329; Tyng v. Clarke, 9 Hun, 269; Carter v. Bowe, 41 Hun, 516; Re Straut, 126 N. Y. 201, 27 N. E. 259; Bracken v. Atlantic Trust Co. 36 App. Div. 71, 55 N. Y. Supp. 506, 42 App. Div. 621, 59 N. Y. Supp. 1099, 167 N. Y. 510, 82 Am. St. Rep. 731, 60 N. E. 772; Freeman, Judgm. § 173; Lawrence v. Schaefer, 19 Misc. 239, 42 N. Y. Supp. 992, affirmed in 20 App. Div. 80, 46 N. Y. Supp. 719; Mead v. Mitchell, 17 N. Y. 210, 72 Am. Dec. 455; Parker v. Paine, 37 Misc. 768, 76 N. Y. Supp. 942; Seymour v. Smith, 114 N. Y. 481, 11 Am. St. Rep. 683, 21 N. E. 1042; Duncan v. China Mut. Ins. Co. 129 N. Y. 237, 29 N. E. 76; Coffin v. Grand Rapids Hydraulic Co. 136 N. Y. 655, 32 N. E. 1076; Hoffman House v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 348, 65 N. E. 169; Stearns v. Shepard & M. Lumber Co. 91 App. Div. 49, 86 N. Y. Supp. 391; Perry, Tr. 5th ed. ¶ 328; Western R. Co. v. Nolan, 48 N. Y. 513; 1 Greenl. Ev. p. 523; Lichty v. Lewis, 63 Fed. 535, affirmed in 23 C. C. A. 159, 44 U. S. App. 678, 77 Fed. 111; Kelly v. Forty-second Street M. & St. N. Ave. R. Co. 37 App. Div. 500, 55 N. Y. Supp. 1096; Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 23 L. ed. 843; Re O'Hara, 95 N. Y. 403, 47 Am. Rep. 53; Featherston v. Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road, 71 Hun, 109, 24 N. Y. Supp. 603.

(4) Bigelow participated in the defense of the Lewisohn suit with the knowledge of all parties.

Carleton v. Lombard, A. & Co. 149 N. Y. 137, 43 N. E. 422; Van Koughnet v. Denic, 68 Hun, 179, 22 N. Y. Supp. 823; Woodhouse v. Duncan, 106 N. Y. 528, 13 N. E. 334; Demarest v. Darg, 32 N. Y. 281; Leavitt v. Wolcott, 95 N. Y. 221; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Campana Transatlantica Espanola, 144 N. Y. 663, 39 N. E. 360; Port Jervis v. First Nat. Bank, 96 N. Y. 557; Heiser v. Hatch, 86 N. Y. 614; Kelly v. Forty-second Street M. & St. N. Ave. R. Co. 37 App. Div. 506, 55 N. Y. Supp. 1096; Prescott v. Le Conte, 83 App. Div. 487, 82 N. Y. Supp. 411, affirmed in 178 N. Y. 585, 70 N. E. 1108; Bush v. Knox, 2 Hun, 578; Fake v. Smith, 2 Abb. App. Dec. 76; Konitsky v. Meyer, 49 N. Y. 571; Stedman v. Patchin, 34 Barb. 218; Henek v. Barnes, 84 Hun, 546, 32 N. Y. Supp. 840; Australian Knitting Co. v. Gormly, 148 Fed. 96; Rumford Chemical Works v. Hygienic Chemical Co.

86 C. C. A. 416, 159 Fed. 436; Hauke v. Cooper, 48 C. C. A. 144, 108 Fed. 924.

The Lewisohn decree is also entitled, in the courts of Massachusetts, to the same force and effect as it has in the Federal court, and in that court it would be a bar to these actions.

Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. v. Lewisohn, 210 U. S. 206, 52 L. ed. 1025, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 63; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co. 7 Fed. 401.

The full faith and credit clause requires full faith and credit to the statutory and common law of other states as well as to their judgments.

Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Smithsonian Inst. v. St. John, 214 U. S. 19, 28, 53 L. ed. 892, 897, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 340, 47 L. ed. 839, 843, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Miller, 221 U. S. 408, 415, 416, 55 L. ed. 789, 796, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 534.

Messrs. Louis D. Brandeis and Edward F. McClennen argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

There is no failure to give full faith and credit to the decree dismissing the bill of complaint against Lewisohn's executors in deciding, however erroneously, that Bigelow — not a party — acquired no rights under it.

The consequences resulting to a third person, claiming privity, from such a decree, are to be determined finally by the general law of the forum in which it is presented, and not by giving it full faith and credit.

Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Fall v. Eastin, 215 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 65, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 924, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3, 17 Ann. Cas. 853; Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 316, 38 L. ed. 450, 456, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 155, 30 L. ed. 614, 620, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct.

56 L. ed.

Rep. 275; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 108 U. S. 18, 27 L. ed. 656, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614, 617; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

This decree was entered in a suit of which the circuit court had jurisdiction on account of diversity of citizenship only. In such a suit no higher right arises from the decree than from a similar decree entered in the state court of the same district.

Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 38 L. ed. 861, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

When the force and effect of a judgment have been determined, some of the consequences thereof are unquestionable. For instance, it is established by common juridical consent that an action may be maintained on an ordinary judgment. Since this is so, the denial of recovery in an action properly brought on such a judgment is a denial of its validity. If, however, the judgment is of such a nature that the forum where it is presented may properly refuse it enforcement without questioning its validity, then the question of its consequences is to be decided by that forum. Instances of this are where the judgment is for a penalty under the criminal law (Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370), or for future alimony (Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555), or for a foreign transaction between foreign corporations (Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 191 U. S. 373, 48 L. ed. 225, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92). Whether it is of such a character has been held to be a Federal question (Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224). If it is, the consequences present no Federal question.

Whether a third person can invoke a judgment in personam as an estoppel or otherwise is a question not of its force and effect, its meaning and validity, but of the consequences resulting from it. This question does not arise under the Constitution. The judgment of the state court upon it is final; this court is without jujurisdiction to consider it; and the proper judgment is dismissal.

Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

The Constitution requires a state to give to the judgments of the courts of another state, or of the Federal courts, having jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject-matter, in suits between the same parties or in rem, the same faith and credit which they have by the law and usage of the courts of the states where rendered.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Harris, 97 U. S. 331, 24 L. ed. 959; Embrey v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Jaster v. Currie, 198 U. S. 144, 49 L. ed. 988, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 49 L. ed. 1023, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, 3 Ann. Cas. 1084; Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 52 L. ed. 1039, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; American Exp. Co. v. Mullins, 212 U. S. 311, 53 L. ed. 525, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, 15 Ann. Cas. 536.

This means that they are to be treated as having the same force and effect in the sense of meaning, purport, and validity, as conclusive adjudications between the parties, but not that they are to be followed by the same consequences.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 10 L. ed. 177; Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 L. ed. 1093, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807.

The full faith and credit clause did not increase the jurisdiction of a state to affect the rights of nonresidents, not parties to a suit therein.

Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 191 U. S. 373, 48 L. ed. 225, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Fall v. Eastin, 215 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 65, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 924, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3, 17 Ann. Cas. 853.

Whether the court had jurisdiction to make a binding adjudication for or against a nonresident is to be determined by the forum in which the judgment is presented, notwithstanding that the court rendering the judgment has decided that he was a privy and subject to the jurisdiction.

D'Arey v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 670, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 43 L. ed. 808, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

The privy or representative relationship or lack thereof, of a nonresident, not a party of record, is to be determined by the forum in which the judgment is presented, and not by the law of the state in which the judgment was entered.

D'Arey v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271.

Full faith and credit does not require that a judgment in personam be held binding upon persons not parties.

Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588.

Full faith and credit does not require a court to hold that a judgment against the plaintiff in one suit is conclusive against him in another suit, based upon the same ground of liability, against another defendant.

Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 316, 38 L. ed. 450, 456, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 155, 30 L. ed. 614, 620, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

Whether a judgment operates as an estoppel as to a person not a party to the suit presents no Federal question, but is to be determined finally by the court of the state in which it is presented.

Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 108 U. S. 18, 27 L. ed. 636, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614, 617; Fall v. Eastin, 215 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 65, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 924, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3, 17 Ann. Cas. 853; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

The misinterpretation of the statutes of another state is not a failure to give them due faith and credit.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 459, 49 L. ed. 553, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Smithsonian Inst. v. St. John, 214 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 892, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601.

This is also true of the misinterpretation of a decree (St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. ed. 752, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510); and of a misinterpretation of the opinions of the courts of another state (Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972).

There was no failure to give full faith and credit to the laws of New York and New Jersey.

Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

Whether Bigelow acquired rights under this decree should be determined by the law of Massachusetts, the forum in which it was pleaded.

Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Phelps v. Brewer, 9 Cush. 390, 57 Am. Dec. 56; Ewer v. Coffin, 1 Cush. 23, 48 Am. Dec. 587; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 670, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 43 L. ed. 808, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Thormann v. Frame, 176 U. S. 350, 44 L. ed. 500, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 L. ed. 1093, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. McDonough, 204 U. S. 51 L. ed. 345, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Brown v. Fletcher, 210 U. S. 82, 52 L. ed. 966, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 702; Fall v. Eastin, 215 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 65, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 924, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3, 17 Ann. Cas. 853.

The failure of a plaintiff to recover after litigating fully against one is no estoppel on the same matter in favor of another, not a party or a privy.

Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 56 L. ed.

S. 301, 316, 38 L. ed. 450, 456, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 155, 30 L. ed. 614, 620, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Brigham v. Fayerweather, 140 Mass. 415, 5 N. E. 265; Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 396; Trimmer v. Rochester, 130 N. Y. 401, 29 N. E. 746; Stone v. State, 138 N. Y. 124, 33 N. E. 733; Wallace v. Straus, 113 N. Y. 238, 21 N. E. 66; Collins v. Hydorn, 135 N. Y. 320, 32 N. E. 69; Groth v. Washburn, 39 Hun, 324; Furlong v. Banta, 80 Hun, 248, 29 N. Y. Supp. 985; Nelson v. Illinois C. R. Co. — Miss. —, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 689, 53 So. 619; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Clarke, 85 Miss. 691, 38 So. 97; Biddle & S. Co. v. Burnham, 91 Me. 578, 40 Atl. 669; Carson v. Southern R. Co. 68 S. C. 55, 46 S. E. 525, affirmed in 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

The reason for the rule is obvious. A man ought not to get the benefit of a decision as a binding adjudication in his favor unless he would have been bound by an adverse judgment. He ought not to be bound by an adverse judgment unless he was a party or a privy, having a legal right and opportunity to defend.

Humes v. Seruggs, 94 U. S. 22, 24 L. ed. 51; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Tisdale, 91 U. S. 244, 23 L. ed. 317; Stone v. Farmers' Bank, 174 U. S. 409, 43 L. ed. 1027, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880; Sessions v. Johnson, 95 U. S. 347, 353, 24 L. ed. 596, 598.

It is a fundamental principle of the law of estoppel by judgment that the estoppel must be mutual.

Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 20, 26 L. ed. 61, 63; Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 317, 38 L. ed. 450, 457, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Tregea v. Modesto Irrig. Dist. 164 U. S. 179, 188, 41 L. ed. 395, 398, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; Lanning v. Osborne, 76 Fed. 319; Larison v. Hager, 44 Fed. 49; Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L.R.A. 139, 22 C. C. A. 110, 46 U. S. App. 281, 76 Fed. 173; Dallinger v. Richardson, 176 Mass. 77, 57 N. E. 224; Spence v. Williams, L. R. 2 Prob. & Div. 230, 40 L. J. Prob. N. S. 45, 24 L. T. N. S. 513, 19 Week. Rep. 703; Nelson v. Brown, 144 N. Y. 384, 39 N. E. 355; Collins v. Hydorn, 135 N. Y. 320, 32 N. E. 69; Brigham v. Fayerweather, 140 Mass. 411, 5 N. E. 265; Masten v. Olcott, 101 N. Y. 152, 4 N. E. 274; Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 396; Remington Paper Co. v. O'Dougherty, 81 N. Y. 474; Booth v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 22; Atlantic Dock Co. v. New York, 53 N. Y. 64; Lawrence v.

Campbell, 32 N. Y. 455; Brower v. Bowers, 1 Abb. App. Dec. 214; Shipman v. Fanshaw, 15 Abb. N. C. 288; Muller v. Ferry, 27 N. Y. S. R. 357, 7 N. Y. Supp. 472; Sweetser v. Davis, 26 App. Div. 398, 49 N. Y. Supp. 874; Craig v. Ward, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. 235; Brennan v. Blath, 3 Daly, 480; Ransom v. Brinkerhoff, 56 N. J. Eq. 149, 38 Atl. 919; Wright v. Hazen, 24 Vt. 143; Cecil v. Cecil, 19 Md. 72, 81 Am. Dec. 626; Blackman v. Wright, 96 Iowa, 541, 65 N. W. 843; Bigelow, Estoppels, 5th ed. p. 113; 1 Freeman, Judgm. § 159; 1 Greenl. Ev. 16th ed. § 524; Trimmer v. Rochester, 130 N. Y. 401, 29 N. E. 746; Stone v. State, 138 N. Y. 124, 33 N. E. 733; Wallace v. Straus, 113 N. Y. 238, 21 N. E. 66; Groth v. Washburn, 34 Hun, 509; Furlong v. Banta, 80 Hun, 248, 29 N. Y. Supp. 985.

Where two persons have co-operated equally in doing an act or series of acts which are of such a nature that, if they impose any liability, it is ex delicto, such liability, if any, is joint and several; and if one of them is sued and judgment goes for the defendant on the ground that the act or transaction did not constitute a wrong, such judgment is not an estoppel in favor of the other person when sued by the same person, for the same transaction.

Sprague v. Waite, 19 Pick, 455; Nelson v. Illinois C. R. Co. — Miss. —, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 689, 53 So. 619; Lansing v. Montgomery, 2 Johns. 382; Marsh v. Berry, 7 Cow. 344; Moore v. Tracy, 7 Wend. 229; Gittleman v. Feltman, 122 App. Div. 385, 106 N. Y. Supp. 839; Carson v. Southern R. Co. 68 S. C. 55, 46 S. E. 525, affirmed in 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Atlantic Dock Co. v. New York, 53 N. Y. 64; Tyng v. Clarke, 9 Hun, 269; Goble v. Dillon, 86 Ind. 327, 44 Am. Rep. 308; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Clarke, 85 Miss. 691, 38 So. 97; Thompson v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. 71 Minn. 89, 73 N. W. 707; Three States Lumber Co. v. Blanks, 118 Tenn. 627, 102 S. W. 79; 1 Freeman, Judgm. § 159.

The rule is the same where the liability, if any, arises ex contractu and is joint and several.

Larison v. Hager, 44 Fed. 49; Townsend v. Riddle, 2 N. H. 448; McLelland v. Ridgeway, 12 Ala. 482; State Bank v. Robinson, 13 Ark. 214; Cameron v. Paul, 6 Pa. 323; Berghaus v. Alter, 9 Watts, 386; Ligon v. Dunn, 28 N. C. (6 Ired. L.) 133; Hazard v. Irwin, 18 Pick. 108.

Conversely, a judgment against one of two persons liable jointly and severally is not an estoppel against the other.

Public Works v. Columbia College, 17

Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. 35; Bigelow, Estoppels, 5th ed. p. 112; Booth v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 22; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Rowland, 178 N. Y. 631, 71 N. E. 1127, 84 App. Div. 563, 82 N. Y. Supp. 841; McLelland v. Ridgeway, 12 Ala. 482; Buckingham v. Ludlum, 37 N. J. Eq. 137; Sturges v. Beach, 1 Conn. 507; Moore's Appeal, 34 Pa. 411; Runkel v. Phillips, 9 Phila. 619; Marr v. Southwick, 2 Port. (Ala.) 351; Fletcher v. Jackson, 23 Vt. 592, 56 Am. Dec. 98; State Bank v. Robinson, 13 Ark. 221; Leake & W. Orphan House v. Lawrence, 11 Paige, 80.

Joint tort feors are liable jointly, and severally also.

Buddington v. Shearer, 22 Pick. 427; Corey v. Havener, 182 Mass. 250, 65 N. E. 69; McAvoy v. Wright, 137 Mass. 207; Elliott v. Hayden, 104 Mass. 180; Livingston v. Bishop, 1 Johns. 290, 3 Am. Dec. 330; Robertson v. Smith, 18 Johns. 459, 9 Am. Dec. 227; 1 Freeman, Judgm. § 236; 2 Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, § 532.

In the case of joint tort feors, both of whom participate equally in the act in question, there is no right of exoneration or even of contribution.

Union Stock Yards Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 196 U. S. 217, 49 L. ed. 453, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226, 2 Ann. Cas. 525; Bartle v. Nutt, 4 Pet. 184, 7 L. ed. 825; Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 33 L. ed. 242, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Hoffman v. McMullen, 45 L.R.A. 410, 28 C. C. A. 178, 48 U. S. App. 596, 83 Fed. 372; Churchill v. Holt, 127 Mass. 165, 34 Am. Rep. 355; Gray v. Boston Gaslight Co. 114 Mass. 149; Jacobs v. Pollard, 10 Cush. 287, 57 Am. Dec. 105; Parsons v. Winchell, 5 Cush. 592, 52 Am. Dec. 745; Vose v. Grant, 15 Mass. 505; Kolb v. National Surety Co. 176 N. Y. 233, 68 N. E. 247; Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. 74 N. J. Eq. 457, 71 Atl. 153; Pollock, Torts, 7th ed. 195; Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. 254; Avery v. Halsey, 14 Pick. 174; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. 53.

The rule applies to any equal joint breach of fiduciary duty committed with knowledge of the facts.

Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 22 Blatchf. 187, 20 Fed. 582; Power v. O'Connor, 19 Week. Rep. 923; Atty. Gen. v. Wilson, Craig & Ph. 28, 10 L. J. Ch. N. S. 53, 4 Jur. 1174; Heath v. Erie R. Co. 8 Blatchf. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 6,306.

The fact that the particular wrong involves no moral obliquity does not give a right of contribution.

Andrews v. Murray, 33 Barb. 354; Peek

v. Ellis, 2 Johns. Ch. 131; Miller v. Fenton, 11 Paige, 18.

This rule applies to the directors of a corporation, however innocently they may have misapplied the funds of the corporation.

Gilbert v. Finch, 173 N. Y. 455, 61 L.R.A. 807, 93 Am. St. Rep. 623, 66 N. E. 133.

The mere fact that the situation of the two parties is the same makes no difference.

Geraud v. Stagg, 10 How. Pr. 369; St. John v. Andrews Institute, 192 N. Y. 387, 85 N. E. 143.

Interest in the question in suit as a precedent, as distinguished from interest in the right involved, does not constitute privity.

Jackson ex dem. Hogarth v. Nelson, 6 Cow. 248; St. John v. Andrews Institute, 192 N. Y. 382, 85 N. E. 143; Jackson v. Griswold, 4 Hill, 522; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. 35; Park v. Ensign, 66 Kan. 50, 97 Am. St. Rep. 352, 71 Pac. 230; McConnell v. Poor, 113 Iowa, 133, 52 L.R.A. 312, 84 N. W. 968; Fletcher v. Jackson, 23 Vt. 581, 56 Am. Dec. 98; Giltinan v. Strong, 64 Pa. 242; Arrington v. Porter, 47 Ala. 714; De Greiff v. Wilson, 30 N. J. Eq. 435; McKellar v. Howell, 11 N. C. (4 Hawks) 34; Clark v. Montgomery, 23 Barb. 464.

Wherever the question has arisen it has been held that the most intimate class of coadventurers or joint participants—namely partners—were not bound by an adverse decision against their copartners, even when the existence of the partnership was not in dispute, and the liability, if any existed, was a partnership liability.

Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 21 L. ed. 687; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Booth v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 22; McLelland v. Ridgeway, 12 Ala. 482; Buckingham v. Ludlum, 37 N. J. Eq. 137; Sturges v. Beach, 1 Conn. 507; Moore's Appeal, 34 Pa. 411; Leake & W. Orphan House v. Lawrence, 11 Paige, 80; Runkel v. Phillips, 9 Phila. 619; Marr v. Southwick, 2 Port. (Ala.) 351; Fletcher v. Jackson, 23 Vt. 582, 56 Am. Dec. 98; State Bank v. Robinson, 13 Ark. 214; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Rowland, 178 N. Y. 631, 71 N. E. 1127, 84 App. Div. 563, 82 N. Y. Supp. 841; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. 53.

Participation for the purpose of obtaining a favorable precedent upon a similar state of facts, or upon an identical state of facts, does not render the judgment binding as to the participant. The authorities to this effect are believed to be unanimous.

Litchfield v. Goodnoy (Litchfield v. 56 L. ed.

Crane) 123 U. S. 549, 31 L. ed. 199, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Stryker v. Goodnow (Stryker v. Crane) 123 U. S. 527, 31 L. ed. 194, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Shutesbury v. Hadley, 133 Mass. 242; Jackson v. Griswold, 4 Hill, 522; Elliott v. Hayden, 104 Mass. 180; Booth v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 22; People v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 106 N. Y. 619, 13 N. E. 447; Lownsdale v. Portland, 1 Or. 381, Fed. Cas. No. 8,578; Hunt v. Haven, 52 N. H. 162; State ex rel. Kane v. Johnson, 123 Mo. 43, 27 S. W. 399; Central Baptist Church v. Manchester, 17 R. I. 492, 33 Am. St. Rep. 893, 23 Atl. 30; Allin v. Hall, 1 A. K. Marsh. 525; Rumford Chemical Works v. Hygienic Chemical Co. 148 Fed. 862; O'Brien v. Browning, 49 How. Pr. 109; Behrman v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. 127 La. 775, 54 So. 25; 1 Freeman, Judgm. § 189; 2 Black, Judgm. §§ 540, 541; Williams v. Barkley, 165 N. Y. 48, 58 N. E. 765; St. John v. Andrews Institute, 192 N. Y. 382, 85 N. E. 143.

Knowledge by the plaintiff that the defendant participated in the former action is a necessary condition to the defendant's having the benefit of the former judgment on the ground of participation.

Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L.R.A. 139, 22 C. C. A. 110, 46 U. S. App. 281, 76 Fed. 173; Lane v. Welds, 39 C. C. A. 525, 99 Fed. 286; Cramer v. Singer Mfg. Co. 35 C. C. A. 508, 93 Fed. 636; Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Jefferson Electric Light, Heat, & P. Co. 128 Fed. 751, 135 Fed. 365, 71 C. C. A. 481, 139 Fed. 385; Lacroix v. Lyons, 33 Fed. 437; Cannon River Mfrs. Asso. v. Rogers, 42 Minn. 123, 18 Am. St. Rep. 497, 43 N. W. 792; 2 Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, § 523; 2 Black, Judgm. § 540.

Control of the suit by the person participating is necessary in order to make a judgment binding as an estoppel as to him.

Wilgus v. Germain, 19 C. C. A. 188, 44 U. S. App. 369, 72 Fed. 773; Burr v. Bigler, 16 Abb. Pr. 177; Mankato v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 73 C. C. A. 439, 142 Fed. 329; Rumford Chemical Works v. Hygienic Chemical Co. 148 Fed. 862; Wilkie v. Howe, 27 Kan. 518; Cockins v. Bank of Alma, 84 Neb. 624, 133 Am. St. Rep. 642, 122 N. W. 16; 2 Black, Judgm. § 540.

An interest of the participant's own in the event of the suit is necessary to make the judgment an estoppel as to him.

Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; 2 Black, Judgm. § 540.

A judgment on demurrer has been held to be as conclusive as one rendered on proof, on substantially the same state of facts.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Slaght, 205 U. S. 122, 130, 51 L. ed. 738, 741, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 124 U. S. 225, 228, 31 L. ed. 411, 412, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416; Lindsley v. Union Silver Star Min. Co. 52 C. C. A. 640, 115 Fed. 46.

But if a plaintiff fails on demurrer for lack of essential allegations, the judgment is not a bar to another suit in which these allegations are made, even if the cause is the same.

Yates v. Utica Bank, 206 U. S. 181, 51 L. ed. 1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 142 U. S. 396, 35 L. ed. 1055, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188; Gilman v. Rives, 10 Pet. 298, 9 L. ed. 432; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 124 U. S. 225, 232, 31 L. ed. 411, 414, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 364, 24 L. ed. 195, 201; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416; Aurora v. West, 7 Wall. 90, 99, 19 L. ed. 42, 48; Miller v. Margerie, 96 C. C. A. 30, 170 Fed. 710; Dennison Mfg. Co. v. Sharf Tag, Label & Box Co. 57 C. C. A. 9, 121 Fed. 313; Haug v. Great Northern R. Co. 42 C. C. A. 167, 102 Fed. 74; North Mnskegon v. Clark, 10 C. C. A. 591, 22 U. S. App. 522, 62 Fed. 694; Ohio River R. Co. v. Fisher, 53 C. C. A. 411, 115 Fed. 929; Gilmer v. Morris, 30 Fed. 476, 46 Fed. 333; Marsh v. Masterton, 101 N. Y. 401, 5 N. E. 59; Stowell v. Chamberlain, 60 N. Y. 272; Morrell v. Morgan, 65 Cal. 575, 4 Pac. 580; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 800; 1 Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. § 267, p. 482; 2 Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, §§ 305, 306, pp. 658, 661.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The question upon which these cases have been brought to this court is whether the Massachusetts court gave to a New York judgment pleaded as a bar to a Massachusetts suit that full faith and credit required by the 1st section of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States, and § 905, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677), enacted in pursuance thereof.

The Old Dominion Copper & Smelting Company, hereafter designated the Copper [125] Company, a corporation *of New Jersey, filed two bills in an equity court of Massachusetts against the plaintiff in error, Albert S. Bigelow, to recover secret profits realized by him and an associate, one Lewisohn, as organizers or promoters of the Copper Company, in selling the mining property of another corporation, called the Baltimore Company, and certain neighboring properties, designated in the transcript, "outside properties."

The two sales were for distinct considerations. The bills alleged that when these sales were made the Copper Company was under the absolute control of the two promoters, Bigelow and Lewisohn, and that they divided the profits between them. The fundamental facts in each case were the same. The two cases were heard together in the state courts, and are now heard as if one case, though upon separate writs and distinct records.

Demurrers were interposed and overruled. The allegations of the bills are fully shown in 188 Mass. 315, 108 Am. St. Rep. 479, 74 N. E. 653, where one of the cases was considered on demurrer. Answers were then filed and a great mass of evidence taken. Upon a full hearing the allegations of the respective bills were held to be sustained by the proofs, and final decrees were rendered for the plaintiff in sums aggregating $2,178,673.33. The decrees were affirmed in the supreme judicial court.

The Federal question, upon which the judgment of this court is sought, arose in this wise: Bigelow, the plaintiff in error here, was a citizen of Massachusetts, and was therefore sued in the courts of that state. Lewisohn, who was Bigelow's associate promoter, was a citizen of New York. He was therefore sued separately in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York. The bills filed there were identical in every essential with those filed in Massachusetts. In the two sets of bills it was alleged that Bigelow and Lewisohn were joint promoters of the Copper Company, and *as such [126 made the sales to it while under their entire control, and that they had realized fraudulent profits. Demurrers were interposed in the New York cases, which were sustained, and the bills dismissed. These judgments were affirmed in the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit. The judgment in one of these cases, that relating to the sale of "outside properties," was brought to this court by certiorari and affirmed, the opinion being by Mr. Justice Holmes (210 U. S. 206, 52 L. ed. 1025, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634), where the facts of the case are stated.

The final decree in one of the New York cases was pleaded in a supplemental answer in the pending Massachusetts cases as a bar to the suits against Bigelow. The Massachusetts court adjudged that Bigelow was neither a party nor a privy to the New York suits, and was therefore not protected by the judgment therein.

To conclude Bigelow by the New York judgment, it must appear that he was either a party or a privy. That he was not a party to the record is conceded. He had no legal right to defend or control the proceedings, nor to appeal from the decree. He was therefore a stranger, and was not concluded by that judgment as a party thereto. That he was indirectly interested in the result because the question there litigated was one which might affect his own liability as a judicial precedent in a subsequent suit against him upon the same cause of action is true, but the effect of a judgment against Lewisohn as a precedent is not that of res judicata, and the Massachusetts court was under no obligation to follow the decision as a mere judicial precedent. Nor would assistance in the defense of the suit, because of interest in the decision as a judicial precedent which might influence the decision in his own case, create an estoppel as to Bigelow. Stryker v. Goodnow (Stryker v. Crane) 123 U. S. 527, 31 L. ed. 194, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203. Also Rumford Chemical Works v. Hygienic Chemical Co. 215 U. S. 156, 54 L. ed. 137, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

[127] *But it is said that if Bigelow was not in every sense a party, he was privy to Lewisohn, who was, and that the estoppel in the adverse judgment in the suit against Lewisohn protected Bigelow as well.

But would that judgment, if it had been for the plaintiff in that case, have bound Bigelow in a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff, upon the same facts? If not, upon what principle may he claim the advantage of it as a bar to the present suit? The cause of action was one arising ex delicto. It was several as well as joint. The right of action against both might have been extinguished by a settlement with one, or by a judgment against one, and satisfaction. But the claim has come in substance to this: that although the plaintiff had a remedy against Lewisohn and Bigelow severally or jointly, a failure to recover in an action against one is a bar to his action against the other, the facts being the same, although there has been no satisfaction for the injury done. The only basis upon which such a result can be asserted is that Bigelow would have been bound by the judgment if it had been adverse to Lewisohn, and may therefore shelter himself behind it, since it was favorable to his joint wrongdoer.

It is a principle of general elementary law that the estoppel of a judgment must be mutual. Brooklyn & N. R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 26 L. ed. 61; 56 L. ed.

Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 38 L. ed. 450, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Freeman, Judgm. § 159; 1 Greenl. Ev. 13th ed. § 524. The mutuality of estoppel by judgment is fully recognized in both the New York and Massachusetts decisions: Atlantic Dock Co. v. New York, 53 N. Y. 64; Brigham v. Fayerweather, 140 Mass. 411, 415, 5 N. E. 265; Nelson v. Brown, 144 N. Y. 384, 39 N. E. 355.

An apparent exception to this rule of mutuality had been held to exist where the liability of the defendant is altogether dependent upon the culpability of one exonerated in a prior suit, upon the same facts when sued by the *same plaintiff. [128 See Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 677, 85 C. C. A. 393, 158 Fed. 63, where the cases are collected. The unilateral character of the estoppel of an adjudication in such cases is justified by the injustice which would result in allowing a recovery against a defendant for conduct of another, when that other has been exonerated in a direct suit. The cases in which it has been enforced are cases where the relation between the defendants in the two suits has been that of principal and agent, master and servant, or indemnitor and indemnitee.

The principle upon which one may avail himself of the effect of a judgment adverse to the plaintiff in a former suit against the immediate actor, is thus stated in New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Jopse, 142 U. S. 18, 24, 27, 35 L. ed. 919, 923, 925, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

"It would seem on general principles that, if the party who actually causes the injury is free from all civil and criminal liability therefor, his employer must also be entitled to a like immunity. . . . If the immediate actor is free from responsibility, because his act was lawful, can his employer, one taking no direct part in the transaction, be held responsible? . . . The question carries its own answer, and it may be generally affirmed that if an act of an employee be lawful, and one which he is justified in doing, and which casts no personal responsibility upon him, no responsibility attaches to the employer therefor."

It is too evident to need argument that the remedy of this plaintiff does not depend upon the culpable conduct of Lewisohn, but upon Bigelow's own wrong, whether alone or in co-operation with Lewisohn. The liability of each was several as well as joint, and a failure to recover against one is no bar to a suit against the other upon the same facts. But a judgment not only estops those who are actually parties, but also such persons as were represented by those who were or claim under or in privity with them.

What is privity? As used when dealing 129] with the estoppel *of a judgment, privity denotes mutual or successive relationship to the same right of property. Litchfield v. Goodnow (Litchfield v. Crane) 123 U. S. 549, 31 L. ed. 199, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210. The ground upon which privies are bound by a judgment, says Prof. Greenleaf, in his work upon Evidence, 13th ed. vol. 1, § 523, "is, that they are identified with him in interest; and wherever this identity is found to exist, all are alike concluded. Hence, all privies, whether in estate, in blood, or in law, are estopped from litigating that which is conclusive upon him with whom they are in privity."

But it is said that the relationship of joint tort feors is such as to constitute privity, and that a judgment in a suit in favor of one upon the same identical cause of action is a bar to a suit by the same plaintiff against the other wrongdoer. Whether the estoppel of a judgment is to be confined to those who were actually parties or privies in estate or interest, or may be expanded so as to include joint tort feors, not actually parties, is a question concerning which there is some diversity of opinion. But, as we shall later see, the sounder reason, as well as the weight of authority, is that the failure to recover against one of two joint tort feors is not a bar to a suit against the other upon the same facts.

Passing this for the time, we come to a consideration of the contention that, whatever the general law upon this subject, if such was the effect of such a judgment under the law of New York, it was the duty of the Massachusetts court, under the full faith and credit clause, to give it like effect in the present suit.

That the judgment in question is entitled to the same sanction which would attach to a like judgment of a court of the state of New York is plain. The United States court was in the exercise of jurisdiction to administer the laws of the state, since its jurisdiction depended solely upon diversity of citizenship. Its judgment is therefore entitled in the courts of another state to the 130] *same faith and credit which would attach to a judgment of a court of the state of New York. Dupasseur v. RocherEAU, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 514, 48 L. ed. 276, 282, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. What, then, is the effect of such a judgment, under the law of New York, as an estoppel in a subsequent suit upon the same facts by the same plaintiff against Bigelow. This was a question of fact in the Massachusetts court. Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242. Expert legal opinion is favorable to the view urged by the plaintiff in error, though the ground upon which such a consequence rests is by no means clear. The highest courts of New York have not clearly decided the precise question here presented. The cases referred to or commented upon by the witnesses cannot be said to clearly point to the conclusion claimed. Nevertheless, the Massachusetts court, treating the question as one of fact, accepted the view that, under the law of New York, this judgment would have been a bar to another suit upon the same facts against Bigelow, in the courts of New York. We shall do likewise. The Massachusetts courts held that, under the general law, which was the applicable law of Massachusetts, the New York court had no such jurisdiction over the person of Bigelow as to affect him, either as a party who might have controlled the case or appealed from the judgment; and that he was in no sense such a privy as to be bound by it. Upon the general law as to the estoppel of such a judgment, that court said:

"This can hardly be regarded as an open question in this commonwealth. In Sprague v. Oakes, 19 Pick. 455, which was an action for trespass quare clausum fregit, it was said, respecting such a defense: 'The defendant was neither a party nor privy to that judgment, was not bound by it, nor could he take advantage of it.' This case has never been overruled or questioned, and must be regarded as stating the law of this commonwealth. There are other authorities to the same point. *Lansing v. Mont-[131 gomery, 2 Johns. 382; Marsh v. Berry, 7 Cow. 344; Moore v. Tracy, 7 Wend. 229; Gittleman v. Feltman, 122 App. Div. 385, 106 N. Y. Supp. 839; Atlantic Dock Co. v. New York, 53 N. Y. 64; Tyng v. Clark, 9 Hun, 269; Calkins v. Allerton, 3 Barb. 171, 174; Goble v. Dillon, 86 Ind. 327, 44 Am. Rep. 308; Thompson v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. 71 Minn. 89, 73 N. W. 707; Three States Lumber Co. v. Blanks, 118 Tenn. 627, 102 S. W. 79. The reasons upon which these decisions rest is that there can be no estoppel arising out of a judgment, unless the same parties have had their day in court touching the matter litigated, and unless the judgment is equally available to both parties. It requires no discussion to demonstrate that a judgment in the Lewisohn suit against the defendant would not have fixed liability upon the present defendant. Hence there can be no estoppel under our law or under the general principles of jurisprudence, because it is not mutual. Brigham v. Fayerweather, 140 Mass. 411, 415,

5 N. E. 265; Dallinger v. Richardson, 176 Mass. 77, 83, 57 N. E. 224; Worcester v. Green, 2 Pick. 425, 429; Biddle & S. Co. v. Burnham, 91 Me. 578, 40 Atl. 669; Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 396. 'Estoppels, to be good must be mutual.' Litchfield v. Goodnow (Litchfield v. Crane) 123 U. S. 549, 552, 31 L. ed. 199, 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Nelson v. Brown, 144 N. Y. 384, 390, 39 N. E. 355. Bigelow could not have appeared as of right and made a defense in that suit. No judgment can be regarded as res judicata as to any matter where the rights in the subject-matter arise out of mutuality, and not by succession, unless the party could, as matter of right, appear and defend, even though he may have had knowledge of the suit. Otherwise, he might be bound by a judgment as to which he had never had the opportunity to be heard, which is opposed to the first principles of justice. Brabrook v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 228, 233, 6 Am. Rep. 222. There is no privity between joint wrongdoers, because all are jointly and severally liable. Corey v. Havener, 182 Mass. 132]250, 65 N. E. 69; Feneff v. *Boston & M. R. Co. 196 Mass. 575, 581, 82 N. E. 705; Pinkerton v. Randolph, 200 Mass. 24, 28, 85 N. E. 892. There is no right of contribution between joint wrongdoers, where they are in pari delicto with each other. Churchill v. Holt, 127 Mass. 165, 34 Am. Rep. 355. They are equally culpable, and the wrong complained of results from their joint effort." [203 Mass. 216, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 89 N. E. 193.]

The cause of action was one arising ex delicto, and the liability of Lewisohn and Bigelow was several as well as joint. In many cases this court has held that a judgment without satisfaction against one of two joint trespassers is no bar to another action against the other for the same tort. The common law imposes upon each joint tortfeasor the burden of bearing the entire loss which he, in co-operation with another, has inflicted. The injured person may sue those who co-operated in the commission of the tort together, or he may sue them singly. He may recover against less than all if he sue them jointly, and may have a judgment for unequal sums against all who are joined in the suit. Or, if he sue one such wrongdoer and recover judgment, he is not estopped from suing another upon the same facts unless his first judgment has been fully satisfied. Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 18 L. ed. 129; Sessions v. Johnson, 95 U. S. 347, 348, 24 L. ed. 596, 597; The Beaconsfield, 158 U. S. 303, 39 L. ed. 993, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860. If Lewisohn and Bigelow were severally liable, and a judgment against one, without full satisfaction, was not a bar to a suit against the other, it is difficult to see why a failure to obtain a judgment against one should be an answer to a suit against the other, who was not a party to the first suit. That a failure to recover in one suit against one such tortfeasor is not a bar to a suit in the courts of another state against another, who was not a party to the first suit, seems to be supported by considerations of justice and the weight of authority.

But did the Massachusetts court deny full faith and credit to the New York judgment by denying to it the *effect[133 of estoppel which attached to it in the courts of New York, or may it determine for itself, under principles of general law, whether the judgment was a bar to the suit against Bigelow?

The answer must turn upon the construction and effect of the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution, and the act of Congress giving effect thereto. Section 1, article 4 of the Constitution, reads as follows:

"Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof."

The act of Congress of May 26, 1790 [1 Stat. at L. 122, chap. 11], now § 905, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677) reads as follows:

"The acts of the legislature of any state or territory, or of any country subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be authenticated by having the seals of such state, territory, or country affixed thereto. The records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any state or territory, or of any such country, shall be proved and admitted in any other court within the United States, by the attestation of the clerk, and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate, that the said attestation is in due form. And the said records and judicial proceedings, so authenticated, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the state from which they are taken."

The effect of this clause is to put the judgment of a court of one state, when sued upon, or pleaded in estoppel, in the courts of another state, upon the plane of a domestic judgment in respect of conclusiveness as to the facts adjudged. But for this provision, such state judgments would stand upon the footing of foreign [134] judgments, *which are examinable when sued on in the courts of another country, being only prima facie evidence of the matter adjudged D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 175, 13 L. ed. 648, 652. Thus, in Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 4, 29 L. ed. 535, 536, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242, it is said:

"Judgments recovered in one state of the Union, when proved in the courts of another, differ from the judgments recovered in a foreign country in no other respect than that of not being re-examinable upon the merits, nor impeachable for fraud in obtaining them, if rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the cause and of the parties." Citing Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. 592, 7 L. ed. 531; M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 324, 10 L. ed. 177, 183; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 176, 13 L. ed. 648, 653; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 305, 18 L. ed. 475, 479; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897.

This requirement of full faith and credit is to be read and interpreted in the light of well-established principles of justice, protected by other constitutional provisions which it was never intended to modify or override.

It is therefore well settled that the courts of one state are not required to regard as conclusive any judgment of the court of another state which had no jurisdiction of the subject or of the parties. D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 528, 21 L. ed. 687, 691; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 4, 29 L. ed. 535, 536, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 685, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1134, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271.

Mr. Justice Story, in his commentaries on the Conflict of Laws, § 609, says:

"It [the Constitution] did not make the judgments of other states domestic judgments to all intents and purposes, but only gave a general validity, faith, and credit to them as evidence. No execution can issue upon such judgments without a new suit in the tribunals of other states. And they enjoy not the right of priority or lien which they have in the state where they are pronounced, but that only which the lex fori [135] gives to *them by its own laws in their character of foreign judgments."

The general effect of a judgment of a court of one state, when relied upon as an estoppel in the courts of another state, is that which it has, by law or usage, in the courts of the state from which it comes.

But the faith and credit to be accorded does not preclude an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court which pronounced the judgment, or its right to bind the persons against whom the judgment is sought to be enforced.

Referring to the case of Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch, 484, 3 L. ed. 413, where the language used was supposed to indicate that the effect to be given to the judgment of one state by the courts of another was in all respects that which attached to domestic judgments, Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for this court in Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 462, 21 L. ed. 897, 899, said that Mills v. Duryee had never been departed from "where the questions raised were not questions of jurisdiction. But where the jurisdiction of the court which rendered the judgment has been assailed, quite a different view has prevailed. Justice Story who pronounced the judgment in Mills v. Duryee, in his commentary on the Constitution, after stating the general doctrine established by that case with regard to the conclusive effect of judgments of one state in every other state, adds: 'But this does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court in which the original judgment was given to pronounce it, or the right of the state itself to exercise authority over the person or the subject-matter. The Constitution did not mean to confer [upon the states] a new power or jurisdiction, but simply to regulate the effect of the acknowledged jurisdiction over persons and things within their territory.'"

The conclusiveness of the judgment relied upon in Thompson v. Whitman depended upon the locality of a certain seizure by the authorities of New Jersey under an act regulating the fisheries of that state. The question *was whether a record finding of [136] jurisdictional facts could be contradicted. The holding of the court was that the jurisdiction could be assailed by evidence of facts contradicting those found to exist by the record pleaded as an estoppel. That case has since been accepted as determining that the binding effect of a judgment of one state, when pleaded as an estoppel in the courts of another, is open to challenge by assailing an officer's return of service, or the authority of one who assumed to accept service, or to enter an appearance, even though the judgment includes a finding of the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction. It would seem to follow that the Massachusetts court had the legal right to inquire, not only whether Bigelow was a party to the New York judgment in the sense that he might have appeared and defended, or appealed from it, but whether the cause of action and the relation of Bigelow to it, or to the parties, was such that the New York court could pronounce a judgment which would bind him, or conclude the plaintiff from suing him upon the same facts. Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 556, 43 L. ed. 808, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Bigelow was a citizen of and domiciled in Massachusetts. He was not found within the state of New York. Indeed, the pleadings in the New York court stated that he was not sued because he did not reside within the state. A judgment rendered upon constructive service against one domiciled within the state may be a good judgment in personam in that state, though void when sued upon outside the state. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565. In Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 521, 39 L. ed. 517, 518, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, it is said:

"It is an elementary principle of jurisprudence that a court of justice cannot acquire jurisdiction over the person of one who has no residence within its territorial jurisdiction, except by actual service of notice within the jurisdiction upon him or upon someone authorized to accept service in his behalf, or by his waiver, by general appearance *or otherwise, of the want of due service. Whatever effect a constructive service may be allowed in the courts of the same government, it cannot be recognized as valid by the courts of any other government."

See also the thorough discussion of this question in Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 567, 573, 50 L. ed. 867, 868, 871, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, 5 Ann. Cas. 1.

The New York court had no jurisdiction to render a judgment in personam against Bigelow. He was confessedly not a party. He did not voluntarily appear. He had no legal right to appear, no right to introduce evidence, control the proceedings, nor appeal from the judgment. To say that nevertheless the judgment rendered there adverse to the plaintiff in that case may be pleaded by him as a bar to another suit by the same plaintiff upon the same facts, because such is the effect of that judgment by the usage or law of New York, would be to give to the law of New York an extra-territorial effect which would operate as a denial of due process of law. Whatever the effect of that judgment as an estoppel under the law of New York, it cannot be held an estoppel in a suit in the courts of another state between the same plaintiff and a different defendant, who was not a party to the first suit. D'Arey v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648, is clearly in point. Under a New York statute a court of that state entered judgment against a nonresident defendant who was not served and did not appear. The judgment was entered under authority of a statute permitting judgment against joint debtors where only one was notified. The nonresident defendant was sued upon this judgment, perfectly good under the decisions of New York, in the courts of Louisiana. This court, after full consideration, held that the jurisdiction of the New York court to render a personal judgment against a nonresident was open to inquiry, and that it was not to be given the effect it plainly had under the law of New York, because that court had no jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. This case was followed in Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. 521, 527, 21 L. ed. 687, 691, which involved the effect of a joint judgment against five persons as joint debtors, two of whom were nonresidents, and were not served and did not appear. This judgment was held not to be evidence against the partners who had not appeared. Touching the effect of that judgment, this court said:

"It is sufficient for the disposition of this case that the judgment is not evidence of any personal liability of Withers outside of New York. It was rendered in that state without service of process upon him or his appearance in the action. Personal judgments thus rendered have no operation out of the limits of the state where rendered. Their effects are merely local. Out of the state they are nullities, not binding upon the nonresident defendant, nor establishing any claim against him. Such is the settled law of this country, asserted in repeated adjudications of this court and of the state courts.

"The judgment in New York, it is true, is a joint judgment against all the partners, against those summoned by publication as well as those who were served with process or appeared; but this joint character cannot affect the question of its validity as respects those not served. The clause of the Federal Constitution which requires full faith and credit to be given in each state to the records and judicial proceedings of every other state applies to the records and proceedings of courts only so far as they have jurisdiction. Wherever they want jurisdiction the records are not entitled to credit."

Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271, was an action in a United States court for the district of Illinois upon a New York judgment against a New York partnership. It appeared that the suit in which the judgment sued upon was obtained was against all the members of a firm, upon a joint liability. The members of the partnership who were residents and were actually served assumed the right to *enter the appearance of certain nonresidents who were not and could not be notified. In the action upon this joint judgment one of the defendants claimed the right to deny the jurisdiction of the New York court to pronounce a judgment against him, upon the ground that he had not been summoned, had not personally appeared, and was not concluded by an appearance entered for him by his copartners, the firm having theretofore been dissolved. The case was distinguishable from D'Arcy v. Ketchum and Public Works v. Columbia College, because the partners actually served assumed authority to enter the appearance of the nonresidents who were not served. The debt sued upon was a partnership debt. The contention was that the relation of partnership conferred upon partners, even after dissolution, the right to appear for their copartners in a suit against the firm. As a question of general law, this court held that although the judgment was valid under the laws and usage of New York, at the common law no such right existed after dissolution, and that the requirement of full faith and credit did not compel the courts of another state to give effect to the judgment as against the nonresident member of the firm who had not been served.

From these cases it is clear that the conclusive effect of a judgment in personam, which is to be recognized when questioned in the courts of another state, depends upon whether it is the judgment of a court which had jurisdiction over the person of the defendant sought to be bound. The estoppel here insisted upon is grounded not upon actual notice or appearance, but upon a theory as to the relation between joint tortfeasors under the laws of New York. If the Massachusetts court was of opinion that, under the general law, that relationship was not such as to make Bigelow a party by either privity or representation, it was under no obligation to treat the New York judgment as a bar to the suit in which it was pleaded.

140] *The binding effect of the judgment sued upon in Hall v. Lanning, cited above, turned upon the implied power of one member of a dissolved firm to enter the appearance of his nonresident partners in a suit upon a joint debt. Under the decisions of the New York courts such a judgment bound the members whose appearance was so entered. But this court held that full faith and credit was not denied by a determination of the power of one partner to so enter the appearance of a nonresident partner, and held that no such power existed.

1026

In Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 480, 53 L. ed. 605, 613, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, the facts were these: A tenant recovered judgment against his landlord resulting from the melting of sprinkler heads in an automatic sprinkler put up in plaintiff's building by the defendant. The plaintiff gave the defendant notice to defend, which it ignored. The suit was to recover the money so paid by the landlord. It was claimed that negligence in construction was made out by the judgment rendered against the plaintiff in favor of the tenant in a court of the state of Michigan. That judgment was relied upon as estopping the defendant, who, it was claimed, had notice, and was, under its contract, bound to defend. The court said:

"The defendant was no party to that judgment, and there is nothing in the Constitution to give it any force as against strangers. If the judgment binds the defendant, it is not by its own operation, even with the Constitution behind it, but by an estoppel arising out of the defendant's contract with the plaintiff and the notice to defend. The ground of decision in both courts below was that there was no such estoppel, the duty and responsibility of the defendant being limited by the words that we have quoted from the contract, excluding any obligation other than those set forth. The decision, in other words, turned wholly on the construction of the contract as excluding a liability over any event that happened. Even if wrong, *it did not deny the [141 Michigan judgments their full effect, but denied the preliminary relation between the defendant and the party to them, without which the defendant remained a stranger to them, in spite of the notice to defend."

In support of the contention that the full faith and credit clause gives to this judgment the effect, as an estoppel, which would be given to it in New York, counsel have cited the case of Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 643, 44 L. ed. 619, 621, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506, where it is said that the "local effect must be recognized everywhere." But that was said in respect of a Kansas judgment in favor of a creditor of a Kansas corporation, in a suit by the creditor in another state, against a stockholder of the Kansas corporation, to subject him to liability as a shareholder to an amount equal to his stock. But under the law of Kansas and the general law a stockholder is represented by the corporation in all actions against the corporation for corporate liabilities. The stockholder is, by the very law of corporate existence, an integral part of the corporation, and is bound by a judgment against it in respect of any matter within the scope of corporate powers. See Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 34 L. ed. 264, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 336, 40 L. ed. 986, 990, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810. In the Farnum Case, as in all cases of that class, there is a privity in interest and a representation in law of the stockholder by the corporation of which he is a member. The conclusiveness of such a judgment as binding each stockholder does not, however, extend to matters in which the corporation cannot be said to represent him. Thus it is said in the Farnum Case:

225 U. S.

"We do not mean that it is conclusive as against any individual sued as a stockholder that he is one, or if one, that he has not already discharged by payment to some other creditor of the corporation the full measure of his liability, or that he has not claims against the corporation, or judgments against it, which he may, 142] in law or equity, *as any debtor, whether by judgment or otherwise, set off against a claim or judgment, but in other respects it is an adjudication binding him. He is so far a part of the corporation that he is represented by it in the action against it."

There is no parallel between the relation of joint tort feorsors and that of a stockholder to his corporation. In the latter case, the stockholder, by the organic law of his corporation, is a member and represented by it so long as it keeps within its corporate powers. In the other instance one wrongdoer, when sued, does not represent those not sued, although they had co-operated in the wrong and were both liable.

The conclusion we reach is that the Massachusetts court did not deny full faith and credit to the New York judgment, and its decrees are therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Hughes took no part in the hearing or consideration of these cases.

ALEXANDER R. STALKER and Emaline Stalker, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 142-154.)

Public lands — railroad land grant — relation.

The approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a plat of station grounds, filed conformably to the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 482, chap. 152, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1568), § 4, by a railway company seeking to secure, in advance of actual construction, the benefits of the grant made by that act of grounds adjacent to its right of way, relates back to the date of filing, so as to cut off any rights therein founded on a pre-emption claim filed pending such approval, and subsequently patented, although the register of the local land office may have failed, after a copy of the approved plat had been submitted to him, to mark the proper township plat and tract books, as required by regulations of the Land Department, so as to show the station land selected.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794. 56 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 108-124, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 225.]

Argued and submitted April 24, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho to review a decree which, on rehearing, affirmed a decree of the District Court of Ada County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action by a railway company to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 14 Idaho, 362, 94 Pac. 56; on rehearing, 14 Idaho, 371, 94 Pac. 59.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Carl A. Davis submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

A patent issued by the Land Department in the exercise of its jurisdiction cannot be collaterally attacked.

Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. 87, 15 L. ed. 279; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Doe ex dem. Patterson v. Winn, 11 Wheat. 380, 6 L. ed. 500; Gonzales v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. 1 Land Dec. 361; Gilbert v. St. Joseph & D. R. Co. 1 Land Dec. 465.

Under these decisions, even if respondent's claim had been noted on the records of the local land office, it would still be necessary, as against a patentee of the same lands, that respondent show title, either by reservation in the patent, or by proof of actual possession and appropriation of the property prior to final proof by the entryman.

Respondent's claim has been conclusively determined by the Land Department of the United States.

Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Forrester, 1 Land Dec. 475; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Buckman, 3 Land Dec. 276; Re Sturm, 5 Land Dec. 295; Brady v. Southern P. R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 407; Iverson v. St. Paul, M. & M.

R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 586; Brady v. Southern P. R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 658; Northern P. R. Co. v. Dow, 8 Land Dec. 389; Randolph v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 417.

A railroad that fails to respond to the settler's notice of intention to submit final proof is bound by the record in the proceedings.

Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Armijo, 9 Land Dec. 427.

General notice of intention to make final proof is legal notice to a railroad company, and if it fails to respond thereto it will be as effectually bound by the record as though present.

Catline v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 423; Florida R. & Nav. Co. v. Dodd, 11 Land Dec. 91; Northern P. R. Co. v. Harrendrup, 11 Land Dec. 633.

The government, as a landowner, offers its land for sale upon certain prescribed conditions, compliance with which is a matter of settlement between the owner and purchaser alone, and with which no stranger to the title can interfere; publication of notice is process bringing all adverse claimants into court, and if no adverse claims are present, it is conclusively presumed that none exist, and that no third parties have any rights or equities in the land.

Wight v. Dubois, 21 Fed. 695.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. P. L. Williams, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The right of the defendant in error to assert its title is not barred by the issue of the patent or by the proceedings in the Land Department.

Randolph v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 417.

The position of the defendant in error, by reason of its failure to appear upon the final proof in the pre-emption proceedings, can be no worse than if it had appeared and contested and its claim had been overruled by the Department. The findings and decisions of the Department are not conclusive, even after the issue of patent, except upon questions of fact. The decision of the Department upon undisputed facts, that one person is entitled to a patent, is reviewable by the courts as a proposition of law.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 61, 40 L. ed. 71, 76, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 350, 47 L. ed. 845, 847, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Greenmeyer v. Coate, 212 U. S. 434, 445, 53 L. ed. 587, 591, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Whitcomb v. White, 214 U. S. 15, 53 L. ed. 889, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599.

Where lands have been previously disposed of, or appropriated, or reserved from sale or location, or otherwise segregated from the public domain, the Department has no jurisdiction to transfer them, and any attempted conveyance by patent is inoperative and void.

Davis v. Wieboldt, 139 U. S. 507, 529, 35 L. ed. 238, 246, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Burfening v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 93, 99, 43 L. ed. 88, 90, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 25 L. ed. 910.

The issue of the patent to Reed is not at all inconsistent with the recognition by the Department and Reed at that time of the existing rights acquired by the railway company.

Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Stringham, — Utah, —, 110 Pac. 868.

The railway company did all it was required to do by the act of Congress or regulations of the Department of the Interior to perfect its title, and its rights were not prejudiced by the failure of the local land officer to note the appropriation of station grounds upon his office plats.

Goist v. Bottum, 5 Land Dec. 643; Re Chase, 1 Land Dec. 81; Pomeroy v. Wright, 2 Land Dec. 164; Cole v. Markley, 2 Land Dec. 847; Postle v. Strickler, 3 Land Dec. 42; Hawkins v. Lamm, 9 Land Dec. 18; Re Young, 9 Land Dec. 32; Baird v. Chapman, 10 Land Dec. 210; Richardson v. Moore, 10 Land Dec. 415; Yates v. Glafcke, 10 Land Dec. 673; Linville v. Clearwaters, 11 Land Dec. 356; Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 27 L. ed. 201, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 314, 333, 13 L. ed. 153, 160.

The regulation of the Secretary of the Interior, requiring a notation upon the plats in the land office, does not have the force or effect of a recording act.

St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578; Bybee v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 139 U. S. 663, 35 L. ed. 305, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hasse, 197 U. S. 9, 49 L. ed. 642, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

When a grantee has duly deposited for record a valid instrument at the proper time, in the proper office, and with the proper officer, he has performed his whole duty; and subsequent purchasers will be charged with constructive notice, notwithstanding the officer does not properly spread the instrument on the record book, or fails to record it all.

Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Sears, 23 Blatchf. 194, 23 Fed. 314; Hudson v. Randolph, 13 C. C. A. 402, 23 U. S. App. 681, 66 Fed. 216; Seibold v. Rogers, 110 Ala. 438, 18 So. 312; Oats v. Walls, 28 Ark. 244; Lewis v. Hinman, 56 Conn. 55, 13 Atl. 143; Kiser v. Heuston, 38 Ill. 252; Hayden v. Peirce, 165 Mass. 359, 43 N. E. 119; Deming v. Miles, 35 Neb. 739, 37 Am. St. Rep. 464, 53 N. W. 665; Farabee v. McKerrihan, 172 Pa. 234, 51 Am. St. Rep. 734, 33 Atl. 583; Nichols v. Reynolds, 1 R. I. 30, 36 Am. Dec. 238; Mangold v. Barlow, 61 Miss. 593, 48 Am. Rep. 84; Armstrong v. Austin, 45 S. C. 69, 29 L.R.A. 772, 22 S. E. 763.

Upon approval of the map by the Secretary of the Interior, the title of the railway company was perfect, and related back to the date on which the map was filed.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 176, 37 L. ed. 123, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Jamestown & N. R. Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 125, 44 L. ed. 698, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 387, 55 L. ed. 258, 261, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Dakota C. R. Co. v. Downey, 8 Land Dec. 119; Re St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 181; Re Pope, 28 Land Dec. 402; Cathcart v. Minnesota & M. R. Co. 34 Land Dec. 619, 625; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 157, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794.

It is not pleaded or proved that the plaintiffs in error or their predecessors in interest were bona fide purchasers.

Eversdon v. Mayhew, 65 Cal. 167, 3 Pac. 641; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 211, 9 L. ed. 400; Smith v. Orton, 131 U. S. LXXVIII Appx. and 18 L. ed. 62; McDonald v. Belding, 145 U. S. 492, 498, 36 L. ed. 788, 790, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Johnson v. Georgia Loan & T. Co. 72 C. C. A. 639, 141 Fed. 593; Trice v. Comstock, 61 L.R.A. 176, 57 C. C. A. 646, 121 Fed. 620.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., also filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action brought by the railroad company under a statute of the state of Idaho to quiet title to four certain lots in the town of Meridian, Idaho. The judgment in the trial court for the railroad company was affirmed in the supreme court of the state.

144] *The defendant in error, as successor in title to the Idaho Central Railway Company, claims that the property in question is a part of the station grounds granted to its predecessor under the act of Congress of March 3, 1875 [18 Stat. at L. 482, chap. 152, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1568], which grant in part conflicts with the pre-emption entry made by one Joseph G. Reed, under whom the plaintiffs in error claim. The lands in question had been surveyed and were open for entry long prior to the initiation of either of the claims here involved. The conflicting rights arose in this way: The Idaho Central Railway was duly qualified under the act of Congress of 1875 to acquire a right of way and station grounds. In June, 1887, its directors formerly adopted a route between Nampa and Boise City which corresponded precisely with the route upon which the railroad was later constructed. This adoption was followed up by the filing of the profile maps, which were approved by the Secretary of the Interior on February 17, 1888, and sent back to the proper land office at Boise City. These maps did not include grounds for station purposes. By September 1, 1888, the railroad was constructed along the route first adopted, and at that date was in actual operation. On September 12, 1888, the company filed in duplicate with the register of the land office at Boise City, a plat of ground adjacent to its right of way, desired for station purposes, which selection included the lots here in controversy. This plat was received by the Secretary of the Interior on September 20, 1888, and approved on December 15, 1888. A copy was then transmitted to the register at Boise City. That official received it, but failed and neglected to "note the same upon the plats in the said land office," as it was his duty to do, and it is now stipulated that it has since been lost or mislaid and cannot be found. A blue print of the original map of the station grounds as selected by the plaintiff, with its certificates and indorsements, was stipulated into the record.

*The plaintiffs in error claim through [145] Joseph G. Reed, a qualified entryman, who, on October 18, 1888, filed a pre-emption claim upon a quarter section adjacent to the railroad right of way. Later he made final proofs, and, on August 4, 1891, a patent issued. This pre-emption included about 12 acres of the ground which the railroad company had theretofore selected for station purposes. There is no evidence of occupation of the portion here involved, and no plea of innocent purchaser, for value, without notice. The question was decided by the state court upon the rights resulting from the facts stated.

The case must turn upon the interpretation of the act of Congress of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. p. 482, chap. 152, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1568. The relevant sections are the 1st and 4th, which are as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the right of way through the public lands of the United States is hereby granted to any railroad company duly organized under the laws of any state or territory, except the District of Columbia, or by the Congress of the United States, which shall have filed with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its articles of incorporation, and due proofs of its organization under the same, to the extent of one hundred feet on each side of the central line of said road; also the right to take, from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, material, earth, stone, and timber necessary for the construction of said railroad; also ground adjacent to such right of way for station buildings, depots, machine shops, side tracks, turn-outs, and water stations, not to exceed in amount twenty acres for each station, to the extent of one station for each ten miles of its road.

"Sec. 4. That any railroad company desiring to secure the benefits of this act 146 shall, within twelve months after the location of any section of twenty miles or its road, if the same be upon surveyed lands, and, if upon unsurveyed lands, within twelve months after the survey thereof by the United States, file with the register of the land office for the district where such land is located a profile of its road; and upon approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the plats in said office; and thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way: Provided, That if any section of said road shall not be completed within five years after the location of said section, the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to any such uncompleted section of said road."

The uniform construction of this act has been that it is a grant "in presenti of lands to be thereafter identified." Jamestown & N. R. Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 125, 44 L. ed. 698, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568. In that case the question was whether the right of way became definitely located by the actual construction of the railroad, or only upon the filing of a map of location, which was much later. The conclusion was that, by the actual construction of the railroad, the boundaries of the grant were fixed by the rule of the statute, which granted a strip 100 feet wide on each side of the center of the track. That had been the construction of the act by the Interior Department, and was followed by the court below. Mr. Justice McKenna, for this court, said: "The ruling gives a practical operation to the statute, and we think is correct. It enables the railroad company to secure the grant by an actual construction of its road, or, in advance of construction, by filing a map [of its road] as provided in § 4. Actual construction of the road is certainly unmistakable evidence and notice of appropriation." It was therefore held that an entry made after construction, but before filing a map of location, was subject to the prior right of the railroad.

Possibly station grounds might also have been secured *by the actual marking[147 of the boundaries and the construction of station houses, side tracks, etc. This we need not decide. But the 4th section of the act provides a method for securing the benefits of the act in advance of actual construction.

Prior to the initiation of any right here involved, the Land Department put in force certain regulations to be followed by railroad companies desiring to secure the benefits of a grant in advance of actual construction, as provided by the 4th section of the act. One of these required that upon the location of any section, not exceeding 20 miles in length, the company should file with the register of the land district in which the land lay "a map for the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, showing the termini of such portion and its route over the public lands," etc. Another of these departmental regulations provided that "if the company desires to avail itself of the provisions of the law which grants the use of ground adjacent to the right of way for station buildings . . . it must file for approval, in each separate instance, a plat showing, in connection with the public surveys, the surveyed limits and area of the ground desired." These regulations require that "a copy" of the approved map of "definite location," and of the "approved plat of ground selected by a company, under the act in question, for station purposes," shall be transmitted to the register of the land office where the land lies. Upon the receipt of the map of alignment, the land office is required "to mark upon the township plats the line of the route of the road as laid down on the map," and to note in pencil on the tract books opposite the tract of public land cut by said lines of railroad, "that the same is disposed of subject to the right of way," etc., and to write upon the face of any certificate disposing of said lands, after the filing of such approved map of location, "that it is allowed subject to the right of way." A 148]like duty is *put upon the register when an approved station ground plat is received.

The plat of the station grounds selected by the railroad company in this case was filed in the local land office on September 12, 1888, and reached the Secretary of the Interior on September 20, 1888. Both dates are antecedent to the filing of the pre-emption claim. But the selection pended in the office of the Secretary of the Interior until December 15, 1888, on which date it was approved. While thus pending the pre-emption right of Reed was initiated.

There can be no doubt that the provisions of the 4th section, for securing in advance of construction the benefits of the act, have application to the station grounds, as well as to the right of way proper. The "benefits" to be secured cover one as well as the other. The prerequisite for securing either right, in advance, is the filing of a map of location, whether it be for a right of way or for station grounds. But until approved the appropriation stands suspended.

The act of 1875 confers upon the railroad company the "right to take" from the public lands adjacent to its right of way, ground for station purposes. This "right to take" in advance of construction is subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. When, therefore, the railroad company has exercised its "right to take" a particular tract for station purposes, by filing a survey and plat of the ground selected, the Secretary of the Interior is called upon to interpret the law under which the right to take is claimed, and to determine the lawfulness of the taking, as of the time when the right was asserted by the filing of the plat and survey. When he acts and for the government consents, by approving the plat, his approval operates to give effect to the grant, the land upon which it operates being thereby definitely determined. Therefore it is that a claim 149]by another, initiated pending his *conclusion, is cut off, by giving effect, to the approval as of the date when his action was invoked. The principle is that which has been many times applied in conflicting claims to indemnity lands, under railroad land grants. In such cases the patent, when issued, is held to relate to the date of the filing of the railroad company's list of selections in lieu of place lands lost, thereby defeating adverse rights initiated after the actual filing of the list of selections. The same rule has likewise been applied to lists of selections made by states to which a grant has been made subject to location. In both classes of cases, it has been many times ruled that while no vested right against the United States is acquired until the actual approval of the list of selections, the company does acquire a right to be preferred over such an intervener. In other words, the patent, when issued, relates back to the initiatory right, and cuts off all claimants whose rights were initiated later. The question was fully reasoned out and the cases reviewed in Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. ed. 258, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, and we can add nothing to the conclusiveness of that case.

But it is said that the doctrine of relation does not apply to the benefits to be acquired under the 4th section of the act of March 3, 1875, because a railroad desiring a right of way in advance of construction must do three specific things: first, make a definite location of its route; second, file a profile map of its line with the register of the land office for the district; and third, obtain the approval of that map by the Secretary of the Interior; and that the act makes each of these things a prerequisite to the acquirement of any right, by expressly declaring that "thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way."

In Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. v. Doughty, 208 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 474, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291, the question was whether a homestead application filed *after[150 the railroad company had surveyed and staked out its route across the quarter section claimed, but before the road had been constructed or its map of location filed, was entitled to preference over the right later secured by the approval of a map of alignment, following the route which had been staked. The claim was that the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of the map of location related in date to the date when the route was staked out, and thus cut out the homestead claim. This court held that the mere surveying and staking of a route was not such actual possession and appropriation as to give effect to the grant and bring the case under the authority of Jamestown & N. R. Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 125, 44 L. ed. 698, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

The distinction and essential difference between a mere staking out of a route, which, being the act of the company alone, is changeable at its will, and actual construction, which necessarily fixes the position of the route and consummates the purpose for which the grant of a right of way is given, is very obvious, and was carefully pointed out in the opinion of the court in the case referred to.

Another point was involved and decided in the Doughty Case; namely, that the approval of the map of alignment by the Secretary of the Interior would not relate to the date of the surveying and staking out of the route. This was manifestly so, since that survey and staking were subject to change at any time before the permanent line was located by the filing of a map of such locations for the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. Therefore it is that the doctrine of relation has always been applied in reference to the date when the official action of the Department was invoked to confirm the location thus permanently settled. These points were conclusive against the railroad company and were the only questions for decision. The case was therefore rightly decided.

But that case does not control this. Here we are required to say whether a pre-emptor whose claim was *initiated while the Secretary of the Interior had under consideration the approval of a map of station grounds thereby obtained a right to be preferred. True, this approval did not occur until after the rights of the plaintiffs in error had been initiated; but the patent to the pre-emptor did not issue until long after that approval. Upon what principle can it be held that the grant, which, under any view of the case, is prior in date to the patent under which plaintiffs in error claim, is subordinate in right as to the overlap? Neither should the case of Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. v. Doughty, be regarded as construing the 4th section of the act as holding that, pending the approval of a map of final location, any right may be initiated which will be superior to the title which vests upon such approval. No such question was involved in that case. What is said in the opinion about the grant of a right of way being dependent upon the doing of three things,—location of road, filing profile of it in the land office, and the approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior,—and that “thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way,” refers to the nonvesting of any right as against the United States, and not as denying the priority of right in the acquisition of the premises as between parties, growing out of priority of application.

Any construction of the 4th section of the act of 1875 which would permit rights initiated while the Secretary of the Interior was considering the approval of a map of location of a right of way over public lands, or a plat of survey of depot grounds, to prevail over rights resulting from the prior commencement of proceedings for the acquisition of title, would be in conflict with the settled practice of the Land Department and the repeated rulings of this court under other acts. Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. ed. 258, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

Any other conclusion would lead to great confusion and *tend to defeat the purpose of the 4th section by inviting interveners to initiate rights made desirable by the disclosure of the land most available to the railroad company, and rights presumably hurtful to the railroad enterprise; which Congress intended to encourage and promote.

The principle applicable is fully discussed in Shepley v. Cowan, cited above, where, after discussing certain prior cases, the court said:

“But whilst, according to these decisions, no vested right as against the United States is acquired until all the prerequisites for the acquisition of the title have been complied with, parties may, as against each other, acquire a right to be preferred in the purchase or other acquisition of the land when the United States have determined to sell or donate the property. In all such cases the first in time in the commencement of proceedings for the acquisition of the title, when the same are regularly followed up, is deemed to be the first in right.”

The initiatory act, to which the final act of approval relates, is the filing with the Secretary of the Interior of the map of definite location. The mere surveying and staking of a route is the tentative act of the railroad. It might at will select a different route and move its stakes. But when it adopts a route definitely and then causes a map of such route to be filed in the land office of the district, in duplicate, and then filed with the Secretary of the Interior, a right is thereby initiated which, until disposed of, rightly precludes the creation of a later right, and gives to the company, as prior in time, priority in right. The foundation for this doctrine of relation is so fully stated and so thoroughly vindicated by the opinion in Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, cited above, that we need say nothing more.

It is next said that the register did not, after a copy of the approved map of station grounds had been transmitted *to him, mark the proper township plat and tract books, as required by the regulations of the Land Department, so as to show the station land selected. This notation on the books of the local land office is for the purpose of giving notice to future enterers. But this was not required to be done until the receipt in the land office of the approved plat of station grounds. That approval did not occur until December 15, 1888. Reed filed his right of pre-emption October 18, 1888,—a date antecedent to any possible notation. He could not, therefore, have been misled, but, on the other hand, had the constructive notice which came from the then pending proceedings before the Secretary of the Interior. But aside from this, there are two answers to the contention: First, if we are right in holding that the grant vested in the company when the plat was approved, as of the date when filed, the failure of the officer in the district land office to properly mark the plat could not operate to defeat the grant; and, secondly, the railroad company, having done everything which it was required by law to do, should not be affected by the negligence of the register in not doing a duty upon which the vesting of title as against the United States did not depend. If the taking effect of the grant had been made to depend upon his properly marking the plat books, there would be no room for the doctrine of relation to the initiatory step of filing the plat of selection. As that is not the case, his neglect to do something not vital to the vesting of title will not defeat the title so vested.

When the plat of station grounds was approved by the Land Department, the grounds so selected were segregated from the public lands, and it was the duty of the Land Department to withdraw the land so granted from the market. If a subordinate failed to make the proper notation by which this withdrawal would have been recorded, it was not the fault of the railroad company. In Van 154] Wyck v. Knevals*, 106 U. S. 360, 367, 27 L. ed. 201, 203, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336, this court said of the effect of the approval of a map of definite location:

"No further action is required of the company to establish the route. It then becomes the duty of the Secretary to withdraw the lands granted from market. But if he should neglect this duty, the neglect would not impair the rights of the company, however prejudicial it might prove to others. Its rights are not made dependent upon the issue of the Secretary's order, or upon notice of the withdrawal being given to the local land officers."

We therefore conclude that the subsequent issue of a patent to the land entered by Reed was subject to the rights of the railroad company theretofore acquired by approval of its station ground map. The patent is not an adjudication concluding the paramount right of the company, but in so far as it included lands validly acquired theretofore, was in violation of law, and inoperative to pass title.

Certain other questions have been touched upon in the briefs. None of them need special notice.

We find no error in the judgment of the Idaho court, and it is therefore affirmed.

*CHICAGO & ALTON RAILROAD[155
COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

NATHANIEL T. KIRBY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 155-166.)

Carriers — discrimination — special service.

1. An undue and unreasonable preference forbidden by the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1284), §§ 3, 6, and the act of February 19, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 847, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1309), is accorded a shipper by a special agreement by which a carrier undertakes to expedite a carload shipment of horses over its own lines so that it will reach the point of connection with the next carrier in time to be carried by a special fast stock train leaving that point the next morning, the shipper being charged the regular established joint through rates, which made no provision for such special service.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — discrimination — breach of illegal contract.

2. A shipper cannot recover damages for a breach of the carrier's special agreement by which, contrary to the act of February 4, 1887, §§ 3, 6, and the act of February 19, 1903, it undertook, for the regular established joint through rate, to expedite a carload shipment of horses over its own lines so that it would reach the point of connection with the next carrier in time to be carried by a special fast stock train, although the shipper did not see or know that the established rates and schedules made no provision for such special service.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e; Contracts IV. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 226.]

NOTE.—On the right of carrier to discriminate with respect to special or unusual service—see note to State ex rel. Ellis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 506.

As to the right of a carrier at common law to discriminate between passengers or shippers—see note to Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Wilson, 18 L.R.A. 105.

As to what constitutes an unlawful preference or discrimination by a carrier under interstate commerce regulations—see note to Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 230.

Argued April 25, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Appellate Court for the Third District, which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Sangamon County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action of assumpsit. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 242 Ill. 418, 90 N. E. 252.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Garrard B. Winston and William Patten argued the cause, and, with Mr. Silas H. Strawn, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Whatever may have been the law prior to the passage of the interstate commerce act as to the right of a common carrier to make special contracts with special members of the public for different privileges or facilities or rates for the transportation of the same commodity, since the new act has governed interstate transportation, no such right now exists.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 392, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 522, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

Which contract is valid? The special contract of guaranty with Kirby, or the contract open to the public in general with his competitor?

Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 80, 81, 52 L. ed. 681, 694, 695, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

The interstate commerce act and its amendments seeks to provide a complete code for the government of carrier and shipper in their relations to each other with respect to tariffs and rates, all aimed at the purpose of enforcing an absolute equality between shippers, and preventing the granting of any privilege to the shipper which may affect the value of the services performed.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 439, 51 L. ed. 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075.

The facility and service of specially expedited transportation, or transportation by a particular connection or train, is such that it requires publication to be lawful.

Barnes, Interstate Transp. § 415; Elliot, Railroads, 2d ed. § 1684; Shiel v. Illinois C. R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 211; Diamond Mills v. Boston & M. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 311; St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 90; Re Mobile & O. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 373, 380; Re Unlawful Rates, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 121; Commercial Club v. Northern P. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 288; Victor Fuel Co. v. Atehison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 119, Kansas City Hay Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 631; C. C. Folmer & Co. v. Great Northern R. Co. 15 Inters. Com. Rep. 33; National Lumber Co. v. San Pedro, L. A. & S. L. R. Co. 15 Inters. Com. Rep. 434; Barrett Mfg. Co. v. Central R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 464; Armour Car Lines v. Southern P. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 461; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 748.

Amendments of the act after the cause of action arose may be looked to as a means of justifying the judicial construction of the act before amendment.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 447, 51 L. ed. 561, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075.

The rate sheet, standing alone, does not constitute the schedule of rates required by the law, but is only a part of it; the other part being the official classification referred to in it, and filed with it; and the two must be read together as component parts of the schedule of rates.

Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 72 Minn. 357, 75 N. W. 602.

The classification sheet is binding on both carrier and shipper.

Smith v. Great Northern R. Co. 15 N. D. 195, 107 N. W. 56.

The elements of classification are those that affect either the cost or risk of carriage to the carrier, or the value of carriage to the shipper. So the elements must necessarily be important which impose a great degree of care on the carrier.

Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 586.

Then, too, the risk of loss or damage and the liability for the same are matters which the carrier may take into consideration in fixing its rate. The risk of loss or damage by breach of a special contract for specially rapid service would legitimately increase the rate, and therefore the special service should not be performed at the tariff rate for common-law service.

Millinery Jobbers' Asso. v. American Exp. Co. 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 498.

All contracts entered into with common carriers are presumed to be governed by the classification in force at the time of the shipment. Whether such classification is just or unjust, it is nevertheless binding both upon the common carrier and the shipper, so long as the same remains in force. The tariff thus fixed must govern regardless of any contract for a greater or less rate.

Smith v. Great Northern R. Co. supra.

If the rate is duly published, and thus called to the attention of shippers and consignees, they cannot depend for the lawful rate or charge on what may be quoted by the carrier's agent, but must be guided by the published tariffs themselves.

Suffern H. & Co. v. Indiana, D. & W. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 255; Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 43 L.R.A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936, 24 So. 552, overruling Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Dismukes, 94 Ala. 131, 17 L.R.A. 113, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 200, 10 So. 289; Kinnavey v. Terminal R. Asso. 81 Fed. 802; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Hamburger, 155 Fed. 849.

Where the rate sheet states that the rates are subject to an official classification filed with the Commission, which specifically states in detail the rates under a form of bill of lading, called uniform bill of lading, limiting the common-law liability, and stating that rates on property not shipped subject to the uniform bill are a specified percentage higher than the reduced rates under the uniform bill, the schedule was sufficient to inform shippers that the rates given were for carriage with limited liability.

Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 72 Minn. 357, 75 N. W. 602; Church v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 14 S. D. 443, 85 N. W. 1001.

Kirby was presumed to know, upon proof of the due filing and publication of the schedules, that they were in existence, open for his inspection, and that his contract must be and was made in accordance therewith, and the rate of 65 cents being quoted and accepted by him, he was presumed to know that he could legally receive therefor only the service permitted by and set forth in the schedules, and not a special service.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 161; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 690, 37 L. ed. 896, 902, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilete Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 439, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 72, 80, 81, 52 L. ed. 681, 691, 694, 695, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 476-478, 55 L. ed. 297, 301, 302, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

It goes without saying that a contract to perform an additional and special service for Kirby for the regular schedule rate is a discrimination in his favor as completely as if he were given the regular schedule service for a lower rate than the tariff rate, or for a different compensation.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

No action can be maintained in which the plaintiff, to make out his case, must necessarily invoke aid from an illegal demand or contract.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 548, 549, 48 L. ed. 679, 685, 686, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Maysville Brick Co. 132 Ky. 643, 116 S. W. 1183; Gerber v. Wabash R. Co. 63 Mo. App. 145; Raleigh & G. R. Co. v. Swanson, 102 Ga. 754, 39 L.R.A. 275, 28 S. E. 601; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Hamburger, 155 Fed. 849; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Bundick, 94 Ga. 775, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 289, 21 S. E. 995.

This judgment which was rendered for a loss suffered by reason of the breach of an alleged unlawful contract for a special service, not provided for, but, on the contrary, prohibited by the published tariff in force at the time of the transaction, cannot be affirmed without opening the door to fraud and evasion of the purposes of the act.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 478, 55 L. ed. 297, 301, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

Mr. Albert Salzenstein argued the cause, and, with Mr. James M. Graham, filed a brief for defendant in error:

There was no unlawful discrimination under the interstate commerce act.

Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. ed. 585, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Foster v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 56 Fed. 434; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 37, affirmed in 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 493, 42 L. ed. 243, 251, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 165, 42 L. ed. 414, 422, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 536, 554, 50 L. ed. 585, 593, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R.

Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 982, 94 C. C. A. 217, 168 Fed. 161, 16 Ann. Cas. 613; United States ex rel. Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 159 Fed. 975; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 141 Fed. 1003. See also 2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 538.

If the contract had violated the interstate commerce act, the right to recover damages occasioned by the neglect and failure of the railroad to notify the Michigan Central in reasonable time to provide for the connection would still exist.

Insurance Co's. v. Carrier Co's. 91 Tenn. 538, 19 S. W. 755; Central R. Co. v. Sims, 169 Ala. 295, 53 So. 826; Merchant's Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 201, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

That this case was decided before the amendments to the interstate commerce act, which are now in existence, and which prohibit the shipper from doing anything or imposes a penalty on him, can make no difference in a case where the shipper is innocent of any wrongful intent and does not knowingly violate the law, but relies upon the statement of the carrier.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 364, 164 Fed. 376; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

In the famous case of the Standard Oil Company it was held by the court of appeals that the Standard Oil Company could not be held guilty of a violation of the act unless it had actual knowledge of a preferential rate.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 364, 164 Fed. 376.

The general rule that an illegal contract is void and unenforceable is qualified by the exception that where a contract is not evil in itself, and its invalidity is not denounced as a penalty by the express terms or by rational implication from the language of the statute which it violates, and that statute prescribes other specific penalties, it is not the province of the courts to do so, and they will not thus affix an additional penalty not directed by the law-making power.

Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 551; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S.

621, 25 L. ed. 188; Fackler v. Ford, 24 How. 322, 16 L. ed. 690; Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 79, 13 L. ed. 901; People ex rel. Power v. Rose, 219 Ill. 63, 76 N. E. 42; Bea v. People, 101 Ill. App. 132; Pangborn v. Westlake, 36 Iowa, 546; Wenninger v. Mitchell, 139 Mo. App. 420, 122 S. W. 1130; Hobbs v. Boatright, 195 Mo. 693, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 113 Am. St. Rep. 709, 93 S. W. 934; Duval v. Wellman, 124 N. Y. 156, 26 N. E. 343; Michener v. Watts, — Ind. —, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 142, 96 N. E. 127; Brady v. Central Western R. Co. 88 Neb. 840, 130 N. W. 575; 9 Cyc. 550, 552.

Where the parties to a contract against public policy or otherwise illegal are not in pari delicto, or equally guilty, which may not be, and where public policy is considered as advanced by allowing either, or at least the more excusable of the two, to sue for relief against the transaction, relief is given to him.

Kirby v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 242 Ill. 432, 90 N. E. 252; 9 Cyc. 551.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

Action in assumpsit to recover damages for the breach of a special contract for the shipment of a carload of high-grade horses from Springfield, Illinois, to New York city. There was a jury, verdict and judgment, which was affirmed by the supreme court of Illinois. The facts essential to be here stated are these: Kirby was engaged in developing high-grade horses, and desired to send a carload to be sold at a public sale to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York city. Several routes were available, and the published livestock rates for carload shipments were the same by each route. It was, however, desirable to send them by the route which would insure their arrival in the shortest time after delivery to the carrier.

The declaration in substance avers that the plaintiff in error, knowing the anxiety, of the shipper for quick transportation, and that the horses were to enter the horse sale to be held late in the month, did, on January 24, 1906, contract and agree to carry a car, rented by defendant in error, loaded with horses, for the consideration of $170.60, over its own rails from Springfield to Joliet, Illinois, and there deliver so that it would be carried by a fast stock train known as the "Horse Special," over the M. C. Railroad, through to New York. Said horse special was run but three times each week, and was due to leave Joliet the following morning. It is then alleged that the defendant in error, as directed by the railroad company, delivered and loaded his horses on the afternoon of the 24th; but that the company did not promptly carry and deliver the same to the said 163]fast stock train on *the morning of the 25th, as it had guaranteed to do, having failed to make connection with that train; and, that, as a consequence, the car was forwarded by a later and much slower train, and the horses were delivered in New York forty-eight hours after they would have arrived had they been carried by the Horse Special, as the plaintiff in error undertook. As a result of this prolonged transportation, the horses did not reach New York in time to be put in proper condition for the horse sale, whereby the defendant in error sustained damages aggregating several thousand dollars.

The plaintiff in error pleaded the general issue and under this presented certain defenses which we shall pass by, as not constituting questions of law or fact open to review upon a writ of error to a state court.

The single Federal question arises upon the validity of the contract to so carry these horses as to deliver them at Joliet, to be carried through to New York by the Horse Special, leaving Joliet on the 25th of January.

That the railroad company had established and published through joint rates and charges upon carload shipments of live stock to New York is not disputed. The rates furnished the defendant in error were the regularly published rates. Those rates and schedules did not provide for an expedited service, nor for transportation by any particular train. Neither was Kirby required to pay any other or higher rate for the promised special service, by which his car was to be carried so as to be attached to the fast stock special and carried by it to New York.

By the 3d section of the original act of 1887 (24 Stat. at L. p. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1284), it is made unlawful to give any undue or unreasonable "preference or advantage" to any particular person, or to subject any particular person to "any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatever." By the 6th section of the same act it is required that the car-164]riers subject to the act shall *print and keep for public inspection schedules showing the rates, charges, and classifications, "and any rules or regulations which in any wise change or affect or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates and fares and charges." The same section also provides as follows: "And when any such common carrier shall have established and published its rates, fares, and charges in compliance with the provisions of this section, it shall be unlawful for such common carrier to charge, demand, collect, or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property, or for any services in connection therewith, than is specified in such published schedule of rates, fares, and charges as may at the time be in force."

58 L. ed.

By the act of February 19, 1903, known as the Elkins act, amending the act of 1887 (32 Stat. at L. p. 847, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1309), it is made "unlawful for any person, persons, or corporation to offer, grant, or give, or to solicit, accept, or receive, any rebate, concession, or discrimination in respect of the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce by any common carrier subject to said act to regulate commerce and the acts amendatory thereto, whereby any such property shall, by any device whatever, be transported at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by such carrier, as is required by said act to regulate commerce and the acts amendatory thereto, or whereby any other advantage is given or discrimination is practised."

The implied agreement of a common carrier is to carry safely and deliver at destination within a reasonable time. It is otherwise when the action is for a breach of a contract to carry within a particular time, or to make a particular connection, or to carry by a particular train. The railroad company, by its contract, became liable for the consequence of a failure to transport according to its terms. Evidence of diligence would not excuse. If the *action had been for the common-law 165 carrier liability, evidence that there had been no unreasonable delay would be an answer. But the company, by entering into an agreement for expediting the shipment, came under a liability different and more burdensome than would exist to a shipper who made no such special contract.

For such a special service and higher responsibility it might clearly exact a higher rate. But to do so it must make and publish a rate open to all. This was not done.

The shipper, it is also plain, was contracting for an advantage which was not extended to all others, both in the undertaking to carry so as to give him a particular expedited service, and a remedy for delay not due to negligence.

An advantage accorded by special agreement which affects the value of the service to the shipper and its cost to the carrier should be published in the tariffs; and for a breach of such a contract, relief will be denied, because its allowance without such publication is a violation of the act. It is also illegal because it is an undue advantage, in that it is not one open to all others in the same situation.

In Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 57, 72, 52 L. ed. 681, 691, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428, Mr. Justice Day, dealing with a violation of the act by carrying out a contract for a rate after the rate had been changed by publication of a higher rate, said:

"The Elkins act proceeded upon broad lines and was evidently intended to effectuate the purpose of Congress to require that all shippers should be treated alike, and that the only rate charged to any shipper for the same service under the same conditions should be the one established, published, and posted as required by law. It is not so much the particular form by which or the motive for which this purpose was accomplished, but the intention was to prohibit any and all means that might be resorted to to obtain or receive concessions and rebates from the fixed rates, duly posted and published."

166] *The broad purpose of the commerce act was to compel the establishment of reasonable rates and the uniform application. That purpose would be defeated if sanction be given to a special contract by which any such advantage is given to a particular shipper as that contracted for by the defendant in error. To guarantee a particular connection and transportation by a particular train was to give an advantage or preference not open to all, and not provided for in the published tariffs. The general scope and purpose of the act is so clearly pointed out in New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272, and in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075, as to need no reiteration.

That the defendant in error did not see and did not know that the published rates and schedules made no provision for the service he contracted for is no defense. For the purposes of the present question he is presumed to have known. The rates were published and accessible, and, however difficult to understand, he must be taken to have contracted for and advantage not open to others. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

The claim that the defendant in error may recover upon the carrier contract, stripped of the illegality, under Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. ed. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367, is not presented by this record. The declaration counted only upon the breach of a special contract which was illegal. There was no count based upon the carrier's liability for negligence in not promptly shipping and delivering. The judgment was rested upon the damages resulting from the breach of the special contract, and not at all upon the liability of the carrier otherwise.

For the error in not holding the special contract invalid under the interstate commerce act, the judgment must be reversed and the case remanded for such further proceedings as are not inconsistent with this opinion.

*CHESTER S. JORDAN, Plff. in Err., [167]
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 167-177.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — procedure — burden of proof.

One convicted of crime in a state court is not denied due process of law because, on the motion for a new trial, based upon the suggestion of the insanity of a juror, the state, conformably to the local law, was only required to establish the sanity of the juror by a fair preponderance of the evidence, and not beyond a reasonable doubt. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 774-778, 799-803, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 519.]

Argued April 16, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to review a conviction of murder affirmed by the Supreme Judicial Court of that state. Affirmed.

See same case below in Supreme Judicial Court, 207 Mass. 259, 93 N. E. 809.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Arthur Thad Smith and Harvey H. Pratt argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles W. Bartlett and Jeremiah S. Sullivan, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

By the terms of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, a state is prohibited from depriving any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. The duty of seeing to it in the first instance that due process of law is observed in the trial of the citizen devolves necessarily upon the state. The conduct of the courts and the procedure therein is placed exclusively in the power of the state, and to the state is intrusted the duty of seeing to it that the constitutional rights of citizens are retained for them.

NOTE.—On burden of proof as to sanity — see note to State v. Scott, 36 L.R.A. 726.
225 U. S.

Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 950, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 234, 235, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 350, 355, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1066, 1068, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 357; State v. Cartwright, 20 W. Va. 45; State v. Prescott, 7 N. H. 292.

Upon the voir dire it is well settled that if the prisoner challenges a juror, even for a disability extrinsic of his mental qualifications, all that it is necessary for him to do is to introduce evidence that is sufficient to create a reasonable doubt in the mind of the court. Having done that, it is the duty of the government to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the juror is a proper one.

Holt v. People, 13 Mich. 226.

If it appears that a situation exists in which there is any possibility that the jurors were not mentally in condition to perform their duties, the verdict must, as a matter of law, be set aside, as it is not consistent with the underlying principles of justice and of constitutional rights that there should be the slightest suspicion that the prisoner has not had a fair and impartial trial at the hands of a tribunal unquestionably competent mentally to hear him.

Ryan v. Harrow, 27 Iowa, 494, 1 Am. Rep. 302; Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 137, 64 Am. Dec. 328; State v. Greer, 22 W. Va. 825; Kellogg v. Wilder, 15 Johns. 455; State v. Baldy, 17 Iowa, 39; Gregg v. McDaniel, 4 Harr. (Del.) 367; State v. Bullard, 16 N. H. 139; People v. Ransom, 7 Wend. 417; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. 512; Hogshead v. State, 6 Humph. 59.

Even in those cases where it has been held that the mere presence of intoxicating liquor in the jury room is not sufficient, but that it must appear that the jurors have partaken of it, the courts are agreed on the proposition as laid down by Bronson, J., in Wilson v. Abrahams, 1 Hill, 207, that "where there is reason to suspect that he (the juror) has drunk so much . . . as to unfit him for the proper discharge of his duty, the verdict ought not to stand."

Where there has been an improper separation of the jury during the trial, the prisoner, if found guilty, is entitled to the benefit of the presumption that the irregularity has been hurtful to him, and the onus is on the state to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant has sustained no injury on account of the separation.

State v. Robinson, 20 W. Va. 751, 43 Am. Rep. 799; Monroe v. State, 5 Ga. 145; State v. Prescott, 7 N. H. 287; Jumpertz v. People, 21 Ill. 411; Maher v. State, 3 Minn. 447, Gil. 329; McLain v. State, 10 Yerg. 241, 31 Am. Dec. 573; Woods v. State, 43 Miss. 364; State v. Evans, 21 La. Ann. 321; Organ v. State, 26 Miss. 78; State v. Dolling, 37 Wis. 396.

The same principle is the basis of the practically unanimous holding of the courts of this country, including this court, that due process of law is not observed if a defendant in a capital case be tried before a less than the constitutional number of jurors, even though the defendant himself consent to such procedure.

Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 358; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 349, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1066, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

According to the position taken by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, if the state furnishes at the outset a proper tribunal consisting of twelve qualified jurors, and some time during the trial, through sickness or death, it ceases to be a constitutional tribunal, in that it consists of less than twelve men, it would not be the duty of the state to interest itself in the slightest in that situation; but it would be for the defendant to assume the onus of showing that he was being deprived of his constitutional rights, and if he did not do so the trial would proceed, the verdict be rendered, and a judgment of death pronounced, based upon that verdict. It is respectfully submitted that the unbroken line of authorities in this country holds that as soon as such a situation arises, at the suggestion of the prisoner or anyone else, even though the state has at the outset furnished a competent and constitutional tribunal, it is the duty of the state, of its own motion, whether the defendant acquiesces affirmatively or does nothing to stop the proceeding, to undo what has been done.

Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 590, 28 L. ed. 262, 268, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128; Dickinson v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 625, 159 Fed. 801; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351.

Mr. James M. Swift, Attorney General of Massachusetts, argued the cause. and.

with Mr. Walter A. Powers, Assistant Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The words "due process of law" do not prescribe particular rules or forms of procedure for state trials.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. ed. 986, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 50 L. ed. 421, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 236, 44 L. ed. 747, 750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

As to the mode of procedure in a trial court of a state, the phrase "due process of law" requires only that the conduct of the case be in accordance with the regular procedure of the state, and that such procedure shall not deprive the accused of a fundamental right.

Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 93, 23 L. ed. 678, 679; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 950, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 173, 50 L. ed. 421, 425, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189.

If the supreme court of a state has acted in consonance with the constitutional laws of a state and its own procedure, it could only be in very exceptional circumstances that this court would feel justified in saying that there had been a failure of due legal process.

Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

Given a court of justice which has jurisdiction and acts, not arbitrarily, but in conformity with a general law, upon evidence, and after inquiry made, with notice to the parties affected and opportunity to be heard, then all the requirements of due process, so far as it relates to procedure in court and methods of trial and character and effect of evidence, are complied with.

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 110, 53 L. ed. 97, 110, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

The state may regulate the number of challenges in criminal cases (Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350); it may prescribe the qualifications of jurymen in criminal cases (Re Shibuya Jugiro, 140 U. S. 291, 35 L. ed. 510, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770); it may prescribe the number of jurors in criminal cases (Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494); and if it is within the power of the state to say both the number and the qualifications of jurors in a criminal case, it may well prescribe that eleven jurors and one who qualifies by a fair preponderance of the evidence as to his sanity shall constitute the trial jury.

In the Federal courts the denial of a new trial is not assignable as error.

Pickett v. United States, 216 U. S. 456, 54 L. ed. 566, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Bucklin v. United States, 159 U. S. 682, 40 L. ed. 305, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

There is no rule of the common law which prescribes that, in a capital case, unless it be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the juror was sane, a new trial shall be granted.

4 Bl. Com. 375, 376; Rex v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 638, 3 Revised Rep. 282; Com. v. Green, 17 Mass. 533; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. 496; State v. Howard, 118 Mo. 127, 24 S. W. 41; State v. Scott, 8 N. C. (1 Hawks) 24; Surles v. State, 89 Ga. 167, 15 S. E. 38; Wall v. State, 126 Ga. 549, 55 S. E. 484; Burik v. Dundee Woolen Co. 66 N. J. L. 420, 49 Atl. 442; Hogshead v. State, 6 Humph. 59.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was convicted of the crime of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme judicial court of the commonwealth of Massachusetts [173 sets]. The case is brought here upon a single question; namely, that the plaintiff in error has been denied due process of law under the 14th Amendment, because he was tried by a jury which included one Willis A. White, concerning whose sanity it is said there existed reasonable doubt.

The jury had been selected in the usual way, and White had been accepted without knowledge by the state or the defendant of any question concerning his mental fitness. It was impaneled on April 20, 1909. On May 4 it was charged, and on the same day returned a verdict. On May 10, a motion for a new trial was made, based upon the suggestion by counsel for the prisoner that the juror White, during the hearing and at the time the verdict was agreed upon, was insane and incompetent to participate as a juror. The motion was heard by two of the trial justices of the superior court, and much oral evidence bearing upon the sanity of the juror was introduced, all of which has been preserved by a bill of exceptions. At the conclusion of the evidence the prisoner presented no less than seventy-two requests for rulings and findings, made part of the record. The court found and ruled as follows:

"We find by a fair preponderance of all the evidence as a fact that the juror Willis A. White was of sufficient mental capacity during the entire trial of Chester S. Jordan until after the verdict was returned, to intelligently consider the evidence, appreciate the arguments of counsel, the rulings of law, the charge of the court, and to arrive at a rational conclusion, and therefore we deny the motion.

"Having found the above fact, we deem it unnecessary to consider the requests for rulings." [207 Mass. 274, 93 N. E. 809.]

The numerous requests for rulings and special findings all relate to the burden of proof and the rules for the weighing of evidence upon the issues presented.

The supreme judicial court, after a consideration of the evidence upon which this finding was based, ruled that it could not be said that there was not evidence warranting the conclusion of the trial judges.

We shall assume that both the trial court and the supreme judicial court have sustained the verdict of the jury because they were of opinion that it was not essential that the sanity of the juror under the circumstances of this case should be established by more than a fair preponderance of the evidence. The insistence is that thereby the constitutional guaranty of due process of law, found in the 14th Amendment, has been violated.

That the procedure in this case was in conformity with the Constitution and law of Massachusetts is determined by the judgment and opinion of the supreme judicial court.

Subject to the requirement of due process of law, the states are under no restriction as to their method of procedure in the administration of public justice. That the court had jurisdiction and that there was a full hearing upon the issue made by the suggestion of the insanity of the juror is not questioned. "Subject to these two fundamental conditions, which seem to be universally prescribed in all systems of law, . . . this court has, up to this time, sustained all state laws, statutory or judicially declared, regulating procedure, evidence, and methods of trial, and held them to be consistent with due process of law." Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 111, 53 L. ed. 77, 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

In Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 950, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, it is said:

"Without attempting to define exactly in what due process of law consists, it is sufficient to say that, if the supreme court of a state has acted in consonance with the constitutional laws of a state and its own procedure, it could only be in very exceptional circumstances that this court 56 L. ed.

would feel justified in saying that there had been a failure of due legal process. We might ourselves have pursued a different course in this case, but that is not the test. The plaintiff in error must [175 have been deprived of one of those fundamental rights, the observance of which is indispensable to the liberty of the citizen, to justify our interference."

In Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366, it appeared that a deaf person was tried and convicted of murder. It was claimed that he had been denied due process of law because he had not heard a word of the evidence, and that the evidence should have been repeated to him through an ear trumpet, although it was not clear that he could have been made to understand by that means. After saying that the state court had jurisdiction of the person and of the subject-matter, this court said:

"The appellant was not deprived of his liberty without due process of law by the manner in which he was tried, so as to violate the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution. That Amendment, it has been said by this court, 'did not radically change the whole theory of the relations of the state and Federal governments to each other and of both governments to the people.' Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 448, 34 L. ed. 519, 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 175, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

"We are unable to see how jurisdiction was lost in this case by the manner of trial. The accused was compos mentis. No claim to the contrary is made. He knew he was being tried on account of the killing of the deceased. He had counsel and understood the fact that he was on trial on the indictment mentioned, but he did not hear the evidence. He made no objection, asked for nothing, and permitted his counsel to take his own course. We see no loss of jurisdiction in all this and no absence of due process of law. It is to be regretted that the testimony was not read or repeated to him. But that omission did not affect the jurisdiction of the court."

In Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 236, 44 L. ed. 747, 750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620, it was said:

"It is no longer open to contention that the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not control mere forms of procedure in state courts or regulate practice therein. All its requirements are complied with, provided in the proceedings which are claimed not to have been due process of law the person condemned has had sufficient notice, and adequate opportunity has been afforded him to defend. Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

Due process implies a tribunal both impartial and mentally competent to afford a hearing. But to say that due process is denied when a competent state court refuses to set aside the verdict of a jury because the sanity of one of its members was established by only a preponderance of evidence would be to enforce an exaction unknown to the precedents of the past, and an interference with the discretion and power of the state not justified by the demands of justice, nor recognized by any definition of due process.

In criminal cases due process of law is not denied by a state law which dispenses with a grand jury indictment and permits prosecution upon information, nor by a law which dispenses with the necessity of a jury of twelve, or unanimity in the verdict. Indeed, the requirement of due process does not deprive a state of the power to dispense with jury trial altogether. Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494. When the essential elements of a court having jurisdiction in which an opportunity for a hearing is afforded are present, the power of a state over its methods of procedure is substantially unrestricted by the due process clause of the Constitution.

Touching the power of the states over their procedure for the administration of their police power, Mr. Justice Moody, in Twining v. New Jersey, cited above, said: 177 "The power of their people ought not to be fettered, their sense of responsibility lessened, and their capacity for sober and restrained self-government weakened by forced construction of the Federal Constitution. If the people of New Jersey are not content with the law as declared in repeated decisions of their courts, the remedy is in their own hands."

The proceeding here in question was in absolute conformity to the Massachusetts law of criminal procedure, and no fundamental principle of justice was violated by a determination of the mental capacity of the juror by a preponderance of the evidence. Neither is there any established rule of the common law inconsistent with the practice adopted in this case. There are many decisions in accord with the Massachusetts view of the law, among them being: State v. Scott, 8 N. C. (1 Hawks) 24; Burik v. Dundee Woolen Co. 66 N. J.

L. 420, 49 Atl. 442; State v. Howard, 118 Mo. 127, 24 S. W. 41; Surles v. State, 89 Ga. 167, 15 S. E. 38.

In Hogshead v. State, 6 Humph. 59, the supreme court of Tennessee held that the trial court erred in not granting a new trial when it appeared "probable" that a juror was insane. But in Tennessee the denial of a new trial is assignable as error and reversible upon writ of error.

Our conclusion is that the plaintiff in error has not been denied due process of law, and the judgment is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Pitney took no part in the hearing or consideration of this case.

*NATIONAL BANK OF NEWPORT, [178
New York, Appt.,
v.

NATIONAL HERKIMER COUNTY BANK, of Little Falls.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 178-187.)

Bankruptcy — voidable preference — indirect transfer.

1. To constitute a preference voidable under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3445), § 60, as amended by the act of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 799, chap. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1314), it is not necessary that the transfer of the insolvent's property be made directly to the creditor. It may be made to another, for his benefit.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — voidable preference — depleting estate.

2. A creditor of a bankrupt cannot be charged with receiving a voidable preference by transfer, within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 60, as amended by the act of February 5, 1903, unless he takes by virtue of a disposition by the insolvent debtor of his property for the creditor's benefit, so that the estate of the debtor is thereby diminished.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — set-off — purchase of claim by creditor.

3. An indorser of a bankrupt's note is prevented, by the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 68b, from using such note as a set-off or counterclaim to his own indebtedness to the bankrupt, where, knowing the maker's insolvency, he took up the note with that intent within four months prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, X., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On set-off in bankruptcy cases—see note to Morgan v. Wordell, 55 L.R.A. 33.

Bankruptcy — voidable preference — payment by indorser.

4. A bank discounting a note on the indorsement of the payee, who took the avails for his own use, and demanding and receiving as collateral upon renewal specific property of the payee, having already been given a general pledge of the payee's property to secure this and other indebtedness, is not chargeable with receiving a preference voidable under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 60, where the payee, within four months of the maker's adjudication in bankruptcy, paid the note before maturity with his own funds and received back the collateral, charging the amount so paid to the maker, to which he was indebted in a larger sum on open account, and receiving a corresponding credit on the maker's books.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 172.]

Argued February 28 and 29, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the District Court for the Northern District of New York in favor of complainant in a suit by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover the amount of an alleged preference, remanded the cause with instructions to dismiss the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 155, 172 Fed. 529.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry J. Cookinham argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Any payment, out of the ordinary course of business, is presumptive evidence of the intent of the insolvent to give a preference.

Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; Walbrun v. Babbitt, 16 Wall. 577, 21 L. ed. 489; Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Dokken v. Page, 77 C. C. A. 674, 147 Fed. 438; Re Gesas, 77 C. C. A. 291, 146 Fed. 734.

It was the intent of Congress to declare voidable any transfer of property that benefited one creditor to the detriment of others, provided it was made within four months of the filing of the petition, and providing the creditor receiving the benefit knew, or had reasonable cause to believe, a preference was intended, no matter by what subterfuge it was effected.

Re Sanderson, 149 Fed. 273; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co. 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213, 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822; Re Beerman, 112 Fed. 663; Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 64 C. C. A. 256, 129 Fed. 728; Benjamin v. Chandler, 142 Fed. 217.

56 L. ed.

The rule is that it is not necessary to show that a creditor has actual knowledge that the debtor is insolvent. The circumstances which would lead an ordinarily prudent man to believe that a preference was intended are sufficient. In this case, however, the creditor had actual knowledge that the Newport Knitting Company was insolvent at the time of the payment.

Sundheim v. Ridge Ave. Bank, 138 Fed. 951; Re Hines, 144 Fed. 543; Re Virginia Hardwood Mfg. Co. 139 Fed. 209; Parker v. Black, 143 Fed. 560; Webb v. Sachs, 4 Sawy. 158, Fed. Cas. No. 17,325; Coder v. McPherson, 82 C. C. A. 99, 152 Fed. 951.

The facts seems to bring this case under the rule frequently laid down by the courts as to what will be considered knowledge or reasonable cause to believe the debtor insolvent and that a preference is intended.

Thomas v. Adelman, 136 Fed. 973; West Philadelphia Bank v. Dickson, 95 U. S. 180, 24 L. ed. 407; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Cook, 95 U. S. 342, 24 L. ed. 412; Rogers v. Palmer, 102 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 164; Sage v. Wyncoop, 104 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 740; Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 1, 102 Fed. 735; Sundheim v. Ridge Ave. Bank, 138 Fed. 951; Re Hines, 144 Fed. 543; Re Virginia Hardwood Mfg. Co. 139 Fed. 209; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 72 App. Div. 331, 76 N. Y. Supp. 92, 495, affirmed in 177 N. Y. 68, 69 N. E. 228.

Mr. Myron G. Bronner argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

When the defendant received the money on this note from the Titus Sheard Company it had no reasonable cause to believe that the payment was intended as a preference within the provisions of the bankruptcy law.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 446, 45 L. ed. 1176, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Keith v. Gettysburg Nat. Bank, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 14; Deland v. Miller & C. Bank, 119 Iowa, 368, 93 N. W. 304; Benedict v. Deshel, 177 N. Y. 1, 68 N. E. 999; Buchanan v. Smith, 16 Wall. 277, 21 L. ed. 280; Crittenden v. Barton, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 775; Re Eggert, 102 Fed. 735; Re Eggert, 98 Fed. 843; Re Jacobs, 39 C. C. A. 647, 99 Fed. 539; Wetstein v. Franciscus, 67 C. C. A. 62, 133 Fed. 900; Suffel v. McCartney Nat. Bank, 127 Wis. 208, 115 Am. St. Rep. 1004, 106 N. W. 837, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co. 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213, 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822; Re Andrews, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Off v. Hakes, 73 C. C. A. 464, 142 Fed. 364; Grant v. First Nat. Bank, 97 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 971; Barbour v. Priest, 103 U. S. 297, 26 L. ed. 480; Stucky v. Masonic Sav. Bank, 108 U.

S. 74, 75, 27 L. ed. 640, 641, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Cannon v. James M. Bell Co. 34 Misc. 734, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1024; Pearsall v. Nassau Nat. Bank, 74 App. Div. 89, 77 N. Y. Supp. 11; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. ed. 481; Upson v. Mt. Morris Bank, 103 App. Div. 367, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1101; Perry v. Booth, 67 App. Div. 235, 73 N. Y. Supp. 216.

If it had appeared that the Newport Knitting Company had actually placed with the Titus Sheard Company, the full amount represented by the note in question, to the defendant as the holder, the defendant could, notwithstanding, under the facts in this case, have proved the note in the full amount against the bankrupt's estate.

Re Wyly, 116 Fed. 38.

If the plaintiff were suing as the trustee in bankruptcy of the Titus Sheard Company, and not of the Newport Knitting Company, and all the elements necessary for a recovery by the plaintiff had been proved, except the one below referred to, he could not succeed, because the transaction creating the preference did not take place within four months of the filing of the petition; it clearly appearing, without dispute, that the accounts receivable, which were assigned by the Titus Sheard Company as security for the note, were assigned to the defendant on the 22d day of August, which was more than four months before the filing of the petition.

Sabin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974; Re Little, 110 Fed. 621.

Again, to put the matter in another light, if we assume that the Titus Sheard Company, was the bankrupt, and that the defendant held its note for $5,000, the same as in this case, and that the plaintiff was suing as its trustee to recover the amount paid on the note as a preference, same as now, he could not succeed, because the defendant would not be a "creditor" of the Titus Sheard Company, within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, for the reason that its debt or claim was not "provable" in bankruptcy because secured, and, consequently, the payment of the same by the Titus Sheard Company, and the redemption of the collateral pledged as security for the same, was entirely legal, even though the defendant actually knew that the Titus Sheard Company was entirely insolvent at the time of such payment.

Richardson v. Shaw, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842; Re Little, 110 Fed. 621; Young v. Upson, 115 Fed. 192; Re West Norfolk Lumber Co. 112 Fed. 759.

The plaintiff cannot claim that the knowledge of Titus Sheard, who was a director of the defendant, of any facts which, if brought to the defendant itself, would have made it reasonable to believe that the payment was intended as a preference, was chargeable to the defendant, because said Sheard was in no way acting for the bank, but entirely in behalf of his own business and interest.

Cragie v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 131, 52 Am. Rep. 9, 1 N. E. 537; New York v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 111 N. Y. 457, 18 N. E. 618; Constant v. University of Rochester, 111 N. Y. 604, 2 L.R.A. 734, 7 Am. St. Rep. 769, 19 N. E. 631; Holden v. New York & E. Bank, 72 N. Y. 294; Fulton Bank v. New York & S. Canal Co. 4 Paige, 127, and note: First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 292, 19 Am. Rep. 181; Getman v. Second Nat. Bank, 23 Hun, 503; Bank of United States v. Davis, 2 Hill, 463; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 72 App. Div. 331, 76 N. Y. Supp. 92, 495.

Whatever knowledge Sheard had obtained of the insolvency of the Newport Knitting Company, it was plainly not obtained in any transaction in which he was operating for the defendant by reason of the fact that he was one of the directors.

Bank of United States v. Davis, 2 Hill, 463; Casco Nat. Bank v. Clark, 139 N. Y. 313, 36 Am. St. Rep. 705, 34 N. E. 908.

There are other cases which tend to sustain the transaction.

Upson v. Mt. Morris Bank, 103 App. Div. 371, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1101; Re New, 116 Fed. 116; North v. Taylor, 61 App. Div. 255, 70 N. Y. Supp. 339.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the district court of the United States for the northern district of New York by Charles B. Mason, as trustee in bankruptcy of the Newport Knitting Company, to recover the amount of an alleged preference. Decree for the complainant was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, which remanded the cause with instruction to dismiss the bill. 97 C. C. A. 155, 172 Fed. 529. Subsequently, the trustee assigned the claim in suit to the National Bank of Newport, New York, which was substituted as complainant and brought this appeal.

The bankrupt, the Newport Knitting Company, was organized in 1900, by Titus Sheard and his associates, and was engaged in the manufacture of knit goods at Newport, New York. Proceedings for its voluntary dissolution were begun in October, 1903, and on December 30, 1903, a petition in bankruptcy was filed against it. It was adjudged a bankrupt on January 23, 1904.

Several of the officers and directors of this company were also officers and directors of a corporation known as the Titus Sheard Company, which manufactured knit goods at Little Falls. Titus Sheard was the leading spirit in both corporations; in each his son-in-law was the secretary and his nephew the general manager. The books of the Newport Knitting Company were kept at the office of the Titus Sheard Company. It does not appear that either company held stock in the other, nor is it shown to what extent the same persons had a stock interest in both. And upon the record the conclusion must be that, while the management of the two concerns was largely in the same hands, they were distinct organizations, conducting separate businesses.

The Titus Sheard Company had a deposit account and discounted its paper with the defendant, the National Herkimer County Bank of Little Falls, of which Sheard was a director. The Newport Knitting Company was not a customer of the defendant bank, but kept its account with the National Bank of Newport.

The transaction which is alleged to constitute a preference was as follows: On January 7, 1901, the Newport Knitting Company gave its note for $5,773.05, at four months, to the Titus Sheard Company, to pay for machinery and supplies. The Titus Sheard Company indorsed the note and had it discounted by the defendant bank, receiving the avails for its own use. The note was reduced by part payment to $5,000, and for this sum it was renewed every four months with like indorsement, the last renewal of this sort being on May 11, 1903.

In August, 1903, the defendant bank held a large amount of paper made or indorsed by the Titus Sheard Company, and insisted upon security. Thereupon the Titus Sheard Company submitted to the bank a statement of its affairs, *and on August 11, 1903, executed an instrument, also signed by Mr. Sheard and certain other officers individually, by which, after reciting the determination to liquidate its business, they purported to pledge its "mill property, all the machinery in the same, and the warehouse, together with all our assets of our company, and also the individual properties, as per list hereto attached, to secure the National Herkimer County Bank for all notes of ours which they now hold, or may hereafter hold, and for all paper indorsed by us, now held by the bank, or that may be held by it in the future." This agreement evidently contemplated that the Titus Sheard Company should continue in possession of its property and should have charge of the winding up of its affairs, on the understanding expressed, which was, in substance, that the property should be speedily converted into money, that bills payable held by creditors other than the bank should be renewed so far as possible, and that "all surplus moneys, as fast as collected, not required to pay the outstanding notes held by other creditors," should be applied in payment of the indebtedness to the bank. It was declared to be the intention to dispose of the property so that all the indebtedness should be paid before January 1, 1904.

On August 22, 1903, there was substituted for the above-mentioned note of the Newport Knitting Company, indorsed by the Titus Sheard Company and held by the bank, a new three months' note of the Newport Knitting Company for the same amount, similarly indorsed; and the Titus Sheard Company secured this note by the delivery to the bank of specific assignments of its bills receivable, amounting to $6,300. On September 26, 1903, before maturity, the Titus Sheard Company paid to the bank the amount of this note, less accrued interest, $4,953.33, and took up the note and collateral. This payment was made by the Titus Sheard Company, acting in its own behalf, by a check drawn against the funds to its credit in the bank. The amount [183 so paid was then charged by that company to the Newport Knitting Company, to which it was indebted on open account in a larger sum; and on the books of the Newport Knitting Company a corresponding credit was given to the Titus Sheard Company. So far as appears, this charge of the sum paid on the note against the amount owing to the Newport Knitting Company was not known to the bank.

It is insisted that this transaction amounted to a preference of the bank by the Newport Knitting Company. It is said that "the bankrupt parted with property to the amount of the note, and the bank received it and was benefited to that amount," to the detriment of the other creditors of the Newport Knitting Company, then insolvent; or, as the district court put it, that "a short cut was taken by common consent, and the check was passed to the bank and the amount charged to the Knitting Company, so that it, in fact, paid the note."

The pertinent provisions of the bankruptcy act as they stood at the time the transaction occurred were as follows:

"Sec. 60. Preferred Creditors.—a. A person shall be deemed to have given a preference, if, being insolvent, he has, within four months before the filing of the petition, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself in favor of any person, or made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the enforcement of such judgment or transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class. . . .

"b. If a bankrupt shall have given a preference, and the person receiving it, or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall have had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee, and he may recover the property or its value from such person." [32 Stat. at L. 799, chap. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1314.]

184] *To constitute a preference, it is not necessary that the transfer be made directly to the creditor. It may be made to another, for his benefit. If the bankrupt has made a transfer of his property, the effect of which is to enable one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than another creditor of the same class, circuity of arrangement will not avail to save it. A "transfer" includes "the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security." Sec. 1 (25) [30 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3420]. It is not the mere form or method of the transaction that the act condemns, but the appropriation by the insolvent debtor of a portion of his property to the payment of a creditor's claim, so that thereby the estate is depleted and the creditor obtains an advantage over other creditors. The "accounts receivable" of the debtor, that is, the amounts owing to him on open account, are, of course, as susceptible of preferential disposition as other property; and if an insolvent debtor arranges to pay a favored creditor through the disposition of such an account, to the depletion of his estate, it must be regarded as equally a preference, whether he procures the payment to be made on his behalf by the debtor in the account,—the same to constitute a payment in whole or part of the latter's debt,—or he collects the amount and pays it over to his creditor directly. This implies that, in the former case, the debtor in the account, for the purpose of the preferential payment, is acting as the representative of the insolvent, and is simply complying with the directions of the latter in paying the money to his creditor.

But, unless the creditor takes by virtue of a disposition by the insolvent debtor of his property for the creditor's benefit, so that the estate of the debtor is thereby diminished, the creditor cannot be charged with receiving a preference by transfer. *Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 196 U. S. [185 502, 509, 49 L. ed. 571, 574, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, 419, 50 L. ed. 527, 532, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289. "These transfers of property, amounting to preferences, contemplate the parting with the bankrupt's property for the benefit of the creditor, and the consequent diminution of the bankrupt's estate." New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 147, 48 L. ed. 380, 384, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199.

Here, the payment to the bank did not proceed from the bankrupt, the Newport Knitting Company. The Titus Sheard Company had a standing quite apart from its relation to the Newport Knitting Company as a debtor in the account. In the transaction with the bank, the Titus Sheard Company acted on its own behalf. As the holder of the original note, that company had indorsed it to the bank, taking for its own benefit the proceeds of the discount. Its obligation as indorser was continued by the renewals, and to secure the bank on the last renewal it had deposited its own collateral. It took up the note with its own funds and received back the security. Neither directly nor indirectly was this payment to the bank made by the Newport Knitting Company, and the property of that company was not thereby depleted.

The fact, then, is not, as it is contended, that "the bankrupt parted with property to the amount of the note, and the bank received it," but rather that the bankrupt parted with nothing, and the bank received the money of the indorser, and redelivered to the indorser the paper and collateral. When the Titus Sheard Company took up the note, it was credited with the amount of the payment in its account with the Newport Knitting Company. But the question, in the circumstances disclosed, of the right of the Titus Sheard Company to a set-off against its indebtedness on the account, is distinct from the question whether the bank received a preference. Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, supra. It would be only by the allowance of such a set-off that the bankrupt estate would be diminished. And, as was said by the circuit *court of ap-[186 peals, "if the Sheard Company, knowing the Newport Company to be insolvent, acquired the note with a view to using it as a set-off or counterclaim against its debt, it could not legally do so. Bankruptcy Law, § 68b." The amount of the indebtedness of the Titus Sheard Company could still be collected by the trustee.

It is urged that, by virtue of the instrument already mentioned, which was executed by the Titus Sheard Company on August 11, 1903, all the assets of that company had been assigned to the bank, and hence, that the security placed with the bank on the last renewal of the note was already held under this instrument, and continued to be so held after the note was taken up, despite the surrender of the specific assignments. It is said further that, as a result of the execution of this instrument, the bank "stepped into the place of the Sheard Company," and knew the condition of the account with the Newport Knitting Company and the charge that was made to it.

The argument attributes to the instrument undue importance and an effect which it did not accomplish. It was far from being an adequate legal security. Apparently, the Titus Sheard Company was left in the possession of the property, and its officers continued its management with freedom to sell, to collect accounts, to pay outstanding notes held by others than the bank (so far as they could not be renewed), and generally to liquidate the business in accordance with the expressed intention to convert the assets into money as speedily as possible, and thus to meet all the obligations to the bank. To this end, the company and its officers were to "work faithfully," and the surplus moneys as fast as realized were to be devoted to the payment of the indebtedness. It was natural that the bank should require security for the note of a more definite and satisfactory character; that is, proper collateral. And when the bank received the specific collateral deposited by [187] the Titus Sheard Company on the *renewal, the bank obtained a control over it which otherwise it did not possess, and this control is surrendered on the redelivery. In view of the effort that was being made to reduce the obligation of the company held by the bank, it cannot be thought surprising that the note with the collateral was taken up before maturity. It was not shown that the bank had nothing to do with the credit to the Titus Sheard Company in its account with the Newport Knitting Company. Nor does it appear that the bank knew of the condition of this account, or had any reason to believe that it was proposed to set off the payment against an indebtedness to the bankrupt.

The bank dealt with the Titus Sheard Company as the indorser of the paper; and the trustee failed to establish any right to recover the moneys it received.

Decree affirmed

56 L. ed.

M. ANDERSON

v.

PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP COMPANY,
Claimant of the Steamship "Queen," etc.
(No. 641.)

N. JORDAN

v.

PACIFIC COAST COMPANY, Claimant of the Steamship "Umatilla," etc. (No.
642.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 187-205.)

Statutes — revision and amendment — construction.

1. An intention to alter the scope and purpose of an existing law cannot be imputed to Congress because in the Revised Statutes it placed in two separate sections portions of what was a single section of the original act.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 410-424, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pilots — state regulation — Federal regulation — compulsory pilotage.

2. Coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register, whether employing Federal pilots or not, are not exempted from the liability for pilotage fees created by Cal. Pol. Code, §§ 2432, 2466, 2468, upon proper tender of resident bar pilot service when entering or leaving the port of San Francisco, by the act of February 28, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 440, chap. 100), § 51, re-enacted as U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4401, 4444, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3016, 3037, which provides that "every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under register, shall, when under way, except on the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steamboats," and prohibits the states from imposing upon pilots of steam vessels "herein provided for" any obligation to procure an additional license, or any regulation which will impede them "in the performance of their duties as required by this act," or levying any pilot charges upon any "steamer piloted as herein provided," with a proviso that nothing therein shall be construed to annul or affect any state regulation requiring vessels entering or leaving port "other than coastwise steam vessels" to take a state pilot.

[For other cases, see Pilots, 3-24, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 641 and 642.]

Argued February 21, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

NOTE.—On liability of vessel or owner for compulsory pilotage fees—see note to Clayton v. Hebb, 39 L.R.A. 177.

As to the effect on state pilotage laws of congressional prohibition against discrimination—see note to Olsen v. Smith, 49 L. ed. U. S. 224.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, presenting questions as to whether coastwise registered seagoing steam vessels are exempt from state pilotage regulation. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Hughes:

The certificate in these cases is as follows:

"The libels in the above cases involve the question of the power of a state to make pilotage regulations for certain classes of registered seagoing steam vessels when entering and leaving harbors within the confines of the state.

"The steamers 'Queen' and 'Umatilla' were regularly sailing under register, and were either on a voyage from the port of San Francisco, in the state of California, to a United States port on Puget sound, or 189] from a United States port on Puget sound to said port of San Francisco; but in either such case said vessels did, while en route between said ports of the United States, stop at the port of Victoria, British Columbia, to and from which port of Victoria she did then carry and did then and there deliver and receive both passengers, mail, and freight. Both vessels sailed direct to Victoria from San Francisco and direct to San Francisco from Victoria. At least ninety (90) per cent of passengers and cargo was carried between the United States ports, and the parties stipulated that the voyage for which the vessels cleared was between Puget sound ports of the United States and San Francisco, with the right to stop and trade en route at Victoria. The stop at Victoria on each occasion was for about an hour. The officers of each vessel had Federal pilot's licenses, and each vessel was in fact piloted in entering and leaving the port of San Francisco by such an officer. Each of the vessels was tendered pilotage services—the 'Umatilla' on leaving port and the 'Queen' on entering—by a resident bar pilot of the port of San Francisco, duly commissioned, and acting under the law of the state of California. In each case the tender was declined. The ships refused to pay the pilotage fees imposed by the following sections of the Political Code of the state of California:

"2468. Pilotage and half pilotage.—All vessels sailing under an enrolment, and licensed and engaged in the coasting trade between the port of San Francisco and any other port of the United States, shall be exempt from all pilotage unless a pilot be actually employed. All foreign vessels and all vessels from a foreign port or bound thereto, and all vessels sailing under a register between the port of San Francisco and any other port of the United States, shall be liable for pilotage as provided in section twenty-four hundred and sixty-six (2466) of this Code.'

"2466. Rates of pilotage at San Francisco.—The following shall be the rates of pilotage into and out of the harbor of [190 San Francisco: All vessels under five hundred (500) tons three ($3) dollars per foot draught; all vessels over five hundred (500) tons three ($3) dollars per foot draught and three (3c.) cents per ton for each and every ton, registered measurement; and every vessel spoken, inward or outward bound, except as hereinafter provided, shall pay the said rates. A vessel is spoken by day by a pilot boat displaying a Union Jack or by night displaying a torch or flare up within a distance of three (3) miles of the vessel. In all cases where inward-bound vessels are not spoken until inside of the bar, the rates of pilotage herein provided shall be reduced fifty (50) per cent. Vessels engaged in the whaling or fishing trade shall be exempt from all pilotage except where a pilot is actually employed.'

"2432. Vessel, owner, etc., liable for pilotage.—All vessels, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, and the master and owners thereof, are jointly and severally liable for pilotage fees, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction.'

"On February 28, 1871 [16 Stat. at L. 440, chap. 100], Congress enacted an act for the better protection of persons on vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, etc., § 51 of which is pertinent to these cases. This section was in 1873 re-enacted in §§ 4401 and 4444 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3016, 3037). The portions of the section and its subsequent codification on which the court's questions are based are printed in parallel columns as follows:

"An Act to Provide for the Better Security of Life on Board of Vessels Propelled in Whole or in Part by Steam."	"Revised Statutes, Title 52, 'Regulation of Steam Vessels.'"
--	---

"Section 51. And be it further enacted that . . . every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States, and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under	"Rev. Stat. § 4401. . . . and every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States, and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under
---	---

the high seas, be un-register, shall, when under way, except on der the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steamboats. . . . Nor shall any pilot charges be levied by any such [state] authority upon any steamer piloted as herein provided. . . . Provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state, or of a state situate upon the waters of such state.'

"(The above in a single paragraph.)

"The pilots, appellants here, libeled the vessels in the United States district court for the northern district of California. The two cases were consolidated for trial 192]in *the district court. It was contended that there was a conflict between the Federal and the state law as to the control of the vessels for purposes of bar pilotage. The libellants relied upon the state law giving the resident state bar pilotage control of the vessels in question when entering or leaving port. The district court held that the Federal law excluded these vessels from state control, and the libels were dismissed.

"On appeal to this court it has become apparent that the decision of the two cases involves a question of conflict of jurisdiction between the state and the Federal government as to the pilotage of all steam vessels touching at both foreign and domestic ports on the one voyage, and also as to the pilotage of the large number of registered steam vessels now engaged in traffic between ports of the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts of the United States, both by way of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and the Isthmus of Panama and around South America. The decision will also affect the very large number of steam ves-inspectors of steamboats.'

"Rev. Stat. § 4444. . . . nor shall any pilot charges be levied by any such [state] authority upon any steamer piloted as provided by this title Nothing in this title shall be construed to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state, or of a state situate upon the waters of such state.'

sels which may reasonably be expected to sail between American ports on the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, via the Panama canal.

"In determining the intent of Congress in passing the act of February 28, 1871, the court had under consideration the following statutes: the act of August 7, 1789 [1 Stat. at L. 54, chap. 9], codified in § 4235 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903), recognizing and adopting the pilotage regulations of the various states so far as bar and entrance pilotage is concerned; § 9, paragraphs 9 and 10 of the steamship act of August 30, 1852, creating a certain class of Federal pilots (10 Stat. at L. 67, chap. 106, re-enacted in chapter 100, §§ 18 and 14 of the act of February 28, 1871 [codified in Revised Statutes, §§ 4442 and 4438, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3037, 3034]; act of May 27, 1848, [9 Stat. at L. 232, chap. 48] [codified in Revised Statutes, § 3126, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2036]], permitting registered vessels sailing between ports of the United States to trade with foreign ports; § 20 of the act of February 18, 1793 (1 *Stat. at L. 313, [193 chap. 8, codified in Revised Statutes, § 4361, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2980), providing for the regulation and duties of officers on registered vessels as to the carriage of foreign goods and distilled liquors and the making of manifests.

"The members of the court are unable to agree as to the interpretation of the cited portions of § 51 of the act of February 28, 1871, codified in Revised Statutes, § 4401 and 4444, and for this reason, and because of the importance of the interests affected, both governmental and commercial, the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit certify the following questions to the United States Supreme Court, and request its instructions upon them:

"1. Are coastwise seagoing steam vessels, sailing under register, and having officers with Federal pilot's licenses, free from any liability for pilotage fees created by §§ 2468, 2466, and 2432 of the Political Code of the state of California, upon the proper tender of services of resident bar pilots of the state pilotage establishment, when entering or leaving the port of San Francisco, by virtue of § 51 of the act of February 28, 1871, entitled, 'An Act to Provide for the Better Security of Life on Board of Vessels Propelled in Whole or in Part by steam,' as re-enacted of date December 1, 1873, in §§ 4401 and 4444 of Revised Statutes?

"2. Are there any provisions of title 52 of the Revised Statutes which may be construed as exempting coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register, whose officers have Federal pilot's licenses, from any liability for pilotage fees created by §§ 2468, 2466, and 2432 of the Political Code of the state of California, upon the proper tender of services of resident bar pilots of the state pilotage establishment, when entering or leaving the port of San Francisco, state of California, under the rule of construction laid down in the last sentence of § 51 of the act of February 28, 1871, entitled, 'An Act to Provide 194]*for the Better Security of Life on Board of Vessels Propelled in Whole or in Part by Steam,' and as re-enacted in § 4444 of the Revised Statutes?

"3. Did Congress intend to classify with the 'coastwise vessels' referred to in the last proviso of § 51 of the act of February 28, 1871, entitled, 'An Act to Provide for the Better Security of Life on Board of Vessels Propelled in Whole or in Part by Steam,' and re-enacted in § 4444 of the Revised Statutes, registered steam vessels engaged in commerce with both foreign and domestic ports on the same voyage?"

"4. Did Congress, in enacting the last proviso of § 51 of the act of February 28, 1871, re-enacted in § 4444 of the Revised Statutes, intent to exempt registered steam vessels whose officers have Federal pilot's licenses, from any liability for pilotage fees created by §§ 2468, 2466, and 2432 of the Political Code of the state of California, upon proper tender of services of resident bar pilots of the state pilotage establishment, on entering or leaving the port of San Francisco on regular voyages, on which they steamed to Victoria, British Columbia, and carried cargo, mail, and passengers direct thereto and direct therefrom; when, after leaving Victoria, British Columbia, on the outward voyage, they steamed to Puget sound ports of the state of Washington, for which they had originally cleared, and returned therefrom to Victoria, British Columbia; when the stop at Victoria, British Columbia, is for about an hour on each occasion; when at least ninety (90) per cent of the passenger and cargo traffic for the outward and inward voyages is between the port of San Francisco and the ports of Washington; and when the traffic with the foreign port may be deemed en route between the domestic ports?"

Mr. William Denman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants, Anderson and Jordan:

The intent of the legislation must be determined by the original act rather than the codification.

Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 1050

302, 36 L. ed. 429, 442, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

The Federal government had not established any system of residential bar pilotage in 1871, and has not since that time.

Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 456, 17 L. ed. 805, 806.

Under American shipping law, our vessels are classified into two great classes, "registered" vessels, which alone may engage in the foreign trade, and "enrolled and licensed" vessels, which are confined to coastwise domestic voyages or the fisheries.

Parsons, Shipping, p. 31.

The plain intent of the statute, the logic of the situation, viewed both from the standpoint of the history of the pilotage laws and of the necessities of navigation in 1871, and the decision, are all in accord. The state pilots have control of all registered vessels sailing coastwise.

Joslyn v. Nickerson, 1 Fed. 133; Murray v. Clark, 4 Daly, 473, affirmed in 58 N. Y. 684; Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 30 L. ed. 115, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Huus v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 182 U. S. 392, 45 L. ed. 1146, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Olsen v. Smith, 195 U. S. 332, 49 L. ed. 224, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

This court must regard the executive construction of the act.

United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236, 244, 46 L. ed. 890, 893, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

Mr. Graham Sumner argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George W. Towle, Thomas Thacher, Thomas D. Thacher, and Leland B. Duer, filed a brief for the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and the Pacific Coast Company:

Effect must be given to all provisions of a statute if such a construction is consistent with the general purposes of the act, and the provisions are not necessarily conflicting. One provision should not be construed to defeat or destroy another, but rather to explain and support it. If the same words or expressions occur in different parts of a statute, they must, as a general rule, be taken to mean the same thing.

Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112, 115, 25 L. ed. 782, 783; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 246, 37 L. ed. 152, 154, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; United States v. Hill, 123 U. S. 681, 31 L. ed. 275, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Re Jackson, 40 Fed. 372.

The office of a proviso generally is either to except something from the enacting clause, or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of it as extended to cases not intended by the legislature to be brought within its purview. Where the enacting clause is general in its language and objects, and a proviso is afterwards introduced, that proviso is construed strictly, and takes no case out of the enacting clause which does not fall clearly within its terms. A proviso carves special exceptions out of the enacting clause, and those who set up any such exceptions must establish them as being within the reason thereof.

United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 165, 10 L. ed. 689, 698; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 83, 23 L. ed. 807, 809; Minis v. United States, 15 Pet. 423, 445, 10 L. ed. 791, 799; Schma, R. & D. R. Co. v. United States, 139 U. S. 566, 35 L. ed. 268, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 181, 32 L. ed. 380, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

A proviso is most frequently intended to restrain the enacting clause and to except something which would otherwise have been within it. As a corollary, it is held that the general language in the enacting clause should be so construed that it would cover the matters contained in the proviso, if the enacting clause had stood alone.

Thaw v. Ritchie (Thaw v. Falls) 136 U. S. 519, 541, 34 L. ed. 531, 536, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 30, 6 L. ed. 253, 259.

It is also held that when a new statute is enacted which covers the same subject-matter as an old statute, but expressly repeals the old statute, it should be construed as continuing the old statute with such amendments, modifications, or changes as may appear in the new statute, and that the new statute should be construed to change or modify the old statute only in so far as such changes or modifications are clearly indicated.

Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 629, 28 L. ed. 269, 272, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 729, 740, 28 L. ed. 308, 312, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196.

If the new statute is ambiguous, the court is authorized to refer to the original statutes, from which the new section was taken, and to ascertain from their language and context to what class of cases the provision was intended to apply.

The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 122, 41 L. ed. 937, 943, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; United States v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 25 L. ed. 631; Meyer v. Western Car. Co. 102 U. S. 1, 11, 26 L. ed. 59, 60; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

It would have been simple for Congress in 1871, or when codifying the laws into 56 L. ed.

the Revised Statutes, to say, if it had intended or desired to do so, that all steam vessels sailing under license should be under the control and direction of Federal pilots, except when on the high seas, and that all other vessels should be subject to such pilotage regulations as the several states might adopt. The failure to accomplish a simple thing in a simple manner indicates clearly that it was not intended.

Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 83, 23 L. ed. 807, 809; United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 739, 28 L. ed. 311, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; United States v. Chase, 135 U. S. 259, 34 L. ed. 119, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, 8 Am. Crim. Rep. 649.

Mr. Justice Hughes, after making the above statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

When the Constitution of the United States was adopted, each state had its own regulations of pilotage. While this subject was embraced within the grant of the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states" (art. 1, § 8), Congress did not supersede the state legislation, but by the act of August 7, 1789, chap. 9, § 4 (1 Stat. at L. 53, 54, Rev. Stat. § 4235, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903), it was enacted that "all pilots in the bays, inlets, rivers, harbors, and ports of the United States, shall continue to be regulated in conformity with the existing laws of the states respectively wherein such pilots may be, or with such laws as the states may respectively hereafter enact for the purpose, until further legislative provision shall be made by Congress." This was "a clear and authoritative declaration by the first Congress, that the nature of this subject is such that until Congress should find it necessary to exercise its power, it should be left to the legislation of the states;" and it has long been established by the decisions of this court that, although state laws concerning pilotage are regulations of commerce, they fall within that class of powers which may be exercised by the states until Congress shall see fit to act. Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 319, 321, 13 L. ed. 996, 1004, 1005; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 459, 17 L. ed. 805, 807; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. 236, 240, 20 L. ed. 624, 625; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 26 L. ed. 234; Olsen v. Smith, 195 U. S. 332, 341, 49 L. ed. 224, 229, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52. In 1837 (5 Stat. at L. 153, chap. 22, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903), it was provided that a master of a vessel entering or leaving a port situate upon waters which are the boundary between two states might employ a pilot licensed by either state. There was no other Federal legislation upon the subject of pilots until 1852; 196]*and thus "for more than sixty years" it was "acted on by the states, and the systems of some of them created and of others essentially modified during that period." Cooley v. Port Wardens, supra, p. 321.

The act of August 30, 1852, chap. 106 (10 Stat. at L. 61), contained provisions for the licensing of pilots of steam vessels (§ 9, Ninth, id. 67). In Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 459, 17 L. ed. 805, 807, it was contended that the statute of the state of California of May 20, 1861, providing for port pilots at San Francisco, was in conflict with this act; but the court took the contrary view, holding that the Federal law did not relate to port pilots. The court said (pp. 460, 461): "The act of 1852 was intended, as its title indicates, to provide greater security than then existed for the lives of passengers on board of vessels propelled in whole or part by steam. . . . The act contains few provisions relating to pilots; Indeed, it was not directed to the remedy of any evils of the local pilot system. There were no complaints against the port pilots; on the contrary, they were the subjects of just praise for their skill, energy, and efficiency. The clauses respecting pilots in the act relate, in our judgment, to pilots having charge of steamers on the voyage, and not to port pilots; and the provision that no person shall be employed or serve as a pilot who is not licensed by the inspectors has reference to employment and service on the voyage generally, and not to employment and service in connection with ports and harbors."

In 1866, Congress passed a more comprehensive statute, embracing port pilotage (act of July 25, 1866, chap. 234, 14 Stat. at L. 227). After defining the vessels subject to the navigation laws of the United States, it enacted (§ 9) that "every seagoing steam vessel," so subject, should, "when under way, except upon the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steam vessels; vessels of other countries and public vessels of the United States only 197]excepted." In the following *year, however, this section was amended by the addition of a proviso that the act should not be construed to "annul or affect any regulation established by the existing law of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in such state" to take a state pilot (act of February 25, 1867, chap. 83, 14 Stat. at L. 411). The existing state laws respecting port pilotage again became operative. Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446, 451; Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131, 133.

The acts of 1852 and 1866 were repealed by the act of February 28, 1871, chap. 100 (16 Stat. at L. 440), the provisions of which were re-enacted in title 52 of the Revised Statutes. This act prescribes general regulations with respect to the licensing of pilots of steam vessels (§§ 14, 18; Rev. Stat. 4438, 4442, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3034, 3037), similar to those of the act of 1852. The requirements as to the port pilotage of coastwise seagoing steam vessels were set forth in § 51, to which reference is made in the questions propounded in the certificate. This section was as follows:

Sec. 51. And be it further enacted, That all coastwise seagoing vessels, and vessel[s] navigating the Great Lakes, shall be subject to the navigation laws of the United States when navigating within the jurisdiction thereof; and all vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and navigating as aforesaid, shall be subject to all the rules and regulations established in pursuance of law for the government of steam vessels in passing, as provided by this act; and every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States, and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under register, shall when under way, except on the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steamboats. And no state or municipal government shall impose upon pilots of steam vessels herein provided for any obligation to procure a state or other license in addition to that issued by the United States, nor other *regulation which[198 will impede such pilots in the performance of their duties, as required by this act; nor shall any pilot charges be levied by any such authority upon any steamer piloted as herein provided, and in no case shall the fees charged for the pilotage of any steam vessel exceed the customary or legally established rates in the state where the same is performed: Provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state, or of a state situate upon the waters of such state."

These provisions were incorporated in §§ 4401 and 4444 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3016, 3037), 199]which are still in force.† The *charge of arrangement which placed portions of what was originally a single section in two separated sections cannot be regarded as altering the scope and purpose of the enactment. For it will not be inferred that Congress, in revising and consolidating the laws, intended to change their effect, unless such intention is clearly expressed. United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 729, 740, 28 L. ed. 308, 312, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; United States v. LeBris, 121 U. S. 278, 280, 30 L. ed. 946, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 302, 36 L. ed. 429, 442, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617, United States v. Mason, 218 U. S. 517, 525, 54 L. ed. 1133, 1136, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

It will be observed that the requirement of § 51 of the act of 1871 (Rev. Stat. § 4401), as to the piloting of coastwise seagoing steam vessels, is limited and explicit. It is that "every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under register, shall, when under way, except on the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steamboats." This covers port pilotage, for it relates to such vessels "when under way, except on the high seas;" and it applies only to those "not sailing under register."

American vessels are of two classes: those registered, and those enrolled and licensed. "The purpose of a register is to declare the nationality of a vessel engaged in trade with foreign nations, and to enable her to assert that nationality wherever found. The purpose of an enrolment is to evidence the national character of a vessel engaged in the coasting trade or home traffic, and to enable such vessel to procure a coasting license. The distinction between these two classes of vessels is kept up throughout the legislation of Congress on the subject, and the word 'register' is invariably used in reference to the one class, and 'enrolment' in reference to the other." The Mohawk (United States v. Leetzel) 3 Wall. 566, 571, 18 L. ed. 67, 68. See Huus v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 182 U. S. 392, 395, 45 L. ed. 1146, 1150, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827. The act of December 31, 1792 (1 Stat. at L. 287, chap. 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2803), applicable exclusively to vessels engaged in foreign commerce and to their *registry, and the [200 act of February 18, 1793 (1 Stat. at L. 305, chap. 8, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2959), relating to vessels engaged in the coasting trade and fisheries, and to their enrolment, constituted the basis for the regulations of the two classes. The latter act contained a provision (§ 20, id. 313; Rev. Stat. § 4361, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2980) that any registered vessel when employed in going from one district in the United States to any other district should "be subject (except as to the payment of fees) to the same regulations, provisions, penalties, and forfeitures" as those prescribed in the case of vessels licensed for carrying on the coasting trade. This, however, had no reference to pilotage, for Congress had not made regulations upon that subject. In 1848 (act of May 27, 1848, 9 Stat. at L. 232, chap. 48, Rev. Stat. § 3126, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2036) it was provided that any vessel, "on being duly registered," might engage in trade between ports of the United States, "with the privilege of touching at one or more foreign ports during the voyage, and land and take in thereat merchandise, passengers and their baggage, and letters and mails."

Thus, at the time of the passage of the act of 1871, there were coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register and having this privilege of touching at foreign †Sec. 4401. All coastwise seagoing vessels, and vessels navigating the Great Lakes, shall be subject to the navigation laws of the United States, when navigating within the jurisdiction thereof; and all vessels, propelled in whole or in part by steam, and navigating as aforesaid, shall be subject to all the rules and regulations established in pursuance of law for the government of steam vessels in passing, as provided by this title; and every coastwise seagoing steam vessel subject to the navigation laws of the United States, and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, not sailing under register, shall, when under way, except on the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steamboats.

Sec. 4444. No state or municipal government shall impose upon pilots of steam vessels any obligation to procure a state or other license in addition to that issued by the United States, or any other regulation which will impede such pilots in the performance of the duties required by this title; nor shall any pilot charges be levied by any such authority upon any steamer piloted as provided by this title; and in no case shall the fees charged for the pilotage of any steam vessel exceed the customary or legally established rates in the state where the same is performed. Nothing in this title shall be construed to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state, or of a state situate upon the waters of such state.

ports, and also coastwise seagoing steam vessels, which were enrolled and licensed, not sailing under register. It was with respect to the vessels of the latter sort that Congress imposed the requirement of § 51 to use Federal pilots. The reason for the distinction may be found in the fact that the registered vessels, under the conditions of trade then existing, would presumably be engaged in the longer voyages, touching at foreign ports where Federal pilots would not avail, and at domestic ports, for all of which the ship's pilot might not hold a Federal license; and, as Congress did not create local Federal establishments for port pilotage, it was evidently deemed unwise to compel registered vessels in entering and leaving ports to be under the control of Federal pilots. Certainly the distinction was made; and 201]*the necessary effect of the limitation of the requirement was to exempt the coastwise seagoing steam vessels which did sail under register, from its terms.

As these registered vessels were free from this Federal regulation, they would be under no compulsion whatever as to port pilotage save by virtue of the operation of state laws. And it is an inevitable conclusion, on considering the prior history of pilotage regulations in this country and the policy which has been maintained with respect to the exercise of state authority, that, as Congress did not see fit to require Federal pilots, it left the regulation of port pilotage as to such vessels to the states.

It is contended, however, that although the employment of Federal pilots was not made compulsory for coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register in entering and leaving ports, still they had an option to use such pilots, and if in fact such a vessel was piloted by a Federal pilot, she could not be required to take a state pilot. The argument is based on the following provisions of § 51 (now found in Rev. Stat. § 4444):

"And no state or municipal government shall impose upon pilots of steam vessels herein provided for any obligation to procure a state or other license in addition to that issued by the United States, nor other regulation which will impede such pilots in the performance of their duties, as required by this act; nor shall any pilot charges be levied by any such authority upon any steamer piloted as herein provided, . . ."

This language gives no support to the contention. Wherever the regulations of the statute applied, they were absolute. The "pilots of steam vessels herein provided for" were those whom, under the provisions of the statute, the vessels described were bound to use. It was upon the pilots, whose use was made compulsory by the Federal law, that "no state or municipal government" was to impose any obligation to procure a state or other *license,[202 or any regulation which would impede them "in the performance of their duties, as required by this act." The "steamer piloted as herein provided" was the steamer required to be so piloted, and it was upon such steamer that no pilot charges were to be levied by state authority. The same construction must be given to these provisions as re-enacted in § 4444 of the Revised Statutes, where the words "piloted as provided by this title" take the place of the words "piloted as herein provided." The Federal requirement as to port pilotage of coastwise seagoing steam vessels was applicable only to those "not sailing under register;" as to those which sailed under register, there were no port pilots provided for, and the regulation of pilotage in the case of such vessels entering and leaving the state ports was left to the states. The fact that a vessel of this sort had on board a pilot holding a Federal license when the services of such a pilot were not required by the Federal law did not oust the state of the power to compel the use of a state pilot.

Nor was the proviso in § 51 of the act of 1871 (now the last sentence of Rev. Stat. § 4444) a restriction of this state authority. This proviso was as follows:

"Provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state, or of a state situate upon the waters of such state."

Manifestly, this did not enlarge the scope of the requirement as to Federal pilotage contained in the preceding portion of the section. The words "other than coastwise steam vessels" did not mean that the state could not require port pilots for coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register. For this would be to impute to Congress the intent to withdraw from the state the power to *act in the cases[203 omitted from Federal regulation. Even on the construction of the statute for which the appellees contend, it is conceded that "a coastwise steam vessel sailing under register, which is not piloted by a Federal pilot, may be compelled by the state to take a state pilot when entering or leaving port." And if in any case the vessel might be forced to take a pilot under the state law, it would necessarily follow that it is not excluded by the proviso from the operation of that law. The natural interpretation of the proviso is that it was intended to prevent misapprehension as to interference with local rules,—to declare the continued efficacy of those rules when not in conflict with the Federal authority,—and not to introduce an independent limitation of state power over port pilotage with respect to registered steam vessels, where the Federal control had not been asserted. The enacting clause and the proviso are to be read together “with a view to carry into effect the whole purpose of the law.” White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 551, 48 L. ed. 295, 297, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171. So read, the words “other than coastwise steam vessels” must be deemed to refer to those “not sailing under register,” to which the requirement of Federal pilots applied. The same meaning must be ascribed to this clause as it now appears in § 4444 of the Revised Statutes, taken, as it must be, in connection with § 4401.

The statute was thus construed in Murray v. Clark (1873) 4 Daly, 468, affirmed in 58 N. Y. 684, where a steamer sailing under register between New York and New Orleans, and touching at a foreign port, as was her privilege, was held to be subject to the law of the state of New York as to pilotage in entering the port of New York, although at the time she was under the control of her master, who was a pilot licensed by the Federal inspectors. In Joslyn v. Nickerson (1880) 1 Fed. 133, while it was held that a libel for pilotage could not be sustained, for the reason that the law 204] of Massachusetts, *in question, was not by its terms applicable, Judge Lowell said (page 135): “This statute” (referring to the Federal act of 1866) “has been modified, and the employment of such a pilot is now compulsory only upon coasting steam vessels not sailing under a register. Rev. Stat. § 4401. Murray v. Clark, supra. This vessel, therefore, was not bound to carry such a pilot, and was bound by any law of Massachusetts which might require her to take a local pilot. Rev. Stat. § 4444.” In Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 96, 30 L. ed. 115, 117, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, where a claim for pilotage under the law of Georgia was disallowed, the steamer “was a coastwise seagoing steam vessel,” and “was not sailing under register.” In Huus v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 182 U. S. 392, 394, 45 L. ed. 1146, 1149, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827, after quoting from §§ 4401 and 4444 of the Revised Statutes, the court said: “The general object of these provisions seems to be to license pilots upon steam vessels engaged in the coastwise or interior commerce of the country, 56 L. ed.

and at the same time, to leave to the states the regulation of pilots upon all vessels engaged in foreign commerce.” The steamer was enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade under the laws of the United States, and was engaged in trade between Porto Rico and New York after the treaty of cession. It was held that she was not within the pilotage laws of New York.

The provisions of the Political Code of the state of California, set forth in the certificate, do not apply to coastwise seagoing steam vessels “not sailing under register,” and are not in conflict with the statutes of the United States. Their enforcement is simply a recognition of the limits which Congress has thus far set to the exercise of the unquestioned Federal power. The criterion is not whether the stops of registered vessels at foreign ports may be deemed en route between domestic ports, and is not to be found in the length of such stops or in the relative amount of foreign trade. The statute made the distinction, *in the light of the well-known conditions of trade which existed at the time of its enactment, between coastwise seagoing steam vessels, not sailing under register, and those which did sail under register. Whether or not it is wise to establish Federal rules as to port pilotage for the registered vessels exempted from this regulation is a question for Congress to determine.

We conclude that each one of the questions certified should be answered in the negative.

It is so ordered.†

UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

M. J. BRAY et al.

(S. C. Reporter's ed. 205-219.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — injunction cases — final decree.

1. A decree of a Federal circuit court of appeals which, on the appeal authorized by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 7, as amended by the act of April 14, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 116, chap. 1627), to review interlocutory decrees of a circuit court granting an injunction, reversed such a decree and directed both that the injunction be dissolved and the bill dis-

†Petition for writs of certiorari to bring up the whole record in these cases denied May 27, 1912.

NOTE.—On practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal missed, is a final decree, and appealable to the Federal Supreme Court under § 6 of the former act, where the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked not solely upon the ground of diverse citizenship, but also upon the ground that the suit was one arising under an act of Congress, and the requisite jurisdictional amount was involved. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d; III. d, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — in injunction case — time.

2. The thirty-day limitation prescribed by the act of March 3, 1891, § 7, for appeals in injunction cases, applies only to appeals thereunder to the circuit courts of appeals.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — exclusive jurisdiction.

3. The exclusiveness of the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court of proceedings in bankruptcy precludes the maintenance in a Federal circuit court— even with the express leave of the bankruptcy court—of a plenary suit in equity brought by the surety for a bankrupt public contractor, involving collateral and extraneous matters with which the creditors of the bankrupt have no concern, but having for its primary purpose the control over the distribution of a fund in the trustee's possession admittedly belonging to the bankrupt's estate, and the determination to what extent and in what order the several creditors shall participate therein.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 111.]

Argued December 15, 1911. Decided May 27, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of West Virginia in a suit involving the distribution of a fund belonging to a bankrupt's estate, directed the dissolution of an interlocutory injunction and the dismissal of the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 96 C. C. A. 9, 170 Fed. 689.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. B. M. Ambler argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Van Winkle and M. G. Ambler, filed a brief for appellant:

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction of a controversy involving the rights and liabilities on a Federal contractor's statutory bond.

Henningsen v. United States Fidelity &

G. Co. 208 U. S. 404, 52 L. ed. 547, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Hardaway v. National Surety Co. 211 U. S. 552, 53 L. ed. 321, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

The limitation on this appeal is one year.

Allen v. Southern P. R. Co. 173 U. S. 479, 43 L. ed. 775, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 70, 44 L. ed. 375, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The circuit court has jurisdiction to decree a lien upon property within its district as in a local action.

Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 410, 39 L. ed. 203, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 51 L. ed. 703, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 53 L. ed. 208, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

The circuit court is not without jurisdiction because the property is a fund under administration of another court.

Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 53 L. ed. 208, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

The bill is within § 23a of the bankrupt law.

Bush v. Elliott, 202 U. S. 477, 50 L. ed. 1114, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 668; Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 521, 51 L. ed. 911, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596.

The lien exists.

Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 368, 53 L. ed. 208, 229, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 208 U. S. 404, 52 L. ed. 547, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Hardaway v. National Surety Co. 211 U. S. 552, 53 L. ed. 321, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

A motion to dismiss an appeal from a final decree of a circuit court of appeals is denied where the suit arises upon a bond conditioned according to the act of Congress of August 13, 1894, for the protection of persons furnishing material and labor for the construction of public works.

Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 208 U. S. 404, 52 L. ed. 547, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Mr. William M. Hall argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. A. Dupuy and L. T. Michener, filed a brief for appellees:

The district court has exclusive jurisdiction.

Bray v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 96 C. C. A. 9, 170 Fed. 689; Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 609, 52 L. ed. 642, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 169, 39 L. ed. 660, 15

Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

As to conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and state courts—see notes to Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A.

356; and J. I. Case Plow Works v. Finks, 26 C. C. A. 50.

On concurrent jurisdiction of Federal and state courts—see notes to Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 12 L.R.A. 725; and Smith v. M'Iver, 6 L. ed. U. S. 152.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749.

This so-called question of jurisdiction does not involve a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a Federal tribunal.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

Whether a suit is one that arises under the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States is determined by the questions involved. If from them it appears that some title, right, privilege, or immunity on which the recovery depends will be defeated by one construction of the Constitution, or law, or a treaty of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction, and that the suit is one which does really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy as to a right which depends upon the construction of the Constitution, or some law, or treaty of the United States, then the case is one arising under the Constitution, law, or treaty; otherwise the jurisdiction cannot be maintained on this ground.

Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 48 L. ed. 795, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 48 L. ed. 140, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 38 L. ed. 764, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. ed. 589, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 30 L. ed. 992, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Germania Ins. Co. v. Wisconsin, 119 U. S. 473, 30 L. ed. 461, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 257, 29 L. ed. 390, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 28 L. ed. 482, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Joy v. St. Louis, 122 Fed. 528; Minnesota v. Duluth & I. R. Co. 87 Fed. 497; Crystal Springs Land & Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 76 Fed. 151; Sawyer v. Concordia, 4 Woods, 273, 12 Fed. 754; Dowell v. Griswold, 5 Sawy. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 4,041.

The judicial power extends to all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution, but these are cases actually, and not potentially, arising, and jurisdiction cannot be assumed on a mere hypothesis. In this class of cases it is necessary to the exercise of original jurisdiction by the circuit court that the cause of action should depend upon the construction and application of the Constitution.

New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 38 L. ed. 764, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

If jurisdiction is to be determined by the mere fact that the bill alleged constitutional questions, there was, of course, jurisdiction. But that is not the sole criterion. On the contrary, it is settled that jurisdiction does not arise simply because an averment is made as to the existence of a constitutional question, if it plainly appears that such averment is not real and substantial, but is without color of merit.

Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 576, 48 L. ed. 799, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

Whether a suit is one that arises under the Constitution or laws of the United States is determined by the questions involved. If from them it appears that some title, right, privilege, or immunity on which the recovery depends will be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or a law of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction, then the case is one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 385, 37 L. ed. 212, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248, 257, 29 L. ed. 388, 390, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The pendency in the state court of an action in personam which involves no claim to or lien upon specific property in the possession of, or under the dominion of, a national court of equity, and no issue of which that court has acquired exclusive jurisdiction, presents no ground for a dependent bill to stay it.

Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548, 554, 23 L. ed. 983, 984; Standley v. Roberts, 8 C. C. A. 314, 19 U. S. App. 407, 59 Fed. 844; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Morris, 67 L.R.A. 761, 66 C. C. A. 58, 132 Fed. 948; Merritt v. American Steel-Barge Co. 24 C. C. A. 535, 49 U. S. App. 85, 79 Fed. 233; Green v. Underwood, 30 C. C. A. 164, 57 U. S. App. 535, 86 Fed. 429; Hughes v. Green, 28 C. C. A. 539, 56 U. S. App. 56, 84 Fed. 835; Hubinger v. Central Trust Co. 36 C. C. A. 496, 94 Fed. 790; Ogden City v. Weaver, 47 C. C. A. 492, 108 Fed. 568; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 57 C. C. A. 324, 119 Fed. 680; Ball v. Tompkins, 41 Fed. 490; Guardian Trust Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 76 C. C. A. 618, 146 Fed. 340, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 620, 96 C. C. A. 285, 171 Fed. 43.

The power of the circuit court under § 8 of the act of 1875, relating to liens on property, is not denied, but it is contended that there is no property within the district upon which the circuit court has, under that act, power to adjudicate, and therefore the complainants have not by their bill made out a case properly cognizable in the circuit court.

Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 501, 43 L. ed. 783, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Building & L. Asso. v. Price, 169 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 655, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

Or, to put the matter in another light, where it does not appear from any facts stated that there is a disputed construction of the law of the United States under which the complainant claims, and the contest is about the facts only, the Federal question is not presented.

Austin v. Gagan, 5 L.R.A. 476, 39 Fed. 626; Theurkauf v. Ireland, 27 Fed. 769; Murray v. Bluebird Min. Co. 45 Fed. 385; California Oil & Gas Co. v. Miller, 96 Fed. 17.

Mr. V. B. Archer also argued the cause and filed a brief for the Second National Bank of Parkersburg and Farmers & Mechanics National Bank:

On an appeal from an interlocutory order granting or continuing an injunction, the appellate court may direct the dismissal of the bill, where it is found to be without equity to support it.

Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham, 54 C. C. A. 119, 116 Fed. 785; Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 810, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

The district court alone was clothed with power and authority to distribute the funds in its control,—the alleged object of the bill in this cause.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal brings up for review a decree of the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, reversing a decree of the circuit court for the northern district of West Virginia in a suit in equity which was intended, inter alia, to affect a fund of $26,000 in the hands of the trustee of a bankrupt's estate then in the course of administration in the district court of that district. The decree reversed was an interlocutory one granting an injunction, but the decree of reversal was final, for it directed not only the dissolution of the injunction, but also the dismissal of the bill.

The complainant, the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, is a Maryland corporation; three of the defendants, the Second National Bank of Parkersburg, the Farmers & Mechanics National Bank of the same place, and the Nicolette Lumber Company, are citizens of West Virginia, resident in the district in which the suit was brought; seven of them, Jacob Eichel and Laura Eichel, his wife, the City National Bank of Evansville, the First National Bank of Evansville, the Citizens National Bank of Evansville, the First National Bank of Rockport, and the Farmers Bank of Rockport, are citizens and residents of Indiana; another, the Riter-Conley Company, is a Pennsylvania corporation; and M. J. Bray, the trustee of the bankrupt's estate, who was sued in that capacity and also as an individual, is a citizen and resident of Indiana. The bankrupt, the Evansville Contract Company, was an Indiana corporation. Of course, the national banks are Federal corporations, but their citizenship and places of residence are, for jurisdictional purposes, as just stated. Act August 13, 1888, 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, § 4, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship, and on the further ground that the case was one arising under the act of Congress of August 13, 1894, 28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523, amended February 24, 1905, 33 Stat. at L. 811, chap. 778, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1071; and the right to bring the suit in that district against the defendants who were not resident therein was rested upon § 8 of the act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513, on the theory that the suit was one to enforce a lien and claim upon personal property within the district, that is, upon the fund in the hands of the trustee, which he then had on deposit in the two Parkersburg banks. Section 23a of the bankruptcy act was also relied upon as sustaining the jurisdiction.

The case made by the bill and its exhibits was this: About 1902 the Evansville Contract Company, which will be spoken of as the contractor and as the bankrupt, entered into four several contracts with the United States *for the construction of certain [208 river improvements, one in South Carolina, two in the western district of Pennsylvania, and another in the northern district of West Virginia. Each contract contained, among others, provisions that a designated percentage of the moneys earned thereunder should be retained by the government until the completion of the contract, and that, in case of default by the contractor, the government should have the right to take possession of the work and plant and prosecute the work to completion. The complainant, the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, which will be spoken of as the surety company, became the surety on the bonds given by the contractor for its performance of the contracts. Each bond, conformably to the act of August 13, 1894, supra, was conditioned that the contractor should fully perform the contract according to its terms, and should promptly make full payment to all persons supplying it with labor or materials for the prosecution of the work named in the contract. As an inducement to the execution of each bond the contractor agreed with the surety company as follows:

" . . . and it does hereby bind itself, its successors and assigns, to indemnify the said the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company against all loss, costs, damages, charges, and expenses whatever, resulting from any of its acts, default, or neglect that said the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company may sustain or incur by reason of its having executed said bond or any continuation thereof. And it does further agree, in the event of its being unable to complete or carry on the aforementioned contract, to assign, and does hereby assign, such plant as it may own or have upon said work, to the said the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, under the aforesaid obligation, together with vouchers or other evidence of payment, of all costs and expense whatever incurred by said the 209]United States *Fidelity & Guaranty Company in adjusting such loss or in completing said contract, as conclusive evidence against it, its successors and assigns, of the fact and extent of its liability under said obligation to the said the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company. And it does further agree, in the event of any breach or default on its part in any of the provisions of the contract hereinbefore mentioned, that the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company as surety upon the aforesaid bond shall be subrogated to all its rights and properties as principal in said contract, and that deferred payments and any and all moneys and properties that may be due and payable to it at the time of such breach or default, or that may thereafter become due and payable to it on account of said contract, shall be credited upon any claim that may be made upon the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company under the bond above mentioned."

The contractor partially performed each contract, but became embarrassed, and in February, 1904, on the petition of creditors, was adjudged a bankrupt by the district court for the northern district of West Virginia, which appointed three trustees of its estate, M. J. Bray being one. The trustees took charge of its property, and, by an order of the referee having the approval of the creditors were authorized to complete the contracts, to borrow $75,000 on trustee's certificates, which were to be a first lien on the property and moneys of the estate, to pay the annual premiums accruing to the surety company, and to save it harmless from any liability on the bonds, to collect from the government the contract price and all retained percentages, and to employ Jacob Eichel, who had been the president of the contractor, to assist in completing the contracts and looking after the interests of the creditors. At first the surety company was disposed to object to such an order, but the seven banks before mentioned, *which were unsecured creditors hav-[210 ing claims aggregating $115,000, overcame its objection and secured its express consent to the order by executing to it a bond in the sum of $75,000, whereby they undertook to indemnify and hold it harmless from all liability accrued or to accrue by reason of its suretyship. The terms of this bond were such that the liability of the banks thereunder was to be several, not joint, and was to be confined to specified proportions of its penalty.

Thereafter the trustees carried all the contracts to completion, received from the government the entire contract price and the retained percentages, sold the bankrupt's property, paid all the certificates issued under the order before mentioned, and on December 19, 1905, had on hand a balance of $36,602.96, subject to allowances and costs of administration yet undetermined. The completion of the contracts was undertaken in the expectation of all concerned that a profit to the estate would result therefrom, but the expectation was not realized. In March, 1906, M. J. Bray became the sole trustee; and on September 21, 1907, when the bill was filed, the net amount remaining in the trustee's hands, after deducting the allowances and costs of administration, was about $27,600, of which $26,000 was held on deposit in equal amounts in the two Parkersburg banks.

The total liabilities of the contractor at the time it was adjudged a bankrupt were about $200,000, and of these $42,164.89 were allowed by the referee, November 19, 1904, as preferred claims for labor and materials furnished the bankrupt in the prosecution of the work under the contracts. Most of the claims allowed as preferred were purchased, at much less than their face value, from the original claimants, by Philip W. Frey, who was counsel for the trustees. His purchases were principally in advance of the allowance, but in some instances were made thereafter. The allowance, however, was in the names of the *original[211 claimants. Later Frey assigned these claims to Laura Eichel, wife of Jacob Eichel, the cost to her being $27,037.39, although the face value was $35,663.82. She acquired them with money obtained from Bray under an arrangement whereby both were to share in the profits realized upon their ultimate payment. These transactions, it is alleged, were in pursuance of a wrongful conspiracy between Bray, Frey, and Jacob Eichel, were in violation of their fiduciary relations to the estate, and were had with the purpose of making Bray the real but secret owner, the name of Laura Eichel being used as a mere cover; and it is also alleged that some of these claims are excessive and unjust, that others are not for labor or materials, and that Bray, Frey, and Jacob Eichel wrongfully procured or acquiesced in their allowance as preferred claims so that Bray and his associates might profit thereby.

In February, 1906, after it became evident that the net proceeds of the estate would not be sufficient to pay the preferred claims for labor and materials, the surety company filed in the cause in bankruptcy a petition asserting, inter alia, a lien upon the funds in the hands of the trustees, and a right to have the same applied to the payment of the claims for labor and materials upon which recourse could be had against it as the contractor's surety, and praying that such lien and right be respected and enforced, that the court would ascertain what claims were for labor and materials, and would direct that the funds remaining be applied to them. The trustees demurred to this petition and the demurrer was overruled. Bray, on becoming the sole trustee, answered, evidence was taken, and the matter is still pending before the referee.

In March, 1907, separate actions were commenced against the surety company in the common pleas court of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, in the name of the United States, for the use of Laura Eichel, on the 212]claims *assigned to her as before stated; and in August, 1907, like actions were commenced on these claims in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Pennsylvania. Both sets of actions are still pending, and it is alleged that they were brought at the instance of Bray and were really for his use and benefit. These actions were not confined to claims arising under the contracts which were to be performed in that district, but included claims arising under the other contracts which were to be performed elsewhere.

Substantially all the claims against the bankrupt's estate, save those of the defendants the Riter-Conley Company, and the Nicolette Lumber Company, each of which has a preferred claim for labor or materials, have been acquired and are now held by Bray and the two Eichels, or one or more of them, and these parties are endeavoring, as is alleged, to compel the surety company, to pay claims that are unjust, and to divert the funds in the hands of the trustee from the payment of just claims for labor and materials to the payment of general claims as to which recourse cannot be had to the bond of the contractor. The seven banks which gave the indemnity bond to the surety company are no longer creditors of the bankrupt's estate, their claims being now held by Bray or one or both of the Eichels.

By the bill the surety company asserts (1) that under the indemnity agreements made with it by the contractor, under the contracts with the government and the bonds given pursuant to the act of August 13, 1894, supra, for their performance, and under the equitable doctrine of subrogation, it has a lien on the fund remaining in the hands of the trustee, is entitled to have that fund applied to the payment of just claims for labor and materials as to which recourse can be had against it as a surety, and is entitled to every right and remedy which the government or those who furnish the labor and materials *would have[213 against such fund; (2) that Bray and the Eichels are not entitled to be paid on any claim held by them, or any of them, more than the sum actually paid therefor; and (3) that the surety company is entitled to have these matters, as also its liability as a surety and the liability of the several indemnitor banks on their bond to it, litigated and determined in one comprehensive suit.

The prayer of the bill is that an accounting be had to ascertain the several amounts justly due for labor and materials furnished the contractor in respect of each of the contracts with the government; that the surety company's liability on each of the bonds be fixed and apportioned as to each party in interest; that the fund in the hands of the trustee be declared subject to a lien for the payment of all just claims for such labor and materials, and the net amount of the fund be applied on such claims; that no claim held by Bray or either of the Eichels be paid in an amount in excess of the sum actually expended for it; that each of the indemnitor banks be held liable to the surety company according to the terms of their bond to it, and the amount of the liability of each bank be fixed and payment thereof directed; that Bray and the Eichels be enjoined from maintaining any of the actions theretofore begun against the surety company, and from instituting any other like action against it; and that it be granted such other relief as may be appropriate to the occasion.

Before the bill was filed, the district court having charge of the estate of the bankrupt entered an order granting leave to the surety company to begin the suit in the circuit court.

In the circuit court all the defendants save the Riter-Conley Company challenged in various ways the jurisdiction of that court, but an interlocutory decree was entered overruling the objections to the jurisdiction and enjoining Bray and the Eichels, until the further order of the court, from prosecuting and maintaining any of 214]the *actions against the surety company then pending in the courts, Federal and state, in Pennsylvania, and from beginning any other like action against it. All the defendants, save the Riter-Conley Company and the Niolette Lumber Company, appealed to the circuit court of appeals, which reversed the interlocutory decree and directed that the injunction be dissolved and the bill dismissed, without prejudice, upon the ground that the circuit court was without jurisdiction to entertain it. 96 C. C. A. 9, 170 Fed. 689. The case is here on the appeal of the surety company.

In the Federal courts an appeal, as a general rule, lies only from a final decree. But § 7 of the act of March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488, as amended April 14, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 116, chap. 1627, establishes an exception by providing for an appeal to the circuit court of appeals from an interlocutory decree granting or continuing an injunction or appointing a receiver. It was under this section that the appeal to that court was taken, and on that appeal the court was authorized to review the whole of the interlocutory decree, not merely the part granting the injunction, and also to determine whether there was any insuperable objection, in point of jurisdiction or merits, to the maintenance of the suit, and, if there was to direct a final decree dismissing the bill. Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 810, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Re Tampa Suburban R. Co. 168 U. S. 583, 42 L. ed. 589, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Mast. F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. ed. 856, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Ex parte National Enameling & Stamping Co. 201 U. S. 156, 50 L. ed. 707, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404. In the exercise of this authority the circuit court of appeals reached the conclusion that the suit could not be maintained in the circuit court, and directed both that the injunction be dissolved and that the bill be dismissed. That was a final decree, and as the juris-isdiction of the circuit court had been invoked not solely upon the ground of diverse citizenship, but also upon the ground that the suit was one arising under the act of Congress, *whereunder the bonds upon 215 which the complainant was surety were given, a further appeal to this court was rightly allowed under § 6 of the act of March 3, 1891, supra, the amount in controversy being in excess of $1,000, exclusive of costs. Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 208 U. S. 404, 52 L. ed. 547, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676, 680, 46 L. ed. 754, 757, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543. The time prescribed in that section for taking such an appeal is one year, and this appeal was taken within that time. The thirty-day limitation in § 7 applies only to appeals thereunder to the circuit court of appeals. These views make it necessary to deny a motion to dismiss by which the appellees challenge the jurisdiction of this court.

An examination of the bill discloses that its primary purpose is to obtain an adjudication of certain claims presented against the estate of the bankrupt, now in the course of administration in the bankruptcy court, and of the priority to be accorded to them in the distribution of a fund belonging to the estate and now in the control of that court. That this fund arose in the due administration of the estate, is lawfully in the custody of the bankruptcy court, and is awaiting distribution among such of the creditors as are entitled to participate therein, is a necessary conclusion from the allegations of the bill, and is conceded. The complainant does not assert a title to it, but at most only an equitable right to have it applied to just claims for labor and materials, for which the complainant is liable as the bankrupt's surety under the act of August 13, 1894, supra. The real controversy is over the merits of some of those claims, the right of the present holders to assert them for their full amount, and the priority to be accorded them in the distribution. By an intervening petition in the bankruptcy proceeding the complainant voluntarily submitted its asserted equitable right to the court of bankruptcy for determination, and the matter is now pending before the referee. But by *the present plenary bill in equity it 216 is sought to take from the bankruptcy court the adjudication of the claims in question and the decision of what priority shall be accorded to them. The circuit of appeals holds that this cannot be done consistently with the bankruptcy act, and the correctness of its holding is the principal question presented by this appeal.

We are not here concerned with a suit by a trustee to recover property in the possession of another who claims it adversely, nor with a suit against a trustee to recover property in his possession, claimed by another, and therefore the jurisdictional questions incident to suits of that character need not be considered. But we are concerned with a suit against a trustee, the purpose of which is to control the distribution of a fund in his possession, admittedly belonging to the bankrupt's estate, and to determine to what extent and in what order the several creditors shall participate therein.

Section 2 of the bankruptcy act invests courts of bankruptcy "with such jurisdiction at law and in equity as will enable them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings, . . . to

(2) "Allow claims, disallow claims, reconsider allowed or disallowed claims, and allow or disallow them against bankrupt estates;

(6) "Bring in and substitute additional persons or parties in proceedings in bankruptcy when necessary for the complete determination of a matter in controversy;

(7) "Cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided;

(13) "Enforce obedience by bankrupts, 217]officers, and *other persons to all lawful orders, by fine or imprisonment or fine and imprisonment;

(15) "Make such orders, issue such process, and enter such judgments in addition to those specifically provided for as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act." [30 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1491.]

And the section concludes by saying: "Nothing in this section contained shall be construed to deprive a court of bankruptcy of any power it would possess were certain specific powers not herein enumerated."

Section 23a provides: "The United States circuit courts shall have jurisdiction of all controversies at law and in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, between trustees as such and adverse claimants, concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustees, in the same manner and to the same extent only as though bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted, and such controversies had been between the bankrupts and such adverse claimants."

And § 57k reads: "Claims which have been allowed may be reconsidered for cause, and reallocated or rejected in whole or in part, according to the equities of the case, before, but not after, the estate has been closed."

We think it is a necessary conclusion from these and other provisions of the act that the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts in all "proceedings in bankruptcy" is intended to be exclusive of all other courts, and that such proceedings include, among others, all matters of administration, such as the allowance, rejection, and reconsideration of claims, the reduction of the estates to money, and its distribution, the determination of the preferences and priorities to be accorded to claims presented for allowance and payment in regular course, and the supervision and control of the trustees and others who are employed to assist them.

*The allegations of the bill, other[218 than those relating to the actions brought against the complainant in Pennsylvania, and to its contingent claim against the indemnitor banks, are intended to invoke (1) a reconsideration and modification of the referee's order of November 19, 1904, allowing certain claims as preferred claims for labor and materials, (2) a determination of the right of the present holders of those claims to have them rated and paid at their face value, (3) an inquiry into the charge that the trustee and others who were employed to assist him in the management of the estate have been speculating in claims against it, and procuring or acquiescing in their improper allowance and classification, and (4) a direction that the just claims for labor and materials be accorded a preference in the distribution. These matters are rightly subjects for proceedings in bankruptcy, and therefore fall within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy. A distinct purpose of the bankruptcy act is to subject the administration of the estates of bankrupts to the control of tribunals clothed with authority and charged with the duty of proceeding to final settlement and distribution in a summary way, as are the courts of bankruptcy. Creditors are entitled to have this authority exercised, and justly may complain when, as here, an important part of the administration is sought to be effected through the slower and less appropriate processes of a plenary suit in equity in another court, involving collateral and extraneous matters with which they have no concern, such as the controversy between the complainant and the indemnitor banks.

Of the fact that the suit was begun in the circuit court with the express leave of the court of bankruptcy it suffices to say that the latter was not at liberty to surrender its exclusive control over matters of administration, or to confide them to another tribunal.

The portions of the bill seeking an ad-219]judication of the *contingent liability of the indemnitor banks to the complainant, and an injunction against the prosecution of the actions against it in Pennsylvania, and against the institution of other like actions, must fall with the rest of the bill. They were brought into it in a secondary and dependent way, and could not then have been made the subjects of a separate bill in that jurisdiction. Further discussion of them is therefore unnecessary.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

COLORADO ANTHRACITE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 219-227.)

Mines — coal-land entry — repayment of purchase price.

1. One who makes an entry of coal lands avowedly for his own use and benefit is "the person who made such entry," within the meaning of the act of June 16, 1880 (21 Stat. at L. 287, chap. 244, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1416), § 2, providing for the repayment of the purchase price in case of subsequent cancelation, although he made the entry at the instance of a corporation, with its money and for its benefit.

Mines — coal-land entry — assigns — repayment of purchase price.

2. The corporate grantee in a quitclaim deed to public coal land, executed by a person who, having then no interest therein, afterwards made an entry avowedly for his sole use and benefit, but actually at the instance of the corporation, with its money and for its benefit, is his "assign" within the meaning of the act of June 16, 1880, § 2, providing for the repayment of the purchase price in case of subsequent cancelation of the entry "to the person who made such entry, or to his heirs or assigns."

Mines — coal-land entry — repayment of purchase price — fraud.

3. The right to the repayment of the purchase price of public coal lands, given by the act of June 16, 1880, § 2, where the entry is subsequently canceled because "erroneously allowed," does not extend to cases where the entry was fraudulently procured.

NOTE.—On location of mining claim—see note to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 763.

56 L. ed.

Mines — coal lands — fraud — entry for another's benefit.

4. An entry of coal lands, made avowedly for the sole use and benefit of the entryman, but which, on a contested hearing, was shown to have been made at the instance of a corporation, and with its money and for its benefit, cannot, for this reason, be deemed to have been fraudulently procured, in contravention of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2347-2352, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441, which forbids the acquisition of such lands in excess of the quantities prescribed, where there is nothing to show any effort through this or like entries to evade the restrictions in respect of quantity.

[For other cases, see Mines, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 227.]

Argued April 25, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment for the repayment of the purchase price of public coal lands, where the entry was subsequently canceled. Affirmed.

See same case below, 45 Ct. Cl. 614.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Charles A. Keigwin argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. W. Spalding, filed a brief for appellee:

Rights are assignable under the land laws where assignment is not restricted by express statute.

Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. 24, 13 L. ed. 877; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 251; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 21 L. ed. 759.

Claims under the mining laws are assignable.

Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 85; Black v. Elkhorn Min. Co. 163 U. S. 445, 41 L. ed. 221, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1101, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 375; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 183.

Rights under the coal land statutes are assignable if assignment is made to qualified entrymen.

Kerr v. Utah-Wyoming Improv. Co. 2 Land Dec. 727; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 37 Fed. 180.

In the following cases the question was not of the assignability of rights, but of conspiracy to evade the restrictions:

United States v. Munday, 222 U. S. 175, ante, 149, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29

Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

The requirement by the Department of affidavits where affidavits are not required by statute is illegal.

Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

For a definition of assignee, under the act of June 16, 1880, see:

Re Emert, 14 Land Dec. 101; United States v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & T. Co. 193 U. S. 651, 48 L. ed. 830, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action, under the act of June 16, 1880 (21 Stat. at L. 287, chap. 244, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1416), § 2, for [221]the repayment of the purchase *price paid to the government for 160 acres of public coal lands, the entry of which was subsequently canceled. The plaintiff prevailed in the court of claims (45 Ct. Cl. 614) and the government has appealed, claiming that, on the findings, the judgment should have been in its favor.

Briefly stated, the material facts shown by the findings are as follows: One Stoiber, who claimed a preference right of entry under Rev. Stat. § 2348, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1440, filed in the proper local land office the requisite declaratory statement, and thereafter made application to enter the land. Accompanying the application was an affidavit, made by his agent, stating that Stoiber was making the entry for his own use and benefit, and not directly or indirectly for another. Other applications for the same land resulted in a contest proceeding before the local land office, and after the hearing therein the register and receiver sustained Stoiber's application, accepted the purchase price of the land, which was $3,200, and issued to him the usual duplicate receipt. This, in the nomenclature of the public land laws, was the allowance of an entry. The other parties to the contest appealed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who, upon the same evidence that was submitted to the local office, ruled that Stoiber's application ought not to have been sustained; that his entry had been erroneously allowed and could not be confirmed, and therefore that it must be canceled. That decision was affirmed by the Secretary of the Interior, and the entry was canceled accordingly. In filing the declaratory statement and making the entry Stoiber was not seeking to acquire the land for himself, but for the Colorado Anthracite Company, the plaintiff here, to which he already had given a quitclaim deed. This was not denied or concealed at the hearing in the contest, but, on the contrary, was admitted and was affirmatively shown by the testimony of the witnesses for Stoiber, including the agent who made the affidavit before mentioned. The purchase price paid at the time of the *entry, which was after the [222] hearing, was furnished by the company because the entry was being made for its benefit. No conveyance of the land was made by Stoiber other than the quitclaim deed just mentioned, and the purchase money so paid was covered into the Treasury and is still held by the government. After the cancellation of the entry the company applied to the Secretary of the Interior for repayment to it of the purchase price, and Stoiber and the company executed a relinquishment of all claims to the land and surrendered the duplicate receipt; but the application was denied on the theory that the company was not an assign of the entryman within the meaning of the act. Stoiber then applied to the Secretary for repayment, and, the application being refused, brought suit in the court of claims, which gave judgment for the government on the ground that the purchase price had been paid by the company, and not by Stoiber. 41 Ct. Cl. 269, 275. Thereupon the company brought the present suit, with the result before stated.

As reasons for asking a reversal of the judgment the government contends that the facts as found disclose, first, that the company is not an assign within the meaning of the act, and, second, that the entry was procured fraudulently, in contravention of the coal-land laws, and therefore that repayment cannot be allowed.

The act of 1880, in § 2, provides that where, from any cause, an entry of public land "has been erroneously allowed and cannot be confirmed," and is duly canceled by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, "the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be repaid to the person who made such entry, or to his heirs or assigns, the fees and commissions, amount of purchase money, and excesses paid upon the same, upon the surrender of the duplicate receipt and the execution of a proper relinquishment of all claims to said land."

As we think Stoiber is the person who made the entry in *the sense of this [223] act, even although he made it for the benefit of the company, and paid the purchase price with money furnished by it, we come at once to the question whether, on the findings, the company is his assign within the meaning of the act. It is said that the answer must be in the negative, because there was no conveyance of the land from him to the company while the entry was in force, that is, after its allowance and before its cancellation. By the decisions of this court in Hoffield v. United States, 186 U. S. 273, 46 L. ed. 1160, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 927, and United States v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & T. Co. 193 U. S. 651, 48 L. ed. 830, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546, it is settled that an assign, within the meaning of the act, is one who becomes invested with the entryman's right in the land through some voluntary act of his; and it must be conceded that, generally speaking, a mere quitclaim deed passes only such interest as the grantor possesses at the time, and does not reach an after-acquired title. But here there was something more than a mere quitclaim deed, executed in advance of the acquisition of any interest by the entryman. The entry was made at the instance of the company, with its money and for its benefit, and, unless the coal-land law forbade it, the entryman, by his voluntary action in that regard, became a trustee for the company, and charged with an obligation to convey the land to it. Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994; Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 592, 34 L. ed. 1091, 1094, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Smithsonian Inst. v. Meech, 169 U. S. 398, 406, 42 L. ed. 793, 797, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396. Not only so, but equity, which usually looks upon that as done which ought to have been done, would regard such a conveyance as actually made, and therefore treat the company as an assign. We speak of the view which equity would take of the matter, because it is manifest that the act of 1880 proceeds upon equitable principles and is intended to be administered accordingly. Like other highly remedial statutes, it should be interpreted with appropriate regard to the spirit which prompted it. And, when it is so interpreted, we think the term "assigns" in-224]cludes *one in the company's situation, if only the arrangement between it and Stoiber was not forbidden by law.

We are thus brought to the question whether the facts found disclose that Stoiber and the company were engaged in an effort to acquire the land fraudulently, in contravention of the coal-land law, Rev. Stat. §§ 2347-2352, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441. If they were, the company is not entitled to repayment, first, because it then would not be entitled to invoke the equitable maxim before stated, without the aid of which it could not be deemed an assign within the meaning of the act, and, second, because the right to repayment is restricted by the act to instances in which the entry has been "erroneously allowed,"— an expression which denotes some mistake or error on the part of the land officers whereby an entry is allowed when it should be disallowed, and not some fraud or false pretense practised on them whereby an applicant appears to be entitled to the allowance of an entry when in truth he is not. Of this expression it is said, correctly, we think, in the regulations of the Land Department adopted under § 4 of the act soon after its enactment and ever since in force:
56 L. ed.

"This cannot be given an interpretation of such latitude as would countenance fraud. If the records of the Land Office, or the proofs furnished, should show that the entry ought not to be permitted, and yet it were permitted, then it would be 'erroneously allowed.' But if a tract of land were subject to entry, and the proofs showed a compliance with law, and the entry should be canceled because the proofs were shown to be false, it could not be held that the entry was 'erroneously allowed;' and in such case repayment would not be authorized."

While the coal-land law does not expressly prohibit an entry by one person for the benefit of another, it does limit the quantity of land that may be acquired thereunder by one person to 160 acres, and the quantity that may be acquired by an association of persons to 320 acres, *and, in excep-225]tional instances, 640 acres; and it declares that its sections "shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons; and no association of persons any member of which shall have taken the benefit of such sections, either as an individual or as a member of any other association, shall enter or hold any other lands under the provisions thereof; and no member of any association which shall have taken the benefit of such sections shall enter or hold any other lands under their provisions." These restrictions, as this court has held, forbid individuals and associations from acquiring public coal land in excess of the quantities prescribed, whether directly, by entries in their own names, or indirectly, by entries made for their benefit in the names of others. And so, one person cannot lawfully make an entry in the interest of another who has had the benefit of the law, or in the interest of an association where it or any of its members has had the benefit thereof, or in the interest of a person or an association where he or it has not had such benefit, but is seeking, through entries made or to be made by others in his or its interest, to acquire a greater quantity of land than is permitted by the law. United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; United States v. Keitel. 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Forrester, 211 U. S. 399, 53 L. ed. 245, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; United States v. Munday, 222 U. S. 175, ante, 149, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53. But there is no prohibition, express or implied, against an entry by a qualified person for the benefit of another person or association where he or it is fully qualified to make the entry in his or its own name, and is not seeking to evade the restrictions in respect of quantity.

A corporation is an association of persons within the meaning of the law (United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co., supra), and therefore the company here, which was a Colorado corporation, lawfully could have made the entry in question in its own name, unless it or some member of it had had the benefit of the coal-land law, 226]or *was seeking, through this land and other like entries, to acquire coal land in excess of the quantity prescribed. In other words, the fact that the entry was made in the name of Stoiber for the benefit of the company does not, without more, establish that it was forbidden or fraudulent. There is no finding that the company or any member of it had had the benefit of the law or was seeking to acquire more than this 160 acres. So, for aught that appears, there was no legal obstacle to the entry being made in the company's name, and the fact that it was not may have been due to matters not affecting its validity or integrity. We do not overlook the finding that the application was accompanied by an affidavit stating that Stoiber was making the entry for his own use and benefit, and not directly or indirectly for another. Of course, the other findings show that that statement was untrue. Had it remained uncorrected, it probably would have deceived the officers of the land office and prevented any inquiry into the qualifications of the company. But, according to the findings, it did not remain uncorrected, and could not have deceived the officers, for, at the hearing in the contest which preceded the allowance of the entry, it was admitted and shown that Stoiber was not seeking to acquire the land for himself, but for the company, to which he already had given a quitclaim deed. The statement in the affidavit therefore became harmless, for it was upon the evidence given in the contest that the entry was allowed. It follows that upon the findings it cannot be said that the arrangement between Stoiber and the company was forbidden by law, or that the entry was fraudulently procured.

But it is said that an affirmative finding that the entry was not fraudulently procured is essential to sustain the judgment. To this we cannot agree. Fraud is not presumed, and one who bases a right or defense upon it should allege and prove it. The government's answer *contains no[227 allegation of fraud, and the silence of the findings may rightly be taken as showing that none was proved. The findings fully respond to the issues presented by the pleadings, and, we think, sustain the judgment. Judgment affirmed.

JOHN OLUF JOHANNESSEN, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 227-243.)

Judgment — conclusiveness — naturalization.

1. A certificate of naturalization procured from a competent court ex parte in the ordinary way does not have any such conclusive effect as against the public as prevents its cancellation in the independent proceeding authorized by Congress in the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 596, 601, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, pp. 97, 485), § 15, on the ground that it was fraudulently and illegally procured by perjured testimony.

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. j. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — exercise of judicial power.

2. Congress did not unconstitutionally exercise judicial power by enacting the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, § 15, under which certificates of naturalization theretofore issued ex parte in the ordinary way may be impeached where fraudulently and illegally procured by perjured testimony.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

As to what laws are ex post facto—see notes to State v. Cooler, 3 L.R.A. 181; Anderson v. O'Donnell, 1 L.R.A. 632; Calder v. Bull, 1 L. ed. U. S. 648; Sturges v. Crowinshield, 4 L. ed. U. S. 529; Re Medley, 33 L. ed. U. S. 835; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331; and Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

As to character and kinds of judgments and orders within the rule forbidding collateral attack for fraud not affecting the jurisdiction—see note to Clark v. Southern Can Co. 36 L.R.A. (N.S.) 980.

Aliens — naturalization — impeaching certificate.

3. Naturalization certificates, whether issued prior or subsequent to the enactment of the act of June 29, 1906, are, by the express provisions of § 15 of that act, made liable to impeachment, where fraudulently and illegally procured.

[Naturalization, see Aliens, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — ex post facto laws — impeaching naturalization certificate.

4. The retrospective features of the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, § 15, authorizing the impeachment of naturalization certificates where fraudulently or illegally procured, do not invalidate that section under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 9, prohibiting ex post facto laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 230.]

Submitted April 22, 1912. Decided May 27, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review a decree canceling a naturalization certificate on the ground that it was fraudulently and illegally procured. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward J. McCutchen and Samuel Knight submitted the cause for appellant:

A decree of naturalization is a judgment of a court; and therefore subject to all the rules of law regarding judgments as such.

Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. 393, 7 L. ed. 897; 2 Black, Judgm. § 804; McCarthy v. Marsh, 5 N. Y. 263; The Acorn, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 434, Fed. Cas. No. 29; Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. 106; Re Bodek, 63 Fed. 813; Pintsch Compressing Co. v. Bergin, 84 Fed. 140; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 300; Tinn v. United States Dist. Atty. 148 Cal. 773, 113 Am. St. Rep. 354, 84 Pac. 152; Re Christern, 11 Jones & S. 523; Re Clark, 18 Barb. 444; United States v. Gleason, 78 Fed. 396, 33 C. C. A. 272, 62 U. S. App. 311, 90 Fed. 778.

A court of equity will not set aside a judgment on the ground that it is founded on a fraudulent instrument, or perjured evidence, or for any matter which was actually presented and considered in the judgment assailed.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 929; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 56 L. ed.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Hilton v. Guyott, 42 Fed. 252, 159 U. S. 113, 40 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; United States v. Gleason, 78 Fed. 396, 33 C. C. A. 272, 62 U. S. App. 311, 90 Fed. 778.

The act of 1906, under which it is sought to cancel defendant's certificate of citizenship, operates as an ex post facto law, and is therefore within the prohibition of § 9 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States.

Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356; Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 27 L. ed. 506, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Conn. v. Edwards, 9 Dana, 447; United States v. Starr, Hempst. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 16,379; Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 418.

If the act of June 29, 1906, authorizes the impeachment of the judgment of a co-ordinate court for fraud consisting of the introduction of relevant perjured testimony, it is unconstitutional, as an exercise of judicial power by the legislature.

Wieland v. Shilloek, 24 Minn. 345; Roche v. Waters, 72 Md. 264, 7 L.R.A. 533, 19 Atl. 535; Re Handley, 15 Utah, 212, 62 Am. St. Rep. 926, 49 Pac. 829; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 111; 1 Black, Judgm. 298; Atkinson v. Dunlap, 50 Me. 111; United States v. Aakervik, 180 Fed. 137; Davis v. Menasha, 21 Wis. 492; State ex rel. Flint v. Flint, 61 Minn. 539, 63 N. W. 1113.

A statute should be construed to have a prospective operation only, unless its terms show clearly a legislative intention that it should operate retrospectively.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Cooley, Const. Lim. 529; 8 Cyc. 1022; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 693.

Assistant Attorney General Harr submitted the cause for appellee:

The contention that if, as in the present case, a court was induced to naturalize an alien by a misrepresentation of the facts as to his residence, Congress has no authority to authorize a judicial proceeding for the cancellation of his certificate of naturalization so obtained, is manifestly untenable.

United States v. Spohrer, 175 Fed. 442; Re McCoppin, 5 Sawy. 632, Fed. Cas. No. 8,713; United States v. Norsch, 42 Fed. 417; United States v. Nisbet, 168 Fed. 1005; United States v. Mansour, 170 Fed. 671; United States v. Simon, 170 Fed. 680; United States v. Meyer, 170 Fed. 983; United States v. Luria, 184 Fed. 643; 3 Moore, International Law Dig. p. 500; Pintsch Compressing Co. v. Bergin, 84 Fed. 140; United States v. Dolla, 100 C. C. A. 521, 177 Fed. 101, 21 Ann. Cas. 665.

The doctrine announced in United States v. Throckmorton, 96 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93, is inapplicable, because, as this court later pointed out, that doctrine has reference only to proceedings inter partes, and has no application to ex parte proceedings by which a grant is obtained from the government.

Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 32, 28 L. ed. 623, 625, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 450, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 207, 40 L. ed. 123, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 167 U. S. 224, 240, 42 L. ed. 144, 154, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809.

It has been held to be within the power of Congress, in respect to the Indian tribes, to authorize judgments of citizenship rendered by territorial courts to be set aside and the matter inquired into de novo. (Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.) It is not perceived why the power of Congress with respect to the naturalization of aliens under the Constitution is not as plenary.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding under § 15 of the act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3592 (34 Stat. at L. 596, 601, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, pp. 97, 485), instituted by the district attorney of the United States for the northern district of California, to cancel a certificate of citizenship, granted to the appellant by a state court long prior to the passage of the act referred to, on the ground that it had been fraudulently and illegally procured. The case was heard upon demurrer to an amended petition, which demurrer was overruled; and thereupon, no answer being filed, the court proceeded to make a decree setting aside and canceling the certificate. The appellant brings that decree here for review.

The facts, as set forth in the amended petition and admitted by the demurrer, are as follows: Johannessen, the appellant, is a native of Norway, and arrived in the United States for the first time in the month of December, 1888. Less than four years thereafter, and on October 6, 1892, he applied to the superior court of Jefferson county, in the state of Washington, under § 2165 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 233[1329]), to be admitted to citizenship, and procured from that court a certificate admitting him to such citizenship. This certificate was based upon the perjured testimony of two witnesses, to the effect that Johannessen had resided within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States for five years at least, then last past. The facts were not discovered by the government until June 29, 1908, when Johannessen made a voluntary statement to the Department of Justice in the form of an affidavit, which is made a part of the amended petition, and wherein he admits that the certificate of citizenship was illegally procured, in that he had not been a resident of the United States for five years at the time it was issued.

The petition contains all necessary averments to show the jurisdiction of the district court over the present action, leaving only the merits in controversy.

The provisions of law in force at the time Johannessen thus applied for and procured admission to citizenship are contained in §§ 2165 and 2170 of the Revised Statutes, which, so far as pertinent, are as follows:

"Sec. 2165. An alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States in the following manner, and not otherwise:

"First. He shall declare on oath, before a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the territories, or a court of record of any of the states having common-law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk, two years, at least, prior to his admission, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which the alien may be at the time a citizen or subject.

"Second. He shall, at the time of his application to be admitted, declare, on oath, before some one of the *courts above[234 specified, that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; which proceedings shall be recorded by the clerk of the court.

"Third. It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held, one year at least; and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; but the oath of the applicant shall in no case be allowed to prove his residence.

"Sec. 2170. No alien shall be admitted to become a citizen who has not, for the continued term of five years next preceding his admission, resided within the United States."

The act of June 29, 1906, contains a revision of the naturalization laws, together with some additional provisions, among which are the following:

"Sec. 15. That it shall be the duty of the United States district attorneys for the respective districts, upon affidavit showing good cause therefor, to institute proceedings in any court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens in the judicial district in which the naturalized citizen may reside at the time of bringing the suit, for the purpose of setting aside and canceling the certificate of citizenship on the ground of fraud, or on the ground that such certificate of citizenship was illegally procured. In any such proceedings the party holding [235] the certificate of citizenship alleged to have been fraudulently or illegally procured shall have sixty days' personal notice in which to make answer to the petition of the United States; and if the holder of such certificate be absent from the United States or from the district in which he last had his residence, such notice shall be given by publication in the manner provided for the service of summons by publication or upon absences by the laws of the state or the place where such suit is brought.

"Whenever any certificate of citizenship shall be set aside or canceled, as herein provided, the court in which such judgment or decree is rendered shall make an order canceling such certificate of citizenship, and shall send a certified copy of such order to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization; and in case such certificate was not originally issued by the court making such order, it shall direct the clerk of the court to transmit a copy of such order and judgment to the court out of which such certificate of citizenship shall have been originally issued. And it shall thereupon be the duty of the clerk of the court receiving such certified copy of the order and judgment of the court to enter the same of record, and to cancel such original certificate of citizenship upon the records, and to notify the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization of such cancellation.

"The provisions of this section shall apply not only to certificates of citizenship issued under the provisions of this act, but to all certificates of citizenship which may have been issued heretofore by any court exercising jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings under prior laws."

The principal contentions in the argument for appellant are, that a decree of naturalization is a judgment of a competent court, and subject to all the rules of law regarding judgments as such; that a court of equity could not, prior to June 29, 1906, set aside or annul such a judgment *for fraud intrinsic the record, that [236] is, founded upon perjured testimony, or any matter which was actually presented and considered in giving the judgment; and that if the act of June 29, 1906, authorizes the impeachment of the pre-existing judgment of a co-ordinate court for fraud consisting of the introduction of relevant perjured testimony, it is unconstitutional as an exercise of judicial power by the legislature.

It was long ago held in this court, in a case arising upon the early acts of Congress, which submitted to courts of record the right of aliens to admission as citizens, that the judgment of such a court upon the question was, like every other judgment, complete evidence of its own validity. Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. 393, 408, 7 L. ed. 897, 902. This decision, however, goes no further than to establish the immunity of such a judgment from collateral attack. See also Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch, 176, 3 L. ed. 190.

It does not follow that Congress may not authorize a direct attack upon certificates of citizenship in an independent proceeding such as is authorized by § 15 of the act of 1906. Appellant's contention involves the notion that because the naturalization proceedings result in a judgment, the United States is for all purposes concluded thereby, even in the case of fraud or illegality for which the applicant for naturalization is responsible. This question may be first disposed of.

The Constitution, art. 1, § 8, gives to Congress power "to establish a uniform rule of naturalization." Pursuant to this authority it was enacted, as above quoted from the Revised Statutes, that an alien might be admitted to citizenship "in the following manner, and not otherwise;" § 2165 requiring proof of residence within the United States for five years at least; and § 2170 declaring a continued term of five years' residence next preceding his admission to be essential. An examination of this legislation makes it plain that while a proceeding *for the naturalization [237] of an alien is, in a certain sense, a judicial proceeding, being conducted in a court of record and made a matter of record therein, yet it is not in any sense an adversary proceeding. It is the alien who applies to be admitted who makes the necessary declaration and adduces the requisite proofs, and who renounces and abjures his foreign allegiance, all as conditions precedent to his admission to citizenship of the United States. He seeks political rights to which he is not entitled except on compliance with the requirements of the act. But he is not required to make the government a party nor to give any notice to its representatives.

The act of June 29, 1906, in § 11 (34 Stat. at L. 599, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 482), declares that the United States shall have the right to appear in naturalization proceedings for the purpose of cross-examining the petitioner and the witnesses produced in support of his petition, and shall have the right of call witnesses, produce evidence, and be heard in opposition to the granting of naturalization. No such provision was contained in the act as it formerly stood. For present purposes we assume, however, that the government had such an interest as entitled it, even without express enactment, to raise an issue upon an alien's application for admission to the privileges of citizenship. What may be the effect of a judgment allowing naturalization in a case where the government has appeared and litigated the matter does not now concern us. See 2 Black, Judgm. § 534a. What we have to say relates to such a case as is presented by the present record, which is the ordinary case of an alien appearing before one of the courts designated by law for the purpose, and, without notice to the government, and without opportunity, to say nothing of duty, on the part of the government to appear, submitting his application for naturalization with ex parte proofs in support thereof, and thus procuring a certificate of citizenship. In view of 238]the great number of aliens thus *applying at irregular times in the various courts of record of the several states and in the Federal circuit and district courts throughout the Union, and bringing their applications on to summary hearing without previous notice to the government of the United States or to the public, it is, of course, impossible that the public interests should be adequately represented, and in our opinion the sections quoted from the Revised Statutes are not open to any construction that would give a conclusive effect to such an investigation when conducted at the instance of and controlled by the interested individual alone.

The foundation of the doctrine of res judicata, or estoppel by judgment, is that both parties have had their day in court. 2 Black, Judgm. §§ 500, 504. The general principle was clearly expressed by Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for this court in Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 48, 42 L. ed. 355, 377, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18:

"That a right, question, or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, as a ground of recovery, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies."

Sound reason, as we think, constrains us to deny to a certificate of naturalization, procured ex parte in the ordinary way, any conclusive effect as against the public. Such a certificate, including the "judgment" upon which it is based, is in its essence an instrument granting political privileges, and open like other public grants to be revoked if and when it shall be found to have been unlawfully or fraudulently procured. It is in this respect closely analogous to a public grant of land (Rev. Stat. § 2289, etc., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1388), or of the exclusive right to make, use, and vend a new and useful invention (Rev. Stat. § 4883, etc. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3381).

Judicial review of letters patent, looking to their cancellation when issued unlawfully or through mistake, or when procured by fraud, is very ancient,—possibly antedating the establishment of the court of equity in England. 3 *Bl. Com. 47, [239 48. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Grier, speaking for this court in United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767, the original mode was by writ of scire facias, the bill in equity being afterwards adopted as a more convenient remedy. In United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 281, 31 L. ed. 747, 750, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850, previous cases were reviewed and the practice discussed. In United States v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338, 342, 32 L. ed. 121, 123, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1083, Mr. Justice Lamar, speaking for this court, said: "It may now be accepted as settled that the United States can properly proceed by bill in equity to have a judicial decree of nullity and an order of cancellation of a patent issued in mistake or obtained by fraud, where the government has a direct interest, or is under an obligation respecting the relief invoked." See also Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 175, 37 L. ed. 123, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271, and cases cited.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93, is not opposed in principle, for, as pointed out in United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 241, 29 L. ed. 110, 113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836, the patent was issued on the confirmation of a Mexican grant after judicial proceedings, where there were pleadings and parties, and witnesses were examined on both sides, with the right to appeal. Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 519, 25 L. ed. 929, 931, was likewise a contested case in the Land Department, as the report shows.

The doctrine that a patent issued ex parte may be annulled for fraud has been repeatedly applied to patents for inventions. United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 361, 32 L. ed. 450, 459, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 167 U. S. 224, 238, 42 L. ed. 144, 153, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809.

Whether the judicial review of a certificate of naturalization should be conducted in one mode or another is a matter plainly resting in legislative discretion. Section 15 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 601, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 485), provides for a proceeding in a "court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens, in the judicial district in which the naturalized citizen may reside at the time of bringing the suit," upon fair [240]*notice to the party holding the certificate of citizenship that is under attack. No criticism is made of this mode of procedure.

The views above expressed render it unnecessary for us to go into the question whether, on general principles, and without express legislative authority, a court of equity, at the instance of the government, might set aside a certificate of citizenship or restrain its use, for fraud or the like. In United States v. Norsch, 42 Fed. 417, it was declared that the government could sue in a Federal court for the cancellation of a certificate that had been procured by fraud in a state court, but it was held that the facts set forth in the bill did not make out a sufficient case of fraud. In United States v. Gleason, 78 Fed. 396, 33 C. C. A. 272, 62 U. S. App. 311, 90 Fed. 778, the contrary conclusion was reached upon the main question. These two cases arose prior to the act of 1906.

Since the passage of that act, the district courts have quite generally sustained the action for a cancellation of fraudulent certificates. United States v. Nisbet, 168 Fed. 1005; United States v. Simon, 170 Fed. 680; United States v. Mansour, 170 Fed. 671; United States v. Meyer, 170 Fed. 983; 56 L. ed.

United States v. Luria, 184 Fed. 643; United States v. Spohrer, 175 Fed. 440. In the latter case, Judge Cross used the following pertinent language (at p. 442): "An alien friend is offered, under certain conditions, the privilege of citizenship. He may accept the offer and become a citizen upon compliance with the prescribed conditions, but not otherwise. His claim is of favor, not of right. He can only become a citizen upon and after a strict compliance with the acts of Congress. An applicant for this high privilege is bound, therefore, to conform to the terms upon which alone the right he seeks can be conferred. It is his province, and he is bound, to see that the jurisdictional facts upon which the grant is predicated actually exist, and if they do not *he takes nothing[241 by his paper grant. Fraud cannot be substituted for facts." And again, at p. 446: "That the government, especially when thereunto authorized by Congress, has the right to recall whatever of property has been taken from it by fraud, is in my judgment, well settled; and, if that be true of property, then by analogy and with greater reason, it would seem to be true where it has conferred a privilege in answer to the prayer of an ex parte petitioner."

The contention that the act of June 29, 1906, in authorizing the impeachment of certificates of naturalization theretofore issued for fraud consisting of the introduction of perjured testimony is unconstitutional as an exercise of judicial power by the legislative department is in effect disposed of by what has been said. The act does not purport to deprive a litigant of the fruits of a successful controversy in the courts; for, as already shown, the proceedings for naturalization are not in any proper sense adversary proceedings, but are ex parte and conducted by the applicant for his own benefit. The act in effect provides for a new form of judicial review of a question that is in form, but not in substance, concluded by the previous record, and under conditions affording to the party whose rights are brought into question full opportunity to be heard. Retrospective acts of this character have often been held not to be an assumption by the legislative department of judicial powers. Sampeyreac v. United States, 7 Pet. 222, 239, 8 L. ed. 665, 671; Freeborn v. Smith, 2 Wall. 160, 175, 17 L. ed. 922, 923; Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. 196, 202, 22 L. ed. 612, 614; Freeland v. Williams, 131 U. S. 405, 413, 33 L. ed. 193, 196, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 763; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174

U. S. 445, 478, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1053, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

An alien has no moral nor constitutional right to retain the privileges of citizenship if, by false evidence or the like, an imposition has been practised upon the court, without which the certificate of citizenship could not and would not have been 242] issued. As was well said by *Chief Justice Parker in Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 273, 8 Am. Dec. 135, "there is no such thing as a vested right to do wrong."

The remaining points taken by the appellant may be briefly disposed of. One is that the provisions of § 15 of the act of 1906 are not retrospective. This is refuted by a reading of the closing paragraph of the section. Finally, it is insisted that, if retrospective in form, the section is void, as an ex post facto law within the prohibition of art. 1, § 9 of the Constitution. It is, however, settled that this prohibition is confined to laws respecting criminal punishments, and has no relation to retrospective legislation of any other description. Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 319; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 390, 1 L. ed. 648, 650; and Rose's Note thereon. The act imposes no punishment upon an alien who has previously procured a certificate of citizenship by fraud or other illegal conduct. It simply deprives him of his ill-gotten privileges. We do not question that an act of legislation having the effect to deprive a citizen of his right to vote because of something in his past conduct which was not an offense at the time it was committed would be void as an ex post facto law. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 321, 18 L. ed. 356, 362; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 378, 18 L. ed. 366, 370. But the act under consideration inflicts no such punishment, nor any punishment, upon a lawful citizen. It merely provides that, on good cause shown, the question whether one who claims the privilege of citizenship under the certificate of a court has procured that certificate through fraud or other illegal contrivance shall be examined and determined in orderly judicial proceedings. The act makes nothing fraudulent or unlawful that was honest and lawful when it was done. It imposes no new penalty upon the wrongdoer. But if, after fair hearing, it is judicially determined that by wrongful conduct he has obtained a title to citizenship, the act provides that he shall be deprived of a privilege that 243] was never rightfully *his. Such a statute is not to be deemed an ex post facto law.

The decree under review should be affirmed.

R. J. DARNELL (Incorporated), Plff. in Err.,
v.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY and Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 243-245.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below.

The dismissal by a Federal circuit court of an action brought by a domestic corporation to recover from nonresident railway companies the excess over a reasonable freight rate exacted by them because the declaration contained no averment that the Interstate Commerce Commission had sustained plaintiff's right to reparation does not present a question of the jurisdiction of that court as a Federal court, so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, since precisely the same question would have arisen for decision had the suit been pending in a state court of general authority, having jurisdiction over the defendants.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 895-914, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 887.]

Submitted April 1, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Tennessee to review a judgment dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, an action brought by a domestic corporation to recover from nonresident railway companies the excess over a reasonable freight rate exacted by them. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, on demurrer, 190 Fed. 656.

Mr. William A. Percy submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Allen Hughes was on the brief:

Under § 5 of the judiciary act of 1891 the case at bar is one which most aptly illustrates an instance for the issuance of the writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a circuit court.

Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 C. C. A. 637, 192 Fed. 475; Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 106 C. C. A. 269, 183 Fed. 929.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333; and B. Atman & Co. v. United States, ante, 894.

Messrs. Charles N. Burch and Blewett Lee submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. H. D. Minor was on the brief:

Quasi jurisdictional questions do not go direct to this court, but to the circuit court of appeals.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, ante, 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44

The court, in sustaining the demurrer, applied a rule equally applicable to all state and Federal courts; to-wit, the necessity of the plaintiff showing that it had complied with the interstate commerce act, as construed in the Abilene Cotton Oil Company Case, by, in the first instance, resorting to the Commission and having its claim adjudicated.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 222 U. S. 506, ante, 288, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

This cannot be said to be a question of jurisdiction.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Venner v. Great Northern R. Co. 209 U. S. 24, 52 L. ed. 666, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 506, 43 L. ed. 785, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 233, 48 L. ed. 161, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 49 L. ed. 398, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, ante, 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

244] *Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

On motion to dismiss: Plaintiff in error, a Tennessee corporation, was the plaintiff below. One of the defendants is an Illinois and the other a Mississippi corporation. The action was commenced on June 24, 1911, to recover the excess over a reasonable rate exacted by the defendants from the plaintiff for the carriage of hard-wood lumber, such excess being alleged to be 2 cents per hundred pounds on more than thirty-five million pounds of such lumber shipped by plaintiff between January 20, 1905, and August 1, 1908. It was averred that the excess of the rate exacted over what would have been a reasonable rate to the extent claimed had been determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission in a proceeding before that body by shippers of hard-wood lumber other than the plaintiff, and that in consequence of the order of the Commission, made in the proceeding referred to, a reasonable rate had been made effective by the defendants on August 1, 1908. A demurrer of both the defendants was sustained, for the reason that the declaration failed to allege that plaintiff had made application for reparation to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that this right to reparation had been sustained by that body. The plaintiff declining to plead further, a judgment of dismissal was entered. Thereafter the court filed a certificate to the effect that the cause had been dismissed solely upon the ground of want of jurisdiction. This direct writ of error was then sued out.

The motion to dismiss must prevail. As stated in the certificate of the court below, the order of dismissal was "based solely on the ground that the declaration . . . discloses the infraction of no right arising under or out of the Federal laws or Constitution, of which this court now has jurisdiction." It is plain, from the record, that *this was but the equivalent of [245 saying that the declaration did not state a cause of action because of the failure to allege the existence of a supposed condition precedent to recovery in a court of law; viz., a finding by the Interstate Commerce Commission that a right to reparation was possessed by the plaintiff. But the right to take cognizance of a claim based upon an award of reparation made by the Commission is not confined solely to an appropriate circuit court of the United States, but is equally possessed by state courts having general jurisdiction. See amendment to § 16 of the act to regulate commerce, resulting from the act of June 18, 1910 (chap. 309, 36 Stat. at L. 554). Under these circumstances it is clear that the question of whether the plaintiff was entitled to the relief prayed, in the absence of an averment of previous action by the Interstate Commerce Commission, involved merely the determination of whether there was a cause of action stated; and hence, that under these circumstances this issue did not call in question the jurisdiction of the court below as a Federal court becomes equally clear when it is considered that exactly the same question concerning the sufficiency of the averments to justify affording relief would have arisen for decision had the suit been pending in a state court of general authority having jurisdiction over the person. When the controversy comes to be rightly understood, it is obvious that its determination was within the scope of the jurisdiction of the court below, and that its decision on the issue presented is susceptible of being reviewed in the regular course of judicial proceeding, and does not come within the purview of the authority to directly review in certain cases, conferred upon this court by the act of 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488]. Bache v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 48 L. ed. 774, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547; Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, ante, 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

Writ of error dismissed.

246]*CHARLES D. CRESWILL, George N. Stoney, George R. Hutto, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

GRAND LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS OF GEORGIA, T. H. Nickerson, D. J. Bailey, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 246-264.)

Error to state court — Federal question — Federal authority.

1. The right of a fraternal order to the use of its corporate name, and the incidental right to use the distinctive words in such name to designate the order, and to use the appropriate insignia, emblems, etc., when invoked in virtue of the authority to incorporate conferred by the Federal general incorporation act of May 5, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 98, chap. 80), is claimed under an authority exercised under the United States within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, Judicial Code (36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227), § 237, governing writs of error from the Federal Supreme Court to state courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1751-1797, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — jurisdiction.

2. Whether or not the officers of the state grand lodge of a fraternal order incorporated under the Federal general incorporation act of May 5, 1870, may prosecute in the state courts an application to be made a domestic corporation is a question non-Federal in character, which cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1601-1644, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judg-

Error to state court — scope of review — facts.

3. A question of law arising out of the contention that there was no evidence whatever to support a finding of fact as the result of which a Federal right was denied is open to review in the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court, if the evidence is in the record.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1596-1600; 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Laches — as bar to injunctive relief.

4. The inaction of a fraternal order during the many years in which a newer order, taking the same name, has existed in the state and has exercised its attributes and functions, is such laches as defeats the former's right to injunctive relief against the infringement of its name and the copying of its insignia and emblems.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, 80, 81, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 235.]

Argued May 2 and 3, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Fulton County in that state, enjoining the infringement of the name of a fraternal order and the copying of its insignia and emblems. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 133 Ga. 837, 134 Am. St. Rep. 231, 67 S. E. 188, 18 Ann. Cas. 453.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. C. L. Pettigrew argued the cause, and, with Mr. Samuel A. T. Watkins, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The defendants in error are not entitled to the relief sought because of their own acquiescence in the use by the plaintiffs in error of the name under which they were chartered.

Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. v. Graham, 96 Iowa, 592, 31 L.R.A. 133, 65 N. W. 837; Thomp. Corp. 8192, 8196; Burke v. Bishop, 75 C. C. A. 666, 144 Fed. 838; Bacon, Ben. Soc. 1904, § 48A; Great Hive, ments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

On laches as a defense in suits for infringement of trademarks or names, or for unfair competition in trade—see notes to Saxlehner v. Eisner & M. Co. 45 L. ed. U. S. 60; Taylor v. Sawyer Spindle Co. 22 C. C. A. 211; and Richardson v. D. M. Osborne & Co. 36 C. C. A. 613.

L. M. v. Supreme Hive, L. M. 135 Mich. 392, 97 N. W. 779, 99 N. W. 26, 129 Mich. 324, 88 N. W. 882; Holt v. Parsons, 118 Ga. 895, 45 S. E. 690; Wilkes v. Phillips, 120 Ga. 728, 48 S. E. 113; Reynolds & H. Estate Mortg. Co. v. Martin, 116 Ga. 495, 42 S. E. 796; Hollingshead v. American Nat. Bank, 104 Ga. 250, 30 S. E. 728; Marshall v. Means, 12 Ga. 61, 56 Am. Dec. 444; Akins v. Hill, 7 Ga. 573; Water-Lot Co. v. Bucks, 5 Ga. 315; High, Inj. 4th ed. §§ 7-10a; Elberton v. Pearl Cotton Mills, 123 Ga. 1, 50 S. E. 977; Whitley v. James, 121 Ga. 521, 49 S. E. 600; McWhorter v. Cheney, 121 Ga. 541, 49 S. E. 603; Cade v. Burton, 35 Ga. 280; Knox v. Yoiv, 91 Ga. 367, 17 S. E. 654; 16 Cyc. 152, 162; Prince's Metallic Paint Co. v. Prince Mfg. Co. 6 C. C. A. 647, 17 U. S. App. 145, 57 Fed. 938; Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. Boston Rubber Co. 149 Mass. 436, 21 N. E. 875; Colonial Dames v. Colonial Dames, 29 Misc. 10, 60 N. Y. Supp. 302, 173 N. Y. 586, 65 N. E. 1115; Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 183, 31 L. ed. 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Sullivan v. Portland & K. R. Co. 94 U. S. 806, 24 L. ed. 324.

Mr. Alton B. Parker also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. L. Pettigrew and Samuel A. T. Watkins, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Hamilton Douglas and John P. Ross argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

There is no Federal question involved. The appellants have had such a trial as is authorized by law, and have not been deprived of property without due process of law.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. ed. 414; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. 130, 21 L. ed. 442; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 130, 21 L. ed. 929; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 537, 28 L. ed. 232, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

A state may make restrictions on corporations before permitting them to do business, even though they are Federal corporations.

Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 368, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737. 56 L. ed.

The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction where the Federal question is only placed on the record for the purpose of appeal.

Marsh v. Nichols, S. & Co. 140 U. S. 344, 35 L. ed. 413, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798; Boughton v. American Exch. Nat. Bank, 104 U. S. 427, 26 L. ed. 765; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Michigan Southern R. Co. 19 How. 378, 15 L. ed. 689; Fleming v. Clark, 12 Allen, 198; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511.

The Federal court can consider only Federal questions, and not questions of local law.

Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Cornell University v. Fiske, 136 U. S. 152, 34 L. ed. 427, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Pollard v. Kibbe, 14 Pet. 353, 10 L. ed. 490; Wallace v. Parker, 6 Pet. 680, 8 L. ed. 543; Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 370, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1113, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 33 L. ed. 442, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Hopkins v. McLure, 133 U. S. 380, 33 L. ed. 660, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; St. Louis, C. G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Castillo v. McConico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3, 26 L. ed. 939; Myrick v. Thompson, 99 U. S. 291, 25 L. ed. 324.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

A secret fraternal and benevolent order known as the Knights of Pythias was organized as a voluntary association in Washington, District of Columbia, in 1864. Pursuant to the authority conferred by an act of Congress approved May 5, 1870 [16 Stat. at L. 98, chap. 80], authorizing the formation of corporations in the District of Columbia, "the persons composing the [249] Supreme Lodge, the governing body of the order, became incorporated as the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias by filing in the proper office the certificate required by the act. Among other things required to be stated in the certificate was the name or title by which the society was to be known in law and the particular business and objects of the society. The statute provided that upon the filing of the certificate the persons signing and acknowledging the same, and their associates and successors, "shall . . . be a body politic and corporate, by the name and style stated in the certificate; . . ." The life of the corporation thus created, it would seem, expired by limitation in 1890. On June 29, 1894 [28 Stat. at L. 96, chap. 119], however, by a special act of Congress, the Supreme Lodge was again made a corporation of the District of Columbia by the name of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, and still exists as such. Membership in the order is restricted to white males. In addition to a Grand Lodge and subordinate lodges in each state to which it has been extended, the order conducts an insurance branch known as the Endowment Rank and a military branch known as the Uniform Rank. The Grand Lodge of Georgia was instituted by the Supreme Lodge on March 20, 1871.

An order of Knights of Pythias of the same general nature as that above described, consisting of members of the colored race, was established in Mississippi on March 26, 1880. It became a corporation of the District of Columbia on or about October 10, 1889, by virtue of the general incorporation act of Congress of May 5, 1870, already referred to, under the name and style of "The Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, North and South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa." The order was introduced into Georgia in June, 1886, and a Grand Lodge was instituted in that state by the Supreme Lodge on December 15, 1890. The corporation of October 10, 1889, *was reincorporated December 14, 1903, under the same general law of May 5, 1870, by the name of "Knights of Pythias of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia." After such reincorporation, on January 15, 1905, the Supreme Lodge issued a new charter to the Grand Lodge of Georgia.

The Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias, which, as heretofore stated, was finally incorporated in 1894 by special act of Congress, the Grand Lodge of Georgia, which was subject to its jurisdiction, and the officers of such Grand Lodge, were parties complainant in an amended petition in this litigation commenced in the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia. The defendants were the officers of the Grand Lodge in Georgia of the other body, who had made application to the court in which this suit was commenced to be incorporated as a domestic corporation of Georgia under the name and style of "The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia, Jurisdiction of Georgia." The petition filed in the cause recited the organization of the order of the plaintiffs substantially as heretofore stated, and the defendants were alleged to be wrongfully attempting to incorporate under a name which infringed that of plaintiffs' order, and to be unlawfully styling themselves Knights of Pythias, and to be fraudulently using the insignia, emblems, etc., of the plaintiffs' order. The averments of the petition and the amended petition as to damage sustained by the alleged unlawful acts of the defendants and their associates were stated in general terms to constitute a wrong and injury to petitioners and to the membership in Georgia, and to be a fraud upon the public. The relief prayed was, in substance, a permanent injunction enjoining the prosecution of the application for incorporation, and the use by the defendants and the members of the subordinate lodges under their jurisdiction of the name "Knights of *Pythias" and of other [251 names, insignia, emblems, etc., which would be like or a colorable imitation of those in use by the plaintiffs' order.

By their answer the defendants put the plaintiffs to proof of the material averments of the petition, set up the origin, growth, and purposes of the order of which they were members, and especially stated that it was confined to the "negro race and the Asiatic races." The incorporation of the order under the general incorporation act of Congress of 1870 was also averred, and the claim was made of lawful right to the use of the names, signs, symbols, emblems, insignia, and the other paraphernalia adopted by the corporation, and the good faith of the corporation and all concerned in the matter was averred. It was further stated that the membership of the order in the United States aggregated 80,747, and in the state of Georgia 11,805, and that there never had been an attempt to confuse the order with that of which the plaintiffs were members, and that no such confusion in fact had ever arisen or could arise, the field of operation of the orders being absolutely different. Laches of the plaintiffs was pleaded in bar of any relief, on the ground that the existence of the order and its operations had been publicly known and was matter of common knowledge for many years.

The case came on for hearing on a motion for preliminary injunction, and after hearing the evidence and argument of counsel the court denied an injunction and quashed a preliminary restraining order. The plaintiffs took the case by a bill of exceptions to the supreme court of Georgia. That court, in disposing of it, referred to the fact that the Supreme Lodge of the order represented by plaintiffs was a corporation of the District of Columbia, and that by amendment of the petition it had been joined as a plaintiff. It further stated:

That "the defendants have been operating 252] and are *seeking to be incorporated in this state under a name which is claimed to be an infringement of the name of the plaintiff's association, and the question is involved whether and how far the plaintiff, which is a foreign corporation, might be affected by the state's granting a charter to the defendants as a domestic corporation in the name and for the purpose asked, and also whether there is a fraudulent purpose or design to so infringe."

It was next observed that "the presiding judge should have enjoined the defendants from obtaining the charter applied for, so as to preserve the status in respect thereto until, on final jury trial, all of the questions of law and fact can be fully adjudicated." The court held that error had been committed in refusing to grant an injunction as to the charter applied for, and the "ruling of the chancellor denying the injunction in other matters" was allowed "to stand until the final trial or further order of court, leaving open all the other questions for future determination." 128 Ga. 775, 58 S. E. 163. There followed a hearing of the case before the court and a jury, and evidence, both oral and documentary, was introduced. The evidence showed, without contradiction, that in addition to being incorporated as stated in the answer, the defendant order had also organized on May 24, 1905, as a fraternal beneficial association by its corporate name under the insurance laws of the District of Columbia; that the laws enacted by the order were such as were common to a fraternal body; that the rituals of the order and its emblems, flags, badges, pins, and jewelry adornment were on public sale, free to be purchased by anyone; that the membership of the order throughout the United States aggregated 300,000; that there had been collected and disbursed to the members of the order between July 1, 1906, and July 1, 1907, more than $590,000; that the collections in Georgia during the existence of the order there aggregated $180,232.21; that there had been 253] paid *to the widows and orphans of deceased members in Georgia $148,680, and that the collections in Georgia aggregated $51,000 a year, excluding the expense of burying their dead, which was $9,000 more. After instructing the jury as to the law deemed to be applicable, and observing that the case was of a character wherein the law provided that questions might be propounded, to be answered by the jury, such answers to stand as their verdict, the 56 L. ed.

court submitted fourteen questions to be answered by the jury. The questions, with the answers given, are copied in the margin.†

†(Questions and Verdict.)

Georgia, Fulton county:

(1) Is the proposed corporate name of the defendants an infringement on the name of the plaintiff's association?

Yes.

(2) If it is such an infringement, would it affect or injure plaintiff in any property right? If so, what?

Yes, in name.

(3) If so, is there any fraudulent purpose or design to (in?) so infringing?

Yes, there is.

(4) Are any of the emblems or insignia of defendants the same as any of those used by plaintiffs, and if so, does such use injure plaintiff in any property right?

Yes.

(5) Has the plaintiff acquiesced in the use by defendants of the name and insignia, etc., and if so, how long?

No.

(6) Is it true that since the organization of the order represented by petitioners and its introduction into the state of Georgia, it has been called the Order of Knights of Pythias, and that its members have been known as Knights of Pythias or Pythian Knights, indifferently?

Yes.

(7) Is it true that "Pythias" is the distinctive word in the name of the order represented by petitioners, which ordinarily distinguishes it from the name and style of other fraternal orders in the state of Georgia and in the United States?

Yes.

(8) Is it true that the name set forth in defendants' petition for incorporation is substantially identical with the name and style of your petitioners, the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia?

Yes.

(9) Is it true that the names set forth in defendants' said petition for incorporation is a colorable imitation of the name and style of your petitioner, the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia?

Yes.

(10) Is it true that the use by defendants and their associates of the name which they are seeking incorporation would work a fraud upon your petitioners and their associates and the public, in that the name under which defendants propose to incorporate is a colorable imitation of the name of petitioners?

Yes.

(11) Is it true that defendants cannot show any organization of any kind until 1880, and until long after the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of petitioners was organized in the state of Georgia?

Yes.

(12) Is it true that the use of the word "Pythias" immediately in conjunction with the words "Knights of," in the name under

254] *Subsequently a final decree was entered granting the relief prayed by the complainants. A copy of the decree is excerpted in the margin.‡

255] *Reciting that they were dissatisfied with the verdict of the jury upon the questions submitted, the defendants moved for a new trial upon the ground that the verdict 256] *was contrary to the evidence and without evidence to support it, that it was strongly and decidedly against the weight of evidence, and was contrary to law and the principles of equity. Nearly six months afterwards, by leave of court, defendants amended the motion by adding thirty-six additional grounds, attacking 257] specifically each of the *answers to the questions, charging each to be not only contrary to the evidence, but contrary to the charge of the court, and in addition error was alleged in the charge as given and to the failure to instruct the jury as pointed out in some of the specifications of error. The omission to specifically instruct the jury that the defendants claimed *a right to their name under a charter from the District of Columbia by virtue of an act of Congress, and the answers of the jury to certain of the questions, were alleged to violate defendants' rights under the charter and to be repugnant to the due faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States, and the decree was alleged also to constitute a violation of the general incorporation act under which the order of which defendants were a part had been incorporated. The motion for a new trial was overruled. A bill of exceptions was soon afterwards allowed, which was certified to contain "all the evi-which defendants and their associates are seeking incorporation, is a colorable imitation of the name of your petitioner, the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia?

Yes.

(13) Is it true that defendants of the "Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia" are wearing emblems and insignia identical in color, design, and lettering with the emblems and insignia of petitioners, the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia; and is it true that the wearing and use of such insignia and emblems work a fraud upon either petitioner or their associates or the public?

Yes.

(14) Have the defendants used the name "Knights of Pythias" or the letters "K. of P." without any affix or suffix thereto?

Yes.

G. W. Foote, Foreman.

May 27, 1908.

‡ (Final Decree.)

Georgia, Fulton county:

Upon considering the pleadings, evidence, and verdict in the above-stated case, it is thereupon ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the court as follows:

(1) That the defendants, Chas. D. Creswill, Geo. N. Stoney, Geo. R. Hutto, N. B. Williamson, Columbus J. Smith, Fred N. Cohen, Boss W. Warren, Geo. W. Brown, Jas. W. Davis, Edwin J. Turner, Garrett Taylor, and Lucius L. Lee, and each of them, and their associates, confederates, and successors, be and they are hereby perpetually enjoined as in said petition prayed, and especially as follows:

A. That said defendants and their associates, confederates, and successors are hereby perpetually enjoined from prosecuting their petition for incorporation, and from further proceeding to become incorporated in Fulton county, or elsewhere in the state of Georgia, under the name and style of "The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia, Jurisdiction of Georgia," or using any name or title embracing the word "Pythias" in immediate conjunction with the words "Knights of," or under any name or title in which the word "Pythias" is the distinctive and cardinal word, or under any name which is substantially identical with, or a colorable imitation of, the name of the petitioners, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia.

B. That said defendants, their associates and successors, and each of them be, and they are hereby, perpetually enjoined from further using in their voluntary organization said name of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia, Jurisdiction of Georgia, and in the conduct of its affairs, using any name embracing the word "Pythias" in immediate conjunction with the words "Knights of," or embracing said word "Pythias" as the cardinal distinctive word of the name, or any other name which is substantial identical with or in colorable imitation of the name of petitioners, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia. The said defendants, their associates and successors, and each of them, are further perpetually enjoined from instituting subordinate lodges under the name and designation of the Order of Knights of Pythias, and from further authorizing the continued existence of subordinate lodges under the jurisdiction of said voluntary organization of which defendants and their associates are members, using the name and designation of Knights of Pythias, or any name in which the word "Pythias" is the cardinal and distinctive word, or any name which is a colorable imitation of the name of petitioners, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, and the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia, and of subordinate lodges instituted by said petitioner's authority. And said defendants, their asso-dence" and the material portions of the record. The case was then taken by a writ of error to the supreme court of the state, where the judgment was affirmed. 133 Ga. 837, 134 Am. St. Rep. 231, 67 S. E. 188, 18 Ann. Cas. 453. This writ of error was then prosecuted.

In the trial court, in various forms, plaintiffs in error, defendants below, invoked the right to the use of its corporate name and the incidental right to the designation "Knights of Pythias" and the use of insignia, emblems, etc., appropriate to the order. As this right or privilege was claimed in virtue of the authority to incorporate conferred by the general incorporation act of May 5, 1870, enacted by Congress, it constituted a right or privilege claimed under an authority exercised under the United States, which, being denied by the state court, is reviewable here by virtue of the provisions of § 237 of the new Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227] § 709, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Ferris v. Frohman, 223 U. S. 424, 431, ante, 492, 495, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263, and cases cited. The fact that corporations created by the general law of 1870 and the special act of Congress of 1894, heretofore referred to, derived their rights and powers under a law of the United States, is recognized in the following cases which were removed from state courts: Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Kalinski, 163 U. S. 289, 41 L. ed. 163, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Withers, 177 U. S. 260, 44 L. ed. 762, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611, and ciates and successors, and each of them, are further perpetually enjoined from designating and calling themselves, and from authorizing their associates and members of subordinate lodges organized and existing by authority of the voluntary organization of which said defendants are members to designate and call themselves, Knights of Pythias or Pythian Knights, or any other name that is a colorable imitation thereof, and from designating their voluntary organization or its subordinate lodges by the initials K. P. or K. of P., and from using a seal which is a colorable imitation of the seal of the petitioners, the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia, and from using and wearing emblems and insignia, buttons, pins, rings, and watch charms which in color and design are substantially similar to or a colorable imitation of the emblems and insignia, buttons, pins, rings, and watch charms adopted, used, and worn by the members of petitioners, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia, and the members of the subordinate lodges organized by authority of said petitioners; and the said defendants, and each of them, their successors and associates, are perpetually enjoined from authorizing or permitting the further use and wearing of such emblems and insignia by members of subordinate lodges instituted by and existing under the authority of said voluntary organization of which the defendants are officers and members.

C. That said defendants and each of them, and their associates and successors, be, and they are, perpetually enjoined from using the words "Knights of Pythias" in immediate conjunction, or the word "Pythias," as the cardinal distinctive word in any name, or as a designation of any insurance, military, or other branch of the voluntary organization of which said defendants and their associates are officers and members; and from using any name, flags, emblems, and insignia that are substantially identical with, or a colorable imitation of, the name, flags, emblems, or insignia of petitioners, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Georgia, in any insurance and military branches of said petitioners, in connection with any society or corporation of which defendants are officers or members.

(2) In order that the voluntary organization of which the defendants are officers and members may have a reasonable time in which to select and adopt some other name and make such changes in the laws as may be necessary in obedience to this decree, and not hereby disorganize said organization which defendants are members of, or stop its said association from the prosecution of the word in which it is engaged:

It is hereby adjudged and decreed: That the injunction decreed in subsections B and C, paragraph 1 hereof, shall be in abeyance, and no penalty shall be visited upon the defendants, their associates and successors, for disobedience thereof until the 1st day of June, 1909. And that on or after said 1st day of June, 1909, this suspension of said injunction shall cease and determine, and said injunction shall be of full and final force and effect perpetually after said date, and the defendants and each of them, their associates and successors, are and shall be subject to all the pains and penalties provided for any disobedience of said injunction.

(3) That this decree shall have the force and effect of the state's writ of injunction, without issuance of such writ; provided, however, that the writ of injunction, according to the terms of this decree, shall issue out of this court, and be further served upon the defendants and their associates and successors, at any time, on motion of petitioners.

(4) That the petitioners have and recover of the defendants all of the costs in this behalf incurred, to wit: ——— dollars, to be taxed by the clerk of this court.

In open court this 10th of June, 1908.

J. T. Pendleton,

Judge C. S. A. C

Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Beck, 181 U. S. 49, 45 L. ed. 741, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

259] *Whether or not the defendants below and their successors were entitled to prosecute in the state court the application to be made a domestic corporation of Georgia is, in our opinion, plainly a question non-Federal in character, and we therefore pass its consideration. The question, however, whether the right or privilege arising from the authority exercised under legislation of Congress was invaded by the decree complained of, so far as it forbade the use of the corporate name or a designation containing the distinctive words "Knights of Pythias" and the use of the emblems and insignia of such order, being within our competency to review, we come to the consideration of the question whether the asserted right or privilege was properly denied.

It is manifest from the record that the existence within the state of Georgia of two bodies of Knights of Pythias, controlled by corporations of the District of Columbia, and the authority exerted over the membership in that state by the governing body of each order, was not contrary to any state statute, and the supreme court of Georgia, in determining the right to relief, applied what it conceived to be the applicable principles of general law. Speaking in a general sense, it is true to say that the supreme court of Georgia deemed the case before it to be controlled by the principles of law applicable to trademarks and tradenames, and in substance held: (a) That an association whose primary object was fraternal or benevolent, first appropriating and using an arbitrary or fanciful name, acquires an exclusive right to the same; (b) that a subsequent unauthorized use by others of such name or a colorable imitation thereof would be unlawful; (c) that in the absence of laches, if, as a result of such wrongful use, injury was occasioned to the rightful owner by the unlawful appropriation and use of the name, equity would afford relief. Coming to apply these principles the court held, first, that there had been a lawful appropriation 260] of the name by the plaintiff corporation, and an unauthorized and wrongful use thereof by the defendants; indeed, that such use was made "with a fraudulent purpose and design;" second, that the unlawful appropriation had inflicted injury upon the property rights of the lawful appropriator. On this subject, the court said:

"The plaintiffs' order, while primarily fraternal and benevolent, has certain property and business attributes and activities, including the acquiring and ownership of large amounts of property, and the conducting of a department of insurance protection. Under the evidence, the element of injury is sufficiently shown."

The conclusion of the court that there had been, as a matter of fact, no such laches as should prevent a court of equity from affording relief, was thus stated:

"Taking into consideration that the subject of controversy in this case is in the nature of a tradename, and that the contest is between two secret societies whose relations to each other during the period from the appropriation of the name by one to the institution of the suit for injunction by the other was not the usual relation that one person ordinarily sustains to another, we cannot say that the finding of the jury that the plaintiffs had not acquiesced in the use of their name by defendants is not supported by the evidence. The suit was filed promptly after the defendants came out into the open, and by petition, duly published, asked the court to give legal sanction to their use of the plaintiff's name."

We do not stop to consider whether a court was right under principles of general law in applying to organizations like those here involved the rules applicable to trademarks and tradenames and unfair competition in trade, a subject as to which there is conflict in the decisions, because, under the view we take of the case, we propose, for the sake of argument only, to indulge in the hypothesis *that the conception which [261] the court entertained on the subject was correct. It is indisputable that the court was clearly right, as a matter of law, in holding that a court of equity in any event would not afford relief where there had been such laches as would cause it to be inequitable to do so. Saxlehner v. Eisner & M. Co. 179 U. S. 19, 35, 45 L. ed. 60, 74, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7. The question, then, is, Can the decree of the court be maintained consistently with the doctrine of laches which the court expounded and which we have accepted as correct beyond all controversy? As the injury which we thus state rests upon the premises that all the propositions of law applied by the court are to be taken as correct, it follows that there is no possibility of deciding there was material error unless it is to be found in the application which the court made of the principle of law which it applied to the facts established by the evidence, all of which is in the record in connection with the findings made by the jury. While it is true that upon a writ of error to a state court we do not review findings of fact, nevertheless two propositions are as well settled as the rule itself, as follows: (a) that where a Federal right has been denied as the result of a finding of fact which it is contended there was no evidence whatever to support, and the evidence is in the record, the resulting question of law is open for decision; and (b) that where a conclusion of law as to a Federal right and a finding of fact are so intermingled as to cause it to be essentially necessary, for the purpose of passing upon the Federal question, to analyze and dissect the facts, to the extent necessary to do so the power exists as a necessary incident to a decision upon the claim of denial of the Federal right. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 591, ante, 556, 565, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, 668, ante, 594, 604, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, ante, 863, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535. The contentions here made bring this case under the first category, since the insistence here is that there was not any evidence [262]*justifying the findings made by the court concerning fraudulent purpose, injury to property, deception of the public, etc.

On examining the evidence we are compelled to say we do not think it has any tendency to prove an intent on the part of the defendant order by the adoption of the designation given to their body or the use of the emblems, insignia, etc., employed, to make it appear that their order and that of the complainant is one and the same, or that it tends to show that the use of the corporate name or the distinctive words "Knights of Pythias" and the emblems, etc., of that order, operated in any degree to deceive the public or to work pecuniary damage to the complainant order within or without the state of Georgia. But strong as are our convictions as to these subjects, we prefer not to rest our conclusion upon them, but rather to place the decree of reversal which we shall render, upon the application to the facts of the well-settled doctrine on the subject of laches. As we have observed, the court below, in considering the facts on that subject, made no reference to the evidence, but assumed that it must be that the findings of the jury were sustained by evidence, and indulged in the assumption that it was natural to suppose that the long-continued existence and development of the defendant order had not been interfered with by the complainant corporation because not known until the defendants came into the open by making an application to be made a domestic corporation of Georgia. The facts, however, which we have stated concerning the establishment of the order, its lodgment in Georgia, its vast expansion, its years of duration, and its volume of transactions, were not disputed in any particular whatever, and therefore leave no room for any other but the legal conclusion of laches. This, we think, in the most conclusive way demonstrates the violation of the elementary principles of equity which would result from the enforcement of the injunction *which the [263] court awarded. And the conclusion just stated renders it unnecessary to point out the incompatibility between the holding, on the one hand, that there was injury to the property rights of the plaintiff corporation, and a deceit of the public arising from the existence of the defendant order and its activities, and the holding, on the other hand, that laches cannot be imputed to the plaintiff corporation as a result of its inaction during the many years in which the defendant corporation existed and exercised its attributes and functions, because the wrongs thus being publicly inflicted could not be presumed to have been known until the defendant order came out into the open by the application for incorporation under the law of the state of Georgia.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Holmes:

When a Federal right is held by a state court to have been lost by subsequent conduct that of itself involves no Federal question, I think we are not at liberty to re-examine the decision unless we can say that the state court in substance is denying the right. So it has been held or strongly intimated as to res judicata (Northern P. R. Co. v. Ellis, 144 U. S. 458, 36 L. ed. 504, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724); estoppel (Hale v. Lewis, 181 U. S. 473, 45 L. ed. 959, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677); the statute of limitations (Rector v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733); and laches (Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 205, 214, 215, 44 L. ed. 1038, 1041, 1042, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64); and the principle was recognized only the other day in Gaar, S. & Co. v. Shannon, 223 U. S. 468, 470, 471, ante, 510, 512, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236. I do not see the distinction by which we can review the decision in the opposite case, where it is held that the right is not lost or cannot be interfered with because of laches on the other side. In a case where the state court held that there *was no defense under the [264] statute of limitations or estoppel, the writ of error was dismissed. Carothers v. Mayer, 164 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 453, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106. I will content myself with saying that I do not see how the decision can be reversed on the ground of laches.

Mr. Justice Lurton concurs in this view and is of opinion that the writ should be dismissed.

NORFOLK & SUBURBAN TURNPIKE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 264-271.)

Error to state court — parties — state as defendant in error.

1. The state is properly made the defendant in error in a writ of error sued out to review the judgment of a state court suspending the collection of tolls by a turnpike company until the roads were put in proper repair, although the state was not named as a party to the proceedings leading up to such judgment, where such proceedings were in reality begun and prosecuted on behalf of the state.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2477-2484, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — to what court directed — dismissal.

2. Hereafter, a writ of error to review an alleged judgment or decree of a court of last resort of the state, declining to allow a writ of error to, or an appeal from, a lower state court, will be dismissed unless it plainly appears on the face of the record, by an affirmance in express terms of the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed, that the refusal of the court to allow an ap-

NOTE.—On parties to appellate proceedings in the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Amadco v. Northern Assur. Co. 50 L. ed. U. S. 723.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On legislative regulation of tolls, rates, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

When judgment sought to be reviewed in Federal Supreme Court is that of highest state court.

A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to review a judgment of a state court cannot be maintained where that court is not the highest court of the state in which a decision in the suit could be had. Mullen v. Western Union Beef Co. 173 U. S. 116, 43 L. ed. 635, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404; Fisher v. Perkins (Fisher v. Carrico) 122 U. S. 522, 30 L. ed. 1192, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1227.

And error does not lie from the Supreme Court of the United States to review a final judgment of an inferior state court, though rendered as a necessary result of a decision by the highest court of the state, which had reversed a prior judgment of the inferior court, overruling a demurrer, and remanded the case for further proceedings according to law, as such judgment is that of the inferior court, and is reviewable in the higher state courts. McComb v. Knox County, 91 U. S. 1, 23 L. ed. 185; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 339, 40 L. ed. 991, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

And this is no less true because if an appeal had been taken from the final judgment of the inferior court to the highest court of the state, that court, according to its uniform course of decision, would have affirmed the judgment upon the non-Federal ground that its decision upon the first appeal was conclusive. Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, supra.

And see note to Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001, as to what judgments of state courts are final for the purpose of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

A writ of error lies from the Supreme Court of the United States to an inferior state court where that is, by reason of the amount involved, the highest court of the state to which the suit can be carried. The Moses Taylor, 4 Wall. 411, 18 L. ed. 397.

The judgment of an inferior state court is that of the highest state court in which a decision in the suit could be had where the highest state court has dismissed a writ of error or appeal for want of jurisdiction. Lane v. Wallace, 131 U. S. C. C. XIX., Appx., and 26 L. ed. 703; Callan v. Bransford, 139 U. S. 197, 35 L. ed. 144, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519.

Or where leave to take the case to a higher court has been applied for and denied. Miller v. Joseph, 17 Wall. 655, 21 L. ed. 741; Gregory v. McVeigh, 23 Wall. 294, 23 L. ed. 156; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Sullivan v. Texas, 207 U. S. 416, 52 L. ed. 274, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

An inferior state court is the final court of the state where the Federal question involved can be decided, and therefore is the court to which a writ of error from peal or writ of error was the exercise by it of jurisdiction to review the case upon the merits.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1147-1167, 2616-2634, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — property rights — collection of tolls.

3. Suspending the collection of tolls by a turnpike company, conformably to a state statute, until the roads shall be put in proper repair, does not take property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., because the travel does not yield a sufficient revenue to keep the roads in good order.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 962.]

the Supreme Court of the United States must be directed, where the highest state court, although discussing the Federal question in its opinion, and declaring it to be without merit, dismissed a writ of error to the inferior court solely and expressly for want of jurisdiction. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hughes, 203 U. S. 505, 51 L. ed. 294, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162.

A judgment of the superior court of the city of New York, affirming a decision at a special term of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, is a judgment of the highest court of a state in which a decision can be had, within the meaning of § 25 of the judiciary act of 1789, where the court of appeals has dismissed an appeal therefrom for want of jurisdiction, although the case might have been carried up to that court had an appeal been taken from the special term to the general term of the court of common pleas. Kanouse v. Martin, 15 How. 198, 14 L. ed. 660.

And see note to Kentucky v. Powers, 50 L. ed. U. S. 633, as to when a writ of error may run to an inferior state court.

But the refusal by the highest court of Virginia to entertain an appeal from a final decree of an inferior state court has been held to be so far the equivalent of a judgment of affirmance as to amount to a final judgment which may be reviewed by writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the highest state court. Richmond, F & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 14 L. ed. 55. And it has been held immaterial that such refusal was in the form of a ruling on an application for a writ of supersedeas, which was denied on the ground that the judgment of the lower court was plainly right. Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 248, 26 L. ed. 135. The court said: Whenever the highest court of a state by any form of decision affirms or denies the validity of a judgment of an inferior court over which it, by law, can exercise appellate authority, the jurisdiction of this court to review such decision, if it involve a Federal question, will, upon a proper proceeding, at-
56 L. ed.

Submitted April 8, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review a judgment refusing a writ of error to review an order of the Circuit Court of Princess Anne County, in that state, suspending the taking of tolls by a turnpike company until the roads shall be put in proper repair. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Nathaniel T. Green submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

While financial inability is no defense to a quo warranto proceeding on account of nonuser of franchise, it is a defense to other proceedings short of that.

tach. It cannot make any difference whether, after an examination of the record of the court below, such decision be expressed by refusing a writ of error or supersedeas, or by dismissing a writ previously allowed.

Where an appeal to a higher state court could be allowed, an application for such an allowance must have been asked for and refused, or the Supreme Court of the United States cannot take jurisdiction. Fisher v. Perkins (Fisher v. Carrico) 122 U. S. 522, 30 L. ed. 1192, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1227; Mullen v. Western Union Beef Co. 173 U. S. 116, 43 L. ed. 635, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404.

Where, in accordance with the state practice, after verdict and before judgment in the inferior state court, certain exceptions were sent up to the highest state court for its opinion, and a rescript was sent down, overruling them, whereupon final judgment was entered by the lower court upon the verdict, that court was the highest court of the state in which a decision of the suit could be had. McGuire v. Massachusetts, 3 Wall. 382, 18 L. ed. 164.

A judgment of conviction in the superior court of Massachusetts, under which the convict is by law imprisoned and punished before a hearing can be had in the highest state court on his exceptions, was deemed in Bryan v. Bates, 12 Allen, 201, wherein was discussed the operation of a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States as a supersedeas, so far to dispose of the case that it must be considered a final judgment of the highest court in which a decision can be had, within the meaning of § 25 of the judiciary act of 1789.

An order of a judge of a state court at chambers, remanding a prisoner in a habeas corpus proceeding, cannot be regarded as a decision of a highest state "court," within U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. McKnight v. James, 155 U. S. 685, 39 L. ed. 310, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248. The court said: "If it be due that, under the laws of Ohio, the final order of a circuit judge at chambers be the Benton Harbor v. St. Joseph & B. H. Street R. Co. 102 Mich. 386, 26 L.R.A. 245, 47 Am. St. Rep. 553, 60 N. W. 758.

Mr. Samuel W. Williams, Attorney General of Virginia, argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. D. Hank, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Federal question raised in this case is manifestly devoid of merit.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 597, 41 L. ed. 560, 566, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Washington & C. Turnp. Co. v. Maryland, 3 Wall. 210, 214, 18 L. ed. 180, 182; Suydam v. Smith, 52 N. Y. 383; People ex rel. Penn Yan & B. Pl. Road Co. v. Martin, 56 How. Pr. 516; State, Mead, Prosecutor, v. Trenton & A. Turnp. Co. 34 N. J. L. 182; Moorestown & C. Turnp. Co. v. Holman, 63 N. J. L. 519, 43 Atl. 445; Tinton Falls Turnp. Co. v. Hance, 64 N. J. L. 480, 45 Atl. 772; Shiloh Turnp. Co. v. Bates, 80 N. J. L. 171, 76 Atl. 448; Simons v. Bustleton & S. Turnp. Co. 10 Phila. 101; King v. Lebanon & B. Turnp. Co. 17 Ky. L. Rep. 126, 30 S. W. 619; People v. Grand Rapids & W. Pl. Road Co. 67 Mich. 5, 34 N. W. 250; Williamsport & H. Turnp. Co. v. Startzman, 86 Md. 363, 38 Atl. 777; Davis v. Vernon Shell Road Co. 103 Ga. 491, 29 S. E. 475; Allen v. Smith, — Tenn. —, 47 S. W. 206; Back River Neck Turnp. Co. v. Homberg, 96 Md. 430, 54 Atl. 82; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Richmond, 96 U. S. 521, 24 L. ed. 734; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 26, 51 L. ed. 933, 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 123, 32 L. ed. 623, 626, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; judgment or decree of a circuit court, then it is undoubtedly reviewable by the supreme court of Ohio, which is the highest tribunal of Ohio, and is expressly given jurisdiction by statute to review the judgments and orders of the circuit court. But if this order be not a judgment or decree of a court, then it is not reviewable here, because this court, under § 709, is given authority to review only the judgment and decree of the highest court of the state. In other words, the order cannot be the order of a judge to defeat the jurisdiction in error of the supreme court of Ohio, and at the same time an order of a court to confer jurisdiction upon this court to issue a writ of error."

Nor does a so-called court order made by one of the judges of an inferior state court upon a return to a writ of habeas corpus granted by such judge and returnable before him, which recites, "Writ dismissed; prisoner remanded," constitute a final judgment or decree in a suit in the Williams v. Newman, 93 Va. 724, 26 S. E. 19.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

On April 24, 1911, as authorized by the laws of Virginia, the judge of the circuit court of Princess Anne county, Virginia, of his own motion, appointed three persons, styled viewers, to examine and report upon the condition of three turnpikes, situated in the county and owned by the plaintiff in error. The viewers reported the turnpikes to be in bad condition, and made recommendations as to the work necessary to be done to put them in good order. The turnpike company appealed from the report of the viewers to the circuit court. On the hearing of the appeal various motions were made on behalf of the turnpike company, to the overruling of which exception was taken, and which will be hereafter referred to, and an order was entered as authorized by a statute, suspending the taking of tolls on the turnpikes until they were put in proper repair. The effect of the order, however, was suspended by the making of an application of the supreme court of appeals of Virginia for the allowance of an appeal and a writ of error to the order of the circuit court. The application, however, was rejected by an order reading as follows:

"In the supreme court of appeals, held at the Library Building in the city of Richmond, on Thursday, the 11th day of January, 1912.

"The petition of the Norfolk & Suburban Turnpike Company, a corporation, for a writ of error and supersedeas to a judgment or order entered by the circuit court of Princess Anne county, on the 12th day highest court of a state in which a decision can be had, which may be reviewed on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court. Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284. Nor is an adjudication of insolvency in proceedings before one of the judges of an inferior state court such a judgment as is provided for in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. Ibid.

See also cases cited in note to Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001, respecting the essential finality of determination.

The superior court of Rhode Island was none the less the "highest court" for the purpose of review by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error under the judiciary act of 1789, § 25, because the legislature was by statute invested with power to re-examine the proceedings, and, if it thought proper, to order a new trial. Olney v. Arnold, 3 Dall. 308, 1 L. ed. 614.

of December, 1911, in certain proceedings, pending in said court, whereby the collection of tolls by the said petitioner on certain sections of a turnpike located in said county was suspended, having been maturely considered and the transcript of the record of the judgment or order aforesaid seen and inspected, the court being of opinion that the said judgment or order is plainly right, doth reject said petition."

A writ of error addressed to the supreme court of appeals of Virginia was then allowed by the president of that court. It was therein recited that the supreme court of appeals of Virginia had "refused a writ of error, thereby affirming said judgment of said circuit court of Princess Anne county, Virginia." The same judicial officer also approved the bond and signed the citation. The commonwealth of Virginia, however, was named as the obligee in the bond, and the citation was directed to that state as the "defendant in error." The attorney general of the state, who states in his brief that he inadvertently signed as "commonwealth's attorney of Princess Anne county," acknowledged service of the citation and entered the appearance of the commonwealth in this court 267] "without admitting *that the commonwealth of Virginia is a proper party, and reserving all rights."

Appearing for the defendant in error, the attorney general of Virginia moves to dismiss the writ of error, "because this court has no jurisdiction," or to affirm the order and judgment below "because the questions on which jurisdiction depend are so frivolous as not to need further argument."

The motion to dismiss is based upon the contention that the appearance in this court is a qualified one, and "that the appeal was improvidently awarded in this case, that the commonwealth of Virginia has nowhere in the proceedings been made a party, and is not now a proper party in this case." But although the commonwealth of Virginia was not named as a party to the proceedings initiated by the judge of the circuit court, it is not claimed that those proceedings were not in reality begun and prosecuted on behalf of the commonwealth, which in effect must have been the conclusion of the president of the supreme court of appeals of Virginia when he approved the bond and allowed the citation, as shown by the recitals in those papers to which we have heretofore referred. The grounds of the motion are therefore without merit. Pearson v. Yewdall, 95 U. S. 294, 24 L. ed. 436.

But aside from the propositions on which the motion to dismiss rests and 56 L. ed.

which we have disposed of, there is an additional ground to which, on our own motion, we deem it necessary to refer; that is, the existence of a possible doubt as to our jurisdiction, begotten by the form in which the court expressed the action taken by it concerning the proceedings to review the order or judgment of the trial court. Thus, although the supreme court of appeals of Virginia denied a writ of error to the circuit court because it was of the opinion that the order of the lower court was "plainly right," it does not affirmatively appear whether, by this action, the court was merely declining *to[268 take jurisdiction of the case, or in effect was asserting jurisdiction and disposing of the case upon the merits by giving the sanction of an affirmance of the judgment of the trial court. This writ of error runs to the supreme court of appeals, and not to the trial court. In view of the ambiguity, it is unquestioned that the writ of error would have to be dismissed if we applied the ruling of the Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 366, 55 L. ed. 498, 499, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399. It will be seen, however, that the court below, in acting upon the application presented to it to review the judgment of the trial court, conformed to what was held to be an exercise of jurisdiction by affirmance in Gregory v. McVeigh, 23 Wall. 294, 23 L. ed. 156. It is clear, therefore, that we cannot apply the rule announced in the Crovo Case and the one previously declared in the Gregory Case, because the two could not be consistently made here applicable. The difference between the cases, however, is not one of principle, but solely depends upon the significance to be attributed to the particular form in which the action of the court below is manifested. In other words, the apparent want of harmony between the rulings of this court has undoubtedly arisen from the varying forms in which state courts have expressed their action in refusing to entertain an appeal from or to allow a writ of error to a lower court, and the ever-present desire of this court to so shape its action as to give effect to the decisions of the courts of last resort of the several states on a subject peculiarly within their final cognizance. A like want of harmony resulted from similar conditions involved in determining what was a final judgment of a state court, susceptible of being reviewed here, and the confusion which arose ultimately led to the ruling that the face of the judgment would be the criterion resorted to as the only available means of obviating the great risk of confusion which would inevitably arise from departing from the face of the record and 269]deducing the principle of finality *by a consideration of questions beyond the face of the alleged judgment or decree which was sought to be reviewed. The wisdom of that rule, as applied to a question like the one before us, is, we think, apparent by the statement which we have made concerning the rule in the Crovo Case and the previous decisions. Despite the ambiguity involved in the form in which the court below expressed its action, we do not think that ambiguity should be solved against the existence of jurisdiction, because, in our opinion, there is little or no room for doubt that when the form of expression used by the court below is read in the light of the previous rulings it becomes quite clear that the court deemed that it was exercising jurisdiction over the cause and virtually affirming the judgment, and was expressing its action in such a way as to clearly indicate that such was its intention. This is fortified by the fact that the writ of error was allowed by the presiding judge of the court. While, therefore, in this case, for the reasons stated, we entertain jurisdiction, and do not of our own motion dismiss the writ, for the purpose of avoiding the complexity and doubt which must continue to recur, and for the guidance of suitors in the future, we now state that from and after the opening of the next term of this court, where a writ of error is prosecuted to an alleged judgment or a decree of a court of last resort of a state, declining to allow a writ of error to or an appeal from a lower state court, unless it plainly appears, on the face of the record, by an affirmance in express terms of the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed, that the refusal of the court to allow an appeal or writ of error was the exercise by it of jurisdiction to review the case upon the merits, we shall consider ourselves constrained to apply the rule announced in the Crovo Case, and shall therefore, by not departing from the face of the record, solve against jurisdiction the ambiguity created by the form in which the state court has expressed its action.

270] *Upon the merits, we are of opinion that the alleged Federal questions are so plainly wanting in merit as not to justify the retention of the cause for oral argument. The supposed Federal questions are embodied in three motions made in the circuit court. By motion No. 1 the circuit court was asked to dismiss the proceedings because, as the statute, in the event the report of the viewers was confirmed, authorized the public, until the turnpikes were put in repair, to use the same for the purpose of travel and passage without payment of toll or other compensation, a taking of the property of the plaintiff in error for public use without just compensation was authorized, in violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment. Motion No. 2 embodied a request that the court should not enter judgment affirming the report of the views, because, for the same reasons specified in the first motion, the judgment would operate to deprive the plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment. By motion No. 3 it was in effect claimed that the turnpikes in question were not profitable, that plaintiff went into possession of the roads in July, 1908, and had operated the same continuously; that no complaint had theretofore been made as to the condition of the roads; that the statute under which the proceeding was prosecuted fixed the tolls to be charged, and that substantially all the revenue derived from the tolls had been judiciously employed in keeping the roads in repair, and that they had been kept "in as good repair as possible with the revenue received therefrom." It was alleged that to enter a judgment suspending the collection of tolls under such circumstances would violate the due process clause of the 14th Amendment. The refusal of the court to hear evidence to substantiate the claim made in this motion and the overruling of the motion were duly excepted to. It nowhere appears in the record that there was even a suggestion that the *stat-[271 ute in question invaded contract rights as to the tolls to be charged, nor was it claimed that since the acquisition by plaintiff in error of his rights therein the legislature of Virginia, in regulating the turnpikes, had altered the tolls. On the contrary, in the brief of counsel for the commonwealth the statement is made that "this statute has been a law of Virginia, with little change, since February 7, 1817," and there has been no denial of this statement. The motions below did not, therefore, amount to a claim against the rates per se, but simply asserted that as the travel on the turnpikes was not sufficient to cause their operation to be profitable, that is to say, to produce a sufficient revenue to enable the roads to be kept in good order, therefore the obligation imposed by the statute and voluntarily assumed ought not to be enforced. The mere statement of this proposition is sufficient to establish its entire want of merit. To suspend the taking of tolls while the roads were out of repair manifestly was not a taking of property, but was simply a method provided by statute to enforce the discharge of the public duty respecting the safe and convenient maintenance of a public highway. In other words, as observed by the attorney general for the commonwealth, the burden of keeping the turnpikes in repair was made a condition precedent to the right to collect tolls.

Affirmed.

272]*RAILROAD COMMISSION OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI et al., Appts.,
v.
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 272-281.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below — certificate.

1. The lack of a certificate of jurisdiction is not fatal to an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court which necessarily decided constitutional questions expressly raised in the bill.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 919-937, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court — scope of review — jurisdiction below.

2. The issue of the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, whether certified or not, is open on an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree which necessarily decided constitutional questions raised in the bill.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4229-4237, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

Pleading — averments as to corporate citizenship — sufficiency.

3. The direct averments in the bill as to the foreign citizenship of the corporate complainant will not be held insufficient for jurisdictional purposes because of subsequent allegations from which doubt or inconsistency may argumentatively be inferred, where such statements, construed in connection with the context, have reference to the alleged impairment of the obligation of a contract, and were not addressed to the subject of citizenship, and where to hold otherwise would do violence to the very object of the bill, which was to prevent the state from enforcing, as against the corporation, a forfeiture and penalties admittedly inapplicable if it was a domestic corporation.

[For other cases, see Pleading, 407-415, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 903.]

Submitted May 13, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an anti-removal statute. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Claude Clayton, Assistant Attorney General of Mississippi, and Messrs. Hannis Taylor and William D. Anderson submitted the cause for appellants:

The corporation in question is a domestic corporation of the state of Mississippi.

Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 27 L. ed. 518, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 432; Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, 27 L. ed. 780, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878.

The question of jurisdiction was certified by the terms of the final decree.

Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. ed. 630, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Arkansas v. Schlierholz, 179 U. S. 598, 45 L. ed. 335, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

As the bill has failed to aver in clear and positive terms the citizenship of the corporation, which is the real complainant, it must suffer the fate which the rules of Federal procedure prescribe in such cases.

1 Rose, Code Fed. Proc. p. 33; Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 8 L. ed. 885; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 646, 24 L. ed. 1057; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Rhoads, 119 U. S. 240, 30 L. ed. 381, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Pennsylvania v. Quicksilver Min. Co. 10 Wall. 553, 19 L. ed. 998.

If a corporation comes into court alleging its incorporation in both states, it cannot maintain suit against a citizen or corporation of either state, since such a pleading is deemed to show a joinder of two plaintiffs who are citizens of two different states.

1 Rose, Code Fed. Proc. p. 26; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Black, 297, 17 L. ed. 133; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 563, 43 L. ed. 1087, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

A consolidation of two corporations works a dissolution of the original concerns and creates a new corporation, unless the legislature otherwise intends.

1 Rose, Code Fed. Proc. p. 26; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Georgia, 92 U. S. 665, 23 L. ed. 757.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333; and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, ante, 894.

On citizenship of foreign corporation for purposes of Federal jurisdiction—see notes 56 L. ed.

to Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 3 L. ed. U. S. 36, and National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 27 L. ed. U. S. 87.

As to averments of citizenship to show jurisdiction in Federal courts—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 261; and Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 303.

Messrs. Henry L. Stone, Gregory L. Smith, and Marcellus Green submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Garner Wynn Green was on the brief:

The appeal in this case should be dismissed because the jurisdiction of the circuit court is the sole question raised, and such question has not been certified by the circuit court to this court.

Maynard v. Hecht, 151 U. S. 324, 38 L. ed. 179, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Colvin v. Jacksonville, 157 U. S. 368, 39 L. ed. 736, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

Jurisdiction of the circuit court did not depend exclusively upon diversity of citizenship.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 143, 52 L. ed. 722, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 65, 48 L. ed. 878, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

Under the allegations of the bill of complaint, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company is not a Mississippi corporation.

Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 337, 47 L. ed. 1083, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 295, 30 L. ed. 87, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 561, 43 L. ed. 1085, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is before us on a motion to dismiss or affirm. The confused state of the record requires, in order to make clear the considerations which control us in disposing of the motion, a fuller statement than otherwise would be necessary.

On August 5, 1908, a suit in equity was commenced in the chancery court of Hancock county, Mississippi, against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, to compel obedience to an order of the State Railroad Commission of Mississippi, requiring the stoppage of certain interstate trains at a particular place. Upon the ground of diversity of citizenship, the railroad company removed the cause into the appropriate circuit court of the United States. Thereupon proceedings were commenced in the chancery court of Harrison county, Mississippi, against the railroad company, to enforce an act of the legislature of Mississippi, approved March 20, 1908, known as the anti-removal statute, by perpetually enjoining the company from engaging in intrastate commerce within the state of Mississippi, and by subjecting it to large pecuniary penalties. It was specifically averred in the bill that the railroad company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Kentucky, and that it had never been incorporated under the laws of Mississippi.

This case was then commenced on behalf of the railroad company in the court below against the railroad commission and various officials of the state of Mississippi to enjoin the commencement of any other proceeding than that pending in Harrison county, having for its object the enforcement of the forfeiture and penalty provisions of the act of 1908, which act was assailed as repugnant to the commerce clause, the contract clause, and to specified provisions of the 14th Amendment. The chancery court of Harrison county was also averred to be without jurisdiction of the suit pending before it. The complainant railroad company was alleged to be a corporation created and organized under the laws of Kentucky and a citizen of said state, having its principal place of business at Louisville, Kentucky. The defendants were alleged to be citizens of the state of Mississippi. It was further alleged that the complainant, as a corporation, as aforesaid, owned and operated as a common carrier a railroad between Cincinnati and New Orleans, passing through various counties in the state of Mississippi, and that it had been for more than twenty-five years engaged in the operation of a portion of its road so situated in Mississippi. Evidently for the purpose of laying the basis for a claim of contract right the facts concerning the construction of the road operated by the complainant in the state of Mississippi were stated in substance as follows: In 1866 the legislature, of Alabama incorporated what was known as the New Orleans, Mobile, & Chattanooga Railroad Company, and authorized it to build a railroad from Mobile to New Orleans; an act of the legislature of Mississippi, passed in 1867, which was attached as an exhibit to the bill, authorized and empowered the Alabama corporation "to exercise and enjoy its corporate power and franchise in the state of Mississippi." An act of the legislature of Louisiana authorized the same corporation to construct its road from the Mississippi state line to New Orleans; and an act of Congress approved in March, 1868, empowered the corporation in the construction of its road to build bridges over navigable waters in the state of Mississippi. There were also averments of the placing by the Alabama corporation of a mortgage upon its property and the subsequent construction of the road from Mobile to New Orleans; a change of the name of the railroad by the legislature of Alabama to the name of the New Orleans, Mobile, & Texas Railroad; default in the payment of bonds; a foreclosure sale; the incorporation of the purchasers by the name of the New Orleans, Mobile, & Texas Railroad Company, as reorganized. It was then specifically alleged that said company "thereafter, on October 5, 1881, sold and conveyed all of its property and franchises of every kind 275]and *description except the franchise to be and exist as a corporation, to complainant, who has ever since owned said railroad and operated it as a common carrier of interstate and intrastate freight and passengers as aforesaid."

Proceedings contained in the transcript, to which we shall hereafter have occasion to refer, as well as the index to the transcript as filed, contained in the printed transcript, establish that a demurrer was filed to the bill of complaint, which is not in the printed record, and we do not therefore refer to the same. Nearly three years after the filing of the bill what was styled "partial demurrer to original bill" was filed in the cause. This demurrer charged, first, that the court was without jurisdiction, because on the face of the bill it was shown "that the complainant, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, is a Mississippi corporation, and that the defendants are also citizens of Mississippi, and that therefore there is no diversity of citizenship between the parties to give the court jurisdiction of the cause." This claim was solely attempted to be supported by argumentative statements in the demurrer as to the effect of the averments in the bill concerning the history of the portion of the road in Mississippi, its construction by an Alabama corporation, the legal effect of the Mississippi act of 1867, authorizing the Alabama corporation to build a road in Mississippi, and the supposed operation of an act of the legislature of Mississippi of 1882 upon the purchase of the road built in that state, following the foreclosure, which, it was averred, took place in 1883, after the passage of the act of 1882, instead of in October, 1881, as averred in the bill. As an additional and independent ground of demurrer, it was claimed that the suit should be dismissed because "at the time the suit in the case of State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. was filed in the chancery court of Hancock county, Mississippi, there was no Federal question on the face of the bill which authorized its removal under 276]*the Constitution and laws of the United States, and said suit is made an exhibit to this demurrer for the purpose of considering the same."

On the day the "partial demurrer" was filed an answer was filed, which was divided into numbered paragraphs corresponding to the numbered paragraphs of the bill. The citizenship of the plaintiff was neither admitted nor denied, and we think it suffices from the view we take of the case to say that the answer, in one mode or another, dealt mainly with the averments of the bill respecting the history of the organization of the New Orleans, Mobile, & Chattanooga Railroad Company, the construction of the road in Mississippi, the sale under foreclosure, the purchase, etc. A few days afterwards a general replication was filed, and on the same day a stipulation was entered into between counsel in the first paragraph of which it was provided as follows:

"That this cause may be submitted and heard at the May term, 1911, of said court at Jackson, and that the time for taking proof under the rules is waived, and that said cause may be heard on the original bill, partial demurrer, and partial demurrer and replication by the court, and that setting the cause for hearing under this agreement shall not operate to admit the allegations of the answer."

The foregoing was followed, in the next paragraph of the stipulation, by a provision for a hearing of the cause "upon the bill and answer and replication upon the testimony theretofore taken by affidavits . . . and any other evidence that may be offered orally by either side on the hearing," and various specified printed charters and statutes which were enumerated and which concerned facts alleged in the bill and answer were stipulated to be admitted in evidence.

While it is certain that on or before October 24, 1911, the court entered a final decree in favor of the complainant, perpetually enjoining the enforcement of the Mississippi *statute complained of, the[277 exact form of that decree is not disclosed, for although there is a paper in the record which in one aspect apparently states the terms of the decree, in another aspect it is uncertain whether the paper referred to is anything but a motion made by the defendants for the modification of the decree. Be this as it may, the record leaves no doubt that on October 28, on the motion of the defendants, a new and changed form of final decree was entered, which was deemed to conform to the stipulation for submission. In this new decree it was first recited that the case had been submitted to and considered by the court primarily upon the partial demurrer, and that, on such demurrer being overruled, the defendant had elected to stand thereon, and had not excepted to the final decree on the merits. There was a recital in the concluding paragraph of the decree that a direct appeal to this court was allowed, notwithstanding the objection of the complainant.

In the printed transcript there is a paper styled "Specifications of Error," which is undated and uncertified, but which we will assume was filed at the time the appeal was allowed. This paper is confined to a reiteration of the contentions as to want of jurisdiction of the court below as stated in the partial demurrer, adding the following:

"And because the bill shows on its face that the Federal court is without jurisdiction, and could not hear and determine the issues raised by the said bill of complaint because the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is a Mississippi corporation, and the act of 1908, which prevents the removal of causes of foreign corporations to the Federal court, had no reference and application to the said Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, which is a domestic corporation; and because the act of 1908, referred to in said bill of complaint, enacted by the Mississippi legislature, is unconstitutional and void, and in contravention of the Federal Constitution." 278] *The appellee moves to dismiss or affirm, and in the brief of counsel the ground for the motion to dismiss is thus stated:

"The appeal in this case should be dismissed because the jurisdiction of the circuit court is the sole question raised, and such question has not been certified by the circuit court to this court."

The appellants, while concurring that jurisdiction is the sole question involved, insist that that question is adequately presented by the action of the court, or sufficiently appears upon the face of the record, to give power to review, and, meeting the motion to affirm, it is insisted that the court below erred in holding that there was a sufficient averment of diversity of citizenship in the bill to give jurisdiction as a Federal court, and that even if this were not the case, the court erred in taking jurisdiction because the subject-matter of the controversy, prior to the institution of the suit below, as shown by the bill, was involved in and pending before a state court as the result of the action brought against the railroad company to enforce the Mississippi statute. The appellee, replying to these contentions, and reiterating that the jurisdictional question was the sole question presented, yet proceeds to urge that even if the view be taken that the court below was wrong in deciding that adequate diversity of citizenship was alleged, nevertheless the judgment should be affirmed because of the existence of the constitutional question concerning the repugnancy of the Mississippi statute to the Constitution of the United States, as to which the decision of the court was clearly right and not objected to. It becomes at once apparent when the contentions of the parties are thus summed up that the propositions urged on both sides are conflicting and irreconcilable one with the other, since both in effect insist that the sole question on which the direct appeal may rest is one of jurisdiction, and yet, at the same time, urge that the jurisdictional *question[279 is not the sole question because of the existence of one involving the construction of the Constitution of the United States. This is so obviously true as to the position taken by the appellee as to need only statement. That it is also true as to the position of the appellants is demonstrated by observing that it has long since been settled that a mere conflict between courts concerning the right to adjudicate upon a particular subject-matter growing out of a priority of jurisdiction in another forum involves a question of comity, which there would be no right to consider if the direct appeal involved solely a question of jurisdiction. Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 91, 49 L. ed. 398, 399, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, and cases cited.

The confusion in the contentions of the parties which thus appears, in our opinion will be dispelled and the questions for decision be made apparent by a consideration of the statement heretofore made. From that statement we think there is no real room for controversy: First. That the court below, in taking jurisdiction of the cause and deciding it notwithstanding the partial demurrer, maintained its power and jurisdiction as a Federal court. Second. That in rendering a decree on the merits, the court necessarily decided the question or questions under the Constitution expressly alleged in the bill. This conclusion dispenses with the necessity of considering the question of certificate as to jurisdiction, since the issue on that subject, whether certified or not, is open, in view of the constitutional questions raised in the bill: Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 509, 40 L. ed. 510, 513, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

While logically this view would adversely dispose of the motion to dismiss, it would undoubtedly, as a general proposition, require the granting of the motion to affirm without passing upon the question of diversity of citizenship; since, from the statement we have made of the case, it appears that the correctness of the decision below as to the constitutional question was in 280]effect conceded. We *think, however, there is room for concluding that the argument on behalf of the appellants, upon the theory that it is justified by the record, proceeds upon the hypothesis that if there was no diversity of citizenship, the statute assailed in the bill was on its face so plainly inapplicable to the situation as to cause the assertion of its repugnancy to the Constitution to be unsubstantial and frivolous, and therefore insufficient to afford a basis either for jurisdiction in the court below or to warrant an affirmance by this court of the decree which was made below. As even although the premise upon which this proposition rests be not conceded, the demonstration of its unsoundness would require a consideration of the subject of diversity of citizenship and the relation of that subject to the assault made by the bill upon the statute, to avoid unnecessary analysis we come at once to consider the sufficiency of the averments of the bill as to the diverse citizenship of the complainant.

The whole argument as to the citizenship of the complainant turns not upon an express denial by the appellants in any form of the Kentucky citizenship of complainant directly alleged in the bill, but upon an insistence that the express averment upon that subject is so qualified by the subsequent allegations recounting the history of the road in Mississippi as at least to engender doubt sufficient to destroy the effect of such positive averment. No statement in the bill directly and expressly giving rise to such result is relied upon, but the whole contention is that by inference or subtle analysis of various paragraphs of the bill it must follow that the result above stated arises. Without, however, undertaking to re-state the passages in the bill relied upon, or to follow the forms of statement by which the result claimed to arise from the bill is sought to be demonstrated, we content ourselves with saying that we think the conclusion deduced from them is unwarranted, for the following reasons: (a) Because the passages 281]sages *in the bill relied upon to create the doubt or inconsistency, when construed in connection with the context, had reference to the alleged impairment of the obligation of a contract, and were not addressed to the subject of citizenship; (b) Because it would do violence to the very purpose of the bill to attribute to it the self-destructive effect which would result from upholding the contention insisted upon, especially in view of the nature and character of the litigation and the relation of the parties to the subject-matter in controversy. We say this because the very object of the bill was to prevent the state from enforcing against the company, as a foreign corporation owning and operating the road in Mississippi, a forfeiture and penalties which it is admitted would not have been applicable to the corporation if it was a domestic corporation of Mississippi. Nothing could make the conditions stated clearer than to recall the argument, heretofore adversely disposed of, which was pressed upon our attention by counsel for appellants, to demonstrate that the court erred in exerting jurisdiction because of the pendency of the suit in the state court, brought by the state of Mississippi, wherein it was expressly averred that the railroad company was a corporation of the state of Kentucky, and that it had never been incorporated in the state of Mississippi.

From these considerations it results that the judgment below must be and it is affirmed.

*PROCTER & GAMBLE COMPANY,[282
Appt.,
v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Cincinnati, Hamilton, & Dayton Railway Company, et al., Appellees.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 282-302.)

Commerce court — jurisdiction — negative action of Interstate Commerce Commission.

The jurisdiction of the commerce court under the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1148, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 216), § 207, of "cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, in whole or in part, any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission," embraces only complaints of affirmative action by the Commission, and does not confer the power to redress a complaint based solely upon the refusal of the Commission to award the relief asked by a shipper against demurrage regulations, upon the ground that the Federal statutes gave no right to the relief claimed.

[No. 780.]

Argued January 11 and 12, 1912. Decided
June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review a decree dismissing on the merits the petition of a shipper, based upon the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to enjoin the enforcement of certain demurrage regulations. Reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss the petition for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 188 Fed. 221.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George H. Warrington argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Br. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Edward Barton argued the cause and filed a brief for the Cincinnati, Hamilton, & Dayton Railway Company et al.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Having three manufacturing plants, one at Ivorydale, Ohio, a second at Port Ivory, New York, and a third at Kansas City, Kansas, in which they carried on the business of refining cottonseed and other oils and of manufacturing soap and other products from grease and oil, the Procter & Gamble Company, to facilitate the transportation to their factories of the substances required for their operation, and of shipping out the finished products, became the owner of about five hundred railroad tank cars. The cars were exclusively devoted to the business of the company in the following manner: On the property of the company in the yards about their factories there were railroad tracks belonging to the company which served for holding empty or loaded cars, the cars thus situated being held for storage and for movement from place to place, as business required. At each of the factories there was also an interchange track connected with the tracks in the yards and with the tracks of the railroad company or companies through whom the business of shipping in interstate commerce to and from the factories was carried on. The movement of cars to the interchange tracks for outward shipment and from the interchange tracks when they were left there by railroad companies was at two of the factories carried on by the company through its own employees and motive power. At the other one this work was done by a railroad company, who made an independent and special charge for the service. The transportation of the private tank cars of the corporation by the railroad companies was governed by established rules, and the price paid to the railroads for transporting the commodities of the company in its private cars was the regular price fixed for such commodities in the established tariffs. The railroads, however, paid to the company for the use of its private cars a fixed sum per mile, this payment being also stated in the regular established tariffs in compliance with law. A portion of the carrier's rule (rule 29), relating to the subject of compensation for hauling such private tank cars, is in the margin.†

*In 1910, among others, the railroads engaged in transporting tank cars from the plants of the Procter & Gamble Company adopted a system of rules governing the payment of demurrage by shippers. The provisions of these rules pertinent to this case are excerpted in the margin.‡

The rules in question were prepared by a committee of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners, composed of a representative from each state having a railroad *commission and a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and were adopted in convention by the National Association, and were subsequently approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, although putting them in force was not imperatively prescribed by that body.

The Procter & Gamble Company, dissatisfied with the regulations concerning de-†Rule 29. (Sec. 1.) In providing ratings in this classification for articles in tank cars, the carriers whose tariffs are governed by this classification do not assume any obligation to furnish tank cars in cases where they do not own or have not made arrangements for supplying such equipment. When tank cars are furnished by shippers or owners, mileage at the rate of three quarters ($\frac{3}{4}$) of one cent per mile will be allowed for the use of such tank cars, loaded or empty, provided the cars are properly equipped. No mileage will be allowed on cars switched at terminals nor for movement of cars under empty freight-car tariffs.

‡ Rule 1.

Cars Subject to Rules.

Cars held for or by consignors or consignees for loading, unloading, forwarding directions, or for any other purpose, are subject to these demurrage rules, except as follows:

- (a) Cars loaded with live stock.
- (b) Empty cars placed for loading coal at mines or mine sidings, or coke at coke ovens.
- (c) Empty private cars stored on carrier's or private tracks, provided such cars have not been placed or tendered for loading on the order of a shipper.

NOTE.—Private cars while in railroad service, whether on carrier's or private murrage, in so far as they imposed in certain respects charges upon its tank cars, filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission, charging the rules to be repugnant to the act to regulate commerce because unjust and oppressive, and because to enforce them would create preferences and discriminations forbidden by the act. After hearing, the Commission made a report declaring that the rules complained of were in no sense in conflict with the act to regulate commerce, and on the contrary conformed to that act, and tended to prevent and repress unlawful preferences and discriminations. An award of relief was therefore denied. In February, 1911, the Procter & Gamble Company filed a petition in the commerce court of the United States, making defendants the United States, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the railroads who had been complained of in the proceeding before the Commission. The petition recited the facts stated above as to the character of the business of the petitioner, the ownership of tank cars, etc., the establishment of the rules for demurrage, their repugnancy to the act to regulate commerce, the injury which had resulted from being compelled to pay the charges for demurrage in accordance with the rules, the application made to the Commission, and the refusal of that body to award relief. The conception upon which the petition was based is shown in the excerpt in the margin,† wherein it was also charged that the order

288]of the *Commission dismissing the complaint as above set forth "is null and void and beyond the power of said Interstate Commerce Commission, in that it sustains the validity of . . . said demurrage rules."

The prayer was as follows:

"Wherefore, complainant prays that the aforesaid order of said Interstate Commerce Commission made in said cause No. 3208 on November 14, 1910, be set aside and annulled, and that the defendant railway companies, and each of them, be enjoined from collecting or attempting to collect any demurrage charges upon complainant's loaded tank cars after said cars have been delivered to complainant and placed upon tracks owned or controlled by it; and further, that said defendant railway companies and each of them be required to repay to complainant herein all sums found to have been wrongfully collected by them, or any of them, under the rule here complained of; and *that complainant be[289 granted such other and further relief as it may be entitled to in the premises."

The railroads answered the bill. The United States and the Interstate Commerce Commission appearing for the purpose, challenged the jurisdiction of the court to entertain the cause, and moved to dismiss, upon this general ground: "Because the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission complained of directed no affirmative relief and the negative order of the Commission dismissing the complaint affords no ground for an action in this court;" and tracks, are subject to these demurrage rules to the same extent as cars of railroad ownership.

(Empty private cars are in railroad service from the time they are placed by the carriers for loading or tendered for loading on the orders of a shipper. Private cars under lading are in railroad service until the lading is removed and cars are regularly released. Cars which belong to an industry performing its own switching service are in railroad service from the time they are placed by the industry upon designated interchange tracks and thereby tendered to the carrier for movement. If such cars are subsequently returned empty, they are out of service when withdrawn by the industry from the interchange; if returned under load, railroad service is not at an end until the lading is duly removed.)

†Complainant avers that said order of said Interstate Commerce Commission, in dismissing its complaint as above set forth, is null and void and beyond the power of said Interstate Commerce Commission, in that it sustains the validity of rule 1 of said demurrage; that said rule 1, so far as it provides that privately owned cars under lading on private tracks are in railroad service and subject to the demurrage charges imposed by said tariffs until the lading is removed, is unjust and unreasonable, in that it deprives complainant of the right to use its said private cars upon private tracks for its own purposes without paying the defendant railway companies demurrage charges therefor, after said private cars have been delivered to complainant, and have actually ceased to be engaged in railroad service; that the charges exacted by the defendant railway companies of complainant under said provision of said rule permit said defendants to take complainant's property without compensation, and deprive it of its property without due process of law, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and particularly of article 5 in amendment thereof, and that said provision of said rule is in violation of the said act to regulate commerce, and particularly of §§ 1 and 15 thereof, as amended June 29, 1906 [34 Stat. at L. 584, 589, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 1284, 1297]; that said defendants are now exacting such demurrage charges under the provisions of said rule, and will continue to do so, unless the said order of said Interstate Commerce Commission is set aside and annulled by this court, and defendant railway companies are enjoined from enforcing the provisions of said rule.

upon the following more detailed specifications filed on behalf of the United States:

"(a) It prays that the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission be enjoined, when said order directed no action against any party, and therefore the same is not subject either to enforcement or to injunction.

"(b) It prays that the defendant common carriers, who are not proper parties to this proceeding except on their own motion, be enjoined from collecting the demurrage mentioned, when no order inhibiting the same has been made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in the absence of such an order this court has no power to grant such relief.

"(c) It prays that the defendant common carriers be required to repay to complainant all sums heretofore wrongfully collected as demurrage, when this court has no power or jurisdiction to grant such relief, either with or without an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission directing such repayment."

The court, declining at the threshold to consider the demurrers and motion to dismiss, postponed their consideration until the hearing on the merits. There was a consent by all the defendants except the United States and the Interstate Commerce Commission that the case be heard upon the evidence and documents introduced before the Commission and the report of that body. The United States and the Interstate Commerce Commission, however, on the overruling of its demurrer and a refusal to grant its motion to dismiss, elected to stand thereon and declined to plead further.

In disposing of the case, the court considered it in a twofold aspect,—first, as to its jurisdiction; and second, as to the merits of the case. On the first subject it held (a) that it had jurisdiction of the cause, and that the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to afford relief to the Procter & Gamble Company was, for the purposes of jurisdiction of the court, the exact equivalent of an order of the Commission granting affirmative relief; and (b) as a corollary of this power it was further decided that there was jurisdiction to award pecuniary relief for demurrage if any was illegally exacted. On the merits, however, it was decided that the Interstate Commerce Commission had rightfully refused to grant relief and that there was no foundation for the contention that the property of the company in its private tank cars was taken without due process of law by the demurrage regulations. On this subject it was declared that as the company had accepted the provisions of the published tariffs concerning the use of the tank cars, therefore those cars were submitted to the regulations which the carriers had lawfully established. In other words, the court concluded that because the company had availed of the proffer of the railroads to use the cars in transportation and pay for their use a stated sum, the company had acquired no right to disregard restrictions against preferences and discriminations embodied in the act to regulate commerce.

The case was then brought here by the appeal of the Procter & Gamble Company. That company insists that the court below erred in not awarding the relief which was asked and in dismissing the petition. On the other hand, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads insist that the court was right in refusing relief and dismissing the bill. Before we can come, if at all, to consider the merits, however, it is necessary to dispose of the question concerning the jurisdiction of the court below to entertain the petition, because the United States insists at bar, as it did in the lower court, that the court erred in overruling the demurrer to the jurisdiction and refusing to dismiss the cause for want of jurisdiction.

The provisions of the act to establish the commerce court, fixing the jurisdiction of that court, are stated in the 1st section of the act of June 18, 1910 [36 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 309], now § 207 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1148, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 216). And in view of the necessity of having the provisions of the section immediately in mind, we reproduce them. They are as follows:

"Sec. 207. The commerce court shall have the jurisdiction possessed by circuit courts of the United States and the judges thereof immediately prior to June eighteenth, nineteen hundred and ten, over all cases of the following kinds:

"First. All cases for the enforcement, otherwise than by adjudication and collection of a forfeiture or penalty, or by infliction of criminal punishment, of any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission other than for the payment of money.

"Second. Cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, in whole or in part, any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Third. Such cases as by section three of the act entitled, 'An Act to Further Regulate Commerce with Foreign Nations and Among the States,' approved February nineteenth, nineteen hundred and three [32 Stat. at L. 848, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1309], are authorized to be maintained in a circuit court of the United States.

"Fourth. All such mandamus proceedings as, under the provisions of section twenty or section twenty-three of the act entitled, 'An Act to Regulate Commerce,' approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven [24 Stat. at L. 386, 387, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1304], 292]as *amended, are authorized to be maintained in a circuit court of the United States.

"Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed as enlarging the jurisdiction now possessed by the circuit courts of the United States or the judges thereof, that is hereby transferred to and vested in the commerce court.

"The jurisdiction of the commerce court over cases of the foregoing classes shall be exclusive; but this chapter shall not affect the jurisdiction possessed by any circuit or district court of the United States over cases or proceedings of a kind not within the above-enumerated classes."

The question to be decided is this: Does the authority with which the commerce court is clothed in virtue of these provisions invest that body with jurisdiction to redress complaints based exclusively upon the conception that the Interstate Commerce Commission, in a matter submitted to its judgment and within its competency to consider, has mistakenly refused, upon the ground that no right to the relief claimed was given by the act to regulate commerce, to award the relief which was claimed at its hands? In other words, the important question is, Is the authority of the commerce court confined to enforcing or restraining, as the case may require, affirmative orders of the Commission, or has it the power to exert its own judgment by originally interpreting the administrative features of the act to regulate commerce, and upon that assumption treat a refusal of the Commission to grant relief as an affirmative order, and accordingly pass on its correctness?

Turning for the elucidation of the question to the jurisdictional provisions, it is plain that although all of the four numbered subdivisions composing the section may serve to throw light upon the issue for decision, the solution of the question must intrinsically be found in a correct interpretation of the second subdivision. We say this because clearly the first deals alone 293]with cases for the enforcement *of orders of the Commission as therein described; the third deals only with cases brought under the act of February 19, 1903, which is wholly foreign to the subject here reviewed, since the act referred to relates only to proceedings to enjoin either discriminations or departures by carriers from their published rates; and the fourth refers exclusively to the right to mandamus, conformably to § 20 or 23 of the act to regulate commerce, which sections are concerned with the performance of certain duties imposed upon carriers by the act to regulate commerce. The words of this second subdivision are: "Second. Cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, in whole or in part, any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Giving to these words their natural significance we think it follows that they confer jurisdiction only to entertain complaints as to affirmative orders of the Commission; that is, they give the court the right to take cognizance, when properly made, of complaints concerning the legality of orders rendered by the Commission, and confer power to relieve parties in whole or in part from the duty of obedience to orders which are found to be illegal. No resort to exposition can add to the cogency with which the conclusion stated is compelled by the plain meaning of the words themselves. But if it be conceded, for the sake of argument, that the language of the provision is ambiguous, a consideration of the context of the act will at once clarify the subject. Thus, the first subdivision provides for the enforcement of orders; that is, the compelling of the doing or abstaining from doing of acts embraced by a previous affirmative command of the Commission; and the second (the one with which we are concerned) dealing with the same subject from a reverse point of view, provides for the contingency of a complaint made to the court by one seeking to prevent the enforcement of orders of the Commission such as are contemplated by *the first paragraph. In other words, [294 by the co-operation of the two paragraphs, authority is given, on the one hand, to enforce compliance with the orders of the Commission, if lawful, and, on the other hand, power is conferred to stay the enforcement of an illegal order. The other provisions of the act are equally convincing. Thus, § 3 (208), provides that the mere pendency of a suit to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend an order of the Commission "shall not stay or suspend the operation of such order," but confers upon the court the power, under circumstances stated, to restrain or suspend, in whole or in part, the operation of an order. The same section, moreover, causes the meaning of the provision, if possible, to become clearer by making a finding that irreparable injury will result from the operation of an order sought to be enforced essential to the granting of an order or injunction restraining or suspending its enforcement.

We might well be content to rest our conclusion upon the considerations just stated. In view, however, of the importance of the subject, we do not do so, but shall consider the matter in a broader aspect, for the purpose of demonstrating that to give to the statute a meaning contrary to that which we have found results from its text, and therefore to recognize the existence in the court below of the power which it deemed it possessed, would result in frustrating the legislative public policy which led to the adoption of the act to regulate commerce, would render impossible a resort to the remedies which the statute was enacted to afford, would multiply the evils which the act to regulate commerce was adopted to prevent, and thus bring about disaster by creating confusion and conflict where clearness and unity of action were contemplated. It cannot be disputed that the act creating the commerce court was intended to be but a part of the existing system for the regulation of interstate commerce, which was established by virtue of the original adoption in 1887 of the 295] *act to regulate commerce, and which was expanded by the repeated amendments of that act which followed, developed in practical execution by the rulings of the body (Interstate Commerce Commission) upon whom was cast the administrative enforcement of the act, the whole elucidated and sanctioned by a long line of decisions of this court. That, in adopting the provision concerning the commerce court, and making it part of the system, it was not intended to destroy the existing machinery or method of regulation, but to cause it to be more efficient by affording a more harmonious means for securing the judicial enforcement of the act to regulate commerce, is certain. The act creating the commerce court was entitled, "An Act to Create a Commerce Court, and to Amend the Act Entitled, 'An Act to Regulate Commerce,' Approved February Fourth, Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-seven, as Heretofore Amended, and for Other Purposes." The first six sections, which called into being the commerce court and defined its powers, all demonstrate the purpose as above stated: that is, to adjust the powers and duties of the newly created court in such manner as to cause them to accord with the system of regulation provided by the act to regulate commerce as it then existed.

What was then the existing system and the functions which the new court was created to perform will be conclusively shown by a brief outline of the scope and purpose of the system which arose from the enactment of the act to regulate commerce (act February 4, 1887, chap. 104, 24 Stat. at L. 379, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1284) and its development. By that act, as originally enacted, many regulations and consequent duties were imposed upon carriers in the interest of the public and of shippers which did not theretofore exist, and various administrative safeguards were formulated, all of which, in their very essence, required, first, for their compulsory enforcement, the exercise of official functions of an administrative *nature; and, second, for their har-[296 monious development, an official unity of action which could only be brought about by a single administrative initiative and primary control. To that end the act (§ 11) created an administrative body endowed with what may be in some respects qualified as quasi judicial attributes, to whom was confided the enforcement of those provisions of the act which essentially exacted unity in order that they might beneficially operate. And for the purposes stated, to the body thus created was committed the trust of enforcing the act in the respect stated, of determining, limited as to the subject-matters to which we have referred, whether the provisions of the act had been violated, and if so, of primarily enforcing the act by awarding appropriate relief. The statute, therefore, necessarily, while it created new rights in favor of shippers, in order to make those rights fruitful as to the subjects with which the statute dealt, coming within the scope of the administrative unity which we have mentioned, primarily made the judgment of the administrative body to whom the statute confided the enforcement of the act in the respects stated a prerequisite to a resort to the courts. In other words, as to the subjects stated, the act did not give to the courts power to hear the complaint of a party concerning a violation of the act, but only conferred power to give effect to such complaints when, by previous submission to the Commission, they had been sanctioned by a command of that body.

In the long interval which intervened between 1887, when the act to regulate commerce was enacted, and June 18, 1910, when the commerce court act was passed, we have learned of no instance where it was held or even seriously asserted, that as to subjects which in their nature were administrative and within the competency of the Commission to decide, there was power in a court, by an exercise of original action, to enforce its conceptions as *to[297 the meaning of the act to regulate commerce by dealing directly with the subject, irrespective of any prior affirmative command or action by the Interstate Commerce Commission. On the contrary, by a long line of decisions, whereby applications to enforce orders of the Commission were considered and disposed of, or where requests to restrain the enforcement of such orders were passed upon, it appears by the reasoning indulged in that it was never considered that there was power in the courts as an original question, without previous affirmative action by the Commission, to deal with what might be termed in a broad sense the administrative features of the act to regulate commerce by determining as an original question that there had been a compliance or noncompliance with the provisions of the act. The subject is illustrated and made clear by the rulings in Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, ante, 863, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 222 U. S. 506, ante, 288, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, and Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075. The latter case especially will serve to point out that where the power of original action by a court, without previous action of the Commission, was insisted upon, it was based upon the conception that the particular subject-matter as to which such power was asserted was, by the express terms of the act to regulate commerce, not embraced within the subjects primarily confided by the act exclusively to the administrative authority of the Commission.

Originally the duty of the courts to determine whether an order of the Commission should or not be enforced carried with it the obligation to consider both the facts and the law. But it had come to pass prior to the passage of the act creating the commerce court that, in considering the subject of orders of the Commission, for the purpose of enforcing or restraining their [298]enforcement, the courts *were confined by statutory operation to determining whether there had been violations of the Constitution, a want of conformity to statutory authority, or of ascertaining whether power had been so arbitrarily exercised as virtually to transcend the authority conferred, although it may be not technically doing so. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 547, ante, 308, 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155. So also, at the time the law creating the commerce court was passed, suits to compel obedience to orders of the Commission, or to restrain an enforcement of such orders, were required to be brought in the circuit court of the United States in the district where a carrier, or one of two or more carriers to whom the order was directed, had its principal operating office.

In view of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce just referred to as originally enacted, of the legislative evolution of that act, its uniform practical enforcement and the constant judicial interpretation which we have thus briefly indicated, it is impossible, we think, in reason, to give to the act creating the commerce court the meaning affixed to it by the court below, since to do so would be virtually to overthrow the entire system which had arisen from the adoption and enforcement of the act to regulate commerce. First, because, as the previous ascertainment by the Commission on complaint made to it as to whether violations of the act had been committed, with reference to the subjects as to which previous action was required, was an essential prerequisite to a right to complain in a court, the interpretation given below would, by destroying the necessity for the prerequisite, action of the Commission, operate to create a vast body of rights which had no existence at the time the commerce court act was passed. Second, because the recognition of a right in a court to assert the power now claimed would, of necessity, amount to a substitution of *the court for the Commission,[299 or, at all events, would be to create a divided authority on a matter where, from the beginning, primary singleness of action and unity was deemed to be imperative. Third, because the result of the interpretation would be to bring about the contradiction and the confusion which it had been the inflexible purpose of the lawmaker from the beginning to guard against,—an interpretation which would seemingly create rights hitherto nonexistent, and yet at once proceed to destroy such rights by bringing about a confusion which would render the rights which the act creates practically valueless. Indeed, these inevitable results of the interpretation given by the court below to the act would necessarily amount to declaring that Congress, in seeking to unify and perfect the administrative machinery of the act to regulate commerce, and to make more beneficial its operation, had overthrown the whole fabric of the system as previously existing.

The demonstration of the error of the construction adopted below is so additionally made manifest by a consideration of the general structure and the text of the act creating the commerce court, that in connection with the legislative history which we have previously stated, that we advert to that point of view: A. The 1st section of the act, wherein is recited the jurisdiction of the commerce court, which we have previously commented upon, makes clear that the purpose was not to create a court with new and strange powers destructive of the previous well-established administrative authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in conflict with the general jurisdiction vested in the courts of the United States, but only to give to the new court the special jurisdiction then possessed by the courts of the United States for the enforcement of orders made by the Commission, and thus to unify the exertion of judicial power with reference to the enforcement of the orders of the 300]Commission. The *opening words of the section which make this result clear are as follows: It (the commerce court) shall "have the jurisdiction now possessed by circuit courts of the United States and the judges thereof over all cases of the following kinds: . . ." B. Because the enumeration as to the subject-matters of jurisdiction conferred, which follows the words just quoted, which enumeration we have previously reproduced and commented upon, conforms to the existing law and evidently assumes its continued operation. C. Because the sedulous effort of Congress while creating the new machinery not to destroy the existing system finds expression in a twofold way: (1) by the declaration that nothing in the fact that the existing power of the circuit courts as to the subjects of jurisdiction transferred to the new court should be deemed as an enlarging of those powers, and (2) by the provision that nothing in the transfer of the enumerated powers to the commerce court should be considered as limiting or abridging the existing jurisdiction possessed by the circuit courts as to things and subject-matters not embraced in the power transferred. Thus the two provisos again serving to make clear the legislative intent that the creation of a new body to exercise a portion of the existing judicial power should not in any way enlarge the power as existing, or be implied as destroying or minimizing the general scope of the judicial power possessed by the circuit courts, where such power was not embraced within the authority transferred to the new body. D. Because the act which created the court contained in its latter sections provisions amending sections of the act to regulate commerce which, when rightly interpreted, were manifestly adopted to make that act more consistent with the new situation resulting from the creation of the new court, and utterly inconsistent with the conception that that court had power not previously possessed by any court, and the existence of which would serve to set *at naught the whole sys-[301 tem of interstate commerce regulation.

Some suggestion is made in argument concerning the alleged claim of constitutional right asserted in the petition filed below, and which the court disposed of in the manner we have stated. But what we have said suffices to point out the fallacy which the contention involves, for the following reasons: If the claim of constitutional right concerned a subject which, from its very nature and effect, dominated the act to regulate commerce, and therefore was wholly independent of all questions of right or remedy created by or depending upon that statute, then the issue presented a controversy not cognizable in the commerce court, as it could not so be without violating the express reservation and restriction as to the general power of the circuit courts which we have just quoted. If, on the other hand, the constitutional question was involved in or depended upon the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, that question, in the nature of things, was subject to the precedent action of the Commission on the subjects committed to it by the act to regulate commerce, and as to which the court had jurisdiction alone to act, in virtue of a prior affirmative order of the Commission.

The general considerations which we have stated establish the error committed by the court below in holding that it had jurisdiction over the claim of the Procter & Gamble Company to recover on a money demand based on the illegality of the demurrage charges alleged to have been wrongfully exacted by the railroad companies. Through abundance of precaution, we, however, say that, wholly irrespective of the general considerations stated, we think the conclusion of the court as to its possession of jurisdiction over the subject referred to was clearly repugnant in other respects to the express terms of the act.

As it follows from what we have said that the court below erred in taking jurisdiction of the petition, it results *that[302 our duty is to remand the cause to the court below, with directions to dismiss the petition for want of jurisdiction.

And it is so ordered.

JAMES J. HOOKER et al., Appts.,
v.
MARTIN A. KNAPP et al., Appellees.
(No. 773.)

EAGLE WHITE LEAD COMPANY et al., Appts.,
v.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION
et al., Appellees. (No. 774.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 302-306.)

Commerce court — jurisdiction — negative action of Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commerce court has no jurisdiction of a complaint by shippers of the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to reduce maximum rates to the full extent asked.

[Nos. 773 and 774.]

Argued January 11, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review decrees dismissing on the merits bills filed by shippers which complain of the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to reduce maximum rates to the full extent asked. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, No. 773, 188 Fed. 242; No. 774, 188 Fed. 256.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Francis B. James argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The right of a carrier or shipper to file a bill in equity to enjoin an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission exists independent of, and does not arise out of, any statute.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 176 Fed. 409; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 49, ante, 83, 88, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

To give a railroad corporation such right and deny it to a shipper would render the law unconstitutional as wanting in due process of law.

Procter & G. Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 226.

To give the word "against" the meaning of "touching" or "concerning" or "in reference to" brings the whole of § 16 of the 56 L. ed.

act to regulate commerce into harmony with all other statutes on the same subject-matter, prevents absurd consequences flowing therefrom, and preserves the whole general intent and purpose of Congress. In addition, it gives that liberal construction to sustain a remedy which is always given to a remedial statute.

Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. 219, 19 L. ed. 138; Seabright v. Seabright, 28 W. Va. 415.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jesse C. Adkins and Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. R. Walton Moore argued the cause and filed a brief for the Cincinnati, New Orleans, & Texas P. R. Co.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court.

The appellants in these cases originally applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for reduction of the maximum rates between Cincinnati and Chattanooga from the 76c. schedule to a 60c. schedule. The Commission refused to make the full extent of this reduction. Thereupon the respective parties filed bills in the commerce court, demanding that the Commission's order be "suspended, set aside, annulled, and declared void and of no effect," and that the individual defendants and the Commission be required by mandatory injunction to set aside and annul the said order, that the case be reopened, and the complainants given further relief. The two bills were consolidated. The individual defendants, the Commission, and the railroad company all demurred to the bill on the merits. The United States moved to dismiss on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction. The court took jurisdiction, but dismissed on the merits. These appeals were then prosecuted. The cases are, in all respects, controlled by the opinion announced and ruling made in the Procter & Gamble Case, this day decided [225 U. S. 282, ante, 1091, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761], *and for the reasons in that case [306 stated, these cases must be and are remanded, with directions to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, and it is so ordered.

UNITED STATES, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Federal Sugar Refining Company, Appts.,

v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 306-326.)

Injunction — pendente lite — power of commerce court — irreparable damage.

1. Only temporary restraining orders of the commerce court, issued conformably to the act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 542, chap. 309), § 3, staying in whole or in part the operation of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission for not more than sixty days, are affected by the requirements of that section respecting a statement of fact as to irreparable damage; they have no application to a preliminary injunction or injunction pendente lite.

[Procedure in injunction cases, see Injunction, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — pendente lite — power of commerce court.

2. The granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite suspending, until final determination of the suit, an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring certain carriers to desist from making further alleged discriminatory allowances, is not in excess of its power, under the act of June 18, 1910, § 3, unless it was plainly unnecessary because of the obvious nature and character of the legal questions as to which the judgment of the court was invoked.

[Power of Federal courts to issue injunction, see Courts, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from commerce court — injunction pendente lite — discretion.

3. The Federal Supreme Court will not disturb on appeal the granting by the commerce court of an injunction pendente lite suspending, until final determination of the suit, an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring certain carriers to desist from making further alleged discriminatory allowances, unless it was so unwarranted, arbitrary, and unreasonable as to amount to an abuse of discretion.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 722.]

Argued January 15 and 16, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review an order enjoining, pendente lite, an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission requiring certain carriers to desist from making further alleged discriminatory allowances. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. P. J. Farrell filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The court erred in not dismissing the petitions for want of equity.

Interstate Commerce Commission, v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 301, 53 L. ed. 1004, 1006, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 277, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 690, 37 L. ed. 895, 902, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 197, 40 L. ed. 935, 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 219, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 506, 42 L. ed. 243, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co. 222 U. S. 215, ante, 171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 259, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 172, 42 L. ed. 414, 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 439, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 477, 54 L. ed. 280, 290, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 253, 55 L. ed. 448, 457, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

The court erred in substituting its own judgment for the judgment of the Commission concerning the character of the discrimination which constitutes the basis of the Commission's order.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Southern P.

Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 248, 249, 251, 252, 55 L. ed. 448, 455, 456, 457, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

Mr. Ernest A. Bigelow filed a brief for the Federal Sugar Refining Company:

The finding that there is unjust discrimination is a conclusion of fact.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

The transportation of Arbuckle sugar by these carriers does not begin until the lighters are made fast to their float bridges on the New Jersey shore, that being the point of time at which the carriers accept the goods and assume responsibility therefor.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 528, 29 L. ed. 715, 719, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; London & L. F. Ins. Co. v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 144 N. Y. 200, 43 Am. St. Rep. 752, 39 N. E. 79; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co. — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

The arrangement between Arbuckle and Jamison and the carriers creates an unlawful discrimination.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 477, 54 L. ed. 290, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co. 222 U. S. 215, ante, 171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

The intention of the Federal Company as to the ultimate destination of its sugar has no bearing on its two separate contracts with the Ben Franklin Company, one, to transport the sugar to Pier 24 and notify the consignee; the other, to transport from Pier 24 to the rail terminals.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

On this appeal the court may properly consider and decide the whole cause on the merits.

Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 810, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Mast, F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. ed. 856, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 246, 77 Fed. 501; Green v. Mills, 30 L.R.A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852.

Mr. George F. Brownell argued the cause, and, with Mr. Herbert A. Taylor, filed a brief for the Railroad Companies et al.:

The Federal Sugar Refining Company has not the status of a shipper from New York within lighterage limits; there is 56 L. ed.

a single continuous shipment of sugar by boat from Yonkers to the Jersey shore, and no new shipment originating at Pier 24, North river.

Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 526, 527, 55 L. ed. 310, 320, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 183 Fed. 1005.

The service performed by the Federal Sugar Refining Company through the medium of the Ben Franklin Transportation Company is not a transportation service of the railroad companies, but is wholly accessory, and cannot lawfully be paid for by these appellees.

Re Allowances for Transfer of Sugar, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 627; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 551, 84 C. C. A. 324, 156 Fed. 558; General Electric Co. v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237; Solvay Process Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 246.

Railroads may secure and maintain freight depots by contract with shippers, and such depots thereby become legally and to all intents and purposes the freight depots of the railroads.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 173; Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 277.

The entering into a contract with one shipper to furnish station facilities does not result in a violation of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, forbidding undue preferences and advantages, even if similar contracts are not made with all competing shippers in the same locality.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 117, affirmed in 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 136, 35 L. ed. 73, 76, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Butchers' & D. Stock-Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 C. C. A. 290, 31 U. S. App. 252, 67 Fed. 35; United States ex rel. Morris v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 617, 40 Fed. 101; Consolidating Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 1,206; Re Transportation & Refrigeration of Fruit, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360; Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 584, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 793.

Mr. H. B. Closson filed a brief for the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal.

Mr. William N. Dykman argued the cause and filed a brief for Jay Street Terminal and Arbuckle Brothers, Interveners:

This court reviews the findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon appeal from an order granting an injunction suspending the order of the Commission.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 216 U. S. 531, 54 L. ed. 605, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. ed. 608, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

The order of the Commission cannot be upheld upon the ground that the questions are of fact, not reviewable in the courts.

Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678.

No commission nor any court can treat that as a public or private wrong which the Congress has authorized.

Hammersmith & City R. Co. v. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 171, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 265, 21 L. T. N. S. 238, 18 Week. Rep. 12, 7 Eng. Rul. Cas. 380; Bellinger v. New York C. R. Co. 23 N. Y. 42.

When the terminal receives sugar for shipment, and issues a bill of lading for and in the name of the railroad company, two results follow:

1. Title to the merchandise changes from the consignor to the consignee.

Mee v. McNider, 109 N. Y. 500, 17 N. E. 424; Wilcox Silver Plate Co. v. Green, 72 N. Y. 17; Waldron v. Romaine, 22 N. Y. 368; Gilbert v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 4 Hun, 378; Williston, Sales, § 278.

2. The railroad journey and responsibility begin.

Hutchinson, Carr. § 158; Abbe v. Eaton, 51 N. Y. 410.

The liability of the carrier, in fact, begins as soon as it receives the merchandise for carriage, even if bills of lading have not been shipped or a journey commenced; the mere reception of the goods for the purpose of immediate transportation is sufficient to inaugurate liability.

Ames v. Fargo, 114 App. Div. 666, 99 N. Y. Supp. 994; Hutchinson, Carr. § 113.

The Commission exceeded its power in forbidding payment to the Jay Street Terminal for handling of Arbuckle Brothers' sugar.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 176 Fed. 409.

It is beyond the power of the Commission to order payments to the Federal Company for lightering sugar from Pier 24 to the railroad terminals in New Jersey.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chi- cago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A. (N.S.) 551, 84 C. C. A. 324, 156 Fed. 558; General Electric Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237; Solvay Process Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 246; Re Allowances for Transfer of Sugar, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 619.

It is not a discrimination to contract with the Jay Street Terminal to maintain a railroad freight station in Brooklyn, and there to collect, receive, and deliver freight, issue bills of lading, and float loaded cars between Brooklyn and Jersey City, and at the same time refuse to contract with the Federal Sugar Refining Company for lighterage from Pier 24.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 276, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, affirmed in 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 182; Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 577, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 793; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; United States ex rel. Morris v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 617, 40 Fed. 101; Re Transportation & Refrigeration of Fruit, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360.

It is beyond the power of the Commission to allow more than the cost of lighterage to the Federal Company, to offset less than cost paid the Jay Street Terminal for its services.

Re Allowances for Transfer of Sugar, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 619.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit instituted in the commerce court to enjoin the enforcement of an order by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The complainants in the bill are the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, the Delaware, Lackawanna, & Western Railroad Company, the Erie Railroad Company, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, the New York, Ontario, & Western Railway Company, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal and John Arbuckle and William A. Jamison, copartners, trading as the Jay Street Terminal, intervened and were made parties complainant, they being interested to defeat the order of the Commission.

The defendant named in the bill is the United States. The Interstate Commerce Commission appeared, and the Federal Sugar Refining Company intervened and was made a party defendant.

315] *The order which it was the purpose of the suit to enjoin was made in a proceeding commenced before the Commission on behalf of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, to compel the railroads above named to desist and abstain from paying to Arbuckle Brothers, claimed to be operating what is known as the Jay Street Terminal, certain so-called allowances for floatage, lighterage, and terminal services rendered by them to the complainants in connection with sugar transported by them in New York harbor to and for the complainants, while at the same time paying no such allowances to the said Federal Refining Company on its sugar.

We substantially adopt as accurate a summary statement made of the subject-matter of the controversy in the brief of counsel for the railroad companies:

"The Federal Sugar Refining Company has a refinery at Yonkers, New York, and Arbuckle Brothers have a refinery in the borough of Brooklyn, New York city. The railroad companies operate what are known as trunk line railroads, extending from New York to western and southern points. In order to receive and deliver freight in New York city they are obliged to transport the same across the waters of New York harbor on lighters by what is called lighterage service; or, when the freight is carried through in railroad cars, on car floats by what is called floatage service.

"At numerous points along the New York city water front within the lighterage limits they have established public stations for the receipt and delivery of freight.

"They have also established boundaries known as 'lighterage limits,' including substantially all of what may be called manufacturing and commercial portion of the water front of New York city and the opposite shore of New Jersey, and within these boundaries they receive and deliver freight at any accessible point on the water front without any additional charge above the New York rates, which are, generally speaking, the same as the rates *to and from the terminals on the New Jersey shore. At 'public' docks open to any vessel, the railroad pays the wharfage; at private docks the shipper or consignee must arrange for the necessary dockage.

"At a number of points in the boroughs of Brooklyn and the Bronx, the railroad companies or some of them furnish public stations through arrangements made with terminal companies to furnish union public stations and terminal facilities for the receipt and delivery of freight in cars and through freight houses, and for the transportation of such freight between such terminal stations and the railroad companies' rails on the western shore of the harbor, all of which is done for and in the name of the railroad companies under provisions of their tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission under which their New York rates apply to and from such union public stations.

"One of these public terminal stations, known as the Jay Street Terminal, is owned and operated by William A. Jamison and John Arbuckle, conducting a separate business in that respect as copartners under the name and style of 'Jay Street Terminal,' in accordance with the laws of the state of New York. Jay Street Terminal is named as a station of the railroad companies, appellees, in their respective tariffs, and is conducted under contract with the railroad companies like any other freight station, bills of lading issued from and to it on behalf of the railroad companies and in their names, on the regular uniform form, charges being collected and accounts kept, the Jay Street Terminal performing the entire physical and clerical service and furnishing the necessary docks, freight yard, and station buildings and equipment, excepting cars. The Jay Street Terminal also floats or lighters all shipments between the terminal and the rails of the railroad companies on the New Jersey shore. For these services and facilities each railroad company pays to the *Jay Street Terminal an aggregate [317 compensation figured on the freight handled for it, based on the rate of 4½ cents per hundred pounds on freight originating at or destined to points at or west of the westerly limits of Trunk Line Territory, so called, and 3 cents per hundred pounds on freight originating at or destined to points east of the westerly limit of Trunk Line Territory. The same amounts per hundred pounds are paid to other terminal companies furnishing similar service at New York.

"The refinery of Arbuckle Brothers, a partnership composed of William A. Jamison and John Arbuckle, is within two blocks of the Jay Street Terminal, and they truck sugar from their refinery to this terminal and load it into cars at their own expense and deliver it to the Jay Street Terminal, and obtain the railroad company's bill of lading for it from the Jay Street Terminal just as other shippers do with other freight.

"The refinery of the Federal Sugar Refining Company at Yonkers, New York, formerly operated by the Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers, is located on the Hudson river, 10 miles north of the limits of the lighterage limits. The sugar manufactured at this refinery and shipped over the lines of these appellees is loaded onto lighters of the Ben Franklin Transportation Company, an independent boat line with which the Federal Sugar Refining Company has made a contract, under which the boat line lighters its sugar to the terminals of the railroad companies for 3 cents per hundred pounds. The boat line brings the sugar to the terminals of the railroads on the western shore of New York harbor and delivers it to them for rail transportation.

"The Federal Sugar Refining Company's refinery at Yonkers is located directly on the tracks of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company. Over this railroad the rates to the points in the shipping territory of the Federal Sugar Refining Company are, with few exceptions, the same as the rates via the lines of the railroad companies. To ship at the New York rate over the lines of the roads the Federal Sugar Refining Company can deliver its shipments to the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad at Yonkers, thence to be transported by that railroad to New York, and there delivered to the said railroad companies within lighterage limits. None of these railroads have lines extending to Yonkers. Because of alleged delay in the handling and transportation of shipments via this route, the Federal Sugar Refining Company sometimes prefers to deliver said shipments by lighter to the said railroad companies at their stations on the New Jersey shore of New York harbor.

"Prior to July, 1909, these shipments were carried by the Ben Franklin Transportation Company directly to the rail terminals on the Jersey shore from Yonkers without stop. Since that date the lighters stop en route at Pier 24, North river. The reason for stopping at Pier 24 is found in the decision made by the Commission in case No. 1082, brought by the Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers, the predecessor of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, against the same railroad companies, appellees here (17 Inters. Com. Rep. 40). The complaint in that proceeding claimed a discrimination against the Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers and in favor of the Jay Street Terminal and the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal, an incorporated company operating a similar terminal station in another section of Brooklyn, because of the refusal of the railroad companies to pay it the same amounts on account of the lighterage performed by the Ben Franklin Transportation Company from Yonkers to the rail terminals of the railroad company on the western shore of New York harbor as were paid to the two terminal companies above named on account of the various services performed and terminal facilities furnished by them in connection with the transportation of sugar shipped by *Arbuckle Brothers and the American Sugar Refining Company respectively. This complaint was dismissed because the extension of the lighterage limits in New York harbor of the railroad companies was a matter of business discretion, and that the Commission had no authority to require such extension beyond the then prescribed boundaries, and that the Federal Sugar Refining Company, being located outside of the prescribed lighterage limits, was not subject to unlawful discrimination by reason of the practice of the railroad companies in affording free lighterage on shipments originating at a distance to points within said lighterage limits, while refusing to so afford on shipments of the Federal Sugar Refining Company.

"As a result of this decision of the Commission the lighters of the Ben Franklin Transportation Company were stopped en route from Yonkers at Pier 24, North river, where certain formalities with reference to shipping orders were had for the purpose of making it appear as a matter of law that these shipments were made not from Yonkers, but from Pier 24, North river, a point within lighterage limits. A new complaint was filed with the Commission, setting forth the same grounds of discrimination as the prior one, but on the theory that the decision of the Commission did not apply because the shipments of the Federal Sugar Refining Company were now lightered from Pier 24, a point within lighterage limits, and not from Yonkers. The Commission held as a matter of law that the stoppage of the lighters of the Ben Franklin Transportation Company for instructions at Pier 24 differentiated the case from the former one, and made the following order:

"It is ordered that the above-named defendants (the appellees) be and they are hereby notified and required to cease and desist on or before the 15th day of April, 1911, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain from paying such allowances to Arbuckle Brothers *on their sugar, while at the same time paying no such allowance to said complainant (Federal Sugar Refining Company) on its sugar, which said allowances so paid to said Arbuckle Brothers by said defendants are found by the Commission in said report to be unduly discriminatory and in violation of the act to regulate commerce."

"The so-called 'allowances' referred to in this order are a part of the payments making up the compensation of the Jay Street Terminal, figured at the rates of 3 cents and 4½ cents per hundred pounds, as above described."

This is the order the enforcement of which was the subject-matter of the controversy in the court below.

The United States, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Federal Sugar Refining Company promptly filed motions to dismiss the petition and the intervening petition of the Jay Street Terminal upon the ground of want of equity and because the order of the Commission was an adjudication of matters of fact as to which its judgment was conclusive. The petitioners, on the other hand, applied for an injunction pendente lite suspending the order of the Commission until the final determination of the action. The motions to dismiss were denied. On the same day, the motion for a temporary injunction—which had been heard upon the petition and intervening petitions and affidavits submitted by petitioners in support of the averments of the petition and intervening petition—was granted, and the assailed order “and its force and effect” were suspended until the further order of the court. This appeal was then taken.

There was clearly a right in the court below to entertain jurisdiction of the petition, and to determine whether the affirmative order of the Commission was entitled to be enforced. There was clearly also power in the court to allow a preliminary injunction, since that authority is conferred in express terms by § 3 (208 [36 Stat. at L. 1149, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 217]) of the act [36 Stat. at L. 321]542, chap. 309.] And *the right to appeal from such an order is also in express terms conferred by § 2 (210) of the act.

It is urged on behalf of the United States and the Interstate Commerce Commission that, wholly irrespective of the merits of the petition, the order granting the interlocutory injunction must be reversed because of what is insisted to be the express requirements of the act imposing the duty on the commerce court or a judge of that court, if a restraining order is granted under the conditions in the statute, to state the facts from which it is found that irreparable injury would arise if a restraining order were not allowed. The section containing the provision relied upon is as follows:

“That suits to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall be brought in the commerce court against the United States. The pendency of such suit shall not of itself stay or suspend the operation of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission; but the commerce court, in its discretion, may restrain or suspend, in whole or in part the operation of the Commission's order pending the final hearing and determination of the suit. No order or injunction so restraining or suspending an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall be made by the commerce court otherwise than upon notice and after hearing, except that in cases where irreparable damage would otherwise ensue to the petitioner, said court, or a judge thereof, may, on hearing, after not less than three days' notice to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Attorney General, allow a temporary stay or suspension in whole or in part of the operation of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission for not more than sixty days from the date of the order of such court or judge, pending application to the court for its order or injunction, in which case the said order shall contain a specific finding, based upon evidence submitted to the judge making the *order and identified by[322 reference thereto, that such irreparable damage would result to the petitioner, and specifying the nature of the damage. The court may, at the time of hearing such application, upon a like finding, continue the temporary stay or suspension in whole or in part until its decision upon the application.”

Without ambiguity we think the statute contemplates three classes of orders: First, a temporary restraining order staying in whole or in part the operation of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission for not more than sixty days from the date of the suspensive order, to be allowed by the court or a judge thereof; second, a preliminary injunction, that is, an injunction pendente lite, which, to quote the words of the statute, may be granted by the court to “restrain or suspend, in whole or in part, the operation of the Commission's order pending the final hearing and determination of the suit;” third, in the nature of things a perpetual injunction upon the entry of the final decree. The order in this case, made after notice and hearing, suspending the force and effect of the order of the Commission until the further order of the court, was obviously an exercise of the power conferred to grant a preliminary injunction or injunction pendente lite, and not of the power to allow a temporary restraining order embraced in the first of the classes stated. As we think it clear that the requirements of the statute relied upon respecting the statement of facts as to irreparable damages relate only to the first class of cases, that is, the power to issue a temporary restraining order, we hold the objection to be without merit.

This brings us to consider the scope of our reviewing authority under the right conferred by the statute to appeal from the allowance by the court below of a preliminary injunction or injunction pendente lite. To determine this question requires a consideration of the nature and character of the powers which the court had a right to 323]* exert over the subject-matter presented to it by petition filed to perpetually enjoin the enforcement of the order of the Commission.

We have determined in the Procter & Gamble Case, 225 U. S. 282, ante, 1091, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761, that the commerce court was but endowed in considering whether an affirmative order of the Commission should be enforced, on the one hand, or set aside and declared nonenforceable on the other, with the jurisdiction and power existing at the time that act was passed in the circuit courts of the United States. And as, at that time, it was conclusively settled that the courts had only authority to re-examine the findings of the Commission as to subjects like the one here under consideration, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the action of the Commission was repugnant to the Constitution, in excess of the statutory powers conferred upon it, or manifested such an abuse as to be equivalent to an excess of authority, it clearly results that the court below was likewise limited in passing upon the petition before it in this case. This being true, it is also necessarily true that virtually the sole authority of the court below was in a sense confined to determining questions of law arising upon the case as presented on the face of the pleadings. Under the general principles of equity, where a court is called upon to decide whether it will allow a preliminary or pendente lite injunction, the duty arising requires it to be determined whether, on the face of the papers presented, there is such an equitable cause of action presented as justifies the issue of a preliminary injunction to preserve the status pending the suit; that is, to afford an opportunity for a trial of the issues presented. Necessarily it is true also that where an appeal is allowed from an order granting a preliminary injunction the reviewing court is put to the duty of determining whether, on the face of the papers, the court below erred as a matter of law in granting the preliminary injunction. Do these principles apply to the case before 324]* us is then the first consideration. The result of holding that they do will inevitably cause the expunging from the act of the express authority conferred to issue a preliminary injunction, since, viewed under the general principles of equity, the criteria by which to determine the rightfulness of such an order in view of the nature and character of the jurisdiction of the commerce court is exactly and exclusively the same criteria by which the rightfulness of a final decree of that court, issuing a perpetual injunction in conformity to such decree, would require to be tested. Our duty, however, is not to destroy the law, but to enforce it; and in doing so to seek to discover the intention of the law-maker, the wrong intended to be prevented, and the remedy designed to be afforded by the enactment of the statute. Coming to consider the statute for this purpose, we have pointed out in the Procter & Gamble Case that the great remedy intended to be accomplished was the concentration in a single court of the power to consider the rightfulness of enforcing or setting aside orders of the Commission; that, to prevent unnecessary delays, the limitations as to restraining orders and their duration, and the hearing which is commanded as to irreparable injury, were enacted. It must therefore in reason be that the power to issue a preliminary injunction was recognized and preserved so as to afford the court the proper time for deliberation and consideration of the questions to be decided by the Commission, instead of compelling that body virtually eo instante upon the presentation of a petition to reach a final conclusion. And it would seem also to be the case that the right to appeal from such an order was given as a safeguard against a possible abuse of discretion by an unwarranted, arbitrary, and unreasonable exercise of the power conferred. In other words, we think that the enlightened purpose of Congress was that the court which it created, in the exercise of the important trusts confined to its authority, *and where occasion re-[325] quired it as a consequence of the gravity and complexity of the legal questions which might arise, should be afforded ample opportunity for due consideration and ripe judgment, and that it was not intended to compel precipitate, and perhaps ill-considered, action.

Coming to consider the case presented in the light of these principles, in view of the doubt which existed as to the scope and effect of the powers conferred upon the Commission, as shown by the decision of the court in the Procter & Gamble Case, of the nature and character of the subject-matter here under consideration and its importance, of the action of the Commission had on that subject prior to the making of the order of the Commission which was assailed by the petition, and especially of the diversity of opinion which existed among the members of the Commission on the subject, we think there is no room for saying that the preliminary injunction issued was in excess of the power conferred upon the court, because of the plain want of necessity for it, resulting from the obvious nature and character of the legal questions as to which the judgment of the court was invoked in consequence of the filing of the petition calling for the exertion of the authority conferred upon it by Congress.

It is not disputable that although the right to appeal to this court from an order like the one here in question is conferred, yet obviously the purpose which must have caused the creation of the commerce court must have been the desire to interpose between the action of the Commission and this court an intermediate tribunal, having the powers which the statute delegates to it. Our duty is to give that purpose effect and to uphold the lawful authority of the court without deviation, and yet without hesitancy, where there has been an abuse of discretion, to correct it in the completest way. But as this case manifests no such abuse, our duty is not to reverse the action of the court, but to remand the case, so 326]that *there may be an opportunity to dispose of it on the merits in the forum selected by Congress for that purpose. Of course, in saying this, we must not be understood as deciding or in any way implying that the duty would not exist to examine the merits of a preliminary order of the general character of the one before us in a case where it plainly, in our judgment, appeared that the granting of the preliminary order was in effect a decision by the court of the whole controversy on the merits, or where it was demonstrable that grave detriment to the public interest would result from not considering and finally disposing of the controversy without remanding to enable the court below to do so.

Affirmed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION and the United States, Appts.,
v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, Pennsylvania Railroad Company, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 326-346.)

Commerce court — jurisdiction — enjoining order of Interstate Commerce Commission.

1. The commerce court, in the exercise of its power, under the act of June 18, 1910

NOTE.—As to what constitutes an unlawful preference or discrimination by a carrier under interstate commerce regulations—see note to Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 230.

56 L. ed.

(36 Stat. at L. 542, chap. 309), § 3, to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has jurisdiction to entertain a petition to enjoin an order of the Commission requiring railway companies to cease charging lower rates for coal intended for railway consumption than is accorded to other shippers, and may enjoin such order if it considers that it will work irreparable injury, where the question presented by the petition is that the order of the Commission was not merely administrative, but proceeded from a construction of certain sections of the act to regulate commerce as applicable to the conditions which affected the traffic in the different kinds of coal, and that the different charges for transportation constituted violations of those sections.

Carriers — rates — discrimination — dissimilar conditions.

2. Differences with respect to competition between coal intended for railway consumption and other coal, and with respect to the manner of delivery, depending upon a difference in the facilities possessed by the railroads and other consignees, do not make the interstate traffic therein dissimilar in circumstances and conditions, within the meaning of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155), § 2, so as to justify the giving of a lower rate for the transportation of railway fuel coal than is given to shippers of other coal between the same points.

[For other cases, see Carriers, 275 283, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 719.]

Argued January 12 and 15, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission which required railway companies to cease charging lower rates for coal intended for railway consumption than were accorded to other shippers. Reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss the petition.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The question in the case is whether railroad companies may charge a different rate for the transportation of coal to a given point to railroads than to other shippers, the coal being intended for the use of the railroads as fuel.

The Interstate Commerce Commission

On the right of a carrier at common law to discriminate between passengers and shippers—see note to Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Wilson, 18 L.R.A. 105.

held that a charge of a different rate was an unlawful discrimination against other shippers, and made an order requiring a cessation of such charge. The execution of the order was enjoined by the commerce court.

A number of railroads are petitioners and we shall refer to them as the companies.

The companies attack in their petition the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission on several grounds, which may be summarized as follows: The movement of coal traffic from the point of origin to the point or points of junction to receiving carriers is different from the movement of coal to be delivered locally at such junction points.

The traffic is not governed by the rates published under the act to regulate commerce, which apply to the traffic in coal not intended for use by consuming railroads, because the charges go to the carrier itself. If the coal be shipped under a through rate applicable to other coal the actual rate upon which it moves to the rails of the consuming road is the division of the through rate going to the roads over which the traffic moves to the junction point with the rails of the consuming road. The division of the rate beyond that point goes to the consuming road itself.

§28] *All but an inconsiderable part of such coal is necessary and intended for use as fuel in locomotives. The fueling stations are often many, and are located at convenient points along the line at varying distances from the junction points, and it is not possible at the time of shipment to tell at what point a carload of coal will be needed. If made on a through rate they must be billed and transported to a point to which the through rate is published. Even if a centrally located distributing yard for fuel be established, and all shipments billed on a through rate to that yard, there must be a reverse movement of the coal between that point and the point of junction.

The fact that fuel coal on the line of a consuming carrier is not governed by the published rates makes the commercial competitive conditions different between such coal and other coal. The value to the shipper is not the same or measured by the same conditions. There is no competition between the fuel coal and other coal.

Because of the circumstances and conditions differentiating the traffic in fuel coal the companies have for a number of years past published and filed, as required by law, separate tariffs of the rates to be charged and received by them for the transportation of such coal from points of origin to the junction point of delivery to the consuming carrier. The tariffs vary in their definitions or descriptions of the traffic to which the rates apply, but in each case the traffic is such that it would move in reality, not under the published through rates, but would move under the special conditions which have been stated. Some of the tariffs apply only to coal intended for use and used for locomotive fuel. The rates named in the tariffs are open and available to all producers and shippers, if the shipments be made under the special conditions stated.

On January 4, 1910, the Interstate Commerce Commission, of its own motion, instituted an inquiry under an *order[329 of that date entitled, "in the Matter of Restrictive Rates," Docket No. 3053, making the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania Railroad Companies parties to the proceeding. The other companies from time to time were admitted as interveners. Testimony was taken, argument heard, and the Commission entered the order complained of in which the Commission required the companies to cease and desist, on or before May 15, 1911, and for a period of two years to abstain from using the tariffs on fuel coal stated.

The Commission erred in its construction of the act to regulate commerce in that it held the facts and circumstances found by it did not distinguish fuel coal from other coal, and that the different conditions of their transportation were not in law circumstances and conditions necessary or proper to be considered in applying the provisions of § 2 of the act.

The Commission erred in holding that the rates on fuel coal under § 2 should be no more nor less than rates for the shipment of other coal from the same point of origin for local delivery at the junction point, the circumstances and conditions showing conclusively that the services done in the transportation of them, respectively, are not alike nor substantially similar, within the meaning of the act to regulate commerce.

The Commission erred in holding that fuel coal should be transported under through rates, as other coal, and that it was unlawful for carriers to publish or charge any rates other than the through rates agreed upon going to the line of the terminal carrier, to be used by it in its business as a common carrier. And that, as the charges on such terminal carrier's line must be borne by it, the Commission erred in holding that such circumstance did not differentiate the traffic in such coal from the traffic in other coal, and did not constitute a substantial difference under § 2 in the conditions of transportation.

*The commission erred in holding[330 further, that any difference in the tariff for fuel coal, and not applicable to all other coal, was unjustly discriminatory, in violation of § 3.

It appears on the face of the report of the Commission, it is alleged, that it proceeded in making the order upon its view of §§ 2 and 3; that it did not find it necessary to consider any specific tariff or tariffs or the rates named thereby; that the difference in conditions affecting the respective tariffs could not be considered as distinguishing them. And it is alleged that the findings of the Commission are findings of law, as well in regard to the violation of the 3d section of the act as in regard to violation of the 2d section. Irreparable damages is alleged, and the alternatives presented of desisting from the carriage of fuel coal at the expense of the loss of large and valuable revenues, or accepting divisions of through rates, on both fuel coal and other coal, which will give the companies, as originating or intermediate carriers, a much lower compensation for both classes of traffic than they are now receiving and would continue to receive but for the order of the Commission.

In either case the loss will amount to many thousand dollars. There will be loss, it is alleged, to the producers of fuel coal who have sold coal under contracts for future delivery at junction points, and loss also to producers and shippers who depend on the railroad-fuel business to enable them to operate their mines at all.

A final decree is prayed for the annulment of the order and a temporary injunction enjoining and suspending it pending final hearing and determination.

The petition was supported by affidavits made by a number of coal producers and shippers.

The answer of the Interstate Commerce Commission is directed principally at the third paragraph of the petition, and charges against it as follows: Its allegations re-331]late to *comparisons between coal, on the one hand, consigned to a railroad company, and coal, on the other hand, consigned to some other party. The former is called railroad-fuel coal, the latter is known as commercial coal. In each instance, however, regardless of the consignee, the point of origin and the point of destination of the shipments are the same, but the rate charged for transporting fuel coal is much less than the rate exacted for the transportation of commercial coal over the same line, in the same direction, and between the same points. Schedules or tariffs providing for such differences in rates have been heretofore established and put in force and are now maintained and enforced by the companies.

Where the destination is a junction which is a point of connection between the lines of two or more of the companies, the movement of coal, fuel and commercial, is the same, except that at such destination the cars containing fuel coal are ordinarily placed upon what is called an exchange track, which is used in common by the connecting carriers, while the cars containing commercial coal are usually placed upon the side track of the delivering carrier. The cost of delivering both kinds of coal is practically the same, depending upon the nature of the delivery facilities furnished by the companies. Therefore, the cost of delivering fuel coal may be and is less than the cost of delivering the commercial coal, but the reverse is sometimes the case. It is alleged, however, that such differences are similar to differences pertaining to some shipments of commercial coal compared with other shipments.

Generally what is called "free time" is allowed by the companies, that is to say, a certain period of time for unloading the coal is allowed. If the coal is unloaded within that time, no charge is made for the use of the car. If that time be exceeded, a charge of $1 for each day or fraction of a day in excess of the "free time," known as a demurrage charge, is exacted by the companies, while the *compensation[332 paid by one carrier to another carrier for the use of a car owned by the latter is 25 cents a day. Where the coal transported is fuel coal no "free time" is allowed, nor is such demurrage charge exacted or collected. These differences, however, are offset, and much more than offset, by the differences in the rates of transportation between the different coals.

Where the destination of the shipment of coal is not a point of connection between the lines of two or more of the companies, the circumstances and conditions pertaining to the transportation and delivery of coal are the same as above described, except that at such destination there are no exchange tracks used in common by two or more of the companies. Where the shipment passes over more than one line of railway to such destination, delivery by one of the companies to another is made in the same way and under similar circumstances and conditions, regardless of whether the coal be fuel or commercial.

The lower rates established by the companies and applied by them to the transportation of fuel coal are not open alike to all shippers, but are, by reason of the schedules and tariffs above mentioned and by reason of the practices of the companies, confined to shippers of fuel coal, and denied to shippers of all other coal, including commercial coal.

The Commission denies the errors attributed to it, and alleges that its report shows as follows: "We have never held that the local rate to the junction point must be paid on shipments that are going beyond that point. What we have said is that the local rate to the junction point shall be the same for all shippers to that point, and that the through charges on shipments going beyond the junction point shall be alike for all shippers to the same destination.

The Commission alleges (somewhat singularly, on information and belief) that it considered all facts, circumstances, 333] *and conditions pertinent to the subject-matter of the order, including degrees of difference and distinction, and each and all of the tariffs and rates of the companies which are affected by the order, and did not entertain the opinion attributed to it, that the facts, circumstances, and conditions affecting the particular traffic could not be lawfully considered by it as distinguishing the traffic in railroad-fuel coal from the traffic in other coal.

It is alleged that the traffic is interstate, and that fuel coal, as compared with other coal, including commercial coal, is a like kind of traffic; that the services performed by the companies in connection with the transportation of fuel coal, as compared to the services performed by them in connection with the transportation of other coal, including commercial coal, are alike and contemporaneous, and are performed under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. It is hence alleged that the companies are violating §§ 2 and 3 of the interstate commerce act [24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155].

The final allegation of the Commission is that the matters are within its jurisdiction, and that therefore the correctness of its findings is not open to review in the commerce court or any other court.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The court erred in holding that, as a matter of law, the circumstances and conditions pertaining to the transportation of the railroad fuel coal are substantially different from the circumstances and conditions pertaining to the transportation of other coal.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 259, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 166, 167, 42 L. ed. 414, 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v.

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 252-254, 55 L. ed. 448, 456-458, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Capital City Gas Co. v. Central Vermont R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 104; Re Contracts of Exp. Cos. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 246; Hitchman Coal & Coke Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 512.

The commerce court erred in substituting its own judgment for the judgment of the Commission.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 252-254, 55 L. ed. 448, 456-458, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States.

Messrs. W. Irvine Cross and Hugh L. Bond, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The United States commerce court had power to review on appeal the construction put by the Commission on the act to regulate commerce, even though the subject-matter of the order was within the jurisdiction of the Commission, and the order did not violate any constitutional right.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. ed. 608, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 216 U. S. 531, 54 L. ed. 605, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

Circumstances and conditions arising before the traffic was delivered by the consignor to the carrier for transportation at point of origin have been recognized as creating an unlike kind of traffic.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The Commission in Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 87, followed this decision, and in Kemble v. Boston & A. R. Co.

8 Inters. Com. Rep. 118, applied the same principle to shipments for export.

339] *Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The case involves the consideration of §§ 2 and 3 of the interstate commerce act [24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155]. Section 2 provides that if any common carrier shall directly or indirectly charge or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation than it charges or receives from any other person or persons "for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination. . . .

Section 3 is directed against giving preferences or advantages to persons, localities, or descriptions of traffic in any respect whatsoever, and subjecting any person, locality, or traffic "to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever."

The companies contend that the Commission applied these sections to the facts found by the Commission, none of them being disputed, and that therefore the findings of the Commission are conclusions of law. On the other hand, the Commission charges that its findings are those of fact and exclusively within its jurisdiction, and not open to review by the commerce court or any court. Many of its assignments of error are expressions of this view. The other assignments assert in various ways and with many shades of particularity that the commerce court erred in disagreeing with the Commission in regard to the traffics in the different coals, not only in its decision, as indicated in its injunction, in the matters affecting such traffic, but in substituting its judgment for that of the Commission.

The facts are certainly undisputed; or, to put it differently, the circumstances and conditions which determined the order are certainly not in controversy; and while certain general inferences are disputed which 340] may be *called inferences of fact, yet we think "power to make the order, and not the mere expediency of having made it, is the question" presented. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 470, 54 L. ed. 280, 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155. In other words, that the question presented by the petition is that the order of the Commission was not merely administrative, but proceeded from a construction of §§ 2 and 3 as applicable to 56 L. ed.

the conditions which affected the traffic in the different kinds of coal, and that the different charges for transportation constituted violations of those sections. The commerce court, therefore, had jurisdiction of the petition and jurisdiction to enjoin the order of the Commission if the court considered that the order would cause irreparable injury. Section 3 of the act creating the commerce court gives that court the power to "enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in a suit brought in the court against the United States." Whether the court erred in its judgment is now to be inquired into.

In its most abstract form the simple statement of the controversy is whether the companies may charge a different rate for the transportation of fuel coal to a given point than for the transportation of commercial coal to the same point. But when we depart from the abstract, complexities appear and attention is carried beyond the consideration of points equally distant, shippers equally circumstanced, and traffic affected by similar circumstances and conditions. It is asserted that there are disparities between the traffics and qualifying circumstances which the Commission disregarded, and, in error, held that traffic in fuel coal could not be distinguished from the traffic in commercial coal.

The Commission insists upon the simplicity of the problem and contends that there is nothing in the conditions of the traffic which dispenses with the clear legal duty of the companies under the interstate commerce act to *carry for all ship- [341 pers alike. The Commission says: "We have never held that the local rate to the junction point must be paid on shipments that are going beyond that point. What we have said is that the local rate to the junction point shall be the same for all shippers to that point, and that the through charges on shipments going beyond the junction point shall be alike for all shippers to the same destination." Its position, thus expressed, the Commission has supplemented, we are told by the companies, by its Conference Ruling No. 324, published June 19, 1911, as follows: "Division on company coal.—Upon inquiry, held, that it is unlawful for carriers to make special and discriminatory divisions of joint rates upon locomotive fuel as between an originating or participating carrier and a purchasing carrier. In the division of joint rates a railroad must be treated precisely as any other shipper is treated, and the Commission will regard any special division as a device to defeat the published rate. All divisions upon fuel coal must be made in good faith without respect to the fact that one of the carriers is the purchaser of such coal."

The issue of principle between the Commission and the companies is very accurately presented, and we come to consider whether there are differences in the traffic of fuel coal which distinguish it from traffic in commercial coal, and which, as contended by the companies, make the traffic dissimilar in circumstances and conditions, or whether the opposite is true, as decided by the Commission.

The circumstances and conditions which may so far be considered as distinguishing traffics so as to take from different transportation charges the vice of preference have been described by this court. In Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 259, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822, it is said: "It was the purpose of the section [2] to enforce equality between shippers, and it prohibits any rebate or other device by which two shippers, shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances of carriage, are compelled to pay different prices therefor." These words are given more precision by the declaration "that the phrase, 'under substantially similar circumstances and conditions,' as found in § 2, refers to matter of carriage, and does not include competition." And this was repeated in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 161, 166, 42 L. ed. 421, 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45. The facts in both cases give significance to the rulings. In the first case the charges to the shippers were the same, but one was given extra facilities; in the second case the extraneous effect of competition was excluded as an element in the application of the section. There is also example in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392. It was there held that a carrier could not look beyond goods tendered to it for transportation in carload lots "to the ownership of the shipment" as the basis for determining the application of its established rates. Do the circumstances and conditions in this case give a greater power of discrimination and justify the lower charge to railroad-fuel coal? It is admitted that the fact that a railroad is the shipper or consumer is not a circumstance or condition that affects the carriage, nor can the different uses to which the coal may be put; and it would seem necessarily that any other extraneous condition or circumstance could have no greater potency. Once depart from the clear directness of what relates to the carriage only and we may let in considerations which may become a cover for preferences. May a carrier look beyond the service it is called upon to render to the attitude and interest of the shippers before, or their attitude and interest after, transportation? It must be kept in mind that it is not the relation of one railroad to another with which we have any concern, but the relation of a railroad to its patrons, who are entitled to equality of charges. See Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co. — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

*But what are the differences in the traffics which are asserted by the companies? We have already condensed them from the pleadings, but we may use the expression of their ultimate elements by the companies, omitting, for the time being, the physical differences in facilities. They say: "When the railroad-fuel coal is consigned to the junction point, as provided in the present system of tariffs, the circumstances and conditions that differentiate this traffic from the traffic in commercial coal consigned to the same point are:

"1. The fuel coal so shipped is not in competition with the commercial coal consigned to the same point.

"2. It is in competition with other coals coming upon the line of the consuming road at other points, with which the commercial coal is not in competition.

"3. The transportation service is different, in that commercial coal at the junction point has reached the point of use, while railroad-fuel coal reaching the consuming railroad at the junction point is still subject to a transportation service before reaching the point of use,—a transportation under the 'commodities clause,' and not under tariff."

These elements the Commission disregarded, it is contended, and that while it found a similarity in the traffics, it did not consider or discuss the two most important features of difference,—"the two features" which make the traffic unlike; that is, that railroad-fuel coal "does not come into competition with the commercial coal, and is in competition with coals coming on the railroad's line at other points." But such features do not affect the carriage, qualify or alter the essential service, which is to get an article from one place to another. The greater or less inducement to seek the service is not the service. Such competition, therefore, is as extraneous to the transportation as the instances in the cases cited. And equally so is the other "feature" that the fuel coal may be destined for *consumption beyond the junction point. The circumstances do not alter the fact that it and commercial coal go to the same point, and are delivered at the same point. There is, it is true, a difference in the manner of delivery, depending upon the difference in the facilities possessed by the railroads and other consignees.

The Commission, as we have seen, especially disclaimed holding that the rate to the junction point must be paid on shipments going beyond that point, and insisted that it only held that the charges to that point should be the same to all shippers, and rates through that point should also be the same to all shippers. And the Commission said that the testimony established that the service as to the coals was alike when they go beyond the junction point. The Commission, therefore, considered alone the service, disregarding circumstances and conditions which were mere accidents of it, and had relation only to the respective shippers.

But the companies say, in criticism of the reasoning and order of the Commission, they are permitted to do indirectly what they want to do directly; that an easy way of evasion of the prohibiting order is to make a joint rate from the point of origin of the fuel coal to its points of consumption, and thereby be enabled "to charge a lower rate for the fuel coal than for the commercial coal between the same points." And further, in display of the easiness with which this can be accomplished and "how readily the Commission's order lends itself to manipulation of rates," they say that they have only to publish a nominal delivery point beyond the real delivery point, publish a rate to that point which they do not intend to charge, and call their actual rate to the junction point, based on the special circumstances and conditions, a "division." They then ask if "the Commission can so easily juggle a rate for a good purpose, will not ingenious traffic agents and coal operators do the same for their own perverse ends?" If such a situation, ³⁴⁵artfully produced, be used as a device for giving preferences, the Commission might be able to find some means to defeat it. At present we must regard its possibility as relevant as exhibiting a misconception of the Commission's purpose. The Commission has not said what the rate should be, nor has it said, as we have seen, that the local rate to the junction point should be the same as the rate beyond that point. The Commission has ordered equality, and struck down what it deemed to be preferential charges, even though they were made under formal tariffs. If there may be legal or illegal evasion of the order, we may wonder at the controversy. If the difference between the effect of the order and what the companies can do or want to do be, as is contended, a "question of words,"—a "question of the nomenclature to be used in tariffs,"—the order of the Commission may still be valid. Tariffs are but forms of words, and certainly the Commission, in the exercise of its powers to administer the interstate commerce act, can look beyond the forms to what caused them and what they are intended to cause and do cause.

There are other contentions or rather phases of those that we have considered, and which seek to further emphasize the strength of competition as a circumstance or condition differentiating the traffic. For instance, it is urged that the shipment of the fuel coal to a particular railroad "for the use of that railroad" makes special the traffic. And, further, that "a railroad is not a person," but is "rather in the nature of a geographical division and extends through long distances." Pushing the argument or illustrations farther, it is urged that a railroad company may be distinguished from the physical thing, the railroad itself, and may be a locality where a commodity is used, like "a river, a county, or a city," and be entitled to preferential rates to accommodate competitive conditions. The Import Rate Case (Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission) 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66, is invoked as analogous. ³⁴⁶We cannot accept the likeness nor the distinctions which are said to establish it. The railroad company cannot be put out of view as a favored shipper, and we see many differences between such a shipper, receiving coal for use in its locomotives, and a nation, as the destination of goods from other nations, for distribution throughout its expanse, on through rates from points of origin.

The point is made that "the Commission's method of filing fuel-coal rates is illegal under § 6 of the interstate commerce act and under the Elkins act [32 Stat. at L. 847, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1309]," and the later act and § 6 are quoted in illustration. The rather vague argument which is urged to support the point lands in the proposition that the right to violate the law as to preference in rates is justified by the law in its requirement of the filing of schedules of rates. However, counsel say that "it all goes back to the same principle" "dealt with under point 1." We have sufficiently discussed point 1.

The decree of the Commerce Court is reversed and the case remanded, with directions to dismiss the petition.

347]*FREDERICK A. HYDE and Joost H. Schneider, Petitioners,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 347-391.)

Conspiracy — to defraud United States — what constitutes offense — overt act.

1. The union in the unlawful purpose does not alone constitute the crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States, defined by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, which prescribes as necessary to the offense not only the unlawful conspiracy, but that one or more of the parties must do an "act to effect" its object, and provides that when such act is done "all the parties to such conspiracy" become liable.

[For other cases, see Conspiracy, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — venue of crime — conspiracy.

2. The requirement of U. S. Const., 6th Amend., that a criminal prosecution shall be had in the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, is satisfied by laying the venue of the trial of an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, at the place where an overt act was performed, since such section prescribes as necessary to the offense not only the unlawful conspiracy, but that one or more of the parties must do an "act to effect" its object, and provides that when such act is done "all the parties to such conspiracy" become liable.

[For other cases, see Courts, 979-992, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — venue of crime — conspiracy.

3. The doing of the overt act prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, as necessary to the offense of a conspiracy to defraud the United States, defined by that section, renders applicable, where the place of the overt act and of the entry into the unlawful combination were in different Federal judicial districts, the provision of § 731 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585), creating a double jurisdiction where an offense against the United States is begun in one district and completed in another.

[For other cases, see Courts, 979-992, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — continuing offense — conspiracy.

4. A conspiracy to acquire fraudulently school lands from the states of California and Oregon, and to corrupt or use the officers of the General Land Office to make or facilitate their selection, under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 11, chap. 2), in exchange for other public lands, continues, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, so long as any overt acts are done by any of the conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy.

[Limitation of criminal prosecutions, see Limitation of Actions, III. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — continuing offense — conspiracy.

5. Some affirmative action to disavow or defeat the purpose of a continuing conspiracy to defraud the United States, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, must be taken by a conspirator in order to prevent the overt acts of any of his associates from continuing him in the conspiracy, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned. Mere failure further actively to participate is not sufficient.

[Limitation of criminal prosecutions, see Limitation of Actions, III. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — continuing offense — conspiracy.

6. The disclosure by a government employee of the existence of a continuing conspiracy, to which he was a party, to defraud the United States out of its public lands, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, is not sufficient to prevent the subsequent overt acts of any of his associates from continuing him in the conspiracy, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, if, after the first disclosure, he silently acquiesced in the later acts.

[Limitation of criminal prosecutions, see Limitation of Actions, III. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — plea in abatement — delay in filing.

7. Pleas in abatement, alleging irregularity in the making up of the list of jurors from which the grand jury which found the indictment was selected, were filed too late where four years had then elapsed since the finding of the indictment, and nearly two years since the filing of the mandate of a Federal circuit court of appeals, sustaining the action of the trial court in overruling a demurrer to the indictment, and a bill of particulars had been demanded and furnished.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, III. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — prejudicial error — instructions — conspiracy.

8. Defendants on trial for criminal conspiracy are not prejudiced by an instruc-

NOTE.—As to the commencement of the period of limitations against prosecutions for continuing offenses—see note to Ware v. United States, 84 C. C. A. 519.

On the effect of overt act within limitation period, where the conspiracy was originally formed and the first act committed beyond the period of limitation—see note to Ware v. United States, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1053.

On coercion of disagreeing jury—see note to Darling v. New York, P. & B. R. Co. 16 L.R.A. 643.

As to impeachment of verdict by jurors—see notes to Bartlett v. Patton, 5 L.R.A. 523; Murphy v. Murphy, 9 L.R.A. 820; Hauk v. Allen, 11 L.R.A. 706; and Doss v. Tyack, 14 L. ed. U. S. 428.

tion that the jury might convict any one of the defendants alone, where two were in fact convicted, and it is clearly apparent from the other instructions that the court distinguished the purpose and effect of particular testimony, and did not mean to say that there could be a conspiracy by one defendant alone, but that there should be excluded from consideration as to each of the defendants testimony which might possibly have no relation to him.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — direct examination — refreshing recollection.

9. Witnesses for the government in a criminal trial may be asked on direct examination, for the purpose of refreshing their memory, as to conversations with the district attorney, and as to previous written statements made by them to certain government representatives.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, 147-149, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — relevancy — criminal conspiracy.

10. Evidence that certain letters in the possession of the government on the trial of a criminal conspiracy to defraud the United States, which were addressed to one of the defendants under an alias, could only have been obtained by robbing the mails, is not relevant.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XI. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conspiracy — to defraud United States — public lands.

11. Persons conspiring to acquire fraudulently school lands from the states of California and Oregon, and to corrupt or use the officers of the General Land Office to make or facilitate their selection, under the act of June 4, 1897, in exchange for other public land, cannot successfully urge, to escape conviction under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, of conspiring to defraud the United States, that the titles obtained from the states were valid, except as to the particular state which had given the title, and which alone could assail it.

[For other cases, see Conspiracy, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — prejudicial error — instructions — conspiracy.

12. The refusal to instruct the jury, on the trial of a conspiracy to defraud the United States by fraudulently obtaining California and Oregon school lands and exchanging them, under the act of June 4, 1897, for other public lands, that want of personal knowledge of the character of the land applied for, or that it was not adversely occupied, did not make the applications void, is not error, where the question is immaterial, the applications being fraudulent because the applicants did not buy for their own benefit.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — reversible error — instructions — weight of evidence.

13. Comments of the trial court as to the consideration to be given to written evidence are not ground for reversal where they amount only to the declaration of an abstract principle, and not to an attempt to enforce some particular part of the testimony, and to take from the jury their province of considering it all, or weighing the respective parts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5105-5116, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — verdict — coercion.

14. The verdict in a prosecution for a criminal conspiracy cannot be said to have been coerced because, after a long trial during which the jurors were not allowed to separate, and after deliberation for three days and nights without result, they were instructed without objection to consider the possibility of the guilt of some of the defendants, following which suggestion they shortly thereafter brought in a verdict of guilty as to two of the four defendants, and not guilty as to the others, the court saying, when giving such instructions, that the law would not recognize a coerced verdict, and that it was not his intention to prolong their deliberations unduly, and that if, after another effort, they could not conscientiously and freely agree upon a verdict, they would be discharged.

[Verdict in criminal cases, see Trial, 860-870, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

New trial — impeaching verdict — testimony of jurors.

15. The verdict of a jury, convicting two of the four defendants on trial for criminal conspiracy, and acquitting the others, cannot be impeached by the testimony of the jurors tending to show that such verdict was the result of a bargain, or was induced by coercion from the court.

[For other cases, see New Trial, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 447.]

Argued October 23 and 24, 1911. Ordered for reargument before full bench December 18, 1911. Reargued May 3, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Supreme Court of the District of conspiring to defraud the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 35 App. D. C. 451. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners:

The conspiracy alone constitutes the offense which is made criminal by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676. United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. ed. 419, 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Dealy v. United States, 152 U.

S. 539, 546, 38 L. ed. 545, 547, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 161; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464-469, 39 L. ed. 494-496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338.

In construing a clause of the Constitution, consideration should be given to the historical circumstances attending its framing; and adoption, and to the contemporaneous understanding of its terms.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429-558, 39 L. ed. 759-811, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 5, 6, 43 L. ed. 874, 875, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41-95, 44 L. ed. 969-991, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The precautions to preserve the right of trial in the vicinage of the alleged offense, and by a jury of that vicinage, grew out of the efforts of Parliament to take citizens of the Colonies to England for trial for treason.

Constitutional Right to Trial by Jury of the Vicinage, by Henry G. Connor, 57 Am. L. Reg. 197; People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 348, 11 L.R.A. 78, 25 Pac. 481; 2 Elliot's Debates, 400; 3 Elliot's Debates, 431, 528; 4 Elliot's Debates, 203, 209.

The cases relied upon by the government of the United States in this case to authorize a prosecution in the District of Columbia for an offense which was committed in California, if it was committed at all, are based upon an English decision that a prosecution for a treasonable conspiracy lies wherever an overt act is alleged to have been committed by any of the alleged conspirators.

Rex v. Bowes, cited in Rex v. Briscoe, 4 East, 171.

There is no authority even in England for the contention that persons accused of conspiracy may be tried for that offense wherever a prosecutor sees fit to charge that something was one by somebody to carry it into effect.

Reg. v. Best, 1 Salk. 174; 3 Chitty, Crim. Law, 1142; Reg. v. Boulton, 12 Cox, C. C. 87.

Because the provisions of the Constitution under consideration were inserted as a protection against English statutes and English rules of law as to the place of trial of accused persons, it is submitted that English decisions such as Reg. v. Briscoe are not authorities in the construction of these provisions.

United States v. Guiteau, 1 Mackey, 539, 47 Am. Rep. 247.

Neither in England nor in the courts in the United States, state or Federal (except, perhaps, the court of quarter sessions in Philadelphia, in Com. v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 575), has it yet been decided in a case where the question was squarely presented that a prosecution for conspiracy lies in any place where any one of the accused does any single act in pursuance of the unlawful agreement. The only other judicial opinions directly in point, which are not dicta merely, are those of the three dissenting justices in this court in Hyde v. Shine, in 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760, and that of Judge Lacombe in Ireland v. Henkle, 179 Fed. 993.

United States v. Smith, 173 Fed. 227; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Noyes v. State, 41 N. J. L. 418; Com. v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & R. 469, 10 Am. Dec. 475; Com. v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 575; Com. v. Bartilson, 85 Pa. 489; People v. Arnold, 46 Mich. 275, 9 N. W. 406; Bloomer v. State, 48 Md. 521, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 37; People v. Adams, 3 Denio, 206, 45 Am. Dec. 468; State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118; Ex parte Rogers, 10 Tex. App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654; Fire Ins. Cos. v. State, 75 Miss. 34, 22 So. 99; Arnold v. Weil, 157 Fed. 431; Robinson v. United States, 96 C. C. A. 307, 172 Fed. 107; Ireland v. Henkle, 179 Fed. 993; Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 51 L. ed. 689, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Price v. Henkel, 216 U. S. 488, 54 L. ed. 581, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. ed. 482, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Davis v. United States, 43 C. C. A. 448, 104 Fed. 140.

Even if it shall be held that where several have engaged in a conspiracy for their joint benefit, the act of any one of them, or the innocent agent of any one of them, in furtherance of the objects of the unlawful agreement anywhere, carries the conspiracy to that place, it is difficult to see how that principle can apply to a mere employee or to his employer after the employee's limited connection with the matter has been terminated by his discharge from the service of his employer.

United States v. Newton, 52 Fed. 286; Wharton, Crim. Law, 1402; O'Donnell v. People, 110 Ill. App. 285.

Even if the supreme court of the District of Columbia had jurisdiction of a prosecution against Hyde and Schneider for conspiracy to defraud the United States, because of the commission in that District of the overt acts referred to in the indictment, the judgment should be reversed because the crime proved is not the crime charged. If it was intended by the government to prosecute the defendants named in the indictment for a conspiracy that was entered into in California, the indictment should have informed them that that was what they were to meet. They could not legally be held for trial by the misleading charge that what they were to face was a conspiracy entered into in this District. For that reason, if for no other, the court should have granted the instruction directing the jury to acquit all the defendants.

United States v. Burr, Brunner, Col. Cas. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 14,692, Fed. Cas. No. 14,693; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. ed. 588, 593; Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 35 L. ed. 377, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; United States v. Marx, 122 Fed. 964.

Even in civil cases this court has frequently expressed its determination that statutes of limitation shall be strictly enforced.

Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. 351, 360, 7 L. ed. 174, 178; Pillow v. Roberts, 13 How. 472, 477, 14 L. ed. 228, 231; Shepherd v. Thompson, 122 U. S. 231, 234, 236, 30 L. ed. 1156, 1157, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1229; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 617, 39 L. ed. 280, 282, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 60, 46 L. ed. 804, 806, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

It is necessary for the government, in a prosecution for conspiracy, to establish affirmatively that the persons on trial "consciously participated" in carrying out the alleged conspiracy within the period covered by the statute of limitations.

Ware v. United States, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1053, 84 C. C. A. 503, 154 Fed. 577, 12 Ann. Cas. 233; United States v. Eccles, 181 Fed. 906; United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 350, 146 Fed. 888, 85 C. C. A. 251, 154 Fed. 401; Ochs v. People, 25 Ill. App. 379, 124 Ill. 399, 16 N. E. 662.

The plea in abatement was seasonably filed.

1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. 746; Deane v. Echols, 2 App. D. C. 522; Thompson & M. Juries, § 555; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Louisville, H. & St. L. R. Co. v. Schwab, 127 Ky. 87, 105 S. W. 110; Dutell v. State, 4 G. Greene, 125; Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 624; Clare v. State, 30 Md. 164.

The court erred in allowing the district attorney, on direct examination of his own witnesses, to examine them as to previous statements made by them to the representatives of the government, and in permitting counsel for the government, in the final argument to the jury, to use such testimony as to prior statements of the witnesses as evidence tending to show the truth of the statements.

Doe ex dem. Church v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 750; Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 441, 9 L. ed. 475, 487; Walsh v. Rogers, 13 How. 283, 287, 14 L. ed. 147, 148; Maxwell v. 56 L. ed.

Wilkinson (Parsons v. Wilkinson) 113 U. S. 656, 658, 28 L. ed. 1037, 1038, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 119 U. S. 99, 30 L. ed. 299, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 691, 40 L. ed. 1118, 1120, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923; United States v. Cross, 9 Mackey, 377; Richardson v. Golden, 3 Wash. C. C. 109, Fed. Cas. No. 11, 782; Emerson Co. v. Nimocks, 88 Fed. 280; People v. Elco, 131 Mich. 519, 91 N. W. 755, 94 N. W. 1069; Cox v. Eayres, 55 Vt. 33, 45 Am. Rep. 583; O'Neale v. Walton, 1 Rich. L. 234; State v. Jackson, 7 S. C. 283, 24 Am. Rep. 476, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 50.

After the grant was made by the state in these cases, the state did not have even an equitable estate in the land described in the deed. It has no title, legal or equitable, which it could transmit to others. There remained in it only the right to file a bill in equity to set aside the deed. Such a right does not constitute an equitable interest in land, and is not assignable.

Story, Eq. Jur. § 1040; Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 631, 7 N. W. 182; Sanborn v. Doe, 92 Cal. 152, 27 Am. St. Rep. 101, 28 Pac. 105; Whitney v. Kelley, 94 Cal. 151, 15 L.R.A. 813, 28 Am. St. Rep. 106, 29 Pac. 624; Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Younge & C. Exch. 496; French v. Shotwell, 5 Johns. Ch. 565; Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 102 U. S. 154, 26 L. ed. 108; Crocker v. Bellangee, 6 Wis. 667, 70 Am. Dec. 489; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1276.

Deeds such as the court in its instruction told the jury are invalid are absolutely unassailable when the interests of a bona fide purchaser are involved.

Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 314, 31 L. ed. 182, 185, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 41, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 499, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Corpe v. Brooks, 8 Or. 222; Robertson v. State Land Board, 42 Or. 183, 70 Pac. 614; Miller v. Wattier, 44 Or. 347, 75 Pac. 209; Turner v. Donnelly, 70 Cal. 604, 12 Pac. 469; Doll v. Meador, 16 Cal. 295; Harrington v. Goldsmith, 136 Cal. 169, 68 Pac. 594; Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 111, 29 L. ed. 311, 314, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141; United States v. Clark, 200 U. S. 601, 50 L. ed. 613, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; United States v. Conklin, 169 Fed. 183.

The court must keep its hands off when the weight of evidence is involved.

McLanahan v. Universal Ins. Co. 1 Pet. 170, 182, 7 L. ed. 98, 104; Tracy v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 80, 9 L. ed. 354; Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 439, 23 L. ed. 286, 289; Burdell v. Denig, 92 U. S. 716, 23 L. ed. 764; Hicks v. United States, 150 U. S. 442, 37 L. ed. 1137, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 614, 38 L. ed. 841, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Smith v. United States, 161 U. S. 85, 40 L. ed. 626, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483; Brown v. United States, 164 U. S. 221, 41 L. ed. 410, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Martin, 15 App. D. C. 552; State v. Gleim, 17 Mont. 17, 31 L.R.A. 297, 52 Am. St. Rep. 655, 41 Pac. 998, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 46; Bradley v. Gorham, 77 Conn. 211, 66 L.R.A. 934, 58 Atl. 698; Post v. United States, 70 L.R.A. 989, 67 C. C. A. 569, 135 Fed. 1; State v. McCullough, 114 Iowa, 532, 55 L.R.A. 378, 89 Am. St. Rep. 382, 87 N. W. 503; State v. Willing, 129 Iowa, 72, 105 N. W. 355; Nelson v. McLellan, 31 Wash. 208, 60 L.R.A. 793, 96 Am. St. Rep. 902, 71 Pac. 747; Nelson v. Vorce, 55 Ind. 455; Fulwider v. Ingels, 87 Ind. 420; State v. Fisk, 170 Ind. 166, 83 N. E. 995; State v. Musgrave, 43 W. Va. 676, 28 S. E. 813; Ryder v. State, 100 Ga. 533, 38 L.R.A. 721, 62 Am. St. Rep. 334, 28 S. E. 246; Merritt v. State, 107 Ga. 679, 34 S. E. 361; Knapp v. State, 25 Ohio C. C. 571, 4 Ohio C. C. N. S. 184; State v. Tuttle, 67 Ohio St. 440, 93 Am. St. Rep. 689, 66 N. E. 524.

The court erred in refusing to permit the examination of jurors for the purpose of showing that their verdict was the result of a bargain brought about by what, under the circumstances, amounted to coercion by the court.

Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 36 L. ed. 917, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; United States v. Reid, 12 How. 366, 13 L. ed. 1025; Bucklin v. United States, 159 U. S. 682, 40 L. ed. 305, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Brown v. State, 127 Wis. 193, 106 N. W. 536, 7 Ann. Cas. 258; Thomas v. Chapman, 45 Barb. 98; Sargeant v. —, 5 Cow. 106; State v. Bybee, 17 Kan. 462, 2 Am. Crim. Rep. 449; People v. Sheldon, 156 N. Y. 285, 41 L.R.A. 644, 66 Am. St. Rep. 564, 50 N. E. 840, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 545; State v. Chambers, 9 Idaho, 673, 75 Pac. 274; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 307, 49 L. ed. 483, 490, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Simmons v. Fish, — Mass. —, 97 N. E. 102.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The offense is made up of the corrupt agreement and the overt act to further it, and it is not complete without the overt act.

United States v. Donau, 11 Blatchf. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 14,983; United States v. Boyden, 1 Low. Dec. 266, Fed. Cas. No. 14,632; United States v. Nunnemacher, 7 Biss. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 15,902; United States v. Sacia, 2 Fed. 757; United States v. Bayer, 4 Dill. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 14,—547; United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 34, 25 L. ed. 539, 540; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 27 L. ed. 698, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; United States v. Demmee, 3 Woods, 50, Fed. Cas. No. 14,948; United States v. Bradford, 148 Fed. 413; O'Connell v. Reg. 1 Cox, C. C. 472, 11 Clark & F. 155, 9 Jur. 25; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. ed. 494, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 328; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

Even in common-law cases, and under statutes requiring no overt act, jurisdiction of the conspiracy exists in any locality, as to all the conspirators, in which an overt act has been committed by any of them, for even at the common law, while the unlawful agreement satisfies the definition of the crime, it does not exhaust it.

Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; 1 Russell, Crimes, 7th Eng. & 1st Can. ed. 1910, p. 179; Rex v. Brisac, 4 East, 164, 7 Revised Rep. 551; Reg. v. Quinn, 19 Cox, C. C. 78; Reg. v. Connolly, 25 Ont. Rep. 151; Archbold, Crim. Pl. 1910, p. 1420; 1 Gabbett, Crim. Law. 257; Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. 1397; Bishop, Crim. Proc. 4th ed. § 61; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 844; 8 Cyc. 687; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; People v. Summerfield, 48 Misc. 242, 96 N. Y. Supp. 502; Com. v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & R. 469, 10 Am. Dec. 475; Com. v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 575; Com. v. Bartilson, 85 Pa. 489; Noyes v. State, 41 N. J. L. 418; State v. Nugent, 77 N. J. L. 86, 71 Atl. 485; Bloomer v. State, 48 Md. 535, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 37; People v. Arnold, 46 Mich. 275, 9 N. W. 406; Fire Insurance Cos. v. State, 75 Miss. 24, 22 So. 99; State v. Hamilton, 13 Nev. 393; International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 Ky. 668, 126 S. W. 352; Pearce v. Territory, 11 Okla. 446, 68 Pac. 504; Ex parte Rogers, 10 Tex. App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654; Raleigh v. Cook, 60 Tex. 441; United States v. Newton, 52 Fed. 275; United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 343; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Ex parte Hoffstot, 180 Fed. 241; United States v. Bradford, 148 Fed. 413; United States v. Brace, 149 Fed. 874; United States v. Barber, 157 Fed. 889; Ware v. United States, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1053, 84 C. C. A. 503, 154 Fed. 577, 12 Ann. Cas. 233; Jones v. United States, 89 C. C. A. 303, 162 Fed. 417; Lorenz v. United States, 24 App. D. C. 337.

The rule as to venue declared by the adjudicated cases, and by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 731, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585, does not contravene the Constitution of the United States.

Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Haas v. Henkel, 216 U. S. 462, 473, 54 L. ed. 569, 575, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

Personal presence is not essential to determine the locality of an offense.

People v. Adams, 3 Denio, 190, 45 Am. Dec. 468; Com. v. Harvey (Mass.) 8 Am. Jur. 69; State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118; Ex parte Rogers, 10 Tex. App. 667, 38 Am. Rep. 654; McKee v. State, 111 Ind. 378, 12 N. E. 510; Re Palliser, 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. ed. 126, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 919, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 1057, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; 6 Ann. Cas. 362; Strassheim v. Daily, 221 U. S. 280, 55 L. ed. 735, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

The witnesses were properly permitted to refresh their memory.

Putnam v. United States, 162 U. S. 687, 694, 40 L. ed. 1118, 1121, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923.

And the mode of examination which may be pursued in any particular case is within the sound discretion of the trial court.

St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 150, 38 L. ed. 936, 942, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002.

The allegations of the motion for new trial really do no more than disparage the discussions of the jury room in respect of the accuracy and propriety of verbal expression. Few verdicts could stand against such criticism. And the law has shielded them against it.

Perry v. Bailey, 12 Kan. 545; Woodward v. Leavitt, 107 Mass. 453, 9 Am. Rep. 49; Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 148, 149, 36 L. ed. 917, 920, 921, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Wright v. Illinois & M. Teleg. Co. 20 Iowa, 210; Gottlieb Bros. v. Jasper, 27 Kan. 775.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ brings up for review a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming a conviction of petitioners for the crime of conspiracy.

The main question in the case is the jurisdiction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, where the trial and conviction were had, depending upon the place where the conspiracy, if any, was formed and the overt acts, if any, were done to effect its purpose. What the indictment charges is a fundamental element in the question.

Before proceeding to consider the indictment it may be well to state the laws and conditions to which the conspiracy charged in the indictment relates. By acts of Congress dated, respectively, March 3, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 246, chap. 145), and February 14, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 33), the states of California and Oregon were granted, for the purpose of public schools, all of sections 16 and 32 in each township, with certain exceptions unimportant to mention. The states authorized the sale of the land so granted for $1.25 per acre, California limiting the right of purchase *by one person (of land not[350 suitable for cultivation) to 640 acres. The limitation in Oregon was 320 acres. The states required applicants to be citizens of the United States and of the states, that the purchases be for their own benefit, and a statement from each applicant that he had made no contract for the sale or disposition of the lands applied for.

Subsequent to these grants and prior to the year 1897 most of the lands had been taken up by settlers. Those not taken up were in the mountainous regions and were regarded as valueless.

By an act of Congress approved March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1103, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1537), the President was authorized to create forest reservations, and by a subsequent act (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), it was provided "that in cases in which a tract covered by an unperfected bona fide claim or by a patent is included within the limits of a public forest reservation, the settler or owner thereof may, if he desires to do so, relinquish the tract to the government, and may select in lieu thereof a tract of vacant land open to settlement, not exceeding in area the tract covered by his claim or patent."

The charge of the indictment is that the defendants in the case conspired to use the privilege of this act after fraudulently acquiring school sections from California and Oregon, and conspired to corrupt or use the officers of the General Land Office in Washington to make or facilitate the selection in exchange for such sections lands of the United States, and thereby defraud the United States.

Its allegations, omitting repetitions and redundancies, are as follows:

Frederick A. Hyde and John A. Benson were engaged from the 24th of October, 1901, until the 1st of February, 1904, in the city of San Francisco, state of California, in the business of obtaining from the United States and appropriating, in the manner hereinafter set forth, the possession and use of and title to public 351]lands of the United States outside forest reserves established under the laws of the United States, in exchange for and in lieu of lands lying within such reserves and known as school lands, by them obtained from the states of California and Oregon in the manner hereinafter set forth. Henry P. Dimond and Joost H. Schneider were, during said periods, employees of Hyde and Benson in the matter of their business, Dimond as agent and attorney and Schneider as agent. Woodford D. Harlan and William E. Valk were, before and during such period, employees of the United States, holding official positions in the General Land Office at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, paid salaries as such, and, respectively, charged with duties pertaining to the disposal of the public lands lying outside of forest reserves established under the laws of the United States and open to selection under said laws, in exchange for and in lieu of lands within such reserves.

Benjamin F. Allen was, before and during such period, an employee of the United States, that is, a forest superintendent, and Grant I. Taggart a forest supervisor.

Hyde, Benson, Dimond, and Schneider during such period, to wit, on the 30th day of December, 1901, at Washington, District of Columbia, unlawfully did conspire, combine, and confederate together, and with other persons unknown, to defraud the United States out of the possession and use of and title to divers tracts of the public lands of the United States open and to be opened to selection in lieu of lands within forest reserves established and to be established in California and Oregon, by means of false and fraudulent practices whereby Hyde and Benson were to obtain fraudulently from those states title to and possession of school lands within the limits of such reserves which were open to purchase from those states by residents thereof, being citizens of the United States or having declared their intention to become such, under the laws thereof, in quantities for 352]each resident not exceeding 640 acres in California and 320 acres in Oregon, upon appropriate application, supported by affidavit showing his qualifications to make such purchase, and, amongst other things (as before and during the said period was required by the laws of the said states), his intention to purchase in good faith and for his own benefit, and that he had made no contract or agreement to sell the same.

These applications were to be made in the names of fictitious persons and in the names of persons not really desiring or qualified to purchase said lands. The use of the last-mentioned names for such purpose Hyde and Benson were to procure by paying or causing to be paid to such persons small sums of money, and by falsely representing or causing to be represented to some of them that they were merely disposing of their rights to purchase such school lands.

The proposed use of fictitious affidavits is set out at considerable length, with the names that were used, the purpose being charged to obtain the lands according to the conspiracy detailed, obtain title from the United States with the intention of disposing of the same to the general public, and to defraud the United States "to the profit, gain, and use of themselves."

Hyde and Benson were, during said period, to induce and procure, and take advantage of the fact that they had induced and procured, the said Woodford D. Harlan and William E. Valk, by paying them respectively divers sums of money for that purpose, corruptly to furnish information concerning the status in the General Land Office of all matters pertaining to their said business, and especially to their false and fraudulent selections, and to expedite, contrary to their duty, the matters which should be pending in the Land Office pertaining to their business and the examination of such selections made and to be made by Hyde and Benson, and by securing the approval thereof in advance and otherwise favoring and assisting Hyde and Benson in their fraudulent practices. This *charge is dwelt upon at some length, [353 and it is charged, besides, that Allen, the forest superintendent, and Taggart, the forest supervisor, had been and were to be corrupted, whereby they were to give such advice and information as to including or not including lands within a forest reserve as should be to the interest of Hyde and Benson.

Hyde, Benson, Dimond, and Schneider, as a part of their conspiracy, were to secure by the means detailed and other means too numerous and diverse to be described, the establishment of forest reserves in California and Oregon in such localities in those states as would best effect the object of the conspiracy, by reason of the fact that large quantities of school lands in such localities were still undisposed of and open to purchase from said states, respectively.

Dimond, for money and other valuable considerations paid by Hyde and Benson, was, as attorney, to aid and assist Hyde and Benson in their business by appearing in their behalf before the appropriate officers of the Department of the Interior and of the General Land Office, from time to time, to urge speedy action by those officers upon the matters there pending pertaining to their said business, and to further said business in the manner herein-after shown, he, Dimond, knowing full well the fraudulent character of the business.

Schneider, in the capacity of employee of Hyde and Benson, was to aid and assist them by obtaining in the states of California and Oregon the fictitious affidavits and the affidavits of those persons who would permit the use of their names as stated, he knowing, while so assisting, the fraudulent character of the applications and the purpose for which they and the affidavits were to be used.

The indictment contains the description of the lands which it was the object of the conspiracy to secure, amounting to 6,800 acres, of which 3,400 acres were selected 354] in *the name of C. W. Clarke; all of the lands being in forest reserves then lately before established under the laws of the United States.

On December 30, 1901, Dimond entered his appearance in the General Land Office as attorney for Clarke.

The other counts in the indictment, numbering 41, are substantially alike in their general allegations, differing as to their incidents. They charge, as in the first count, a conspiracy formed in Washington by the same parties and for the same purpose, and to be executed in the same way in regard to lands in the various districts of the respective states, and that, in pursuance of the conspiracy, certain overt acts were done. Most of the overt acts charged consisted in the filing in the General Land Office by Dimond, as attorney for Hyde, his appearance in different selection cases, in some of which he urges and sets forth the reasons for favoring a speedy action.

In counts 35 to 40, both inclusive, the overt act charged is the payment of money by Benson to either Valk or Harlan, alleged in the indictment to be salaried officials of the General Land Office and charged with duties pertaining to the exchange of lands of private claim or ownership included in a forest reserve or other public land.

Two overt acts are charged against Hyde, one of which was committed on July 29, 1903, by causing to be transmitted by mail from the United States land office at Vancouver to the Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington a written notification to the Commissioner, signed by Hyde for C. W. Clarke, that the latter up-pealed to the Secretary of the Interior from a certain decision of the Commissioner, with an assignment of errors, and the second of which was that Hyde, on March 31, 1902, caused to be presented by the hand of Dimond a paper signed by him, Hyde, notifying the Commissioner that one S. E. Kieffer was authorized and appointed as Hyde's *agent to post notices on[355 the ground described in a certain application, and to make affidavit of posting.

Shortly after the indictment was found, removal proceedings were instituted against Hyde and Dimond before a United States commissioner in California, who, after taking testimony, ordered their removal. The United States circuit court denied writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, and its action was affirmed by this court. Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760.

There was a demurrer to the indictment, which was overruled, the ruling upon which was affirmed by the court of appeals of the district. 27 App. D. C. 362.

Motions to require the government to elect on which counts it would proceed were filed and also motions for a bill of particulars. The latter was granted and the bill of particulars filed; the former was overruled.

Pleas in abatement were filed, to which demurrers were sustained, and finally the defendants were arraigned and pleas of not guilty made and the case proceeded to trial. Benson and Dimond were acquitted. Hyde and Schneider were convicted on all counts except 29 and 33, which were abandoned by the government. Hyde was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $10,000, and Schneider was sentenced to imprisonment for one year and two months and to pay a fine of $2,000.

Their conviction and sentence were affirmed by the court of appeals. 35 App. D. C. 451.

The case is here on certiorari.

The Attorney General assented to the granting of the writ, he saying that "the determination of this case depends upon the principles of law governing conspiracy," and that in view of the decisions of the lower courts and of the numerous prosecutions under the conspiracy statute, "it was of vital importance to the United States, as *well as to its citizens, that these[356 principles be definitely settled by this court."

The petitioners asked the court to review the case for the purpose of having it decide certain questions of law which they characterized as "important and fundamental," one of which, counsel says, granting the writ took out of the case. Of those remaining, one is "as to the effect of an overt act in giving jurisdiction in an indictment for conspiracy under § 5440 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676);" and the other is "as to the effect of overt acts by some of the accused in depriving the petitioners of the benefit of the statute of limitations."

There are other questions arising from the conduct of the trial and upon which separate briefs are filed. We postpone their consideration until after the more important questions, which induced the certiorari, are discussed.

First, as to the overt acts in giving jurisdiction:

It will be observed that the indictment charges that the conspiracy was formed in the District of Columbia, and that certain of the overt acts were performed there and others in California. A question arose at the termination of the trial and before the case was submitted to the jury as to whether the charge of the indictment was sustained. Defendants moved to take the case from the jury because there was no evidence to support the allegation that the defendants conspired within the District of Columbia. The court denied the motion, but said, in passing on it, that it was "not claimed on the part of the government that the defendants had conspired within this District in any other sense than that overt acts were committed by them here." The contention was, the court said further, "that if any overt act was committed here, the defendants thereby conspired here." So understanding the contentions and the proof, the court expressed its views as follows: "If these defendants got together in California and planned to defraud the United States out of its lands by the means 357] charged in the indictment, and *in pursuance of that plan sent Dimond here to get the titles from the government, they were acting within the District of Columbia as much as if they had come and done the thing themselves." And subsequently the United States attorney assented to the proposition that the government could not prevail except on the theory that it was sufficient to show an overt act in the District of Columbia, and the court said "that if that theory was wrong, of course they failed."

The question, therefore, is presented as to the venue in conspiracy cases, whether it must be at the place where the conspiracy is entered into, or whether it may be at the place where the overt act is performed, the 6th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States requiring all criminal prosecutions to be in the "district wherein the crime shall have been committed."

The crime of conspiracy is defined by § 5440 of the Revised Statutes as follows:

"If two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States or to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all the parties to such conspiracy shall be liable to a penalty of not more than ten thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not more than two years, or to both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

It is contended by the defendants that the conspiracy—the union in an unlawful purpose—constitutes the crime, and that the requirement of an overt act does not give the offense criminal quality or intent, but that the provision of the statute in regard to such act merely affords an opportunity to withdraw from the design without incurring its criminality (called in the cases a locus penitentie). The following, among other cases, are cited in support of this view: United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. ed. 419, 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Dealy v. United States*, 152 U. S. 539, 546, 38 L. ed. 545, 547, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 161; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464-469, 39 L. ed. 494-496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338, and the opinion of this court when this case was here before, 199 U. S. 62-76, 50 L. ed. 90-94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760.

It must be conceded at the outset that there is language in those cases that, considered by itself, justifies the contention based upon them. In United States v. Britton, for instance,—and the language of the case is resorted to for the genesis of the doctrine and makes strongest for the contention,—Mr. Justice Woods, speaking for the court said:

"The offense charged in the counts of this indictment is a conspiracy. This offense does not consist of both the conspiracy and the acts done to effect the object of the conspiracy, but of the conspiracy alone. The provision of the statute, that there must be an act done to effect the object of the conspiracy, merely affords a locus penitentie, so that before the act [is] done, either one or all of the parties may abandon their design, and thus avoid the penalty prescribed by the statute. It follows, as a rule of criminal pleading, that in an indictment for conspiracy under § 5440, the conspiracy must be sufficiently charged, and that it cannot be aided by the averments of acts done by one or more of the conspirators in furtherance of the object of the conspiracy. Reg. v. King, 7 Q. B. 782; Com. v. Shedd, 7 Cush. 514."

The case was followed in Pettibone v. United States to the effect "that the conspiracy must be sufficiently charged, and cannot be aided by averments of acts done by any one or more of the conspirators in furthering the object of the conspiracy."

In Dealy v. United States it is said that "the gist of the offense is the conspiracy. . . . Hence, if the conspiracy was entered into within the limits of the United States and the jurisdiction of the court, the crime was then complete, and the subsequent overt acts in pursuance thereof may have been done anywhere."

359] *Indeed, it must be said that the cases abound with statements that the conspiracy is the "gist" of the offense or the "gravamen" of it, and we realize the strength of the argument based upon them. But we think the argument insists too exactly on the ancient law of conspiracy, and does not give effect to the change made in it by § 5440, supra. It is true that the conspiracy—the unlawful combination—has been said to be the crime, and that at common law it was not necessary to aver or prove an overt act; but § 5440 has gone beyond such rigid abstraction and prescribes, as necessary to the offense, not only the unlawful conspiracy, but that one or more of the parties must do an "act to effect" its object, and provides that when such act is done "all the parties to such conspiracy" become liable. Interpreting the provision, it was decided in Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 72, 76, 50 L. ed. 90, 94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760, that an overt act is necessary to complete the offense. And so it was said in United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 34, 25 L. ed. 540, recognizing that while the combination of minds in an unlawful purpose was the foundation of the offense, an overt act was necessary to complete it. It seems like a contradiction to say that a thing is necessary to complete, another thing, and yet that other thing is complete without it. It seems like a paradox to say that anything, to quote the Solicitor General, "can be a crime of which no court can take cognizance." The conspiracy, therefore, cannot alone constitute the offense. It needs the addition of the overt act. Such act is something more, therefore, than evidence of a conspiracy. It constitutes the execution or part execution of the conspiracy, and all incur guilt by it, or rather complete their guilt by it, consummating a crime by it cognizable then by the judicial tribunals, such tribunals only then acquiring jurisdiction.
56 L. ed.

A question may be raised as to the extent of the agency between conspirators, but we need not enter into that broad inquiry. As far as the case at bar is concerned, it *may be admitted that the[360 act must have the conspiracy in view and have some power to effect it. In the present case the field of operation and its consummation were to be and were in the states of California and Oregon and in the District of Columbia, where the General Land Office is situated. The action of the latter was to be induced or influenced; and this might be through deception, it might be through fraud, or it might be through innocent agents and acts of themselves having no illegality, but effectually causing and moving official action to the consummation of the end designed and contemplated. Overt acts of all these kinds are charged. The bribery and deception of the officers, the intervention of attorneys, and the seemingly harmless mailing of information and directions all are charged and all had some relation to the scheme devised and were steps to its accomplishment. The powers of the Land Office were necessarily to be invoked and proceedings therein instituted and prosecuted by acts innocent, indeed, of themselves, taking only criminal taint from the purpose for which they were done. Indeed, is not this so of acts done in the execution of any crime? Discharging a loaded pistol at a target is an innocent pastime; discharging a loaded pistol at a human being, with felonious intent, takes a quality from such intent and may constitute murder.

If the unlawful combination and the overt act constitute the offense, as stated in Hyde v. Shine, marking its beginning and its execution or a step to its execution, § 731 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585) must be applied. That section provides that "when any offense against the United States is begun in one judicial circuit and completed in another, it shall be deemed to have been committed in either, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in either district, in the same manner as if it had been actually and wholly committed therein." This provision takes an emphasis of signification from the fact *that it was[361 originally a part of the same section of the statute which defined conspiracy,—that is, § 30 of the act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 484, chap. 169, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585). Nor has the provision lost the strength of meaning derived from such association by its subsequent separation, for it is provided in § 5600 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3751) that "the arrangement and classification of the several sections of the revision have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference or presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the title under which any particular section is placed."

Section 731 was applied in Re Palliser, 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034, to the offense of unlawfully using the mails. It was decided that an offense committed by mailing a letter was continued in the place where the letter was received, and triable in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction in such place. The case was cited in Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 15, 49 L. ed. 919, 924, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, which was concerned with extradition proceedings against one charged with the crime of bribery, alleged to have been committed by mailing a letter in the state of California, directed to certain officers of the General Land Office in the District of Columbia. It was objected to the removal of the defendant to the District of Columbia for trial that the crime was committed, if at all, in California. The contention was held untenable under the ruling in Re Palliser. The strong expression of counsel for the defendants may therefore be turned from derision of to the support of the view that crime, even conspiracy, may be carried from one place to another in the "mail pouches." And we may ask, in passing, may not a conspiracy be formed through the mails, constituted by letters sent by persons living in different states? And, if so formed, we may further ask, to which state would the conspiracy be assigned? In such cases must the law come forward with some presumption or fiction, if you please, to give locality to a union of minds between men who were never at the same place at the same time? The statute cuts through such puzzles and makes the act of a conspirator, which necessarily has a definite place without the aid of presumption or fiction, the legal inception of guilt, inculcating all and subjecting all to punishment.

Re Palliser was also applied in Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 1057, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688, 6 Ann. Cas. 362, in which it was held that there was jurisdiction in Missouri of a criminal charge against Burton for agreeing in that state to receive prohibited compensation for certain services to be rendered by him while he was a United States Senator, the offer being carried to Missouri by an agent and accepted there, Burton not being personally present in the state. The court said, through Mr. Justice Harlan (page 387): "The constitutional requirement is that the crime shall be tried in the state and district where committed, not necessarily in the state or district where the party committing it happened to be at the time. This distinction was brought out and recognized in Re Palliser, 136 U. S. 257, 265, 34 L. ed. 514, 517, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034." And after stating that the agreement between the parties was completed at the time of the acceptance of Burton's offer at St. Louis, he added: "Then the offense was committed, and it was committed at St. Louis, notwithstanding the defendant was not personally present in Missouri when his offer was accepted and the agreement was completed." And the contention was rejected "that an individual could not, either in law or within the meaning of the Constitution, commit a crime within a state in which he is not physically present at the time the crime is committed."

1124

This court has recognized, therefore, that there may be a constructive presence in a state, distinct from a personal presence, by which a crime may be consummated. And if it may be consummated, it may be punished by an exercise of jurisdiction; that is, a person committing it may be brought to trial and condemnation. And this must be so if we would fit the laws and their administration to the acts of men, and not be led away by mere "bookish theorick." We have held that a conspiracy is not necessarily the conception and purpose of the moment, but may be continuing. If so in time, it may be in place,—carrying to the whole area of its operations the guilt of its conception and that which follows guilt,—trial and punishment. As we have pointed out, the statute states what in addition to the agreement is necessary to complete the measure of the offense. The guilty purpose must be put into a guilty act.

We realize the strength of the apprehension that to extend the jurisdiction of conspiracy by overt acts may give to the government a power which may be abused, and we do not wish to put out of view such possibility. But there are counter considerations. It is not an oppression in the law to accept the place where an unlawful purpose is attempted to be executed as the place of its punishment, and rather conspirators be taken from their homes than the victims and witnesses of the conspiracy be taken from theirs. We must not, in too great a solicitude for the criminal, give him a kind of immunity from punishment because of the difficulty in convicting him—indeed, of even detecting him. And this may result, if the rule contended for be adopted. Let him meet with his fellows in secret, and he will try to do so; let the place be concealed, as it can be, and he and they may execute their crime in every state in the Union and defeat punishment in all. And the suppositions are not fanciful, as illustrated by a case submitted coincidentally with this. Brown v. Elliott, 225 U. S. 392, post, 1136, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 812. The possibility of such a result repels the contention and demonstrates that to yield to it would carry technical rules and rigidity of reasoning too far for the practical administration of criminal justice. We see no reason why a constructive pres- 364]ence should not be assigned *to conspirators as well as to other criminals; and we certainly cannot assent to the proposition that it is not competent for Congress to define what shall constitute the offense of conspiracy or when it shall be considered complete, and do with it as with other crimes which are commenced in one place and continued in another. Nor do we think that the size of our country has become too great for the effective administration of criminal justice. We held in Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428, that the transportation of merchandise for less than the published rate is, under the Elkins act (32 Stat. at L. 847, chap. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1309), a continuing offense, and that the 6th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, providing that an accused shall be tried in the state and district where the crime is committed, did not preclude a trial of the offense in any of the districts through which the transportation was conducted. See also Haas v. Henkel, 216 U. S. 462, 473, 54 L. ed. 569, 574, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112.

Cases are cited which oppose the views we have expressed and others to support them. In Robinson v. United States, in the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit, the question was directly presented. 96 C. C. A. 307, 172 Fed. 105. The conspiracy passed on was alleged in the indictment to have been entered into in Cincinnati and Chicago, the overt acts set out were proved to have been committed in Minneapolis, and the evidence showed that it was the intention of the conspirators to carry out their conspiracy at Minneapolis. The trial court was moved to direct a verdict for the defendants if the jury found that the agreement was entered into in Cincinnati and Chicago, and was complete when the parties went into the district of Minnesota. The instruction was refused, and, the defendants having been convicted, the refusal was assigned as error, in the circuit court of appeals, based 56 L. ed.

on the provisions of the Constitution of the United States giving those accused of crime the right to trial by jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed.

*The court, passing on the ruling of [365 the trial court, said by District Judge Carland, and we quote its language to avail ourselves not only of the citation of cases, but of the comments upon them:

"At common law the venue in conspiracy could be laid in any county in which it could be proven that an overt act was done by any one of the conspirators in furtherance of their common design. 1 Archbold, Crim. Pr. & Pl. 8th ed. p. 226. Where a conspiracy was formed at sea, and an overt act done in Middlesex county, it was held that the venue was properly laid in that county. Rex v. Brisac, 4 East, 164. In the case of Rex v. Bowes, referred to in the above case, the conspirators were tried in Middlesex, though there was no proof of an actual conspiracy in that county, and the acts and doings of some of them were wholly in other counties. In People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 261, 21 Am. Dec. 122, Marcy, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"I admit that is the illegal agreement that constitutes the crime. When that is concluded the crime is perfect, and the conspirators may be convicted if the crime can be proved. No overt act need be shown or ever performed to authorize a conviction. If conspirators enter into the illegal agreement in one county, the crime is perpetrated there, and they may be immediately prosecuted; but the proceedings against them must be in that county. If they go into another county to execute their plans of mischief, and there commit an overt act, they may be punished in the latter county without any evidence of an express renewal of their agreement. The law considers that wherever they act, there they renew, or perhaps, to speak more properly, they continue, their agreement, and this agreement is renewed or continued as to all whenever any one of them does an act in furtherance of their common design. In this respect, conspiracy resembles *treason [366 in England, when directed against the life of the King. The crime consists in imagining the death of the King. In contemplation of law, the crime is committed wherever the traitor is and furnishes proof of his wicked intention by the exhibition of any overt act.'

"To the same effect are Com. v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & R. 469, 10 Am. Dec. 475; Noyes v. State, 41 N. J. L. 418; Com. v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 575.

"If this was the law of venue in conspiracies at common law, where proof of an overt act was not necessary to show a completed offense, the same rule can be urged with much greater force under § 5440, U. S. Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), as the offense described therein for all practical purposes is not complete until an overt act is committed. . . . It seems clear, then, that whether we place reliance on the common law or on § 731, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585), the venue of the offense was correctly laid in the district of Minnesota, and the evidence sustained the allegation of the indictment."

To the cases cited by the learned court these may be added: State v. Nugent, 77 N. J. L. 84, 86, 71 Atl. 485; Bloomer v. State, 48 Md. 521, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 37; People v. Arnold, 46 Mich. 275, 9 N. W. 406; Fire Ins. Cos. v. State, 75 Miss. 24, 22 So. 99; State v. Hamilton, 13 Nev. 386; International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 Ky. 668, 674, 126 S. W. 352; Pearce v. Territory, 11 Okla. 438, 68 Pac. 504; Ex parte Rogers, 10 Tex. App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654, and Raleigh v. Cook, 60 Tex. 438.

There are cases in the lower Federal courts which may be cited for and against the demarcation of the conspiracy and the overt act. To compare and comment on them would extend this opinion to too great length. We may say the same of the special citation of cases by defendants.

But it is said that the crime charged is not the crime proved, even if it be assumed that the overt act is part of the crime of conspiracy under § 5440 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 367]1901, p. 3676). In support of *the contention it is said that the averment of the indictment is that the conspiracy itself was entered into in the District of Columbia and that the overt acts were committed there. It is conceded by the government that the conspiracy was originally formed, not in the District of Columbia, but in the state of California, and we have seen that it was the view of the trial court that the defendants had not conspired within the District of Columbia "in any other sense than that overt acts were committed by them" there.

The contention is answered by the views which we have already expressed. As the overt acts give jurisdiction for trial, it is not essential where the conspiracy is formed, so far as the jurisdiction of the court in which the indictment is found and tried is concerned. This is established by the cases which have been cited, and the question will be considered further in Brown v. Elliott and Moore v. Elliott, cases submitted coincidently with this [225 U. S. 392, post, 1136, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 812].

The fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth assignments of error invoke the statute of limitations in behalf of Hyde and Schneider,

The plea of the statute as affected by overt acts was considered in United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124, where it was declared that a conspiracy may be a continuing one, and the doctrine is applicable to the case at bar unless there is something special in the facts regarding Hyde and Schneider which constitutes a defense as to them. This is asserted. It is contended that the relation of Schneider to the conspiracy was only that of one rendering service as a servant of his master (Hyde), in consideration of the salary paid to him by his master, and that he had not, within three years before the finding of the indictment, participated in any way in the carrying out of the master's scheme, the subject of the conspiracy. And from this it is contended the question arises whether Hyde is not also entitled to the protection of the statute of limitation *in so far as he is charged[368 with conspiring with his employee, Schneider.

But the fact that a salary was paid by one to another would not preclude a conspiracy between them. It might, indeed, mark a more humble criminal desire, and one which preferred a certain reward rather than take chances in the success of a criminal enterprise, and it was certainly not inconsistent with a full and active participation in the scheme. Indeed, Schneider, in a confession which we shall presently refer to, stated that a salary and the certainty of employment was his inducement.

The government contends that there was such participation originally and to a time within the statute, and that there is nothing to show a repudiation of or withdrawal from the conspiracy by him before 1902, when he made a partial disclosure of the conspiracy to the government. But upon this the government frankly says it cannot rely for an affirmance of the judgment, in view of the charge of the court to the jury.

The court charged the jury in substance that if Schneider had engaged in the conspiracy "back of the three-year period," and the conspiracy contemplated that acts should be done from time to time through a series of years until the purpose of the conspiracy should be accomplished, although he, Schneider, did not do anything within the three-year period, but "remained acquiescent, expecting and understanding" that further acts should be performed, they, if performed, would be his acts, "and would have the same effect against him as if he had done them himself. He would still be acting through his colleagues. He might be playing his part by keeping still as much as he did formerly by acting."

The contention of the defendants is that the statute begins to run from the last overt act within three years from the formation of the conspiracy within which there was conscious participation. (Italics 369]ours.) The government *makes the counter contention that, however true this may be as to accomplished conspiracies, it is not true of one having continuity of purpose and which contemplated the performance of acts through a series of years. And that such a distinction can exist, we have seen, is decided and illustrated in United States v. Kissel. And necessarily so. Men may have lawful and unlawful purposes, temporary or enduring. The distinction is vital and has different consequences and incidents. The conspiracy accomplished or having a distinct period of accomplishment is different from one that is to be continuous. If it may continue, it would seem necessarily to follow the relation of the conspirators to it must continue, being to it during its life as it was to it the moment it was brought into life. If each conspirator was the agent of the others at the latter time, he remains an agent during all of the former time. This view does not, as it is contended, take the defense of the statute of limitations from conspiracies. It allows it to all, but makes its application different. Nor does it take from a conspirator the power to withdraw from the execution of the offense or to avert a continuing criminality. It requires affirmative action, but certainly that is no hardship. Having joined in an unlawful scheme, having constituted agents for its performance, scheme and agency to be continuous until full fruition be secured, until he does some act to disavow or defeat the purpose he is in no situation to claim the delay of the law. As the offense has not been terminated or accomplished, he is still offending. And we think, consciously offending,—offending as certainly, as we have said, as at the first moment of his confederation, and continuously through every moment of its existence. The successive overt acts are but steps toward its accomplishment, not necessarily its accomplishment. This is the reasoning of the Kissel Case, stated in another way. As he has started evil forces, 370]he must withdraw his support *from them or incur the guilt of their continuance. Until he does withdraw there is conscious offending, and the principle of the cases cited by defendants is satisfied.†

But it is contended that under the instructions of the court, Schneider was involved in criminality by overt acts done not only after he had ceased to be in Hyde's employment in any capacity, but after he had disclosed that there was a conspiracy against the government. It was testified by Woodford D. Harlan that disclosure of frauds had come through one J. A. Zabriskie, he, however, knowing nothing about the matters except as informed by Schneider. The matter was referred to an agent, who reported conversations with Schneider, giving detailed information of the frauds and the manner by which they were accomplished. This report was received at the General Land Office in November, 1902. It does not appear what became of the report. The recollection of the witness was that he saw the report first, and he testified that he took it to the clerk who was distributing the mail, but for what purpose it does not appear. He never saw it again until one day during the trial. He, however, wrote to Benson about it, and after having seen weekly statements of certain special agents who were investigating the Schneider charges, he notified Benson. This seems to have been in March, 1903. Later, in October and November, 1903, he also wrote Benson at the suggestion of detective Burns.

There are overt acts charged subsequent to the disclosure made by Schneider, and it is contended that by the instruction embodied in the seventh assignment of error Schneider was continued in the conspiracy by overt acts committed after his disclosure to the agent of the Land *Department[371 had been communicated to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The instruction to which this effect is attributed is as follows:

"Now if he [Schneider] had stood by that and had gone on and disclosed all he knew about the matter, and said: 'I will have nothing more to do with this matter,' nothing that could have been done by the others after that could affect him at all. He would have been out of it; he would have repudiated it. As bearing on the effect of what he did there, if you find he did it, you are to consider what he did afterwards. If, after having made this disclosure as far as he did, he shut his mouth and said: 'I will not say anything more about this matter; the government shall not get anything more out of me,' that is not an act by him in furtherance of the conspiracy, but it is a piece of evidence to be considered by you as bearing on the question whether he was acquiescent,—what his attitude of mind toward the conspiracy was.

†Ex parte Black, 147 Fed. 832, 840, and same case in 87 C. C. A. 383, 160 Fed. 431; Warc v. United States, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1053, 84 C. C. A. 503, 154 Fed. 577, 12 Ann. Cas. 233; United States v. Eccles, 181 Fed. 906; United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 343, 350; Ochs v. People, 25 Ill. App. 379, s. c. 124 Ill. 399, 16 N. E. 662.

"If he had stood on his disclosure, you might have said: 'Well, he is out of it from now on,'—but in connection with that you are to consider what he said afterwards. If you find that he closed his mouth and refused to say anything more about the matter and kept still in the interest of the others, you would have a right to say that that showed that he was still acquiescent in the matter. It would neutralize, if you choose to treat it so, the effect of his former declaration, that he did know, and was willing to disclose."

The instruction does not sustain the contention based upon it. The court submitted to the jury the effect of repudiation, and whether it was adhered to, as evidence of Schneider's further participation in the conspiracy by the overt acts done subsequent to the date of his disclosure. Acts prior to that time are within the principles we have announced, and the only question 372] under the *instruction is whether there was an acquiescence which embraced the later acts, and this, we think, under the circumstances, was for the jury to determine.

The other questions in the case we shall now proceed to consider.

It is contended (ninth assignment of error) that the court erred in sustaining the demurrers to the pleas in abatement of Hyde and Schneider.

The defendants demurred to the indictment, which was overruled, and a special appeal was allowed to the court of appeals of the District and the ruling on the demurrer affirmed.

The case was remanded for further proceedings and the mandate was filed in the supreme court of the District April 26, 1906. Nearly two years afterwards (April 1, 1908) the defendants filed pleas in abatement, alleging irregularity in the making up of the list of jurors from which the grand jury which found the indictment was selected. The charge was that the commission to make a list of jurors appointed under § 198 of the District Code [31 Stat. at L. 1222, chap. 854] placed on the "list the names of persons many of which were selected not by themselves or by any of them, but by some other person or persons whose names are" to the defendant unknown, and that on the 16th of November, 1903, the commissioners met in the District of Columbia and then and there made an order by which they undertook to appoint one James A. Harstock secretary of said commission, and undertook by a further order to give him the right of access to the jury box provided in accordance with § 200 of the Code, and that he took the box, unaccompanied by any other person, into a room in the City Hall and there opened it and took out of it all of the pieces of paper therein containing the names of the jurors, and from day to day during several successive days replaced in the box such names as he deemed fit, and thereupon returned it to the custody of the clerk. The *names [373] of twenty-three persons were drawn from the box and constituted the grand jury which found the indictment. In consequence of this it was averred that the grand jury was not a legal body.

Demurrers were filed and sustained to the pleas, and to support the ruling of the court the government cites Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 41 L. ed. 624, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235. The defendants contest the application of the case on two grounds: (1) that under the District Code a plea in abatement comes properly after a demurrer to the indictment and before pleas to the matter of the indictment, such as not guilty or special pleas; and (2) that whether a plea is seasonably filed cannot be resisted by demurrer, but only by a motion to strike out.

Both propositions may be formally correct, but do not preclude the court from itself noticing an unreasonable delay or treating the demurrer as raising that objection. And by concession of counsel that is what the court, in effect, did. Indeed, in the "points and authorities" filed with the demurrer it is urged that "the said pleas are not filed within a reasonable time." There was certainly unreasonable delay. It is said in the Agnew Case that pleas in abatement on account of irregularities in selecting and impaneling a grand jury, which did not relate to the competency of individual jurors, must be pleaded with strict exactness, and that a defendant must take the first opportunity in his power to make the objection. The indictment in that case was returned December 12, 1895; the plea in abatement was filed on the 17th of that month. It was held to have been filed too late.

In the case at bar four years elapsed between the finding of the indictment and the filing of the plea, two years after the mandate of the court of appeals sustaining the action of the trial court upon the demurrer and after a bill of particulars had been demanded and furnished. The delay is not attempted to be explained.

374] *It is extremely doubtful whether the pleas were not defective under the Agnew Case. In that case it was alleged that the irregularities complained of tended to the injury and prejudice of the defendant, no grounds, however, being assigned for the conclusion, and the record did not exhibit any. In the case at bar the plea is not even that specific. It is not shown that any juror was disqualified, nor is it shown that the grand jury was composed of jurors not selected by the commission. It is alleged, it is true, the names which had been put in the box by the commissioners had been taken out by Harstock, and that he put back those only that he deemed fit and proper. It follows, of course, from this, that had all of the original names been in the box, the grand jury might have been differently composed; but from this it cannot be inferred that injury or prejudice resulted to the defendants.

The tenth assignment of error is directed against the instruction of the court that the jury might convict any one of the defendants alone, including Hyde. In explanation of the instruction the court said to the jury that as to each defendant evidence was admitted which was not admitted against the others, and instanced as an example an alleged confession of Schneider, which, the court said, was admitted against him only. "The same would be true," the court said, "as to Dimond, as to whom a great deal of evidence was admitted that was not received against the other defendants." And further: "So that it is true, as I stated in a proposition for the benefit of counsel, that there may be a verdict against any one of the defendants, whether one or more, as to whom the evidence submitted and received against him or them proves that he or they conspired as charged, provided any overt act is also proved."

If there is confusion in the instruction it is easily resolved. It is clear, when read 375] in connection with other *instructions, that the court distinguished the purpose and effect of particular testimony, and did not mean to say that there could be a conspiracy by one defendant alone. So regarding it, we pass to the consideration of the objection urged against it.

It is insisted that it is not competent in any case where two or more persons are charged with conspiracy, and all are on trial, to find a verdict against one of them only, in any aspect of the evidence; and, further, that as to the defendant Hyde there is no evidence in the case which justified a verdict against him alone, even if the principle announced by the court is, in the abstract, correct.

The immediate answer is that there was not a verdict against one defendant, and besides, the argument of counsel is somewhat minute, and its criticism is based on a partial view of the instructions and of the evidence, which, we think, preclude the inferences which are deduced from the instructions.

The court's charge was necessarily very long and comprehensive, and a reproduction of it is not convenient, but certain of its general propositions may be stated. "Each count of the indictment," it was said, "charges the same conspiracy, and, in addition thereto, one or more overt acts alleged to have been done in pursuance of it. So that, stated in one way, these counts subsequent to the first count contain nothing new except the overt acts; and when you take those up one by one, the question is, if you have found the conspiracy in the first place, whether the overt acts charged were committed. If you do not find the conspiracy, of course the overt acts cannot be found."

The court emphasized the necessity of the proof of the conspiracy, and stated that by it the overt acts were to be judged, saying: "An overt act must be one in pursuance of the conspiracy and one in furtherance of it;" and whether a certain act was in pursuance of it might depend entirely upon what the conspiracy was.

"The first question is," the court[376 charged, "Did the defendants conspire at all? The second question is whether they conspired to accomplish the end alleged. The third question is whether they conspired to accomplish that end by the fraudulent means alleged, so far as the indictment in that respect is necessary to be proved, referring to what has been already stated in that regard. The fourth question is, under each count, whether the overt act therein mentioned has been proved.

"Two other important questions must be determined in connection with the foregoing: One relating to the place, the other to the time. The conspiracy must have existed in the District of Columbia, and it must have existed and some overt act in pursuance of it must have been committed within three years next before the filing of the indictment."

And, assuming that the conspiracy was established and overt acts in furtherance of it shown in the District of Columbia, the court explained, "the conspiracy is here [the District of Columbia] just as truly as if the defendants were all here in person, doing those things with the common mind and purpose which contemplated them. In such circumstances the defendants would be conspiring together in the doing of each act because each act would have reference to the conspiracy. It would not be necessary that they should put their heads together and go over the terms of the conspiracy every time an act was done in furtherance of it. It would be enough if the act was an expression of their common understanding."

The court instructed the jury further as follows:

"Now, it has been suggested that if these men were guilty, there were others just as guilty. That does not make any difference. The indictment itself, in one clause of it which I did not read to you, charges that these defendants conspired with each other and with other persons to the grand jury unknown. But that does not make [377] any *difference. If there are other persons who might have been prosecuted, and would have been liable, and they are not prosecuted, that is no concern of yours. You are only to consider the question of whether these defendants conspired in the way alleged, and whether the overt act was committed."

And the court charged the jury that some of the defendants could be convicted on one count and some on another count; that there was "practically one charge, although in so many counts. It is one conspiracy with allegations of different acts done in pursuance of it. . . . But you cannot split the matter up."

We think, therefore, that the instruction excepted to was in the interest of the defendants, not to their prejudice. It excluded from consideration as to each of them testimony which might possibly have no relation to him. It is true that the jury convicted Hyde and Schneider and acquitted Benson and Dimond. But, as said by the government, "This does not signify that the evidence against Hyde and Schneider was of a different offense than that charged, but only that the proof against them was more conclusive than that against Benson and Dimond."

It is not necessary to review the cases cited by the defendants, holding that conspiracy is the crime of at least two persons, and that where all but one are acquitted there can be no legal conviction as to him, the acquittal of the others being tantamount to the finding of no conspiracy. All but one were not acquitted.

The next assignment of defendants is that the court erred in allowing the District attorney, on the direct examination of witnesses for the government, to examine them as to previous statements made by them to certain representatives of the government, and in permitting comment upon such statements as tended to show their truth.

*This assignment is directed partic- [378] ularly against the examination of three witnesses,—William E. Valk, S. J. Holsinger, and Tillie A. Fleischauer. These witnesses, not remembering certain matters, were asked about conversations with him or of written statement made by the witnesses examined, for the purpose of refreshing their memory. This was the purpose declared at the time and was the ground of the ruling of the court. Objection was made, however, and it was urged and is now urged here, that this could not be done unless upon the ground of surprise and for the purpose of discrediting the witnesses. In support of the objection, § 1073a of the District Code is cited in regard to the manner and extent of contradicting witnesses by proof of former statements. The court, however, permitted the examination solely as a means of refreshing the memory of the witness, and they, besides, admitted the truth of what was stated. We see no error in the ruling. Indeed, it may be said that as to two of the witnesses, their statements related to Benson alone, and by his acquittal, if the ruling was error, it became unimportant.

The next contention, constituting the twelfth assignment of error, is as to the refusal of the court to permit the defendants to prove that certain letters addressed to John P. Jones never reached the Dead Letter Office. This testimony, it is insisted, became significant and important to the defendants from the fact that the District attorney had asked Schneider if he (Schneider) had not gone under the name of John P. Jones at the postoffice while in Mexico at a place called Allamos. On redirect examination he explained the reason to have been that he had suspected the postmaster at Tucson, that letters which had been written to him had not reached him, and that at the time mentioned his wife, who was at Tucson, addressed him as John P. Jones, but that nobody else had. He further testified that the letters he referred to were "right on the desk" (the desk in the [379] court room), "in the possession of the government." Upon the demand of counsel, the District attorney produced the letters. Thereupon counsel questioned Schneider as to the letters which were addressed to John P. Jones at Fuerte, Mexico, postmarked Tucson, Arizona. The District attorney then asked counsel for defendants if he desired "to offer the envelopes in evidence," to which the answer was made: "No; I don't care to offer anything further in connection with that transaction, at present." The District attorney then offered them. Objection was made, but was subsequently withdrawn, the court saying, upon the witness stating that the address upon them was in his wife's handwriting, "They [the letters] are addressed to him in the name of John P. Jones. The envelopes may be received, if it is so agreed, for the purpose of showing the postmarks, etc. This I suppose to be in corroboration of the statements of the witness as to why he changed his name."

The District attorney was then called as a witness by counsel for the defendants and testified that he had not seen the letters "until one day in court here," and that when reference was made to them "they were produced" to him "by Mr. Pugh." The latter, being called, said that they came into his "possession in an envelop taken from Secretary Hitchcock's safe some time after Mr. Burns withdrew from the case, or some time after he severed his government connection with it." Burns, he testified, was in San Francisco.

Dalzell was subsequently called as a witness to testify, as has been stated, and it was said by counsel for defendants, addressing the court, that the government had brought out that Schneider had gone under an assumed name, and that the evidence tended to show that the "reason for that, or one reason for it, was that his mail was being tampered with;" "but it leaves room 380] for the *government to contend that those letters have been to the Dead Letter Office, and have been opened there, and might have gotten in the possession of the Secretary of the Interior or Mr. Burns honestly. We offer to call this witness [Dalzell] for the purpose of closing that gap, and showing that necessarily somebody must have been committing a greater crime than is charged against any of these defendants, in robbing the mail." The District attorney in effect disclaimed the purpose which was attributed to him, and necessarily there was no gap to be closed, nor is it shown that any purpose was subsequently attempted which the testimony would have precluded.

The possibility suggested by the testimony is not attempted to be justified by the government, and gives a painful surprise, but we cannot see how proof of "a greater crime . . . in robbing the mails" was relevant to a decision of the charge then under consideration.

The thirteenth assignment of error is directed against an instruction of the court which opposed the contention of defendants that "the titles obtained from the states were perfectly and absolutely valid as to all persons and at all times, except as to the particular state which had given the 56 L. ed.

title, and which alone could assail it." The question involved in the contention is settled by the decision of the case when it was here on the proceedings in habeas corpus (199 U. S. 62, 82 and 83, 50 L. ed. 90, 96, 97, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760).

The fourteenth assignment of error is that the court erred in refusing to instruct the jury that want of personal knowledge of the character of the land applied for, or that it was not adversely occupied, did not make the application void. It is contended that if the applicant believed the statements were true, the application was neither false nor fraudulent.

We answer the contention as the court of appeals did,—“the question is immaterial, because the applications were fraudulent by reason of the agreement for transfer,”—*that is, the applicants were not buy-381 ing for themselves, but for Hyde. We need not inquire whether the statutes required the affidavits to be made on personal knowledge.

Objection is made in other assignments of error to the comments of the court "that written evidence, letters, for instance, written by parties at the time, are entitled to peculiar consideration as evidence." And to the further comment as to certain anonymous letters attributed to Dimond, the court saying to the jury that they would have to consider whether he wrote them, and added the following: "That has been treated in the argument as a very important question, and justly so. You cannot fail to see the importance of that question. There are some of the letters that were typewritten, and there is one printed with a pen."

Any evidence affecting a particular defendant is important to him when on trial. It ceases to be so in a tribunal of review if he was acquitted, as Dimond was, and may be dismissed from further consideration. And we see no error in the comments of the court on the consideration to be given to written evidence. It was but the declaration of an abstract proposition. It was not an attempt to enforce some particular part of the testimony and to take from the jury their province of considering it all or weighing the respective parts. This is shown by the charge of the court, considered in its entirety.

In the seventeenth assignment of error defendants complain that they were not allowed to show by an examination of the jurors that the "verdict was the result of a bargain, and was brought about by what, under the circumstances, amounted to coercion by the court."

The record shows the following:

"Monday, June 22, 1908, at 11:30 A. M., the jury returned to the court room and the foreman announced that they were unable to agree. The court thereupon instructed the jury to retire for further deliberation, and *make another effort to agree upon a verdict, charging them, however, that should they render a verdict, it must be one to which they all freely agreed; that the law would not recognize a coerced verdict or one which was not the free expression of the views and opinions of the jurymen, and that if, after another conscientious effort, the jury still fail to agree, they should return to the court and so state. That it was not the purpose of the court to unduly prolong their deliberations, and that if they could not conscientiously and freely agree upon a verdict, they would be discharged."

At ten minutes before 3 o'clock they were brought into court and again declared that they were unable to agree, and the court instructed them further, after consultation with counsel for the government and defendants, and to which no exception was made, suggesting a consideration of the possibility of the guilt of some of the defendants and not of others. The jury, shortly after they went out, announced their agreement, finding a verdict against Hyde and Schneider of being guilty "in manner and form as charged," and Benson and Dimond not guilty.

On motion of counsel the jury was polled as to Hyde and Schneider, respectively, and they answered guilty on certain counts and not guilty on the 29th and 33d counts.

The supposed misconduct of the jury was made a ground of new trial. Certain supporting affidavits were made by counsel upon information. Counsel respectively averred that they believed the information given them to be true, and that it was received partly from one of the jurors and partly from a person who had conferences with another; and that two of the jurors were requested to make affidavit, but, under the advice of their counsel, they declined unless required by the court.

The motion for a new trial set forth that the verdict was the result of an agreement 383] between certain of the *jurors who believed all of the defendants should be convicted and certain jurors who believed that all of the defendants should be acquitted, by which agreement the acquittal of Benson was exchanged for the conviction of Hyde, and the conviction of Schneider for the acquittal of Dimond. And this was brought about, it is contended and argued, as the result of what, "under the circumstances, amounted to coercion by the court."

There is nothing in the record to justify the contention. It is true the trial was a long one and that the jury were not allowed to separate. Neither fact is unusual in criminal trials; the first is often necessary, the second often expedient, and contributes to an impartial judgment for and against defendants. It is true that the jury was in consultation for three days and nights without agreement, but the case was unusual in its issues and evidence and the detailed attention that was required.

It well might be that jurors should not see the exact bearing of the evidence as it affected particular defendants until the final instructions of the court, which we have set out and about which counsel were consulted. The court took care to say to the jury that the law would not recognize a coerced verdict, and that it was not the court's intention to unduly prolong their deliberations, and if, after another effort, "they could not conscientiously and freely agree upon a verdict, they would be discharged." It is hard to believe that with that admonition yet in their ears they bartered their convictions, with that promise expressly made to them, they were coerced by a threat of confinement to acquit those who they were convinced were guilty, or convict those who they were convinced were innocent.

But, even conceiving such possibility, we think the court rightly ruled. It was within the issues of the case to convict some of the defendants and acquit others, and we think the rule expressed in *Wright v. Illinois & M. Teleg. Co. 20 Iowa, 195, [384] and Gottlieb Bros. v. Jasper, 27 Kan. 770, should apply, that the testimony of jurors should not be received to show matters which essentially inhere in the verdict itself and necessarily depend upon the testimony of the jurors, and can receive no corroboration.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting:

This is an indictment under Rev. Stat. § 5440, amended, act of May 17, 1879, chap. 8, 21 Stat. at L. 4, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, for a conspiracy to defraud the United States. The petitioners were tried and convicted in the District of Columbia, the conviction was affirmed by the court of appeals (35 App. D. C. 451), and thereupon a writ of certiorari was granted by this court. The scheme was to obtain by fraudulent devices from the states of California and Oregon school lands lying within forest reserves, to exchange them for public lands of the United States open to selection, and then to sell the lands so obtained. Hyde and Schneider were in California and never were actually in the District in aid of the conspiracy, but overt acts are alleged to have been done there to effect the objects in view. Most of these acts are innocent, taken by themselves, consisting mainly of the entry of appearance by Hyde's lawyer in the matter of different selections, the filing of papers concerning them, and letters urging speed. Hyde is alleged to have caused some documents affecting the same to be transmitted from California to the Commissioner at Washington, and in the last six counts payments to employees in the Land Office are alleged to have been made with corrupt purpose and in aid of the plan by a person who was included in the indictment as a conspirator, but whom the jury did not convict.

385] *The court instructed the jury that if the defendants agreed to accomplish their purpose by having any of the alleged overt acts done in the District of Columbia, and any of those acts were done there, the conspiracy was in the District, whether the defendants were there or not. The defendants excepted to this instruction, as well as to many others.

I have said enough to show that there was more than one question in the case, but as the first and also the most important one is whether the court had jurisdiction of the alleged offense, I shall confine myself to that.

The conspiracy was continuous in its nature and is averred to have been so. United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124. Therefore, wherever it was formed, it might have been continued in the District of Columbia, as, for instance, if the conspirators had met there for the purposes of their scheme. Moreover, in order to narrow the question, I will assume that, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, an overt act done anywhere with the express or implied consent of conspirators would show the conspiracy to be continuing between the parties so consenting, and leave them open to prosecution for three years from that date. But it does not follow that an overt act draws the conspiracy to wherever such overt act may be done, and whether it does so or not is the question before us now.

In order to answer this question it is not enough to say that as the overt act was one that was contemplated by the conspirators, it is treated as the act of them all, and that this is equivalent to saying that they were constructively present. That would be passing a dicto secundum quid ad dictum simpliciter. They are chargeable there for the act, but it does not follow that they were there to other intents. They are shown not to have been by the fact that they could not be treated as fugitives from justice even in respect of that very act, when and although that act was itself a crime. Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 712, 47 L. ed. 657, 661, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 317. *To[386 speak of constructive presence is to use the language of fiction, and so to hinder precise analysis. When a man is said to be constructively present where the consequences of an act done elsewhere are felt, it is meant that for some special purpose he will be treated as he would have been treated if he had been present, although he was not. For instance, if a man, acting in one state, sets forces in motion that kill a man in another, or produces or induces some consequence in that other that it regards as very hurtful and wishes to prevent, the latter state is very likely to say that, if it can catch him, it will punish him, although he was not subject to its laws when he did the act. Strassheim v. Daily, 221 U. S. 280, 285, 55 L. ed. 735, 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558. But as states usually confine their threats to those within the jurisdiction at the time of the act (American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 347, 356, 53 L. ed. 826, 832, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047), the symmetry of general theory is preserved by saying that the offender was constructively present in the case supposed (Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 389, 50 L. ed. 1057, 1074, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688, 6 Ann. Cas. 362). We must not forget facts, however. He was not present in fact, and in theory of law he was present only so far as to be charged with the act.

Obviously the use of this fiction or form of words must not be pushed to such a point in the administration of the national law as to transgress the requirement of the Constitution that the trial of crimes shall be held in the state and district where the crimes shall have been committed. Art. 3, § 2, cl. 3. Amendments, art. 6. With the country extending from ocean to ocean, this requirement is even more important now than it was a hundred years ago, and must be enforced in letter and spirit if we are to make impossible hardships amounting to grievous wrongs. In the case of conspiracy the danger is conspicuously brought out. Every overt act done in aid of it, of course, is attributed to the conspirators; and if that means that the conspiracy is present as such wherever any *overt act is done, it[387 might be at the choice of the government to prosecute in any one of twenty states in none of which the conspirators had been. And as wherever two or more have united for the commission of a crime there is a conspiracy, the opening to oppression thus made is very wide indeed. It is even wider if success should be held not to merge the conspiracy in the crime intended and achieved. I think it unnecessary to dwell on oppressions that I believe have been practised, or on the constitutional history impressively adduced by Mr. Worthington to show that this is one of the wrongs that our forefathers meant to prevent.

No distinction can be taken based on the gravity of the overt act, or the fact that it was contemplated, or that it is important for the accomplishment of the substantive evil that the conspiracy aims to bring about and the law seeks to prevent. That would be carrying over the law of attempts to where it does not belong. Although both are adjective crimes, a conspiracy is not an attempt, even under Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, which requires an overt act. When I first read that section I thought that it was an indefinite enlargement of the law of attempts. But reflection and the decisions both convinced me that I was wrong. The statute simply did away with a doubt as to the requirements of the common law. Rex v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993, 999. Roscoe, Crim. Ev. 6th ed. 381, 382. An attempt, in the strictest sense, is an act expected to bring about a substantive wrong by the forces of nature. With it is classed the kindred offense where the act and the natural conditions present or supposed to be present are not enough to do the harm without a further act, but where it is so near to the result that, if coupled with an intent to produce that result, the danger is very great. Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 396, 49 L. ed. 518, 524, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276. But combination, intention, and overt act may all be present without amounting to a crime. [388]inal attempt,—as if all that *were done should be an agreement to murder a man 50 miles away, and the purchase of a pistol for the purpose. There must be dangerous proximity to success. But when that exists the overt act is the essence of the offense. On the other hand, the essence of the conspiracy is being combined for an unlawful purpose; and if an overt act is required, it does not matter how remote the act may be from accomplishing the purpose, if done to effect it; that is, I suppose, in furtherance of it in any degree. In this case the statute treats the conspiracy as the crime and the indictment follows the statute.

The cases in this court have agreed that the statute has not made the overt act a part of the crime, which still remains the conspiracy alone. By the same reasoning the overt act gives no ground for the application of Rev. Stat. § 731, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 585, creating a double jurisdiction when an offense against the United States is begun in one district and completed in another. The act is no part of the conspiracy, even if it is an element in some other crime, as is stated in so many words in Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 76, 50 L. ed. 90, 94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760, quoting the well-known statement in United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531, that the statutory requirement merely affords a locus penitentiae. Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 547, 38 L. ed. 545, 548, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 161. See also United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. ed. 419, 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 469, 39 L. ed. 494, 496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338. The overt act is simply evidence that the conspiracy has passed beyond words and is on foot when the act is done. As a test of actuality it is made a condition to punishment, but it is no more a part of the crime than it was at common law, where it was customary to allege such an act; or than is the fact that the statute of limitations has not run.

I can think of no other case in which it would be argued that an act constituting no part of the crime charged draws jurisdiction to the place where it is done. Even when the act is the substance of a felony, the history of the *law shows [389] that the courts only slowly and with hesitation came to the admission that a man, although within the jurisdiction, could be a principal when he was not present at the accomplishment of the crime. Y. B. 7 Hen. VII., 18 pl. 10. The distinction between principal and accessory before the fact is a late surviving expression of the doubt. 4 Bl. Com. 36, 37. When the accessory is in a different jurisdiction, it has been held that he could not be convicted as such in the place of the crime, even in modern cases. State v. Moore, 26 N. H. 448, 59 Am. Dec. 354; Bishop, Crim. Law, 8th ed. § 111. It would be an amazing extension of even the broadest form of fiction if it should be held that an otherwise innocent overt act done in one state drew to itself a conspiracy in another state to defraud people in the latter, even though the first state would punish a conspiracy to commit a fraud beyond its own boundaries. Of course in the present case the conspiracy as well as the overt act was within the United States, but the case that I have supposed of different jurisdictions is a perfect test of where the crime was committed. If a conspiracy exists wherever an overt act is done in aid of it, the act ought to give jurisdiction over conspirators in a foreign state, if later they should be caught in the place where the act was done.

The defendants were in California and never left the state, so far as this case is concerned. The fraud, assuming as I do, for the purposes of decision, that there was one, was to get land from the United States there and elsewhere on the Pacific coast. If successful it would be punished there. The crime with which the defendants are charged is having been engaged in or members of a conspiracy, nothing else; no act, other than what is implied as necessary to signify their understanding to each other. It is punished only to create a further obstacle to the ultimate crime in California. The defendants never were members of a conspiracy within a thousand miles of the District 390]*in fact. Yet if a lawyer entered his appearance there in a case before the Land Department, and the defendants directed it and expected to profit by it in carrying out their plans, it is said that we should feign that they were here in order to warrant their being taken across the continent and tried in this place. The Constitution is not to be satisfied with a fiction. When a man causes an unlawful act, as in the case of a prohibited use of the mails, it needs no fiction to say that the crime is committed at the place of the act, wherever the man may be. Re Palliser, 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034. But when the offense consists solely in a relation to other men with a certain intent, it is pure fiction to say that the relation is maintained and present in the case supposed. If the government, instead of prosecuting for the substantive offense, charges only conspiracy to commit it, trial ought to be where the conspiracy exists in fact.

The effect of an overt act upon the statute of limitations is consistent with what I have said. If an overt act is done with the consent of the conspirators, and to effect their end, the reason why the statute begins to run afresh is not that a new conspiracy is made or the old one renewed by the act, but that the facts supposed show conclusively that the conspiracy is continuing in life. So long as it does so it cannot be barred, although the earlier years of it may be.

To avoid misapprehension the distinction should be noted between acts done in aid of a conspiracy and acts that constitute and call it into being. If a conspiracy should be formed by letters between men living in California, Louisiana, and Massachusetts, who never left their several states, nothing that I have said would disparage the right of the government to indict them where, in contemplation of law, the agreement was made.

It is said that the conspiracy may be a secret one; but that cannot affect the tests of jurisdiction. The overt act may amount to evidence not only of its existence, but of its place. But to treat overt acts as evidence is one thing; it is quite another to treat any overt act as sufficient in itself to give jurisdiction, although the conspiracy exists only in another place.

The intimations that are to be found, opposed to the view that I take, appear to have been induced by the confusion that I have tried to dispel, and to assume that an overt act creates jurisdiction over a conspiracy on the same ground that causing a death may give jurisdiction in murder; or, perhaps, in Rex v. Brisac, 4 East, 164, 171, to proceed on the dangerous analogy of treasonable conspiracies to levy war or compass the death of the sovereign. The dictum in that case gains no new force from the repetition by text writers. It is one of the misfortunes of the law that ideas become encysted in phrases and thereafter for a long time cease to provoke further analysis. On the other hand, if overt acts had been regarded as founding jurisdiction, the petitioners could not have been discharged in Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 51 L. ed. 689, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430, where overt acts of other conspirators within the jurisdiction were alleged and not denied. Although the point was not mentioned in the opinion, it was argued and was not overlooked. At least, in the absence of clear statutory words, I am of opinion that logic and the policy and general intent of the Constitution agree in refusing to extend the fiction of constructive presence to a case like this. I think that the true view still is that of Reg. v. Best, 1 Salk. 174: "The venue must be where the conspiracy was, not where the result of the conspiracy is put in execution," quoted as correct in principle in Markby's edition of Roscoe's Criminal Evidence, 6th ed. 391; and that to decide otherwise is to overrule not only the often-expressed and settled understanding, but the express decisions, of this court.

Mr. Justice Lurton, Mr. Justice Hughes, and Mr. Justice Lamar concur in this dissent.

392] *FRANK W. BROWN, Appt.,
v.

C. T. ELLIOTT, United States Marshal in and for the Northern District of California, et al. (No. 201.)

E. C. MOORE, Appt.,
v.

C. T. ELLIOTT, United States Marshal in and for the Northern District of California, et al. (No. 202.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 392-404.)

Courts — venue of crime — conspiracy.

1. Laying the venue of the trial of a conspiracy to commit the offense against the United States denounced by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5480, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696, making criminal the use of the mails to carry on a scheme or artifice to defraud, in the state and Federal judicial district where an overt act is performed, satisfies the requirement of U. S. Const., 6th Amend., that all crimes be tried in the state and district where committed.

[For other cases, see Courts, 979-992, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — continuing offense — conspiracy.

2. A conspiracy to commit the offense against the United States denounced by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5480, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696, making criminal the use of the mails to carry on a scheme or artifice to defraud, which the indictment alleges was designed to be and was in fact continuous, continues, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, so long as any overt acts are done by any of the conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy.

[Limitation of criminal proceedings, see Limitation of Actions, III. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indictment — sufficiency — conspiracy.

3. The exact place of the formation of a conspiracy to commit the offense against the United States denounced by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5480, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696, making criminal the use of the mails to carry on a scheme or artifice to defraud, need not be stated in an indictment which lays the venue at the place where an overt act was committed.

[For other cases, see Indictment, 69-81, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 201 and 202.]

Argued October 19, 1911. Ordered for reargument before a full bench December 18, 1911. Reargued May 1, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

NOTE.—As to the locality of crime committed through the agency of the mails or of carriers—see note to State v. Hudson, 19 L.R.A. 775.

As to the commencement of the period of limitations against prosecutions for continuing offenses—see note to Ware v. United States, 84 C. C. A. 519.

A PPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review orders dismissing petitions for writs of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a warrant of removal in proceedings to remove to the District Court of Nebraska persons charged with conspiring to commit an offense against the United States by the fraudulent use of the mails. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry F. Woodard and Arthur A. Birney argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

If the criminal offense is the conspiracy, it was essential that it be given a locality.

People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229, 21 Am. Dec. 122; Bishop, Crim. Proc. chap. 24; 22 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 825.

The confederacy to commit the offense is the gist of the criminality, although to complete it some act to effect the object of the conspiracy is needed.

United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. ed. 494, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 76, 50 L. ed. 90, 94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Com. v. Bartilson, 85 Pa. 482.

An overt act may draw with it the previously formed conspiracy, so as to warrant the allegation in the indictment that the conspiracy was formed where the overt act was committed; but in this case there is no such averment, and the mere recital of overt acts committed in Omaha will not take the place of the necessary direct allegation of the place of the conspiracy, necessary to jurisdiction.

United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 204, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Com. v. Bartilson, 85 Pa. 482.

Upon habeas corpus the examining court will examine the indictment to determine if it contains a definite charge of crime.

Re Buell, 3 Dill. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 2,-102; Re Palliser, 136 U. S. 257, 34 L. ed. 514, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; Re Doig, 4 Fed. 193; Re Coy, 31 Fed. 794, affirmed in 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. ed. 274, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S.

On the effect of overt act within limitation period, where the conspiracy was originally formed and the first act committed beyond the period of limitation—see note to Ware v. United States, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1053.

376, 25 L. ed. 719; Stewart v. United States, 55 C. C. A. 641, 119 Fed. 89; Horn-er v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. ed. 126, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Re Terrell, 51 Fed. 213; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 104; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch. 75, 136, 2 L. ed. 554, 574.

Since the conspiracy became indictable upon the commission of the first overt act, the statute of limitations is a bar to the prosecution.

United States v. Owen, 32 Fed. 534; United States v. Irvine, 98 U. S. 450, 25 L. ed. 193, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 334, 147 Fed. 840; 2 McClain, Crim. Law, 973.

The crime of conspiracy being a noncontinuous crime, but complete upon the agreement, and subject to prosecution upon the first overt act, the continuando will be disregarded, and the indictment treated as charging no more than the commission of the crime on the first day.

Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 9th ed. § 125; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Proc. § 388.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The indictment is sufficient in substance for the purposes of removal to charge the appellant with the crime of having conspired, in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, to commit offenses forbidden by § 5480.

Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 39 L. ed. 494, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338; Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. ed. 667, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 919, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569.

The conspiracy and the scheme to defraud being both of them continuous, and having been continued in operation until the year of the indictment, the offense is not barred, no matter when the conspiracy was first formed.

United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; United States v. Barber, 219 U. S. 72, 55 L. ed. 99, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

The indictment plainly charges that the conspiracy and the scheme were being actually operated in the Omaha division of the district of Nebraska, and nine overt acts to effectuate them having been there committed, there was jurisdiction of the offense in that division and district.

Ibid.; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 259, 21 Am. Dec. 122.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

These appeals involve the action of the circuit court in dismissing petitions for writs of habeas corpus to discharge appellants from the custody of appellee, United States marshal for the northern district of California. Both appellants were held under a warrant of removal made by the district court of that district upon an order of commitment made by a United States commissioner in proceedings for the removal of appellants to the district court of Nebraska.

There was an indictment found against appellants in the district court of the Omaha division of the district of Nebraska for the crime of conspiracy, in which it was charged that they and others whose names, aliases, and the numbers by which they were designated as part of the means of effecting the scheme, and who in the indictment are called "conspirators," "on the fifth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seven, did then and there" conspire with Ernest Fenby and other persons to the grand jurors unknown "to commit the acts made offenses and crimes by § 5480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by an act of Congress enacted March 2, 1889 [25 Stat. at L. 873, chap. 393, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696], entitled, 'An Act to Punish Dealers and Pretended Dealers in Counterfeit Money and Other Fraudulent Devices for Using the United States Mails.'" And it is charged that appellants and other persons conspired in devising and intending to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud various persons out of their money and property, to be effected by means of the postoffice establishment of the United States, and particularly to defraud certain persons who were named. To avoid repetition, they are called in "the [394] indictment "victims," and they were to be defrauded of their money and property by the conspirators "agreeing to organize, institute, conduct, and manage certain horse races and athletic contests . . . as wagering contests upon which money should be bet," at Council Bluffs, in Iowa, and in certain places in Missouri, Arkansas, Colorado, Louisiana, and Washington, and other places to the grand jurors unknown, and "at Omaha, district aforesaid." The races and contests were to be conducted in a fraudulent, unfair, and dishonest manner, and to be controlled solely by the conspirators, so that the outcome was known in advance, with intention thereby to defraud the victims. The charge is made with much circumstance and detail which it is not necessary to repeat, except to say that the conspirators were, to be represented as millionaires traveling through the United States making investments in municipal, county, and city bonds, and in other projects, and having with them horses and athletes for their private amusement, which they would match with those of strangers. One of the conspirators was to be represented to be the secretary to the others, and as having charge of the contests, which he had theretofore always managed with great financial profit and gain as well as to the amusement of his employers, but that he had become aggrieved at the treatment he had received, and would so manage the contests that the horses and athletes of the millionaires would lose, and that he was desirous of betting against them and thereby win their money for himself and for such other persons as would bet for him as his secret agents. Others of the conspirators were to represent themselves to the victims to be friends and relatives of the "secretary," and had been requested by him to produce men of financial standing to act as his secret agents in betting money against his employers, the millionaires, and it was to be represented that it was necessary for him to procure such persons of financial 395]standing and responsibility *to represent him and bet his money in order to conceal his disloyalty to his employers. Such persons were not to bet their own money, but the secretary's money, and be paid a percentage of the winnings. The victims were to be induced to bring letters of credit or negotiable paper for large sums of money, and thereby established credit in the bank of the town where the races and contests were to be conducted. And when they, relying on the fraudulent representations of the secretary, should bet and wager money furnished by him, they were to be informed that the money was not in fact his, but was his employers' money; that they, the employers, had or might become suspicious that the money was not that of the victims and the secretary not the stakeholder, and to prevent criminal prosecutions the races and contests would be called off; that therefore it would be necessary for the victims to come to his (the secretary's) rescue and bet their money for him and allay such suspicions and to insure the races and contests proceeding to a finish as arranged, the money to be returned after the races and contests. And it was to be represented that the races and contests terminated unfortunately through an unusual and deplorable accident, to wit, a serious injury to one of the jockeys or one of the athletes, and in such way that it would be unfair to declare themselves winners, and additional races and contests were to be conducted in the same manner and an opportunity afforded to win back the money lost. Finally it was to be represented to the victims that they had been engaged in a criminal transaction, which had resulted in a serious injury to a person, and to avoid arrest and criminal prosecution they (the victims) were to depart from the scene, and leave the money bet with the secretary, who was to convert it to the use and gain of the conspirators. And this was alleged to be fraudulent and done with intention to deceive, etc.

The manner of carrying out the scheme was alleged *to be to rent a United[396 States postoffice box for the delivery of the mail in the United States postoffice at Omaha, Nebraska, and in other cities throughout the United States where any of the conspirators should establish headquarters in furtherance of the scheme and artifice to defraud, and the conspirators were to assume and request to be addressed by the number of such boxes respectively, and carry on their correspondence with each other through and by means of the postoffice establishment of the United States by the use of such assumed title numbers without the use of their own proper names, and to assume other names and request their victims to address them by such assumed names through and by means of the postoffice establishment of the United States. And it is charged that the conspirators, in further execution of their scheme, were to take and receive letters so addressed from and out of the United States postoffice at Omaha and other places which were mentioned, and that they were to write and send letters to one another by means of the postoffice establishment, which were to contain and set forth their fraudulent and deceitful schemes, and were to be shown to the victims for the purposes of inducing the latter to turn over to the conspirators large sums of money. The conspirators, it is charged, also used the postoffice establishment to open correspondence with the victims and to procure them to open correspondence with two of the conspirators, whose names are given, in pursuance of the conspiracy.

It is alleged "that the said wicked and corrupt conspiracy, combination, confederation, and agreement was originally formed and entered into by the said conspirators during the year 1905, the exact date whereof is to the grand jurors unknown, in the United States of America, the exact place and district whereof is to the grand jurors unknown, and until the 23d day of February, in the year 1909, continuously and *at all times during the four years[397 next preceding the said 23d day of February," it, the conspiracy, "was continuously in existence and in the process of execution and operation, and including all of said times, and the said conspirators did knowingly, falsely, wickedly, and corruptly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together as aforesaid, and with said Ernest Fenby and said divers other persons to the grand jurors unknown, as aforesaid."

Overt acts are alleged, one of which is the renting by one of the conspirators under an assumed name of a postoffice box at Omaha, Nebraska, and the receiving and sending of letters to the "victims," which set forth the scheme in detail by which the "millionaires" were to be imposed on, and the ease of its accomplishment and assurance of success displayed. The indictment contains copies of the letters.

The second count of the indictment alleged the conspiracy to have been formed on the 1st of April, 1907, and the scheme of fraud and deception was set forth in a more general way. The use of the postoffice establishment was alleged, as in the first count.

The original formation of the conspiracy was alleged, as in the first count, to have been in a place and district to the grand jurors unknown, but was continuously in existence and in process of execution for four years next preceding the 23d of February, 1909. The overt act alleged was the depositing of a letter by one of the conspirators in the postoffice at Omaha, Nebraska, which letter concerned the scheme and artifice to defraud and to effect the object of the conspiracy.

It will be observed that it is charged that appellants and those named in the indictments as "conspirators," "on April 5," 1907 (first count), "did then and there," and "on April 1," 1907 (second count), "did then and there" conspire with Ernest Fenby and others, and that races and contests upon which money was to be bet were 398to be organized "at Council Bluffs, in the state of Iowa," and that the conspirators "further then and there, and at Omaha, district aforesaid," were to execute their scheme. And it is charged that the conspiracy was to be effected in the manner described, and that the conspirators, further to effect the object of the conspiracy, were "to rent a United States postoffice box for the delivery of mail, in the United States postoffice at Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, district aforesaid," and in other places.

The first overt act charged in pursuance of the conspiracy on the 5th of April, 1907, is the renting of such box. To effect the object of the conspiracy formed on April 1, 1907, the first overt act is alleged to have been done in July, 1907, at Omaha.

It is, however, also alleged that the conspiracy was originally formed and entered into during the year 1905 in the United States, the exact date and place being unknown, and was continuously in existence and in the process of execution and operation during the four years preceding the 23d of February, 1909.

The assignments of error present the contentions that the indictment is essentially deficient in the following particulars:

1. It does not allege that the conspiracy was formed in Nebraska, but, on the contrary, alleges that it was formed at some place unknown to the grand jury.

2. It does not allege in any of its counts that the first overt acts were done in Nebraska, but that they were done in a place and district unknown.

3. The indictment shows that the conspiracies were formed more than three years prior to the finding of the indictment.

4. It does not allege that appellants consciously participated in any overt act within three years next preceding the finding of the indictment.

The first two contentions involve the jurisdiction of the *court under the 399 6th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, requiring a crime to be tried in the state and district where it was committed. The third and fourth contentions raise the question of the statute of limitations.

First, as to what the indictment shows as to the formation of the conspiracy and the commission of overt acts. The appellants consider these propositions entirely upon the assumption that the only allegation that can be regarded is that which charges the formation of the conspiracy originally in 1905, and not the allegation of the formation of a conspiracy in 1907.

But nothing is specifically alleged as having been done to execute the conspiracy as originally formed. It is true, there is an allegation that the conspiracy was in existence and in the process of execution and operation, which is somewhat vague, but is certainly not inconsistent with the fact that whatever was done, if anything, was done at Omaha.

It is charged that on April 5, 1907 (first count), and on April 1, 1907 (second count), the appellants and other persons "did then and there" conspire (we omit the adverbs). This might well be contended, so far as removal proceedings are concerned, as an allegation of the formation of the conspiracy in the district of Nebraska, or certainly a distinct and explicit renewal of it. And it would seem like giving technically too much effect to consider that the agreement made in 1905, rather than its specific and formal renewal in 1907, should determine the jurisdiction of its trial. Besides, its continued existence and operation are alleged, and we have seen if overt acts were done prior to 1907 they may have been done at Omaha, and constituted, with those done afterwards, a part of an entire scheme, to be executed by a succession of acts.

It is only by the assumption and insistence that the conspiracy was formed in 1905 [400] that appellants give their *contentions any foundation whatever. If the conspiracy was formed at Omaha in 1907, upon the supposition that the conspiracy constitutes the offense and the state and district of its origin are the state and district of its trial, the district court of Nebraska had jurisdiction. And again, upon the supposition that the first overt act completes the offense commenced by the conspiracy, and by completing it determines the place of its trial, the district court of Nebraska had jurisdiction. This follows, no matter where the overt act was done. We have pointed out, however, that the indictment does not show that the first overt act was done at a place and district unknown. The first overt act may have been performed at Omaha.

If either view, therefore, be accepted, the judgment of the circuit court dismissing the petitions for habeas corpus must be affirmed.

If, however, we assume with appellants that the indictment charges that the conspiracy was formed in 1905 and at a place unknown to the grand jurors, the same result must be pronounced, upon the authority of Hyde v. United States, just decided [225 U. S. 347, ante, 1114, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793]. We there held that the place of trial could be any state and district where an overt act was performed. And we further held, following United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124, that conspiracy might be a continuous crime. We there said, distinguishing a crime from its results: "But when the plot contemplates bringing to pass a continuous result that will not continue without the continuous co-operation of the conspirators to keep it up, and there is such continuous co-operation, it is a perversion of natural thought and of natural language to call such continuous co-operation a cinematographic series of distinct conspiracies, rather than to call it a single one." These remarks are especially pertinent to the case at bar. It is alleged in the indictment that the conspiracy set forth was designed to be and was continuous; and, being so, every overt [401] act *was the act of all the conspirators, made so by the terms and force of their unlawful plot.

In Lonebaugh v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 56, 179 Fed. 476, the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit considered the relation of the overt acts to the conspiracy and their effect in determining the application of the statute of limitations. The court said, by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, then circuit judge: "While the gravamen of the offense is the conspiracy, the terms of § 5440 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), are such that there also must be an overt act to make the offense complete (Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 76, 50 L. ed. 90, 94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760); and so the period of limitation must be computed from the date of the overt act rather than the formation of the conspiracy. And where, during the existence of the conspiracy, there are successive overt acts, the period of limitation must be computed from the date of the last of them of which there is an appropriate allegation and proof, and this although some of the earlier acts may have occurred more than three years before the indictment was found." Lorenz v. United States, 24 App. D. C. 337, 387, s. c. 196 U. S. 640, 49 L. ed. 631, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796; Ware v. United States, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1053, 84 C. C. A. 503, 154 Fed. 577, 12 Ann. Cas. 233, s. c. 207 U. S. 588, 52 L. ed. 353, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Jones v. United States, 89 C. C. A. 303, 162 Fed. 417, s. c. 212 U. S. 576, 53 L. ed. 657, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685."

If, however, the conspiracies may be regarded as distinct, then one is charged as having been formed at Omaha in April, 1907, and that overt acts were performed there to effect its object within three years of the finding of the indictment, to wit, October 7, 1909. These allegations establish the jurisdiction of the district court of Nebraska, and exclude the application of the statute of limitations.

As the place of the overt act may be the place of jurisdiction, it follows that the exact place where the conspiracy was formed need not be alleged. This case illustrates the evil which a contrary ruling would cause. The place where the conspiracy was formed was unknown *to the grand [402] jurors (and might be so in many cases), but it was intended to be executed in a number of states of the Union, and yet, under the rigor of the contention of appellants, the conspirators could not be tried in any of them. In other words, not the place of the activities of the conspiracy and where it incurs guilt, but the place of its formation, which no one may know or can find out, is the place of the jurisdiction of its trial. And what compels this? It is answered: The 6th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. We have determined otherwise in Hyde v. United States.

The Constitution of the United States is not intended as a facility for crime. It is intended to prevent oppression; and its letter and its spirit are satisfied if, where a criminal purpose is executed, the criminal purpose be punished. It is there that its victims are sought and defrauded. It is there that its perpetrators should be brought to the bar of justice for their acts; not for the mere conception of them, but for the actual execution of them. The venue of his trial is thus made by the criminal himself, not determined by reasons or interests which may be adverse to him and used to his injury.

Order dismissing petitions affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting:

These are appeals from orders denying writs of habeas corpus on the same state of facts, which can be set out in a few words. The petitioners were taken into custody in California for removal to Omaha, in the district of Nebraska, for trial before the district court there, and severally petitioned for habeas corpus on the ground that the indictment showed that the Omaha court had no jurisdiction of the alleged offense. The indictment is under Rev. Stat. § 5440, amended by act of May 17, 1879, chap. 8, 21 Stat. at L. 4, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, for conspiring to commit an offense 403 against the United States, namely, to send and receive letters through the postoffice in pursuance of a complex scheme to defraud various people, contrary to Rev. Stat. § 5480, amended by act of March 2, 1889, chap. 393, 25 Stat. at L. 873, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696. The scheme contemplated the hiring of postoffice boxes at Omaha and other places, in six different states; and the hiring of a box there and the posting and receiving of letters in that place by conspirators other than the petitioners are alleged as overt acts done in pursuance of the scheme. But it is alleged that the place where the conspiracy was formed is unknown, no place is laid for its continuance, and the petitioners are not shown to have been engaged in it in Omaha or ever to have been in the place. Therefore no jurisdiction is shown unless the averment of the above-mentioned overt acts makes up for all that is left out.

To deny the jurisdiction, however, I must go farther than was necessary in Hyde v. United States, just decided [225 U. S. 347, ante, 1114, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793]. For in this case the offense against the United States named as the proximate object of the conspiracy, viz., the sending of letters through the postoffice in aid of the ultimately intended fraud, is alleged to have been accomplished, and indeed is laid as the overt act. But all the parties to the conspiracy could have been indicted in Omaha for the use of the postoffice there in pursuance of their plan by some of their number, and it naturally may be asked how it can be possible that the petitioners should be collectively guilty of unlawfully using the mails in Omaha, but not guilty of being combined there for that purpose?

The answer has been suggested, at least, by what I have said in the case of Hyde. The parties are liable to punishment where the prohibited act is done, not on the ground of a fiction that they were present, but in spite of the fact that they were not present. And they well may be dealt with there if they can be reached, for bringing about what *is deemed a harm in that place. [404] But when they are punished for being and not for doing, when the offense consists in no act beyond the osmose of mutual understanding, they should be punished only where they are,—only where the wrongful relation exists. The United States can reach them equally, it is true, in either case; but as it can try them only where the crime has been committed, the test to be applied is the same that would be applied if the crime arose under the law of one of the states. It does not follow from the defendants' liability in Omaha for certain results of their conspiracy that they can be tried there for the conspiracy itself. I assume for purposes of decision, whatever misgivings may be felt as to the justice of indicting for a conspiracy to do what actually has been done, that an indictment will lie. Reg. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 929, 18 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 19, 12 Jur. 1017, 3 Cox, C. C. 229; United States v. McDonald, 3 Dill. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 15,670; United States v. Rinds-kopf, 6 Biss. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 16,165; United States v. De Grief, 16 Blatchf. 20, Fed. Cas. No. 14,936; Rex v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993. But I am of opinion that Omaha is not the proper jurisdiction in which to bring it.

If the case were decided on the narrow ground that for the purposes of removal an allegation of conspiracy "then and there" in the middle of the indictment was to be taken to refer to the caption and the place where the indictment was found, I should say nothing. But as general principles are thought to be involved, I think it proper to state my opinion about them.

Mr. Justice Lurton, Mr. Justice Hughes, and Mr. Justice Lamar concur in these views.

405] *ARTHUR JOHNSON, Petitioner,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 405-420.)

Criminal law — record — arraignment.

1. The record sufficiently shows that the indictment was read to the accused, where, after reciting the presence of the attorney for the United States, the defendant in proper person and by his attorney, it adds that "thereupon the defendant, being arraigned upon the indictment, pleads thereto not guilty, and for trial puts himself upon the country, and the attorney of the United States doth the like."

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — record — contradiction.

2. The record on appeal imports verity, and cannot be contradicted by an affidavit which counsel files in the cause.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — murder — qualified verdict — District of Columbia.

3. The provision for a verdict of guilty of murder "without capital punishment," contained in the Federal Criminal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. at L. 1088, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1588), § 330, which Code, in § 272, makes murder a crime against the United States when committed on "any lands reserved or acquired for the exclusive use of the United States, and under the exclusive jurisdiction thereof," has no application to the District of Columbia, which, in this respect, is governed by the District Code, which contains no provision for such a qualified verdict.

[Verdict in criminal cases, see Trial, IX. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — question not raised below — drawing jury.

4. The objection that the jury in a criminal case in the District of Columbia was not lawfully drawn should be taken at the trial, and is not available when first raised in the Federal Supreme Court,—especially in view of the provision of the District Code, § 919 (31 Stat. at L. 1338, chap. 854), that no verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might be alleged as ground of challenge before a jury is sworn, except for disqualifying bias not then discovered or suspected.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4638-4640a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 1075.]

Argued May 1 and 2, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of murder in the Supreme Court of the District. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 347.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Paca Oberlin and Thomas M. Baker (by special leave) argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph Salomon, filed a brief for petitioner:

A defendant in a capital case cannot waive anything essential.

Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128.

Reading of an indictment is necessary in all criminal cases unless waived, and in a capital case it cannot be waived; and the record in such a case, which is silent on that point, is the same in legal effect as if it recited that reading was waived, or indictment not read; and if either be true, the record is fatally defective.

Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952.

In capital and other infamous crimes both the arraignment and plea have always been regarded as a matter of substance, and must be affirmatively shown in the record.

Ibid.

From early times it has been true that whenever there was a statute in favor of life or liberty, that construction has been adopted by the courts which would cause it to operate in all places where it could so operate. A general act, prescribing the punishment of a specific offense throughout the state, operates as a repeal of a public local act prescribing a different punishment for a particular locality.

Nusser v. Com. 25 Pa. 126.

In the state of New York it was held that § 72 of the Penal Code, punishing the crime of bribery, repealed § 58 of the New York city consolidation act, providing for the same offense within the city of New York.

People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182, 8 N. E. 374.

An act changing the punishment only is not inconsistent with a failure to modify the elements of the crime also, especially when the punishment is made less.

Com. v. Wyman, 12 Cush. 237.

The rule of construction by which general acts of Congress are held to be applicable to the District of Columbia has been followed from the beginning.

Page v. Burnstine, 102 U. S. 664, 26 L. ed. 268; Chase v. United States, 7 App. D. C. 156.

For all time the Constitution fixes the purposes for which the District of Columbia was acquired, the method of acquisition being by cession from Virginia and Maryland. Congress has declared the District of Columbia to be accepted for the permanent seat of the government of the United States. The court will not look behind the declarations of the political department to see the actual uses to which the lands are put, in construing the application of statutes relating thereto.

Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 331, 36 L. ed. 994, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

Lands acquired "for the exclusive use of the United States, and under the exclusive jurisdiction thereof," are not merely those lands of which the United States has the exclusive use in the ordinary proprietary sense.

United States v. Penn, 48 Fed. 669.

But even then there are large tracts of land in the District of Columbia falling within that description, such, as the Capitol grounds, the arsenal grounds, sites for public buildings, and the streets and highways owned by the government in fee. The streets and public squares in the District of Columbia were conveyed "for the use of the United States forever."

Van Ness v. Washington, 4 Pet. 232, 284, 7 L. ed. 842, 859; District of Columbia v. Baltimore & P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 453, 460, 29 L. ed. 216, 220, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1098.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Johnson was indicted, tried, and convicted in the supreme court of the District of Columbia for the crime of murder for killing one Ofenstein, and sentenced to death.

409] *He moved for arrest of judgment and for new trial on certain grounds which, among others, present three questions—(1) whether he had been properly arraigned; (2) the action of the court in giving and refusing instructions in regard to the power of the jury to add to their verdict, if they found him guilty of murder, the words "without capital punishment;" (3) the legality of the manner of selecting the jury.

(1) The record recites the presence of the attorney for the United States, the defendant in proper person and by his attorney, and adds that "thereupon the defendant, being arraigned upon the indictment, pleads thereto not guilty, and for trial puts himself upon the country, and the attorney of the United States doth the like."

The contention is that there is a fatal defect in that the record does not show that the indictment was read to the defendant; and to establish that such reading was necessary counsel invoke the 6th

Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which provides, among other things, that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be informed of the nature and cause of the action against him. But to this it may be urged, as it is urged, that information of the charge may be given without reading the indictment. But we may pass that, and grant also that in capital and otherwise infamous crimes both the arraignment and plea are a matter of substance, and must be affirmatively shown by the record. We think that they are shown, if such be the fair intendment of the words of the record. And this is demonstrated by the case that is relied on against it; that is, Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952. In that case the record did not show (and we quote from the opinion) "that the accused was ever formally arraigned, or that he pleaded to the indictment," except as an inference from a statement in the bill of exceptions that the jury were "sworn and charged to try the issues joined." It was held, after elaborate discussion, *three members of the court[410 dissenting, that a plea to the indictment was not a matter of form, but of substance, and should be shown by the record. In the discussion and in the cases cited the arraignment was considered as distinct from the plea, and consisted of formally calling the accused to the bar for the purpose of a trial. We may quote as illustrative the following paragraph from pages 637, 638:

"According to Sir Matthew Hale, the arraignment consists of three parts, one of which, after the prisoner has been called to the bar, and informed of the charge against him, is, the 'demanding of him whether he be guilty or not guilty; and if he pleads not guilty, the clerk joins issue with him, cul. prist, and enters the prisoner's plea; then he demands how he will be tried; the common answer is, by God and the country, and thereupon the clerk enters po. se, and prays to God to send him a good deliverance.' 2 Hale, P. C. 219. So in Blackstone: 'To arraign is nothing else but to call the person to the bar of the court to answer the matter charged upon him in the indictment.' 'After which [after the indictment is read to the accused] it is to be demanded of him whether he is guilty of the crime whereof he stands indicted, or not guilty.' 4 Bl. Com. 322, 323 to 341. Chitty says: 'The proper mode of stating the arraignment on the record is in this form: "And being brought to the bar here in his own proper person, he is committed to the marshal," etc. And being asked how he will acquit himself of the premises (in case of felony, and of "the high treasons" in case of treason) "above laid to his charge, saith," etc. If this statement be omitted, it seems the record will be erroneous.' 1 Chitty, Crim. Law. *419."

There is no explicit provision in the laws of the United States describing what shall constitute an arraignment. But so far as it is expressed it has a definite meaning. By § 1032 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 722) it is [411] provided that "when any person indicted for any offense against the United States, whether capital or otherwise, upon his arraignment stands mute or refuses to plead or answer thereto, it shall be the duty of the court to enter the plea of not guilty on his behalf in the same manner as if he had pleaded not guilty thereto. And when the party pleads not guilty, or such plea is entered as aforesaid, the cause shall be deemed at issue, and shall, without further form or ceremony, be tried by a jury."

It will be observed that the word "arraignment" is used as comprehensively descriptive of what shall precede the plea. If it be so used in the law, it certainly can be used in the record as showing the performance of that which the law prescribes by it. We realize that both the Constitution and the law are careful to direct that information be given to the accused of the charge against him. By § 1033 it is provided that when any person is indicted for any capital offense, if it be treason, three days before the trial, and if it be any other capital offense, two days before the trial, a copy of the indictment and list of jurors and witnesses shall be delivered to him. And this can be insisted on. Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 429, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 38 L. ed. 170, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334. We may presume that the law was complied with in the present case and that Johnson was given a copy of the indictment as well as having had it read to him, which we think the record sufficiently shows; and as the record imports verity, it cannot be contradicted by an affidavit which counsel filed in the case, even if it had been filed for such purpose, which, according to counsel, it was not, but "to call the attention of the court to the defect on the face of the record." Evans v. Stettinisch, 149 U. S. 605, 607, 37 L. ed. 866, 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931.

(2) Prior to January 15, 1897, homicide, as a crime against the United States, was divided into murder and manslaughter "when committed within any fort, arsenal, dockyard, magazine, or in any place or district or *country under the exclu-[412 sive jurisdiction of the United States," and upon the high seas and certain waters out of the jurisdiction of any particular state. The punishment for murder was death; for manslaughter, a certain term of imprisonment. Sections 5336, 5340, 5343 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3624, 3628). The crime of rape, when committed in any of the specified places, was also punished by death. Section 5345.

By the act passed January 15, 1897, it was provided "that in all cases where the accused is found guilty of the crime of murder or of rape under sections fifty-three hundred and thirty-nine or fifty-three hundred and forty-five, Revised Statutes, the jury may qualify their verdict by adding thereto 'without capital punishment;' and whenever the jury shall return a verdict qualified as aforesaid, the person convicted shall be sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for life." 29 Stat. at L. 487, chap. 29, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3620. It will be observed that § 5339 of the Revised Statutes is made part of the act. By that section, re-enacting earlier acts of Congress, "every person who commits murder" "within any fort, arsenal, dockyard, magazine, or in any other place or district or country under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, . . . shall suffer death." The act was held applicable to the District of Columbia, and under its provisions and § 5339 until January 1, 1902, the date when the District Code became effective, murder was prosecuted. Winston v. United States, 172 U. S. 303, 43 L. ed. 456, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

By the District Code murder was divided into two degrees, and it was provided that the punishment for murder in the first degree should be "death by hanging." Punishment for manslaughter was fixed at imprisonment for life, or for not less than twenty years. Sections 798, 799 (this section made it murder in the first degree to put obstructions on a railroad or street railroad), 800 and 801 [31 Stat. at L. 1321, chap. 854.]

The District Code also changed the law as to rape, and fixed its punishment at not less than five nor more than thirty years, the jury having the power to add to their *verdict, if it be guilty, the[413 words "with the death penalty." Section 808.

It necessarily followed that the provision for the qualified verdict ceased to apply in the District. Thereafter the definitions and requirements of the District Code prevailed, and the death penalty was imposed for conviction of murder in the first degree for eight years.

In the meanwhile a commission was at work revising and codifying the criminal and penal laws of the United States, with the result that a Criminal Code was approved March 4, 1909 [35 Stat. at L. 1088, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1588]. It is the asserted clash between its provisions giving power to the jury to qualify their verdict and those of the District Code, under which, we have seen, the jury has not such power, that constitutes the question in this case.

That some provisions of the Criminal Code are applicable to the District is conceded. It is conceded by the government that the first ten chapters are applicable just as they are to the states, territories, and other districts, and that the same is true of chapter 12. The concession is put upon the ground that those chapters deal with offenses Federal in their nature. Chapter 13, it is said, relates to territorial jurisdiction and deals with certain offenses "when committed within any territory or district, or within or upon any place within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States." So far as the District Code deals with the offenses described in chapter 13, it is superseded by the Criminal Code.

The government says: "There seems to be no room for doubt of this. The offenses defined are to be punished as prescribed 'when committed within any territory or district, or within or upon any place within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States.' Sec. 311. The District of Columbia comes within this description. Then we find in § 319 that 'the provisions of this section shall apply only within the territories of the United States; and in 414]*§ 320, that 'the provisions of this section shall apply only within the territories of the United States and the District of Columbia.'"

The final concession of the government, therefore, is that "it cannot be said broadly that, in the enactment of the Criminal Code, there was no purpose to deal with or modify the District Code in any respect." But the government turns from these concessions and insists that chapter 11, in which murder is defined, was not intended to apply to the District. This is deduced from the report of the commission and § 272 of the chapter which defines the territorial extent and the application of the chapter. The commission in their report said: "In the revision of this chapter we have deemed it important to define with the greatest attainable precision the places within which the jurisdiction of the United States over crimes shall be exercised."

They adopted a definition by an enumeration of places. Among others, the following: "Any fort, arsenal, dockyard, magazine, other needful building, structure, reservation, or other place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States."

But the suggested definition was amended by the joint committee of Congress and became § 272 of the Criminal Code, which is less broad than the provision recommended by the commission. That section provides: "The crimes and offenses defined in this chapter [11] shall be punished as herein prescribed. . . . Third. When committed within or on any lands reserved or acquired for the exclusive use of the United States, and under the exclusive jurisdiction thereof, or any place purchased or otherwise acquired by the United States by consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of a fort, magazine, arsenal, dockyard, or other needful building." The difference to be observed between this provision and that recommended by the commission is the difference between "any[415 fort . . . or other place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States," and "any lands reserved or acquired for the exclusive use of the United States, and under the exclusive jurisdiction thereof." The word "lands" in the latter is limited, as the word "place" was in the former, by its association. It is further limited, and, indeed, specialized, by the qualification "reserved or acquired for the exclusive use of the United States." In other words, it has a proprietary, and not a governmental, sense, and is very inapt, indeed, to describe the District of Columbia.

This view is reinforced by a comparison of § 272 with §§ 5339 and 5570 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3627, 3739) which preceded it, and of which it was intended to take the place. Section 5570 was the predecessor of the fourth subdivision of § 272, and we have no concern with it. The other three subdivisions were preceded by § 5339, which provided as follows: "Every person who commits murder—First. Within any fort, arsenal, dockyard, magazine, or in any other place or district of country under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States;

"Second. . . .

"Third. . . . shall suffer death."

It will be observed, therefore, how general and comprehensive the first clause of § 5339 is, and in comparison how restricted and special is subd. 3 of § 272. In other words, there is omitted from the latter the words by which, we have seen, it was decided in Winston v. United States, supra, that the act of January 15, 1897, supra, which was the first legislation giving the power to a jury to qualify their verdict, was applicable to the District of Columbia.

A change of language is some evidence of a change of purpose, and certainly it could not have been supposed that the words "any lands reserved or acquired for the exclusive use of the United States," 416] used in § 272, would *be regarded as the equivalent in meaning of the words "district or country under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States," used in § 5339. And yet it is mainly on those words in § 272 that appellant relies. The District of Columbia can hardly be said, as we have pointed out, to be in any proper or adequate sense "lands reserved for the exclusive use of the United States," while the words "district or country under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States" can be, as they had been, properly and adequately held to include the District of Columbia.

Very little comment is necessary to show the purpose of the restricted language of § 272. Chapter 11 deals, as said by the government, with offenses of the kind subject to the jurisdiction of the states severally where there are states,—offenses not distinctively Federal in character, but subjects of local or domestic police. The territories provided their own laws in such cases, just as the states did, and there were distinct congressional enactments for Alaska and the District of Columbia which were not intended, we think, to be disturbed. This conclusion gets strength from § 289, which provides that if any act be done or omitted in any of the places mentioned in § 272 which is not made penal by a law of Congress, but is penal "within the territorial limits of any state, recognized territory, or district," shall remain penal notwithstanding a "subsequent repeal or amendment thereof by any such state or territory or district."

It follows, therefore, we think, that chapter 11 of the Criminal Code, and necessarily § 272, which is a part of it, are not applicable to the District of Columbia. And it is an immediate inference that if the chapter defining the crime of murder is not applicable, chapter 14, which deals with its trial and incidents, may not be applicable. There are circumstances which confirm the inference.

In chapter 11 the definition of murder is essentially the same as in the District 417] Code, though there are some *differences in the manner of expression. It is divided into murder in the first degree and murder in the second degree, and in both the punishment is death, the District Code providing the manner of death to be by hanging, as does the Criminal Code, in § 323 of chapter 14.

The punishment for murder in the second degree is different in the different Codes. In the District Code it is imprisonment for life or for not less than twenty years; in the Criminal Code, for life or for not more than ten years. The punishments for manslaughter are also different, being for not more than ten years in the Criminal Code and not exceeding fifteen years in the District Code, or such imprisonment and a fine not exceeding $1,000.

This brings us to the consideration of chapter 14, of which it may be said that most of its sections are continuations of the sections of the Revised Statutes or of former acts of Congress. For instance, § 330, which provides for the qualified verdict, is the same as the act of January 15, 1897, chap. 29, § 1 (29 Stat. at L. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3620), except that the words "murder in the first degree" are added.

Further comparisons of the sections and provisions of the Codes will not help us to clarify the situation, which, it must be admitted, lends itself to controversy.

We think, however, that there are certain general considerations which control. The Codes are separate instruments, and no certain test can be deduced from pointing out particular likenesses or differences. But the effect of separation is important and necessarily had its purpose. The Codes had in the main special spheres of operation, and provisions accommodated to such spheres. There is certainly nothing anomalous in punishing the crime of murder differently in different jurisdictions. It is but the application of legislation to conditions. But if it be anomalous, very little argument can be drawn from it to solve the questions in controversy. The difference *existed for a number of years[418 between the District and other places under national jurisdiction, for, as we have seen, the qualified verdict has not existed in the District since the enactment of the District Code, and did not exist when the Criminal Code was enacted. There is certainly nothing in the mere act of enacting that Code which declares an intention to give to the provision conferring power on a jury to qualify their verdict greater efficacy against the Code of the District than the same provision in the act of January 15, 1897, possessed. And the difference between that act and the District Code we cannot assume was overlooked, and all that it meant in the administration of criminal justice, when Congress came to review the laws of the country for the purpose of their codification and necessarily the territorial extent of their operation.

Congress certainly, in enacting the District Code, recognized the expediency of separate provisions for the District of Columbia. It was said at the bar, and not denied, that the District Code was not only the work of the lawyers of the District, having in mind the needs of the District, but of its citizens as well, expressed through various organizations and bodies of them. In yielding to the recommendations Congress made no new precedent. It had given local control to the territories, and it enacted a separate Code for Alaska.

But it is said that Congress recognized the incompleteness of the District Code, and provided that all inconsistent acts of Congress passed thereafter should be held to modify its provisions, and to support this § 1639 is cited: That section provides as follows:

"The enactment of this Code is not to affect or repeal any act of Congress which may be passed between the date of this act and the date when this act is to go into effect; and all acts of Congress that may be passed hereafter are to have full effect [19]as if passed after the enactment *of this Code; and, so far as such acts may vary from or conflict with any provision contained in this Code, they are to have effect as subsequent statutes and as repealing any portion of this act inconsistent therewith." [31 Stat. at L. 1436, chap. 854.]

In connection with this section, § 341 of the Criminal Code is referred to, which is as follows:

"Also all other sections and parts of sections of the Revised Statutes and acts and parts of acts of Congress, in so far as they are embraced within and superseded by this act, are hereby repealed; the remaining portions thereof to be and remain in force with the same effect and to the same extent as if this act had not been passed."

This section adds no force or explanation to § 1639. Of course, what was "embraced within and superseded by" the Criminal Code is repealed by it. But we have to consider, as we have considered, whether the provision of the District Code in regard to the punishment of murder was embraced within the Criminal Code, and the discussion answers as well the contention based on § 1639. There is no inconsistency of superseding or repealing effect between the Code of the District and the Criminal Code, regarding the latter as 56 L. ed.

an act of Congress passed after the District Code. Having definite territorial operation, they can exist together. And, as said by the court of appeals, a cogent reason for the conclusion that they were intended to exist together is found in the repealing provisions of the Criminal Code, which, in chapter 15, enumerates in detail the provisions repealed, and no reference is made to the District Code.

(3) The last contention of petitioner is that the jury was not lawfully drawn. This contention is made as a make-weight at the last minute. It was not made as a ground for new trial or arrest of judgment, nor was it assigned as error in the court of appeals. The contention has the broad basis, according to the argument of petitioner, that there is no way of impaneling jurors in a *capital case in [420] the District of Columbia without assenting to or dissenting from the proposition. We think it constituted a ground of objection to the competency of the jurors when they were called, and should have been availed of at the trial. It is provided by § 919 of the District Code [31 Stat. at L. 1398, chap. 854] that no verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might be alleged as ground of challenge before a juror is sworn, except for disqualifying bias not discovered or suspected by the defendant or his counsel before the juror was sworn. Judgment affirmed.

J. WESLEY GLASGOW, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM H. MOYER, Warden of the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 420-430.)

Habeas corpus — as substitute for writ of error.

Habeas corpus will not issue as a substitute for a writ of error in favor of a person in custody under a conviction in a Federal circuit court having jurisdiction of the case, to review its holding that the affidavit of prejudice authorized by the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1087, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128), § 21, could not be filed after the case had been tried and verdict rendered, or to test the correctness of the NOTE.—On habeas corpus in the Federal courts—see notes to Re Reinitz, 4 L.R.A. 236; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to habeas corpus to test constitutionality of statute—see note to Hovey v. Elliott, 39 L.R.A. 449.

court's rulings upon his defenses of law or fact, although the law which was the foundation of the indictment and trial is asserted to be unconstitutional or uncertain in the description of the offense.

[For other cases, see Habeas Corpus, 64-67, 108-119, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 1123.]

Argued May 13, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Georgia to review an order refusing relief by habeas corpus. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Fay argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles Colden Miller, filed a brief for appellant.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is prosecuted to review the order of the district court, denying petition of appellant to be discharged in proceedings for habeas corpus from the custody of the warden of the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia.

The petition alleges the following: On the 21st of July 1911, while appellant was temporarily in Wilmington, Delaware, he was arrested and charged with peddling books without a license, and was convicted in the municipal court of the city and fined $5. The judgment was almost immediately remitted and he was re-arrested and charged with having deposited in the United States mails a copy of an obscene book, and by one William G. Mahaffy, a United States commissioner, committed to the custody of the warden of the Newcastle County Workhouse to await the action of the grand jury. Under the direction of the United States attorney his rooms were pillaged and all of his possessions, clothing, books, etc., were carried off and deposited in the United States courthouse. Before his conviction he was stripped of his clothing, dressed in prison garb, harsh prison rules were enforced against him, and he was fed on unwholesome food. He was so confined and treated until a grand jury, selected by the commissioner who had committed him, found an indictment against him charging him with having deposited an obscene book in the United States mails, and without seeing a copy of the indictment or knowing its contents, he was arraigned in his prison clothes, notwithstanding the indictment charged no offense against the laws of the United States and was couched in vague and uncertain language that did not apprise him of the offense (defects which he brought to the attention of the judge of the district court by pleas to the jurisdiction, demurrers, and motions to quash, all of which were overruled), and he was placed on trial before a jury selected by the commissioner who had committed him. Although the array was challenged for that cause and the number of peremptory challenges prescribed by law were not allowed him, he was forced to trial, and the jury, under instructions from the court, was constrained to find a verdict against him, papers material to his defense having been withheld by the United States attorney, with the acquiescence of the judge, and process for nonresident witnesses having been refused.

Motions in arrest of judgment and for a new trial were filed and the hearing thereof fixed for January 6, 1912, before Edward G. Bradford, district judge, who, having exhibited during the trial a deep-seated prejudice against appellant and a violent partiality in his rulings for the United States attorney, appellant in good faith, as in law he was entitled to do, filed an affidavit charging him, the district judge, with prejudice, and an application to have the same certified to the senior circuit judge, then present in the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, together with the required certificate of counsel as required by law.

The petition further alleged that by the filing of the same and by operation of the act of March 3, 1911 [36 Stat. at L. 1087, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128], which went into operation January 1, 1912, the district judge became and was disqualified to further proceed in said cause, and any further action taken by him was without jurisdiction and absolutely null and void; further alleged that the judge forbade the clerk to enter of record the affidavit, forbade the clerk to certify the same to the senior circuit judge, proceeded to overrule the motions in arrest of judgment and for a new trial, and, against the protest of appellant, sentenced him to confinement in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia, for a term of fifteen months from the 6th of January, 1912, and to pay a fine of $500.

Appellant, the petition alleged, was placed in the hands of the United States marshal and by him imprisoned by force in his (the marshal's) office from about 1 P. M., January 6, 1912, without being permitted to return to the court house to get his personal property there, and at midnight was spirited away by a circuitous route to Norfolk, Virginia, where he was imprisoned all night and all of the next day (Sunday). Thence he was taken, manacled, without being supplied with food or being allowed to purchase any, and delivered under the unlawful order of the district court to the custody of the appellee, by whom he has ever since been confined in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia.

426] *Appellant, the petition alleged is, by the action recited, not only unlawfully imprisoned, but by the refusal to certify his application, affidavit, and certificate of counsel to the senior circuit judge, "there is now no judge of the United States district court of Delaware, and no one there authorized to pass upon his motions in arrest of judgment or motion for a new trial, or competent to sit and certify to the exceptions reserved by him to the many errors committed by said Judge Bradford during his trial, or to permit him to have the same reviewed and set aside by an appellate tribunal."

The allegations of the petition were denied by the district judge.

A writ of habeas corpus was prayed, to the end that appellant be discharged or cause to the contrary be shown.

The writ was issued, but upon its return and hearing appellant was remanded to custody.

The court, as grounds for its decision, said: "The real question in this case is whether or not, under § 21[†] of the new Judicial Code, an affidavit such as provided for therein can be filed after a case has been tried" and verdict rendered, and the attempt is to disqualify a judge from pronouncing sentence. The court pointed out that in the case at bar there was also the circumstance that the case had been tried and the verdict rendered before the Code went into effect, and the court thought that it could not be conceived that it was the purpose of Congress to apply the act to such a situation, the section itself providing that the affidavit should be filed not less than ten days before the beginning of the term of the court, or good cause shown for failure to file within that time. The court said further: "It would require some specific language in this act to satisfy me that Congress intended such an affidavit to be filed at the stage which had been reached in this case."

*The court, however, finally concluded that the action of the district court of Delaware "was a matter for review by the circuit court of appeals on writ of error" and was "clearly beyond the proper scope and use of the" writ of habeas corpus.

The assignments of error attack the action of the district court for error (1) in holding that §§ 20 and 21 of the Judicial Code did not apply to the case at bar; (2) in holding that Judge Bradford had jurisdiction to impose the imprisonment complained of; and (3) in refusing the writ and dismissing the petition. But questions are raised here which were not presented in the petition in the court below or passed on by that court. Section 211 of the Criminal Code [35 Stat. at L. 1129, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1651] (which makes it a crime to deposit obscene books in the mails),[‡] under which appellant was indicted, is attacked as unconstitutional because (a) it is not within *the constitutional grant^[428] of legislative power to Congress, in that it does not confine its operation to depositing matter in the United States postoffice or other authorized depository for United States mail; (b) it does not inform appellant of the nature of the accusation against him nor describe an offense with [†]"Sec. 21. Whenever a party to any action or proceeding, civil or criminal, shall make and file an affidavit that the judge before whom the action or proceeding is to be tried or heard has a personal bias or prejudice either against him or in favor of any opposite party to the suit, such judge shall proceed no further therein, but another judge shall be designated in the manner prescribed in the section last preceding, or chosen in the manner prescribed in § 23, to hear such matter. Every such affidavit shall state the facts and the reasons for the belief that such bias or prejudice exists, and shall be filed not less than ten days before the beginning of the term of the court, or good cause shall be shown for the failure to file it within such time. No party shall be entitled in any case to file more than one such affidavit; and no such affidavit shall be filed unless accompanied by a certificate of counsel of record that such affidavit and application are made in good faith. . . ."

[‡]"Sec. 211. Every obscene, lewd, or lascivious, and every filthy book, pamphlet, . . . is hereby declared to be nonmailable matter, and shall not be conveyed in the mails or delivered from any postoffice or by any letter carrier. Whoever shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited for mailing or delivery, anything declared by this section to be nonmailable, . . . shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both."

certainty; (c) it is an ex post facto law; (d) appellant was deprived of his liberty and property without due process of law. It is also asserted that § 211 does not create an offense against the United States.

Appellant, however, even if, in the absence of all proof of their truth, the recitals of the petition which we have previously stated be accepted for the purpose of this proceeding only as true, encounters an obstacle to a consideration of his contentions in the limitation upon the scope of a writ of habeas corpus, and this limitation was the ultimate ground of the decision of the district court.

The writ of habeas corpus cannot be made to perform the office of a writ of error. This has been decided many times, and, indeed, was the ground upon which a petition of appellant for habeas corpus to this court, before his trial, was decided. It is true, as we have said, that the case had not then been tried, but the principle is as applicable and determinative after trial as before trial. This was decided in one of the cases cited,—Re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 50 L. ed. 984, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602, which cited other cases to the same effect. Subsequent cases have made the principle especially pertinent to the case at bar. Harlan v. McGourin, 218 U. S. 442, 54 L. ed. 1101, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44, 21 Ann. Cas. 849, was an appeal from a judgment discharging a writ of habeas corpus petitioned for after conviction, and it was held that the writ could not be used for the purpose of proceedings in error, but was confined to a determination whether the restraint of liberty was without authority of law. In other words, as it was said, "Upon habeas corpus the court examines only the power and authority of the court to act, not the correctness of its [29] conclusions." Re Gregory*, 219 U. S. 210, 55 L. ed. 184, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 143, was a writ of habeas corpus brought after conviction, and we said that we were not concerned with the question whether the information upon which the petitioner was prosecuted and convicted was sufficient or whether the case set forth in an agreed statement of facts constituted a crime—that is to say, whether the court properly applied the law—if it be found that the court had jurisdiction to try the issues and to render judgment. And for this many cases were cited.

The principle is not the less applicable because the law which was the foundation of the indictment and trial is asserted to be unconstitutional or uncertain in the description of the offense. Those questions, like others, the court is invested with jurisdiction to try if raised, and its decision can be reviewed, like its decisions upon other questions, by writ of error. The principle of the cases is the simple one that if a court has jurisdiction of the case, the writ of habeas corpus cannot be employed to re-try the issues, whether of law, constitutional or other, or of fact.

We have already pointed out that appellant, before his trial, petitioned this court in habeas corpus and that his petition was denied on the ground that his proper remedy was by writ of error after trial. In his petition he charged mistreatment by the prison authorities, the taking of his papers and property from his room and from the express office, and, that although he informed the United States attorney, no permission was granted him to examine his papers for his defense. He also in the petition attacked the indictment against him on the ground that it described no offense against the laws of the United States, nor an offense "against any valid law of the United States, and afforded no justification for his imprisonment." The petition was accompanied by a brief which presented the same contentions as those now presented, though less elaborately.

*Having remitted him to a writ of [430] error as a remedy, it would be a contradiction of the ruling, he not having availed himself of the remedy, to permit him to prosecute habeas corpus. The ground of the decision was that there was an orderly procedure prescribed by law for him to pursue; in other words, to set up his defenses of fact and law, whether they attacked the indictment for insufficiency or the validity of the law under which it was found; and, if the decision was against him, test its correctness through the proper appellate tribunals. It certainly cannot be said that the district court of Delaware did not have jurisdiction of the case, including those defenses, or that its rulings could not have been reviewed by the circuit court of appeals or by this court by writ of error. It would introduce confusion in the administration of justice if the defense which might have been made in an action could be reserved as grounds of attack upon the judgment after the trial and verdict.

Order discharging writ affirmed.

CITY OF LOUISVILLE, Appt.,
v.
CUMBERLAND TELEPHONE & TELE-GRAPH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 430-436.)

Injunction — against municipal ordinance — telephone rates — confiscation.

The enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing telephone rates should not be enjoined as confiscatory before giving such ordinance a trial to show its actual effect, where the evidence leaves the probable result very close to the dividing line between the yield of a fair return and confiscation. [For other cases, see Injunction, I. h. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 761.]

Argued March 7 and 8, 1912. Decided
June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing telephone rates. Reversed without prejudice.

See same case below, 187 Fed. 637.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Clayton B. Blakey and Huston Quin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph S. Lawton, filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. William L. Granbery and Alexander Pope Humphrey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alexander Pope Humphrey, Jr., filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to prevent the enforcement of an ordinance of the city of Louisville fixing telephone rates, passed in 1909, after the attempt of the city to deprive the appellee of its franchise, when that seemed likely to fail. See Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. [May 13, 1912, 224 U. S. 649, ante, 934, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572]. The question raised is the usual one of confiscation. *In consequence of the conclusion to which we have come we shall make a much more summary statement of the facts than in other circumstances might be necessary. The case was referred to a master and he reported in favor of the city. He was of opinion that in the first year after the ordinance should go into effect there would be a loss of $30,000, but that in another year or so, in view of the probable increase of subscribers, the company would get back to its former net revenue with a probable continuous increase thereafter and would earn a sufficient return. The judge was of a different opinion, and for the purposes of the present decision only we shall adopt his figures, subject to the changes that we shall state, which leave us unprepared to sustain the decree without giving the ordinance a trial to show its actual effect.

NOTE.—On legislative regulation of tolls, rates, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

On the power of municipality, apart from contract, to regulate the rates to be charged by a public-service corporation—see note to Bluefield Waterworks & Improv. Co. v. Bluefield, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 759. 56 L. ed.

The judge's values were:

Plant, including toll lines	$1,575,000.00
Real estate	162,000.00
Supplies on hand	18,000.00
Working capital	33,000.00
	<hr/>
	$1,788,000.00

Gross earnings for 1908, including 15 per cent of receipts from toll lines. This was undisputed

$325,838.30

The court added 10 per cent more of the toll line receipts, making

330,926.38

The master was of opinion that the remaining 85 per cent should be added, making the total gross earnings

369,087.00

For the purpose of such an estimate as this we think that the toll lines should be either in or out, and if they are to be counted in the property upon which the appellee is not to be prevented by law from earning a fair return, as they are above, and the expenses charged to the appellee, the whole return from them should be added to the gross earnings of the appellee. So we take the total gross earnings as

369,087.00

Expenses as found by the master and accepted by the judge

$216,363.07

But this includes amount charged to the Exchange for the use of real estate (less expenses for repairs), which, in view of the inclusion of real estate above, it should not

11,707.52

$204,655.55

Deduct corrected expenses from gross earnings	204,655.55
Net earnings	$164,431.45
Even if we deduct from the net earnings a sum estimated by the judge as necessary above actual expenditures of 1908 to make good average depreciation	24,095.02
we have	$140,336.43
which is nearly 8 per cent on the estimated value. The master prophesies a falling off for the first year of	30,000.00
which would leave	$110,336.43 or over 6 per cent on the valuation assumed.
435] *Suppose now that we leave out the toll lines.
Plant, with real estate, etc., as above	$1,788,000.00
Deduct toll lines estimated at ..	125,000.00
	$1,663,000.00
Gross earnings	325,838.30
Less 15 per cent from toll lines..	7,632.11
	$318,206.19
Expenses	$216,363.07
Less amount charged for use of real estate as above	11,707.52
	$204,655.55
Less toll line expenses which if estimated (in the absence of satisfactory proof as to their amount) by dividing expenses in proportion to receipts would be approximately	30,000.00
	$174,655.55
Deduct corrected expenses from gross earnings	174,655.55
	$143,550.64
Additional deduction for depreciation as before	24,095.02
	$119,455.62
Which is nearly 7 per cent, or, deducting for loss of custom the first year	30,000.00
	$89,455.62

which is just above 5 per cent on the judge's valuation.

436] *We express no opinion whether to cut this telephone company down to 6 per cent by legislation would or would not be confiscatory. But when it is remembered what clear evidence the court requires before it declares legislation otherwise valid void on this ground, and when it is considered how speculative every figure is that we have set down with delusive exactness, we are of opinion that the result is too near the dividing line not to make actual experiment necessary. The master thought that the probable net income for the year that would suffer the greatest decrease would be 8.60 per cent on the values estimated by him. The judge, on assumptions to which we have stated our disagreement, makes the present earnings 51⁹/₁₇ per cent, with a reduction by the ordinance to 36¹/₁₇ per cent. The whole question is too much in the air for us to feel authorized to let the injunction stand. Decree reversed without prejudice.

ROSEWELL E. MESSINGER, Petitioner,
v.
PETER ANDERSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 436-445.)

Second appeal—law of case.

1. The phrase "law of the case," as applied to the effect of a decision of an appellate court in an earlier appeal in the same case, merely expresses, in the absence of statute, the practice of courts generally to refuse to reopen what has been decided, and not a limit to their power.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5624-5648, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Second appeal — law of case — earlier appeal to lower court.

2. A prior decision of a Federal circuit court of appeals is not the law of the case for the Supreme Court when reviewing a later decision of the former court in the same case.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5649-5651, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — following decisions of state courts — wills.

3. No sufficient reason exists which will justify the refusal of a Federal court to follow the decision of a state court that the sons of the testator took not merely a life estate, but a fee, subject to be defeated only by their death without lineal descendants, under a will which, after providing that the testamentary trustees shall pay over a moiety to each son upon his attaining a specified age, states that "if either of my sons die without lineal descendants, the one surviving shall take his estate above bequeathed, and if the survivor die without lineal descendants, then" the estate shall go to the brothers and sisters of the testator, with a subsequent provision that nothing in the will shall be construed to deprive the sons of the power to dispose of their portions by will.

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals—see note to Hastings v. Foxworthy, 34 L.R.A. 321.

As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Forcpaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1976-1983, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 150.]

Argued January 19 and 22, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which, on a third writ of error, affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Ohio in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Reversed.

See same case below, first appeal, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1094, 77 C. C. A. 179, 146 Fed. 929; second appeal, 85 C. C. A. 468, 158 Fed. 250; third appeal, 96 C. C. A. 445, 171 Fed. 785.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Harry E. King and Clayton W. Everett argued the cause, and, with Mr. Oliver B. Snider, filed a brief for petitioner:

Until the last judgment of the circuit court, no final judgment was rendered herein.

Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167-177, 32 L. ed. 895-899, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

This court, upon its writ of certiorari herein, has power to review each of the three judgments of the circuit court of appeals and the last judgment of the circuit court.

Panama R. Co. v. Napier Shipping Co. 166 U. S. 280-284, 41 L. ed. 1004, 1005, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; William W. Bierce v. Waterhouse, 219 U. S. 320, 331, 332, 55 L. ed. 237, 241, 242, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

The word "property," used in the will in the devise to William Anderson, shows an intention to devise a fee, and is sufficient to do so.

Carter v. Gray, 58 N. J. Eq. 411, 43 Atl. 711; Doe ex dem. Chamberlain v. Owings, 30 Md. 455; Piatt v. Sinton, 37 Ohio St. 353.

The word "estate," in the devise to the surviving son, is the most general, significant and operative that can be used in a will, and according to all the cases may embrace every degree and species of interest,—it carries a fee from its established and legal import and operation.

Lambert v. Paine, 3 Cranch, 97-134, 2 L. ed. 377-390.

The view of the circuit court of appeals is contrary to a long-settled rule of property in Ohio.

Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 352; Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563; Niles v. Gray, 12 Ohio St. 331; Taylor v. Foster, 17 Ohio St. 166; Piatt v. Sinton, 37 Ohio St. 355; Martin v. Lapham, 38 Ohio St. 541; Collins v. Collins, 40 Ohio St. 353; Anderson v. United Realty Co. 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644; Walker v. Walker, 20 Ohio C. C. 409, 11 Ohio C. D. 291; Darlington v. Compton, 20 Ohio C. C. 242, 10 Ohio C. D. 467; Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 Ohio St. 244, 50 N. E. 721; Pendleton v. Bowler, 27 Ohio L. J. 316.

The Federal courts must look to the law of the state in which land is situated for the rules which govern its descent, alienation, and transfer, and for the effect and construction of wills and other instruments conveying title thereto, and in trials at law must regard the state law as a rule of decision.

Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 627, 634, 24 L. ed. 858, 861; De Vaughn v. Hutchinson, 165 U. S. 566, 570, 41 L. ed. 827, 829, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 190, 191, 44 L. ed. 1028, 1030, 1031, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 286, 46 L. ed. 196, 201, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; East Central Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co. 204 U. S. 266, 272, 51 L. ed. 476, 481, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Olmsted v. Olmsted, 216 U. S. 386, 54 L. ed. 530, 25 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292.

The circuit court of appeals did not follow the Ohio decisions and statute, and therein erred.

Roberts v. Lewis, 153 U. S. 367, 38 L. ed. 747, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; Yocum v. Parker, 67 C. C. A. 227, 134 Fed. 205; Bilger v. Nunan, 186 Fed. 665; Devecmon v. Shaw, 70 Md. 226, 16 Atl. 645.

Decisions construing statutes like the Ohio statute are pertinent here.

Page, Wills, § 562, pp. 653, 654; Devecmon v. Shaw, 70 Md. 226, 16 Atl. 645; Snyder v. Baer, 144 Pa. 278, 13 L.R.A. 359, 22 Atl. 897; Kiefel v. Keppler, 173 Pa. 181, 33 Atl. 1043; Simonds v. Simonds, 168 Mass. 146, 46 N. E. 421; Harris v. Dyer, 18 R. I. 543, 28 Atl. 971; May v. San Antonio & A. P. Town Site Co. 83 Tex. 502, 18 S. W. 959.

Independently of statute, the will devised only a defeasible fee.

Thompson v. Hoop, 6 Ohio St. 480; Schouler, Wills, 262, p. 549; Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563; Niles v. Gray, 12 Ohio St. 320; Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 352; Piatt v. Sinton, 37 Ohio St. 353; Taylor v. Foster, 17 Ohio St. 166; Collins v. Collins, 40 Ohio St. 353; Duffee v. MacNeil, 58 Ohio St. 238, 50 N. E. 721; Anderson v. United Realty Co. 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644; Darlington v. Compton, 20 Ohio C. C. 242, 10 Ohio C. D. 467.

Since the will provided a limitation over on a definite failure of issue, an estate tail or an estate in remainder was not and could not have been created or implied, and such an estate could only have been created or implied from a limitation over on an indefinite failure of issue, which by will may occur without reference to any particular time.

4 Kent, Com. pp. 274, 275; 1 Tiffany, Real Prop. § 25, p. 63; 2 Jarman, Wills, 6th ed. p. 1320; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 5th ed. pp. 355, *753; Niles v. Gray, 12 Ohio St. 330; Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563.

A limitation over after definite failure of issue creates a defeasible fee.

Pells v. Brown, Cro. Jac. 590; De Wolf v. Middleton, 18 R. I. 813, 31 L.R.A. 146, 26 Atl. 44, 31 Atl. 271; Toman v. Dunlop, 18 Pa. 76; Jordan v. Roach, 32 Miss. 608; Daniel v. Thomson, 14 B. Mon. 670; Den ex dem. Wardell v. Allaire, 20 N. J. L. 6; Page, Wills, § 591.

The construction of the Anderson will by the circuit court of appeals rests largely upon three cases which have been either discredited or overruled in the several states in which they arose; viz.: Shaw v. Hoard, 18 Ohio St. 228; Wetter v. United Hydraulic Cotton Press Co. 75 Ga. 540; Carr v. Green, 2 M'Cord, L. 75.

Anderson v. United Realty Co. 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644; Matthews v. Hudson, 81 Ga. 126, 12 Am. St. Rep. 305, 7 S. E. 286; Chewning v. Shumate, 106 Ga. 751, 32 S. E. 544; Hill v. Terrell, 123 Ga. 49, 51 S. E. 81; Kinard v. Hale, 128 Ga. 485, 57 S. E. 761; Carr v. Jeannerett, 2 M'Cord, L. 66; Durant v. Nash, 30 S. C. 184, 9 S. E. 19; Gordon v. Gordon, 32 S. C. 563, 11 S. E. 334; Powers v. Bullwinkle, 33 S. C. 293, 11 S. E. 971; Thomson v. Peake, 38 S. C. 440, 17 S. E. 45; Sheppard v. Jones, 77 S. C. 279, 57 S. E. 844.

The decision of the circuit court of appeals is also opposed to the decisions of the highest court of Mississippi, where the testator resided when his will was drawn, executed, and took effect.

Jordan v. Roach, 32 Miss. 604; Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 231, 77 Am. Dec. 671; Busby v. Rhodes, 58 Miss. 237; Johnson v. Delome Land & Planting Co. 77 Miss. 15, 26 So. 360; Halsey v. Gee, 79 Miss. 193, 30 So. 604.

The decision of the circuit court of appeals is also contrary to the decisions of the highest courts of all the states comprising the territory over which the jurisdiction of that court extends in addition to Ohio; to-wit: Kentucky, Tennessee, and Michigan.

Hart v. Thompson, 3 B. Mon. 482; Daniel v. Thomson, 14 B. Mon. 862; Harris v. Berry, 7 Bush, 113; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush, 636; Crozier v. Cundall, 99 Ky. 202, 35 S. W. 546; Smith v. Ballard, 117 Ky. 179, 77 S. W. 714; Harvey v. Bell, 118 Ky. 512, 81 S. W. 671; Rice v. Rice, 133 Ky. 406, 118 S. W. 270; Williamson v. Tunis, 107 Tenn. 83, 64 S. W. 10; Mullreed v. Clark, 110 Mich. 229, 68 N. W. 138, 989.

The decision of the circuit court of appeals is also contrary to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 352; Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526, 28 L. ed. 816, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Roberts v. Lewis, 153 U. S. 367, 38 L. ed. 747, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945.

And, in addition to the state courts above cited, is contrary to the decisions of the highest courts of the following states:

Newsom v. Holesapple, 101 Ala. 682, 15 So. 644; Carter v. Couch, 157 Ala. 470, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 858, 47 So. 1006; Friedman v. Steiner, 107 Ill. 125; Summers v. Smith, 127 Ill. 645, 21 N. E. 191; Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 540, 86 N. E. 386; Kendall v. Taylor, 245 Ill. 617, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 164, 92 N. E. 562; Greer v. Wilson, 108 Ind. 322, 9 N. E. 284; Woodman v. Madigan, 58 N. H. 6; Steward v. Knight, 62 N. J. Eq. 232, 49 Atl. 535; Hilleary v. Hilleary, 26 Md. 274; Hutehins v. Pearce, 80 Md. 434, 31 Atl. 501; Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208; Gannon v. Pauk, 200 Mo. 75, 98 S. W. 471; Schnitter v. McManaman, 85 Neb. 337, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1047, 123 N. W. 299; Taylor v. Maris, 90 N. C. 619; Trexler v. Holler, 107 N. C. 617, 12 S. E. 288; Randall v. Josselyn, 59 Vt. 563, 10 Atl. 577; Chaplin v. Doty, 60 Vt. 712, 15 Atl. 362; Atkinson v. McCormick, 76 Va. 791; Randolph v. Wright, 81 Va. 608; Johnson v. Richmond Citizens' Bank, 83 Va. 63, 1 S. E. 705; Dent v. Pickens, 61 W. Va. 488, 58 S. E. 1029.

And is also contrary to the views and conclusions of leading authors on wills.

1 Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's 6th ed. 555; Underhill, Wills, § 468; Page, Wills, §§ 676, 797.

Messrs. Rhea P. Cary and C. H. Trimble argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The decision of the Ohio supreme court is not one which the circuit court of appeals was under obligation to follow as a local rule of property.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33, 35, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 366, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The construction placed by the circuit court of appeals upon Henry Anderson's will was correct.

Holton v. Doe, 23 N. J. L. 330; Lytle v. Beveridge, 58 N. Y. 592; Re Stafford, 11 Misc. 436, 33 N. Y. Supp. 419; Bentley v. Kaufman, 12 Phila. 435; McAlpin's Estate, 211 Pa. 26, 60 Atl. 321; Beilstein v. Beilstein, 194 Pa. 152, 75 Am. St. Rep. 692, 45 Atl. 73.

Petitioner's construction of the will is impossible, because of the destructive effect of the power of disposition upon the executory devise.

Jackson ex dem. Brewster v. Bull, 10 Johns. 19; Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N. H. 275, 13 Am. Rep. 23; 4 Kent, Com. 270.

If only a life estate is granted, a power of disposition in the life tenant does not invalidate a remainder over.

Kelley v. Meins, 135 Mass. 234; Ramsdell v. Ramsdell, 21 Me. 288; Larned v. Bridge, 17 Pick. 339; Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N. H. 273, 13 Am. Rep. 23.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of ejectment for land 442] in Toledo, Ohio, *brought by the respondent, Anderson. The case went three times to the circuit court of appeals, and ended in a judgment for the plaintiff. 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1094, 77 C. C. A. 179, 146 Fed. 929; 85 C. C. A. 468, 158 Fed. 250; 96 C. C. A. 445, 171 Fed. 785. The facts that need to be stated are these: In 1841 Charles Butler assigned an overdue mortgage of the land to Henry Anderson as security for a note of his own. He made default, Anderson brought a bill to foreclose (Butler not being served with process), got a decree, bought in, and got the sale confirmed. For the purposes of this decision it may be assumed that Anderson got the land in fee simple, subject to some question as to Butler's rights. The plaintiff below, the respondent here, claimed as remainderman under the will of Henry Anderson, who was his grandfather. The petitioner claims under a conveyance from Butler. If the plaintiff's title is bad, that is an end of the case.

In 1846 Henry Anderson, then domiciled in Mississippi, made his will and died, leaving two sons, William and James. These sons executed deeds declaring that their father, Henry, held and intended to hold the land in trust to secure the payment of Butler's note, and Butler subsequently made such payments on the same that it may be assumed that unless the plaintiff has a title that his father, James, could not affect by the above-mentioned deed, he has none. Whether he has such a title depends on the terms of Henry's will. That instrument, after creating a general trust of substantially all the testator's property, went on thus: "Item. It is my will that when my son William arrives at the age of twenty-one years the trustees . . . shall deliver to him a settlement of the affairs of the trust, and if my debts are then paid, and as soon as that takes place, they shall put him in possession of one half of my property, reserving thereout two-fifth parts of said moiety, by valuation, which my said trustees shall hold in trust and properly invest and pay over to *him at the age[443 of twenty-five years. . . . And it is my will that my said trustees hold and invest and pay over the remaining moiety of my estate to my son James at the respective periods of twenty-one and twenty-five years of age, being governed as to the amounts to be paid at each of the respective periods by the same rules and directions as are above laid down in the bequest to William," etc.

If these clauses were all, there would be no doubt that William and James got an absolute title when they reached the age mentioned. But a following paragraph reads: "If either of my sons die without lineal descendants, the one surviving shall take his estate above bequeathed, and if the survivor die without lineal descendants, then" over to brothers and sisters of the testator. Later in the paragraph the testator says: "I make the following explanation: The limitations over on the death of my surviving son without lineal descendants is intended to take effect if there be no lineal descendants living at the time of the decease of such son. Nothing in the foregoing will shall be construed as to deprive either of my sons of disposing of their portions by will on their attaining the age of twenty-one years respectively. The above limitations over shall give way to the provision of such wills." The testator's son William died in 1850, unmarried and intestate. The other son, James, died in 1902, intestate and leaving the plaintiff his only child.

The circuit court of appeals, when this case first came up, held that James took only a life estate, and that the plaintiff got a remainder that his father could not affect. 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1094, 77 C. C. A. 179, 146 Fed. 929. But pending the proceedings another case was tried in the state courts between these same parties concerning other parcels of land in Toledo, depending on the same title, in which it was decided by the lower court and affirmed on writ of error by the supreme court of Ohio that James took a fee, subject to be defeated 444ed *only by his leaving no lineal descendant. Anderson v. United Realty Co. 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644, S. C. 222 U. S. 164, ante, 144, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521. The judgment of the lower court was pleaded, but it was held by the circuit court of appeals, after the affirmation by the supreme court, that its own previous decision was the law of the case, and that it was not at liberty to reverse the judgment, even if the matter was res judicata on the principle laid down in New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 396, 42 L. ed. 202, 210, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905. See Parrish v. Ferris, 2 Black, 606, 17 L. ed. 317. In the absence of statute the phrase, "law of the case," as applied to the effect of previous orders on the later action of the court rendering them in the same case, merely expresses the practice of courts generally to refuse to reopen what has been decided, not a limit to their power. King v. West Virginia, 216 U. S. 92, 100, 54 L. ed. 396, 401, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 99, 100, 49 L. ed. 959, 963, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 339, 343, 40 L. ed. 991, 993, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850. Of course this court, at least, is free when the case comes here. Panama R. Co. v. Napier Shipping Co. 166 U. S. 280, 41 L. ed. 1004, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 191 U. S. 84, 48 L. ed. 106, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33. In our opinion, even apart from the effect of the state judgment as an adjudication, it should have been followed, if for no other reason, because, at least, as against the decision of the circuit court of appeals, it was right.

The later clauses that we have quoted from the will make a difference, it is true, according to whether the sons leave lineal descendants at their death or not. But the interest thus exhibited in descendants is satisfied by the probability that they would inherit the property or be provided for out of it. It is not shown to be so definite and paramount as to cut down the gifts imported by the previous words except in the single event in which the will does so in terms. On the contrary, the still later provision that nothing shall be construed to "deprive" the sons of the power to dispose of "their portions" by will *indicates that the 445 testator meant the sons to be owners of his estate, subject to the divesting clause.

We should lean toward an agreement with the state courts, especially in a matter like this. In the present instance we see no sufficient reason for refusing to follow their judgment, even if, for any cause not pointed out to us, it did not finally adjudicate the question of title as between these parties in such wise as to be binding upon every court before which that title subsequently might be discussed.

Judgment reversed.

LOUIS ZECKENDORF, Appt.,

v.

ALBERT STEINFELD, J. N. Curtis, R. K. Shelton, et al. (No. 139.)

ALBERT STEINFELD, J. N. Curtis, R. K. Shelton, et al., Appts.,

v.

LOUIS ZECKENDORF and Silver Bell Copper Company. (No. 140.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 445-459.)

Second appeal—law of case.

1. The holding of a territorial supreme court on the first appeal is not the law of the case for the Federal Supreme Court when reviewing a decree rendered on the second appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5649-5651, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — contracts — rescission.

2. That part of an agreement between a corporation and one of its directors and stockholders by which there was vested in the corporation the proceeds of the sale of certain mining properties controlled by him, in consideration of reimbursement for his outlay, and the assumption by the corporation of all his obligations with respect to such properties, cannot be deemed included by the general terms of a stockholders' rescinding resolution, where, from a consid-

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals—see note to Hastings v. Foxworthy, 34 L.R.A. 321.

On fiduciary relations of corporate officers and their dealings with corporate property—see notes to Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. 17 L. ed. U. S. 340; McGourkey v. Toledo & O. C. R. Co. 36 L. ed. U. S. 1079; and Bensiek v. Thomas, 13 C. C. A. 466.

As to the power to appoint receivers of corporations where there is no other relief asked—see note to Supreme Sitting, O. I. H. v. Baker, 20 L.R.A. 210.

eration of the proceedings of the meeting and the known facts surrounding the parties at the time, it is apparent that they had in mind only to affect the director's right under the agreement to retain for his indemnity the custody of the proceeds of the sale.

[Matters as to corporate contracts, see Corporations, VI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — officer as trustee.

3. A stockholder and director of a corporation, purchasing in his own name and that of the company the shares of another stockholder under an agreement to pay the purchase price from the proceeds of the workings of the company's property or from its sale, and having the stock transferred on the company's books to him as trustee, holds the same in trust for the corporation, and must account to it for the dividends received by him upon such stock. [For other cases, see Corporations, V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Receivers — of corporation — in stockholder's suit.

4. A receiver is properly appointed in a stockholder's suit, where the company's properties have all been sold and its assets are to be distributed among the stockholders. [For other cases, see Receivers, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 139 and 140.]

Argued March 15, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

CROSS APPEALS from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the District Court for Pima County in that territory, rendered in a stockholder's suit, finding against the stockholder on one cause of action and in his favor on the other. Reversed in so far as the decree affirms the decree of the District Court on the first cause of action; otherwise affirmed.

See same case below, first appeal, 10 Ariz. 221, 86 Pac. 7; second appeal, 12 Ariz. 245, 100 Pac. 784.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank H. Herford and Edwin A. Meserve argued the cause and filed a brief for Zeckendorf:

Steinfeld was at all times a constructive trustee.

Sun Dance Gold Min. Co. v. Frost, 7 Ariz. 289, 64 Pac. 435, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 252; Trice v. Comstock, 61 L.R.A. 176, 57 C. C. A. 646, 121 Fed. 620; Averill v. Barber, 2 Silv. Sup. Ct. 40, 6 N. Y. Supp. 255; Beach, Trusts & Trustees, pp. 217, 220, ¶¶ 105, 106; Blake v. Buffalo Creek R. Co. 56 N. Y. 485; Dickinson v. Codwise, 1 Sandf. Ch. 214; Davis v. Hamlin, 108 Ill. 39, 48 Am. Rep. 541; Seacoast R. Co. v. 56 L. ed.

Wood, 65 N. J. Eq. 530, 56 Atl. 337; Wardell v. Union P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 651, 26 L. ed. 509, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 144; De Bardeleben v. Bessemer Land & Improv. Co. 140 Ala. 621, 37 So. 511; Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U. S. 512, 32 L. ed. 764, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Gower v. Andrew, 59 Cal. 119, 43 Am. Rep. 242; Ringo v. Binns, 10 Pet. 269, 9 L. ed. 420; Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869, 20 L.R.A. 207, 55 N. W. 279; Kroegeher v. Calivada Colonization Co. 56 C. C. A. 257, 119 Fed. 641; Oliven v. Kastor, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 555, 101 S. W. 563; McCourt v. Singers-Bigger, 76 C. C. A. 73, 145 Fed. 103, 7 Ann. Cas. 287; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. chap. 7, §§ 902-959, 1090, 1094; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 35 L. ed. 290, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Stewart v. Douglass, 148 Cal. 511, 83 Pac. 699; Miller v. O'Boyle, 89 Fed. 140.

Stockholders, as such, have no implied power to rescind agreements made by the directors or officers of the corporation, for they are not agents of the corporation, and cannot make or rescind contracts for the corporation.

3 Clark & M. Priv. Corp. pp. 1905, 1906, ¶ 627(b).

The rule that prohibits Steinfeld, the partner, from purchasing the properties, the proceeds of which are involved in this litigation, for his own benefit and to the exclusion of his partner Zeckendorf, until Zeckendorf had had an opportunity, with knowledge of the facts, to join in or refuse to join in the purchase, has long since been recognized and referred to this court.

Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U. S. 512, 32 L. ed. 764, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355.

The contract under which this money was paid to and received by Steinfeld was void, and its fairness could not have been set up as a defense, even if it had been tried, and all money received thereunder must be turned back to the corporation.

2 Cook, Corp. 4th ed. §§ 734-879, p. 1549 note; 3 Clark & M. Priv. Corp. pp. 1674-1678, 1683, 1690; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 517 et seq; 3 Thomp. Corp. §§ 4042, 6503, et seq; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1095; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 897, 990, 991; 1 Beach, Corp. 241, 242, 246, 276; Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. & Ditch Co. 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552; Bassett v. Fairchild, 132 Cal. 637, 52 L.R.A. 611, 61 Pac. 791, 64 Pac. 1082; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788; Bensick v. Thomas, 13 C. C. A. 451, 27 U. S. App. 765, 66 Fed. 104; Jones v. Morrison, 31 Minn. 140, 16 N. W. 854; Miner v. Belle Isle Ice Co. 93 Mich. 97, 17 L.R.A. 412, 53 N. W. 218; Beach v. Miller, 130 Ill. 162, 17 Am. St.

Rep. 291, 22 N. E. 464; Smith v. Los Angeles Immigration & Land Co-op. Asso. 78 Cal. 289, 12 Am. St. Rep. 53, 20 Pac. 677; United States Steel Corp. v. Hodge, 64 N. J. Eq. 807, 60 L.R.A. 742, 54 Atl. 1; Shaw v. Davis, 78 Md. 308, 23 L.R.A. 294, 28 Atl. 619; Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. 41 Neb. 374, 59 N. W. 838; Barr v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 96 N. Y. 444; George v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 101 Ala. 607, 14 So. 752; Bell v. Montgomery Light Co. 103 Ala. 275, 15 So. 569; Hannerty v. Standard Theater Co. 109 Mo. 297, 19 S. W. 82; Knoop v. Bohmrich, 49 N. J. Eq. 82, 23 Atl. 118, 50 N. J. Eq. 485, 27 Atl. 636; Hardee v. Sunset Oil Co. 56 Fed. 51; Martin v. Santa Cruz Water Storage Co. 4 Ariz. 171, 36 Pac. 36; Robertson v. H. E. Bucklen & Co. 107 Ill. App. 369; The Telegraph v. Lee, 125 Iowa, 17, 98 N. W. 364; Adams v. Burke, 201 Ill. 395, 66 N. E. 235; Stewart v. Harris, 69 Kan. 498, 66 L.R.A. 261, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 77 Pac. 277, 2 Ann. Cas. 873; Cook v. Sherman, 4 McCrary, 20, 20 Fed. 167; Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. 48, affirmed in 109 U. S. 180, 27 L. ed. 898, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Pickett v. School Dist. No. 1, 25 Wis. 551, 3 Am. Rep. 105; Vanderveer v. Asbury Park & B. Street R. Co. 82 Fed. 355; People ex rel. Plugger v. Overysse, 11 Mich. 222; Doe v. Northwestern Coal & Transp. Co. 78 Fed. 67; Milford v. Milford Water Co. 124 Pa. 610, 3 L.R.A. 122, 17 Atl. 185; Pearson v. Concord R. Corp. 62 N. H. 537, 13 Am. St. Rep. 590; Wardell v. Union P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 657, 26 L. ed. 511, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 144; Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329, 3 Mor. Min. Rep. 688; Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costo Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Richardson v. Green (Washburn v. Green) 133 U. S. 30, 33 L. ed. 516, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Thomas v. Brownsville, Ft. K. & P. R. Co. 109 U. S. 522, 27 L. ed. 1018, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Smith v. Los Angeles Immigration & Land Co-op. Asso. 78 Cal. 289, 12 Am. St. Rep. 53, 20 Pac. 677; Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. & Ditch Co. 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552; Goodell v. Verdugo Canon Water Co. 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354; Bill v. Western U. Telg. Co. 16 Fed. 16; McConnell v. Combination Min. & Mill Co. 30 Mont. 239, 104 Am. St. Rep. 703, 76 Pac. 197; Coombs v. Barker, 31 Mont. 526, 79 Pac. 9; United States Steel Corp. v. Hodge, 64 N. J. Eq. 807, 60 L.R.A. 742, 54 Atl. 1; Stewart v. Harris, 69 Kan. 498, 66 L.R.A. 261, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 77 Pac. 277, 2 Ann. Cas. 873; Ten Eyck v. Pontiac, O. & P. A. R. Co. 74 Mich. 226, 3 L.R.A. 378, 16 Am. St. Rep.

633, 41 N. W. 905; Ogden v. Murray, 39 N. Y. 202; Cumberland Coal & L. Co. v. Sherman, 30 Barb. 553, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 322; Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works v. Smith, 145 Cal. 352, 104 Am. St. Rep. 42, 78 Pac. 350; David v. Rock Creek Lumber, Flume & Min. Co. 55 Cal. 364, 36 Am. Rep. 40; Munson v. Syracuse, G. & C. R. Co. 103 N. Y. 74, 8 N. E. 355.

An interested director cannot be counted to make up the quorum, so as to authorize or ratify an action taken in his favor.

Bassett v. Fairchild, 132 Cal. 637, 52 L.R.A. 611, 61 Pac. 791, 64 Pac. 1082; Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. & Ditch Co. 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552.

Curtis and Shelton, being but the mere representatives, tools, and instruments of Steinfeld, and on the board but to do his bidding, were in exactly the same position, and labored under the same disabilities, as did Steinfeld.

Richardson v. Green (Washburn v. Green) 133 U. S. 30, 33 L. ed. 516, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 202, 26 Pac. 111; Miner v. Belle Isle Ice Co. 93 Mich. 97, 17 L.R.A. 412, 53 N. W. 218.

Where a director or officer of a corporation is in control of the board of directors, so that he has it in his power to direct action of a majority of the board, any action of that board in matters where such director or officer was personally interested would be held to be void when attacked either by the corporation or by the stockholders, suing in its behalf.

Jacobson v. Brooklyn Lumber Co. 184 N. Y. 152, 76 N. E. 1075; Greathouse v. Martin, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 91 S. W. 385; Von Arnim v. American Tube Works, 188 Mass. 515, 74 N. E. 680; Savage v. Madelia Farmers' Warehouse Co. 98 Minn. 343, 108 N. W. 296; McCourt v. Singers-Bigger, 76 C. C. A. 73, 145 Fed. 103, 7 Ann. Cas. 287.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives argued the cause and filed a brief for Steinfeld et al.:

The injustice is obvious of permitting one holding the right to assert an ownership in mining property voluntarily to await the event, and then decide, when the danger which is over has been at the risk of another, to come in and share the profit.

Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 592, 593, 23 L. ed. 329, 331, 3 Mor. Min. Rep. 688; Credit Co. v. Arkansas C. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 23, 15 Fed. 54.

One undertaking to procure by decree the creation of a constructive trust must act forthwith, and must offer to pay the money which had been advanced by the party against whom the trusteeship is sought to be enforced.

Hoyt v. Latham, 143 U. S. 553, 36 L. ed. 259, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Patterson v. Hewitt, 195 U. S. 309, 49 L. ed. 214, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Wenham v. Switzer, 51 Fed. 351, 8 C. C. A. 404, 15 U. S. App. 302, 59 Fed. 947; Mix v. Baldue, 78 Ill. 215; Sandy River R. Co. v. Stubbs, 77 Me. 594, 2 Atl. 9; Duffield v. Michaels, 97 Fed. 825; Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 480, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 554.

The test of a constructive trusteeship is the right of the party claiming to be the beneficiary, and therefore the true owner of the property, to compel by suit in equity the party holding the legal title to convey or assign the corpus of the trust property.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1058.

A court of equity will not lend its assistance to enable a corporation to commit an ultra vires act even to remedy actual fraud.

Case v. Kelly, 133 U. S. 21, 28, 29, 33 L. ed. 513, 515, 516, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

A constructive trust may only be imposed against one who buys for himself property which it was his duty to buy for another.

Parker v. Nickerson, 137 Mass. 497; Steinbeck v. Bon Homme Min. Co. 152 Fed. 333.

Even if the corporation had had funds sufficient to make the purchase, under the facts as they existed Steinfeld could have purchased for his own benefit.

Lagarde v. Anniston Lime & Stone Co. 126 Ala. 496, 28 So. 199, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 545; Trice v. Comstock, 61 L.R.A. 176, 57 C. C. A. 646, 121 Fed. 620.

A wrong cannot be predicated upon the expression of an intent to do something, which intent is not afterwards carried out.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1193; Dilts v. Stewart, 1 Sadler (Pa.) 230, 1 Atl. 587; Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310, 28 N. E. 620; Acker v. Priest, 92 Iowa, 620, 61 N. W. 236; Hamilton v. Downer, 152 Ill. 656, 38 N. E. 735; Piedmont Land Improv. Co. v. Piedmont Foundry & Mach. Co. 96 Ala. 395, 11 So. 334; Scribner v. Meade, 10 Ariz. 143, 85 Pac. 480.

Unless the corporation parted with something or lost or was deprived of something of value by virtue of such promise, there was no fraud, and Steinfeld was in the relation of a mere volunteer, free to carry out his expressed intent or not, as he might thereafter choose.

Piedmont Land Improv. Co. v. Piedmont Foundry & Mach. Co. 96 Ala. 389, 11 So. 332; Pearson v. Pearson, 125 Ind. 341, 25 56 L. ed.

N. E. 342; Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310, 28 N. E. 620.

No admissions can create a trust. No subsequent event other than a formal declaration of trust by Steinfeld, for a consideration, could create a trust.

Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 587, 34 L. ed. 1091, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

A proposition to a corporation, and its acceptance by a board of directors, is nothing more nor less than a contract made by correspondence, where one party makes a proposition in writing and the other party accepts it. It is unquestionably the law that a contract of this character, as well as an oral contract, when followed by a formal agreement, is merged in the formally written contract.

Keystone Surgical Supply Co. v. Bate, 196 Pa. 566, 46 Atl. 887.

The minutes of a directors' meeting of a corporation are only evidence of what occurred at the meeting.

Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 417, 35 L. ed. 227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Gilson Quartz Min. Co. v. Gilson, 51 Cal. 341.

One party to a contract cannot declare a part of the contract null and void. He must either abide by the contract, even though it be tainted by fraud, or annul it in toto. He cannot elect to enjoy the benefits of a portion of it and repudiate the obligations of another portion.

Smith v. Ferris & C. H. R. Co. — Cal. —, 51 Pac. 716.

Acting with full knowledge of the facts, plaintiff took his chances as to what the result might be, and therefore he is forever estopped from questioning the validity of the rescission, even if he was mistaken as to the legal effect of his action.

Kelley v. Newburyport & A. Horse R. Co. 141 Mass. 496, 6 N. E. 743.

While we have found no authority expressly holding that the action of the stockholders can effectively repudiate a voidable contract without subsequent action by the directors, such right is apparently assumed by the courts in numerous opinions.

2 Cook, Corp. 5th ed. § 709, p. 172; Colorado Springs Co. v. American Pub. Co. 38 C. C. A. 433, 97 Fed. 853; Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co. 14 Abb. N. C. 273; Kirwin v. Washington Match Co. 37 Wash. 285, 79 Pac. 928; O'Conner Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Coosa Furnace Co. 95 Ala. 614, 36 Am. St. Rep. 251, 10 So. 290.

While a corporation may, under certain circumstances, elect to avoid a contract made by directors with themselves, a minority stockholder may not avoid such contract except upon allegation and proof of injury to the corporation by such contract.

Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 21 L. ed. 329, 3 Mor. Min. Rep. 688; MacNaughton v. Osgood, 41 Hun, 110; 2 Cook, Corp. § 658, 5th ed. 1512; Smith v. Ferries & C. H. R. Co. — Cal. —, 51 Pac. 710; Lyman v. Kansas City & A. R. Co. 101 Fed. 636; Shaw v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 605, 25 L. ed. 757; Sacramento Bank v. Copsey, 133 Cal. 663, 85 Am. St. Rep. 242, 66 Pac. 8,205; Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. 64 N. J. Eq. 111, 54 Atl. 553.

Dividends should be paid to those in whose name the stock stands upon the books of the company.

Jones v. Terre Haute & R. R. Co. 17 How. Pr. 529.

Messrs. Eugene S. Ives and Francis J. Heney filed a separate brief for Steinfeld et al.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Louis Zeekendorf brought this suit in the district court of Pima county, territory of Arizona, as a stockholder of the Silver Bell Copper Company, hereinafter called the Silver Bell Company, for and on its behalf, against Albert Steinfeld, J. N. Curtis, and R. K. Shelton, as individuals and as officers and directors of the Silver Bell Company, the Silver Bell Company, and a certain company known as the Mammoth Copper Company. He sought to recover $338,710.15 for so much money wrongfully appropriated by and to the use of the defendant Steinfeld, which rightfully belonged to the Silver Bell Company, and to recover, as belonging to the company, 300 shares of stock in the Silver Bell Company. There was also a prayer for an accounting and the return of 447]the money and shares and *for the appointment of a receiver. Steinfeld answered that the money, a portion of which was the proceeds of certain mining properties which had belonged to him and had been sold in conjunction with properties belonging to the Silver Bell Company, and shares of stock, belonged to him, and for reasons set forth were rightfully in his possession.

The district court, upon the first trial, found in favor of Zeekendorf. This judgment was reversed by the supreme court of Arizona and the case sent back for further findings. 10 Ariz. 221, 86 Pac. 7. The pleadings were amended, the amended complaint dividing the controversy into two causes of action, the first embracing the ownership of the proceeds of sale taken by Steinfeld and the second the title to the 300 shares of stock and dividends thereon. Upon the second trial the district court found against Zeekendorf on the first cause of action and against Steinfeld on the second cause of action upon the facts found, made certain provisions as to attorney fees, and, in view of the situation of the Silver Bell Company, appointed a receiver and ordered that the property and the assets of the company be turned over to him for distribution according to the order and judgment of the court, and that upon final hearing the Silver Bell Company be dissolved, its debts paid and assets distributed among the stockholders according to their rights. The court further ordered that Steinfeld should hold in his hands the sum of $25,750 to secure him against his liability as garnishee in a case by one Franklin against the Silver Bell Company, Steinfeld to account to the company for the money on the final determination of the action. An appeal was again taken to the supreme court of the territory of Arizona, and that court affirmed the judgment and orders of the district court. 12 Ariz. 245, 100 Pac. 784.

Both parties appealed. No. 139 is the appeal of Zeekendorf from that part of the judgment dismissing on the *merits[448 his first cause of action, concerning the moneys paid to Steinfeld. No. 140 is the appeal of Steinfeld from the order and judgment holding that the 300 shares of stock belong to the company, and requiring him to account for the dividends thereon. The supreme court of the territory made elaborate findings of fact, adopting the findings of the district court and making certain findings of its own. So far as necessary to determine the case as we view it, the findings may be summarized as follows:

Since 1878 Albert Steinfeld and Louis Zeekendorf have been partners under the firm name of Louis Zeekendorf & Company. Zeekendorf lived in the city of New York, Steinfeld resided in the city of Tucson, Arizona, and was the active member of the firm in its mining operations. William and Julia Zeekendorf were the owners of a certain mine known as the Old Boot or Mammoth mine, which was being operated by the Carl Nielsen, under contract with Steinfeld as trustee of the owners. Nielsen became so indebted to the partnership that, in order to secure such indebtedness, in January, 1899, a company was incorporated under the laws of Arizona known as the Nielsen Mining & Smelting Company, the name being changed on January 14, 1901, to the Silver Bell Mining Company, and all the stock of the company was originally issued to Carl Nielsen, in consideration of the transfer to the company of his rights in the Old Boot mine, and a like transfer of personal property used in working the mine. The stock was divided as follows: 499 shares to L. Zeckendorf & Company, 30 shares to Albert Steinfeld, trustee of William and Julia Zeckendorf, 170 shares to J. N. Curtis, 300 shares to Carl Nielsen, and one share to R. K. Shelton, but being in fact the property of L. Zeckendorf & Company. In January, 1901, the 300 shares in Nielsen's name were transferred on the books of the company to the name of Albert Steinfeld, trustee. On the 6th of June, 1903, the 499 shares of L. Zeckendorf & 449] Company were *divided, 250 shares to Louis Zeckendorf and 249 shares to Albert Steinfeld, Steinfeld taking the one share standing in the name of Shelton, which was in Steinfeld's possession until December 9, 1903, when it was given to Shelton. At the meeting of the stockholders Steinfeld voted the stock in his name as trustee, and the stock of L. Zeckendorf & Company, and Louis Zeckendorf was never at any stockholders' meeting and did not vote therein by proxy until the stockholders' meeting of December 26, 1903, at which he was present. Subsequent to January 14, 1901, Albert Steinfeld, J. N. Curtis, and R. K. Shelton were the directors of the corporation, all residing in Tucson, Arizona. Shelton was at all times the representative of Steinfeld on the board of directors of the company, and at all times involved in this action voted as ordered, directed, and requested by Steinfeld. After June 6, 1903, J. N. Curtis, as director and other officer of the Silver Bell Company, was under the dominion and control of Steinfeld and did as he directed.

In the year 1900 Steinfeld purchased, in his own name and in the name of the Mammoth Copper Company, which was owned and controlled by him, certain mining properties in the neighborhood of the Old Boot mine, known as the English Group of Mines, and in September, 1900, proceeded to Europe, and there concluded the purchase of the English title to that group.

The findings of fact sent up to us, and which must alone be the basis of our judgment (Eagle Min. & Improv. Co. v. Hamilton, 218 U. S. 513, 515, 54 L. ed. 1131, 1132 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27), showing that Steinfeld, in purchasing the English Group of Mines, did not purchase them with the intent that they should thereby become the property of the Silver Bell Company, but that at that time he purposed to give the Silver Bell Company an opportunity to take the mines upon reimbursing him for his outlays and expenditures in that connection, which he expected the Silver Bell Company would 450] do, intending, if it did not, *to keep them for his own. In our view, the facts found show that Steinfeld and the company effectually carried out this purpose, 56 L. ed.

and that the subsequent attempt to rescind the action by which the proceeds of the sale of the English Group of Mines became the property of the Silver Bell Company, and to give the proceeds to Steinfeld, must be held for naught.

The findings show that after the acquisition of the English Group of Mines Steinfeld turned them over to the possession of the Nielsen Mining & Smelting Company (the name of which was subsequently changed to the Silver Bell Copper Company), which assumed the possession and control of them; that they were operated in connection with the other mining property of the company, known as the Old Boot mine; that maps were prepared, under the direction of Steinfeld, showing the mining properties as one entire group of mines, and that the president of the company made reports of the mines as the properties of the Silver Bell Company; that these maps and reports were sent to Zeckendorf and others, and that efforts were made by Steinfeld to sell the properties as a whole, including the English Group.

In the early part of 1901, Curtis, who was president of the Silver Bell Company, holding certain shares in his own right, contended that the English Group of mines was held in trust by Steinfeld for the Silver Bell Company. Both parties consulted one Franklin, an attorney, who advised that Steinfeld could not hold the properties as his own until he had given the company an opportunity to take them upon reimbursing him for his outlays and expenses, and it had declined to do so.

Steinfeld acquiesced in this position, and on July 15, 1901, made a proposition in writing to the Silver Bell Company. The substance of this proposal was that he would hold in trust for the Silver Bell Company all the mining properties controlled by him, the company to assume *all ob-[451 ligations, counsel fees, etc., to pay for the annual assessment work, and to reimburse him for his outlays on or before the 15th of October, 1901 (and that he would also turn over the Nielsen stock in controversy in the second cause of the action upon the assumption of certain obligations). And upon compliance with the terms of the proposition the mining properties were to belong to the Silver Bell Company. Steinfeld stated in this proposal:

"I am of the opinion that all of the mining claims and mill sites and property acquired, as above set forth, by the Mammoth Mining Company and by myself, are of great value to you, and that your company should own the same, and as an inducement to you to purchase and acquire the same, I am willing to place you in my shoes; that is to say, to sell and convey to you all the interest so acquired by me, upon my being repaid the amounts of money I have expended, with interest, and upon your assuming and guaranteeing with security satisfactory to me the performance on your part, of all the matters and things and payments which, under the various contracts, I am liable or responsible for. To this end I herewith submit to you the following proposition."

The Silver Bell Company was given until October 15, 1901, to accept the proposition; and, in the event it failed to do so and to comply therewith by such date, the option was to be at an end. This proposition was presented to the board of directors on July 15, 1901, and it was ordered that a meeting of the stockholders should be called to decide upon it. Another meeting of the directors took place October 1, 1901, at which Steinfeld stated that he would agree, on condition that the company pay for the assessment work done and to be done in 1900, 1901, and 1902, and pay interest for the interval on the amount named in his original proposition, to extend the time for acceptance of his proposal to the 15th day of September, 1902. This proposition of ex-452]tension was accepted by *the board, and it was further resolved that a stockholders' meeting should be called not later than September 15, 1902, and a stockholders' meeting was held later on that day, October 1, 1901, but Zeekendorf was not present and no action was taken. And the Silver Bell Company continued to possess, use, and work the properties as its own with the full knowledge and consent of Steinfeld and the Mammoth Copper Company.

In this situation of affairs Steinfeld negotiated the sale of all of the properties, and on May 13, 1903, reported to the board of directors that he had, on behalf of himself, the Mammoth Copper Company, and the Silver Bell Company, given an option for the sale of the properties for $515,000, as one entire property, and requested that his action be confirmed, which was done, Steinfeld himself voting in favor of such confirmation. At the time the price of $515,000 was fixed, Steinfeld intended to renew and permit the corporation to accept the terms of his proposition of July 15, 1901, as extended, and the officers of the Silver Bell Company expected the corporation to avail itself of the offer, so that the whole of the purchase money would be paid to and become the property of the Silver Bell Company. On May 20, 1903, all the properties were conveyed to the Imperial Copper Company for the purchase price of $515,000, $115,000 in cash and the balance in notes payable in four equal quarterly instalments. The cash and notes were turned over to Steinfeld as the treasurer of the Silver Bell Company, and were to be held by him under a certain agreement, dated May 20, 1903, which permitted Steinfeld to hold the money and notes as indemnity for the obligations and liabilities to the Imperial Copper Company which he had assumed, the latter company having required Steinfeld to guarantee the titles to the mines sold for one year. It was mutually agreed in the agreement of May 20, 1903, that the purchase price paid and to be paid upon the sale should belong to *the[453 Silver Bell Company. Between May 20, 1903, and January 20, 1904, the Imperial Copper Company paid to Steinfeld, as treasurer and trustee of the Silver Bell Company, $319,487.50, representing the cash payment and the proceeds of the first two notes, with interest, out of which money was paid $118,000, including $18,117 to Steinfeld. In October and November, 1903, Steinfeld sent all the money, except $50,000 which had been attached in his hands at the suit of Franklin, to the Bank of California, at San Francisco, California, and deposited it there in his individual name.

On the day the contract of May 20, 1903, was executed, the board of directors held a meeting, Steinfeld, Curtis, and Shelton being present, at which the president reported the various transactions attending the sale and submitted certain documents. He further reported that Steinfeld, who had conducted the negotiations with the Imperial Copper Company, had again submitted for acceptance his proposition of July 15, 1901, with the modifications that the company forthwith pay him in cash the sum of $18,117, being the sum named in the original proposal, with interest, and assume all obligations incurred in past and present negotiations and transactions with respect to such mining properties, and the president stated that it was necessary to adjust with the Mammoth Copper Company the disposition of the purchase money, and submitted the agreement of May 20, 1903. Five several resolutions were thereupon unanimously adopted: (1) Ratifying the sale; (2) accepting Steinfeld's proposition and directing the payment forthwith of the $18,117, and providing for certain other payments; (3) authorizing the payment of certain commissions on the sale; (4) fully empowering the president and secretary of the company to indemnify Steinfeld against loss or damage for having guaranteed the titles to the properties; and (5) specifically ratifying and approving the agreement of May 20, 1903, *providing for the dis-[454 position of the proceeds of the sale and indemnifying Steinfeld. And on the day following, May 21, 1903, the $18,117 was paid to Steinfeld. Zeckendorf was not at this meeting or any of the meetings except the stockholders' meeting on December 26, 1903.

In December, 1903, Zeckendorf brought a suit in California to enjoin the bank therefrom turning over to Steinfeld the moneys and notes so deposited by him, and obtained an injunction restraining Steinfeld from receiving and the bank from delivering to him the money and notes.

Thereafter, on December 26 1903, a stockholders' meeting was held in Tucson, Arizona, all the stockholders and the respective attorneys of Zeckendorf and Steinfeld being present, and it was at this meeting, it is contended, that the action theretofore taken vesting the proceeds of sale in the Silver Bell Company was rescinded. The supreme court of Arizona, on the first appeal of this case to that court (10 Ariz. 221, 86 Pac. 7), found that such rescission was accomplished, notwithstanding the stockholders may have intended to do no more than rescind the indemnity feature of the former agreement and resolutions, and sent the case back for findings of fact as to the ownership of the English Group of Mines and also of the 300 shares of stock, and as to the rights of the parties as to the distribution of the proceeds of the sale. This conclusion as to the rescission of the agreement of May 20, 1903, it is said, has become the law of the case and binding in its subsequent stages. Whatever might be the holding of the supreme court of Arizona as to the effect of this decision upon its own judgment and that of the district court, the case reached this court for the first time upon the present appeal, and certainly the holding of the supreme court of Arizona at any of the stages of the case prior to this appeal would not be the law of the case for this court. United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 191 U. S. 84, 93, 48 L. ed. 106, 109, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

455] *We cannot agree with the supreme court of Arizona that the effect of this stockholders' meeting was to rescind so much of the former action as vested the proceeds of the sale in the Silver Bell Company. Nor can we agree, as the court held, that, if the parties did intend to rescind only the former action as to the custody of the proceeds of the sale, they made a mistake only as to the legal effect of the rescinding resolution. On the other hand, we think it is apparent from a consideration of the proceedings of that meeting, which the supreme court of Arizona has made a finding of itself, that the objection of Zeckendorf, the principal stockholder other than Steinfeld, was to so much of the former action as pertained to the turning over of the proceeds of the sale to Steinfeld to be held by him for his indemnity. At the meeting no disposition was manifested to give Steinfeld the ownership of the proceeds of the sale of the English mines, nor to treat any modification of the former action as a rescission of the entire matter.

The discussion at that meeting throughout shows that the object of Zeckendorf was to get the money and the proceeds of the notes into the hands of a treasurer of the company who would give security therefor, and to have the entire proceeds of the sale divided among the stockholders. There was no intimation that the money or notes then held by the treasurer would be taken from the Silver Bell Company and one half thereof turned over to Steinfeld as the vendor of the English Group of Mines. As the counsel of Steinfeld said:

"We are unwilling to admit that we did not have the right to this money. We still assert that this resolution and agreement was honest and valid, and that Mr. Steinfeld, under it, had the right to this money, and had the right to act as he has done. But since you attack it, we are willing to agree to pass a resolution in the language of your prayer in which we will rescind the resolution and *agreement, and relinquish all right whatever to the personal custody of that money, and turn it over to the company."

"Now, I drew a little resolution, which I would suggest one of you gentlemen (I am not a member of the board) should offer." (Italics ours.)

Thereupon the resolution in the following language was offered:

"Resolved, that the agreement executed on May 20th by the president and secretary of the corporation, the Mammoth Copper Company, and Albert Steinfeld, be and the same is hereby rescinded, and that the said agreement and resolution passed on said day be declared null and void."

After the resolution had been offered and before the vote was taken, counsel for Steinfeld said further:

"We are acquiescing in your demand.

. . .

"We will now organize as a stockholders' meeting.

"Our desire is in good faith to rescind that resolution, but we will never admit we acted wrongfully in taking the money; you attacked the resolution, and we are willing, if you wish, to rescind it." (Italics ours.)

What resolution does this refer to? Certainly not the one (1) ratifying and approving the sale to the Imperial Copper Company; nor the one (2) accepting Stein-feld's proposition and authorizing payments to Steinfeld and those from whom he had purchased; nor (3) the payment of commissions. But manifestly all parties had in mind so much of the resolutions as referred to the right of Steinfeld to continue to hold the proceeds of the sale, cash and notes, for his indemnity.

At the stockholders' meeting, the entire 1,000 shares, representing those belonging to Zeckendorf, Steinfeld, Shelton, and Curtis, were all voted in favor of the resolution.

We will not stop to recite the other parts of the long finding which includes all 457]the proceedings of this meeting. *At the end of the findings of fact in this connection the supreme court of Arizona makes this significant statement:

"In the stockholders' meeting held on the 26th day of December, 1903, hereinabove set out, plaintiff, in voting to rescind said agreement of May 20, 1903, and the resolution hereinabove mentioned, did not understand or know or believe that anybody claimed or would claim that the action taken on that day by the stockholders of the Silver Bell Copper Company would operate to give either Albert Steinfeld or the Mammoth Copper Company any right or claim to any of said proceeds of said sale, nor did the directors in good faith understand or believe that the stockholders intended to instruct them to rescind any portion of the agreement and resolution other than that relating to the indemnity agreement hereinbefore mentioned." (Italics ours.)

It is argued that this is but a conclusion, and not in any proper sense a finding of fact. If this be so, we think it is the proper conclusion from the facts stated. In our view it cannot be reasonably maintained that, in passing the resolution, when it is read in the light of the proceedings at the meeting and the known facts surrounding the parties at the time, the stockholders intending to rescind any more of the transaction than related to the indemnity agreement. On the other hand, the fair inference from the proceedings at this meeting leaves no doubt in our minds that the stockholders intended to affirm the previous transactions except so far as they related to Steinfeld's right to hold the money and notes for his indemnity, and that Steinfeld acquiesced in such modification as one of the stockholders.

In interpreting the action of the stockholders in passing the resolution, the facts and circumstances surrounding them may legitimately be looked to. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Hill, 15 Wall. 94, 100, 101, 21 L. ed. 64, 67, 68. In construing written 458]documents, "this kind of evidence,"* said Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, "is especially pertinent when the inquiry is as to the subject-matter of the agreement" (p. 101). To the same effect, Reed v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 23, 30, 31, 24 L. ed. 348-350.

Notwithstanding the directors did not, in good faith, understand the rescission to go beyond the indemnity feature, as above stated, on December 26, 1903, the directors, Steinfeld, Shelton, and Curtis, met and undertook to rescind their former action. It is specifically found that Zeckendorf had no knowledge of this meeting, although it was held on the same day as the meeting of the stockholders to which we have referred. On January 16, 1904, Curtis and Shelton, for the directors, without notice to the other stockholders, and no one else being present but Steinfeld and his counsel, at the request of Steinfeld, adopted the resolution which divided the $515,000, the proceeds of the sale to the Imperial Copper Company, by awarding to Steinfeld and his company, the Mammoth Copper Company, as the owners of one half of the property sold, one half of the cash and notes, less certain payments which are recited. Under that supposed authority, Curtis, as treasurer, turned over to Steinfeld $145,743.75 in cash and one of the notes. In so voting and acting it is specifically found that Curtis and Shelton consulted with no person whatsoever except Steinfeld and his attorney, and that they were under the complete dominion and control of Steinfeld, and voted and acted on his orders and not otherwise. For the reasons stated, we are of the opinion that the supreme court of Arizona erred in affirming so much of the judgment as dismissed the first cause of action. This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider whether Steinfeld, in view of his relation to the company, could have held the title acquired by him except in trust for the company.

As to the second cause of action:

*On the 20th of January, 1904.[459 Steinfeld received $33,300 as dividends upon the stock standing in his name as trustee and which is in controversy in the second cause of action, a dividend of $111 per share having been declared by the board of directors. As to this phase of the case, it is unnecessary to recite the facts found by the supreme court of Arizona. They are clear and distinct, and there can be no doubt that Steinfeld held the 300 shares of stock purchased from Nielsen for the company, and the court was right in affirming the judgment upon the second cause of action upon the facts found.

It is contended that it was wrong to appoint a receiver in the case, but we think that, in view of the situation of the property and the final winding up of the company, the appointment of the receiver was proper, and that that officer should be continued for the final settlement of the affairs of the company.

It follows that the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona should be reversed in so far as it affirms the judgment of the District Court on the first cause of action, and affirmed in so far as the Supreme Court affirms the District Court on the second cause of action; and the case remanded to the Supreme Court of the state of Arizona, as successor of the Territorial Supreme Court (36 Stat. at L. chap. 310, pp. 576, 577, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 158; Nielsen v. Steinfeld, 224 U. S. 534, ante, 872, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609), for such further proceedings as may not be inconsistent with the opinion of this court.

Judgment accordingly.

460]*LOW WAH SUEY and Li A. Sim
(Mrs. Low Wah Suey), Appts.,
v.

SAMUEL W. BACKUS, Commissioner of Immigration, Port of San Francisco.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 460-476.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — deportation of alien.

1. Proceedings resulting in the deportation of an alien found as an inmate of a house of prostitution within three years subsequent to her entry into the United States are not wanting in due process of law because she had no counsel when first under examination, where such an examination is within the authority of the act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), as amended by the act of March 26, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 263, chap. 128, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 501), and at subsequent stages in the proceeding, and before the hearing was closed or the orders for deportation made, she had the assistance and advice of counsel.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — deportation of alien.

2. The immigration officer's lack of power to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses does not render invalid, as denying due process of law, the proceedings had conformably to the act of February 20, 1907, as amended by the act of March 26, 1910, resulting in the deportation of an alien found as an inmate of a house of prostitution within three years subsequent to her entry into the United States.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — deportation — departmental regulations.

3. The rules of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor governing the deportation of aliens found as inmates of houses of prostitution within three years subsequent to their entry into the United States are not so arbitrary as to be beyond his power, under the act of February 20, 1907, as amended by the act of March 26, 1910, because provision is thereby made for an examination in the absence of counsel, where they also provide for a hearing at which the alien shall have opportunity to show cause why she should not be deported, and for her appraisal at such stage of the proceedings as the person before whom the hearing was held shall deem proper that she may thereafter be represented by counsel, and for the forwarding to the Department of all papers, including the minutes and any written argument submitted by counsel.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — deportation — wife of citizen.

4. A foreign-born Chinese woman, though married to a Chinaman of American birth, is an alien, within the meaning of the provisions of the act of February 20, 1907, as amended by the act of March 26, 1910, for the deportation of any alien found as an inmate of a house of prostitution within three years subsequent to her entry into the United States.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 869.]

Argued April 30, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review a decree refusing relief by habeas corpus to an alien immigrant whose deportation was ordered by the Department of Commerce and Labor. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to 56 L. ed.

Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

As to what Chinese persons are excluded from the United States—see note to Wong You v. United States, 104 C. C. A. 538.

On the effect of marriage on wife's status as an alien—see note to Comitis v. Parkerson, 22 L.R.A. 148.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden argued the cause, and, with Mr. George A. McGowand, filed a brief for appellants:

Even if the marriage left Li A Sim an alien, she was not such an alien as was contemplated or intended to be included within the terms of the general immigration law.

Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, 48 L. ed. 317, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Re Nicola, 106 C. C. A. 464, 184 Fed. 322; Tsoi Sim v. United States, 54 C. C. A. 154, 116 Fed. 925.

All laws should receive a sensible construction. General terms should be so limited in their application as not to lead to injustice, oppression, or an absurd consequence. It will always, therefore, be presumed that the legislature intended exceptions to its language which would avoid results of this character. The reason of the law in such cases should prevail over its letter.

United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 486, 19 L. ed. 278, 280.

The guaranties of the Federal Constitution were not respected on the hearing.

United States ex rel. Bosny v. Williams, 185 Fed. 598; Redfern v. Halpert, 108 C. C. A. 262, 186 Fed. 150.

The immigration officials are not at liberty arbitrarily and without reason to believe or disbelieve, regard or disregard, evidence, as they see fit.

United States v. Chin Len, 109 C. C. A. 310, 187 Fed. 544; Lewis v. Frick, 189 Fed. 146; Ex parte Lee Kow, 161 Fed. 592; Ex parte Koerner, 176 Fed. 478; Woey Ho v. United States, 48 C. C. A. 705, 109 Fed. 888; Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 48, 16 Pac. 345; 14 Cyc. 383; Rothrock v. Carr, 55 Ind. 335.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Lehmann, filed a brief for appellee:

To give this court jurisdiction on a direct appeal from, or writ of error to, a circuit court, on the ground of a constitutional question, such question must be real and substantial, and not a mere claim in words.

Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

Chinese persons not born in this country have never been recognized as citizens of the United States, nor authorized to become such under the naturalization laws.

Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 716, 37 L. ed. 905, 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016.

The marriage of Li A. Sim to a citizen could not confer citizenship upon her.

Kelly v. Owen, 7 Wall. 496, 19 L. ed. 283; Burton v. Burton, 1 Keyes, 359; Leonard v. Grant, 6 Sawy. 603, 5 Fed. 11; Kane v. McCarthy, 63 N. C. 299; United States v. Kellar, 11 Biss. 314, 13 Fed. 82.

Assistant Attorney General Harr also filed a separate brief for appellee:

If it does not affirmatively appear that the executive officers have acted in some unlawful or improper way and abused their discretion, their finding upon the question of citizenship must be deemed to be conclusive, and is not subject to review by the court.

Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U. S. 673, ante, 606, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 52 L. ed. 369, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201.

If the petitioner was not denied a fair opportunity to produce the evidence that he desired, or a fair though summary hearing, the case can proceed no farther.

Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 11, 52 L. ed. 369, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201. See also Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 194, 54 L. ed. 435, 442, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamataya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 86, 100, 47 L. ed. 721, 725, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6, 11; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 59; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 429, 43 L. ed. 214, 224, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

An alien has no right to be represented by counsel at all stages of the proceedings leading to his deportation.

United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 11, 52 L. ed. 369, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Re Can Pon, 93 C. C. A. 635, 168 Fed. 483.

Marriage to a citizen does not prevent the deportation of an alien woman for a violation of the immigration laws.

Yeung How v. North, 223 U. S. 705, ante, 621, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Hoo Choy v. North, 105 C. C. A. 384, 183 Fed. 92.

The marriage of Li A. Sim to Low Wah Suey did not change her political status with respect to this country.

Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. 242, 246; 7 L. ed. 666, 668; White v. White, 2 Met. (Ky.) 191; Sutliff v. Forgey, 1 Cow. 89; 5 Cow. 713; Mick v. Mick, 10 Wend. 379; Connolly v. Smith, 21 Wend. 59.

The fact that the application of the law may produce hardship and injustice is immaterial.

Zartarian v. Billings, 204 U. S. 170, 175, 176, 51 L. ed. 428, 430, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Li A. Sim, a Chinese woman, wife of Low Wah Suey, was ordered to be deported by the Department of Commerce and Labor, a hearing having been had before an immigration inspector at San Francisco and appeal taken to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor under the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), the warrant for deportation reciting that she had landed at the port of San Francisco, California, on the 15th of April, 1910, and had been found in the United States in violation of the act of February 20, 1907, as amended by the act approved March 26, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 263, chap. 128, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 501); namely, that she was an alien, found as an inmate of a house of prostitution within three years subsequent to her entry into the United States.

The statutes of the United States under which the proceedings were had and the warrant issued are principally § 3 of the act of March 26, 1910, amending § 3 of the act of February 20, 1907, and §§ 20 and 21 of the latter act. Section 3 provides: " . . . Any alien who shall 467] be found *an inmate of or connected with the management of a house of prostitution or practising prostitution after such alien shall have entered the United States, or who shall receive, share in, or derive benefit from, any part of the earnings of any prostitute; or who is employed by, in, or in connection with any house of prostitution or music or dance hall or other place of amusement or resort habitually frequented by prostitutes, or where prostitutes gather, or who in any way assists, protects, or promises to protect from arrest any prostitute, shall be deemed to be unlawfully within the United States, and shall be deported in the manner provided by sections twenty and twenty-one of this act. . . ." Section 20 provides that any alien who enters the United States in violation of law, etc., shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, be deported to the country whence he came within three years after his entry into the United States. Section 21 provides that the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, upon being satisfied that an alien is found in the United States in violation of the act, or is subject to deportation under the act or any law of the United States, shall cause such alien to be taken into custody, and returned to the country whence he came within three years after landing or entry in the United States. The act also provides for a hearing before an inspector or commissioner under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. The inspector or commissioner reports his conclusions and the testimony on which they are based to the Secretary, who, after examination, may order a release or deportation, as in his judgment the case may warrant. Under this statute the Secretary of Commerce and Labor has provided certain instructions and rules, some of which will be hereinafter noticed.

That Congress may pass laws forbidding aliens or classes of aliens from coming within the United States, and may provide for the expulsion of aliens or classes of aliens from *its territory, and may de-[468 volve upon the executive department or subordinate officials the right and duty of identifying and arresting such persons, is settled by previous decisions of this court. Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 237, 41 L. ed. 140, 143, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 977.

A series of decisions in this court has settled that such hearings before executive officers may be made conclusive when fairly conducted. In order to successfully attack by judicial proceedings the conclusions and orders made upon such hearings it must be shown that the proceedings were manifestly unfair, that the action of the executive officers was such as to prevent a fair investigation, or that there was a manifest abuse of the discretion committed to them by the statute. In other cases the order of the executive officers within the authority of the statute is final. United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 52 L. ed. 369, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U. S. 673, ante, 606, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

In the case of Yeung How v. North, 223 U. S. 705, ante, 621, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517, decided at the present term, this court dismissed the appeal in a per curiam opinion. An examination of that case shows that it was in all respects like the case at bar, so far as the status of Yeung How, the person deported, is concerned, she being a Chinese woman who had married a Chinaman of American birth, except that the husband of Yeung How was dead, so that at the time of the deportation order she was the widow of an American citizen. An examination of the briefs in that case show that it was contended in behalf of the petitioner that the statute and procedure thereunder, the case being one of the deportation, and not of the admission, of an alien, deprived the petitioner of due process of law under the Constitution of the United States, inasmuch as there was no provision by which the pe-petitioner could procure or compel the attendance of witnesses, and because the statute made no provision for the punishment of 469]a witness giving false *testimony against the detained person, and because such alien, lawfully within this country, could not be deported without a hearing of a judicial character. Notwithstanding these alleged infractions of constitutional right, this court dismissed the appeal.

In the case now under consideration, the proceedings and order for deportation were attacked by a writ of habeas corpus filed in the district court of the United States for the northern district of California. The case was decided upon demurrer, and the question therefore arises whether, upon the allegations well pleaded, a case was made for the discharge of the prisoner. The petition abounds in conclusions of law. We will examine such of the allegations advanced as a basis for the relief sought as state facts. The petitioner, Low Wah Suey, who instituted the proceedings in behalf of his wife, Li A. Sim, alleged that he was a resident of the city and county of San Francisco, California, born in the United States of parents regularly domiciled therein; that consequently he is a citizen of the United States and of the state of California; that he was married to Li A. Sim on the 10th of March, 1910, in Hong Kong, a British province, and that they have since been and were, at the date of the filing of the petition, husband and wife; that they entered the United States on the 15th of September, 1910; that the entry was lawful, and that until the commencement of proceedings for deportation they continuously lived and cohabited together as husband and wife; that they had a son, Low Sang, born to them on February 9, 1911, at their home in the state of California; and that both Low Wah Suey and Li A. Sim are citizens of the state of California. The arrest and hearing before the commissioner of immigration at the port of San Francisco are recited, as is the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and the warrant for deportation. It is further alleged that Li A. Sim was refused the right to 470]be represented *by counsel during all stages of the preliminary proceedings, and was examined without the presence of her counsel and against her will by the immigration officer at the port of San Francisco, and before she had been advised of her right to counsel, and before she was given an opportunity of securing bail; and that afterwards an examination was conducted by the immigration officer, acting under the orders of the Commissioner of Immigration, at which she was questioned by the immigration inspector against her will and without the presence of counsel, who was refused permission to be present, and that at certain stages of the proceedings she was refused the right to consult with counsel. This objection, in substance, is that, under examination before the inspection officer, at first she had no counsel. Such an examination is within the authority of the statute, and it is not denied that at subsequent stages of the proceedings and before the hearing was closed or the orders were made she had the assistance and advice of counsel.

It is next averred that the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and the Commissioner of Immigration refused to take the necessary steps to enforce the attendance of witnesses to testify on behalf of the petitioner, although it is said that the immigration officers did use their power to procure witnesses to testify against her; and that had such witnesses as she wished been produced, she says, upon information and belief, that the testimony in the record would have been such as to require a different order by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and sufficient to prevent the issuing of the order of deportation. The statute does not give authority to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses. It does not appear from the record that any witnesses offered on behalf of the petitioner were not heard or that anything was done to prevent the production of such witnesses, and the nature and character of the proposed testimony offered is not set forth. This *objection was urged in the Yeung[471 How v. North Case, and the lack of power to compel witnesses by the immigration officer was alleged as depriving the appellant of due process of law. This court dismissed the case upon reference to other cases which indicate its view that no constitutional right was thereby taken from the petitioner. The former cases have sustained the right to provide for such hearing, and nothing was done to prevent the production of such witnesses as the petitioner might have seen fit to produce.

It is further alleged that the executive officer acted in bad faith and arbitrarily in receiving a report based on hearsay information, the name of the informer being withheld from Li A. Sim, and no opportunity being given her to offset or disprove such hearsay evidence. The nature and character of this testimony is not set forth, and we have no means of knowing it was not such as might properly have been considered in such a hearing.

It is alleged that the rules of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor are arbitrary and illegal, particularly certain sections of rule 35. From these rules, it appears that, while provision is made for an examination in the absence of counsel, it is provided that a hearing shall be had at which the alien shall have full opportunity to show cause why he should not be deported, and that, at such stage of the proceedings as the person before whom the hearing is held shall deem proper, the alien shall be apprised that he may thereafter be represented by counsel, who shall be permitted to be present at the further conduct of the hearing, to inspect and make a copy of the record of the hearing so far as it has proceeded, and to meet any evidence that theretofore has been or may thereafter be presented by the government; and it is further provided that all the papers, including the minutes and any written argument submitted by counsel, together with the recommendations, upon the merits, of the examining officer and the officer in charge, shall be forwarded to the Department as *the record on which to determine whether or not a warrant for deportation shall issue. Considering the summary character of the hearing provided by statute and the rights given to counsel in the rules prescribed, we are not prepared to say that the rules are so arbitrary and so manifestly intended to deprive the alien of a fair, though summary, hearing, as to be beyond the power of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor under the authority of the statute.

The petition would be much more satisfactory if the general rule had been complied with and the proceedings had before the immigration officer had been set out. As a general rule, in habeas corpus proceedings a copy of the record of the proceedings attacked is required. Craemer v. Washington, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 129, 42 L. ed. 407, 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. The reasons given for failure to comply with this rule, as stated in the petition, are that the record is too voluminous to be made a part thereof, that to incorporate a copy of the entire proceedings would "burden the petition and cloud the issue," that the petitioner was not in the possession of the entire record and was unable to secure it in time to file it with his petition, and that the Commissioner of Immigration had a copy of the record which he could produce with the body of Li A. Sim. It does not appear that a copy of the essential part of the proceedings was not in the possession of the petitioner or could not be had, and so far as it was within his power, he should have complied with the rule.

An examination of the petition, omitting such allegations as are merely conclusions or charge of bad faith, we think, justified the court below in sustaining the demurrer provided that, at the time of the arrest and order of deportation, Li A. Sim was an alien within the meaning of the statute which provides for the deportation of any alien found as an inmate of a house of prostitution or practising prostitution after entering the United States, when the *proceeding shall be instituted with-[473 in three years from the entry of such alien in this country.

The statute in terms applies in general to all aliens. An alien has been defined to be "one born out of the jurisdiction of the United States, and who has not been naturalized under their Constitution and laws." 2 Kent, Com. 50; 1 Bouvier's Law Dict. 129. Within this general description Li A. Sim would clearly come, unless her status was changed, as is alleged, by marriage to a Chinaman of American birth, who is consequently an American citizen. It is unnecessary to discuss the effect of such marriage at common law, as in this country the matter is regulated by statute. Section 1994 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1268) provides:

"Any woman who is now or may hereafter be married to a citizen of the United States, and who might herself be lawfully naturalized, shall be deemed a citizen."

This section is said to originate in the act of Congress of February 10, 1855 (10 Stat. at L. 604, chap. 71), which in its 2d section provided "that any woman who might lawfully be naturalized under the existing laws, married, or who shall be married, to a citizen of the United States, shall be deemed and taken to be a citizen." This section was construed in Kelly v. Owen, 7 Wall. 496, 19 L. ed. 283, and was held to confer the privileges of citizenship upon women married to citizens of the United States, if they were of the class of persons for whose naturalization the acts of Congress provide. So, under the present statute, when a woman who could be naturalized marries a citizen of the United States, she becomes by that act a citizen herself.

Li A. Sim was a Chinese person not born in this country, and could not become a naturalized citizen under the laws of the United States. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 716, 37 L. ed. 905, 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; act of May 6, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 58, 61, § 14, chap. 126, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1305, 1333). Being incapable of naturalization herself, although the wife of a Chinaman of American birth, she remained an alien and subject to the terms of the act, unless *it[474 can be successfully maintained that she was not within the intent and purpose of the act when it is properly construed. In this behalf the argument of her counsel is that Congress did not intend, notwithstanding the terms of the act in question, to make it applicable to a Chinese woman married to an American citizen lawfully domiciled within this country.

To sustain this position Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, 48 L. ed. 317, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177, is cited by counsel. In that case this court held that Isabella Gonzales, an inhabitant of Porto Rico at the date of the proclamation of the treaty of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 1754], could not be prevented from landing and detained by an immigration inspector as an alien immigrant, in order that she might be returned to Porto Rico, it appearing likely that she might become a public charge. This court held that she had been made by act of Congress a citizen of Porto Rico; that she was within the class absolved from all previous allegiance to the Spanish government; that the act excluding alien immigrants was intended to apply to foreigners as respects this country, to persons owing allegiance to a foreign government and citizens or subjects thereof; that citizens of Porto Rico whose permanent allegiance was due to the United States, and who lived in the peace of its dominion, the organic law of whose domicile was enacted by the United States and enforced through its officials, could not be considered alien immigrants within the meaning of the exclusion act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1294). From a reading of that case it is manifest that this court did not think that Congress intended to exclude those over whom it had acquired jurisdiction under the treaty of Paris and the subsequent legislation of Congress, whose sole allegiance was to this country, and who were not aliens to it in any just sense of the term.

The case of United States v. Gue Lim, 176 U. S. 459, 44 L. ed. 544, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415, is also relied upon. We think that case is readily distinguished from the one [475] at bar. It was there held that *the wife of a Chinese merchant entitled by treaty to come into this country and dwell here could not be required to furnish the certificate required by the statute from Chinese persons other than laborers, as such construction of the statute would lead to absurd results in requiring a certificate from the wife of a merchant in regard to whom it would be impossible to give the particulars which the statute required should be stated in the certificate; that the real purpose of the statute was not to prevent the persons named, who, under the second article of the treaty, had the right to come into this country, from entering, but was to prevent Chinese laborers from entering under the guise of being one of the classes permitted to enter. "To hold that a certificate is required in this case," the court said, at p. 468, "is to decide that the woman [the wife of a Chinese merchant] cannot come into the country at all, for it is not possible for her to comply with the act, because she cannot in any event procure the certificate, even by returning to China. She must come in as the wife of her domiciled husband or not at all;" and it was held that the act was never intended to exclude the wife and minor children of a merchant lawfully entitled to enter.

It is argued that, being a citizen of California, the petitioner and her husband are to be protected from the operation of the act. Assuming that they are citizens of California, there is nothing in that fact to prevent the officers of the United States from exercising the authority conferred upon them to exclude or deport aliens or others who are such within the terms of the Federal law.

We find nothing in the previous decisions of this court which exempts Li A. Sim from the operations of the statute as an alien person. True it is, as contended, that all statutes must be given a reasonable construction, with a view to effecting the object and purposes thereof. It was the manifest purpose of Congress in passing this law to prevent the introduction and keeping in the United States *of women of [176] the prohibited class. The object of the act was to exclude alien prostitutes, or, if they entered and were found violating the statute within the period prescribed, to return them to the country whence they came. A married woman may be as objectionable as a single one in the respects denounced in the law. There is nothing in the terms of the act showing the congressional purpose to exclude from its provisions an alien who had previously married or who might marry an American citizen. Indeed, if this construction were adopted, the marriage of such alien to a countryman of American citizenship who might be ignorant of the conduct of the alien or willing to condone it would afford an easy means of evading the statute. In the present case, in view of the finding of the immigration officer, approved by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, it must be taken as true that Li A. Sim, notwithstanding her marriage relation, was found in a house of prostitution, in violation of the statute. This situation was one of her own making; and, conceding her right to come into the United States and dwell with her husband because of his American citizenship, it is obvious that such right could have been retained by proper conduct on her part, and was only lost upon her violation of the statute; she, being an alien, thereby forfeiting her right to longer remain in this country. If it be admitted that the present is a hard application of the rule of the statute, with the effect of such law this court has nothing to do. The provisions of the statute are plain, and it was passed by Congress with full power over the subject. In our view the present case is brought within the terms of the law, when given a reasonable construction with a view to effecting its purposes. If it ought to be amended so as to except from its operation alien wives of American citizens, that result can only be legitimately obtained in the exercise of legislative authority.

Judgment affirmed.

477]*SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
ERNEST N. DUVALL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 477-488.)

Error to state court — Federal question — certificate of state court.

1. The certificate of the chief justice of the highest court of a state cannot cure the entire failure of the record to show that a Federal question was so raised and decided as to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2317-2339, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — how shown on the record.

2. To sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of the highest court of a state on the ground that there was set up and denied a right, privilege, or immunity claimed under a Federal statute, it must appear from the record that there was necessarily present a definite issue as to the correct construction of the act so directly involved that the state court could not have given the judgment it did without deciding against the contention of the plaintiff in error.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2257-2316, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 304.]

Argued April 30, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

NOTE.—On certificate of state court as showing presence of Federal question—see note to Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 50 L. ed. U. S. 428.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Moore County, in that state, in favor of a railway employee in an action to recover damages from a railway company for personal injuries alleged to have been received while in the course of his employment. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 152 N. C. 524, 67 S. E. 1008.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Walter H. Neal and Benjamin Micou argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hilary A. Herbert, Richard P. Whitely, and E. T. Cansler, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The action was brought under the Federal statute.

Emerson v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. 111 Mo. 161, 19 S. W. 1113; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Flippo, 138 Ala. 487, 35 So. 457; Leone v. Kelly, 77 Conn. 569, 60 Atl. 136, 1 Ann. Cas. 947; Peru v. Barrett, 100 Me. 213, 70 L.R.A. 567, 109 Am. St. Rep. 494, 60 Atl. 968; Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867; Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability, § 175; Lemon v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 137 Ky. 276, 125 S. W. 703; Hancock v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 124 N. C. 222, 32 S. E. 679, 20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 594.

The opinion of the highest court of the state may always be examined to ascertain whether the Federal question was presented and passed upon by the highest court.

San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 180, 47 L. ed. 768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 592, 45 L. ed. 1017, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 85, 48 L. ed. 626, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

The granting of the writ by the Chief Justice is certainly corroborative of his statement that the contention of the plaintiff in error here, made before him, was that, under the Federal employers' liability act, the defendant in error was not entitled to recover.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 525, 51 L. ed. 303, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep.

153; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405-412, 50 L. ed. 527-529, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 50 L. ed. 157, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

The case must have been tried under the Federal act, and could not be tried under the state law, as the Federal act, as to cases coming within its purview, supercedes the local state law, both common and statutory.

Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability, § 17, p. 31; Fulgham v. Midland Valley R. Co. 167 Fed. 662; Dewberry v. Southern R. Co. 175 Fed. 307; Clark v. Southern P. Co. 175 Fed. 122; Cound v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 173 Fed. 527; Lemon v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 137 Ky. 276, 125 S. W. 703; State v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 124 S. W. 984; Calhoun v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 7 Ga. App. 528, 67 S. E. 274.

Where a party relies upon an act of Congress, and the questions construed by the court, and upon which the case turned, were whether the party had brought himself within the scope of that act, a Federal question is presented.

San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

If, upon proper construction of the Federal act, the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff in error, would show that the defendant in error was not, within the meaning of the act, injured while employed in interstate commerce, then the Federal question clearly arose upon the trial of the case.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257.

The Federal question was properly and seasonably presented in the court below.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Mr. William C. Douglass argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

No right, privilege, or immunity was specially set up or claimed in either the trial court or the supreme court of North Carolina.

Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald. 214 U. S. 192, 193, 53 L. ed. 963, 964, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546; Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506; Michigan Sugar Co. v. Michigan (Michigan Sugar Co. v. Dix) 185 U. S. 112, 46 L. ed. 829, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep.

581; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Kiser v. Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. 179 U. S. 199, 45 L. ed. 152, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Warfield v. Chaffe, 91 U. S. 690, 23 L. ed. 383; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 335, 36 L. ed. 457, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22.

No Federal question was presented to or decided by the state court; no such decision was necessary to the determination of the case; there was no denial of any right, privilege, or immunity under any statute of the United States, and the judgment as rendered was given without deciding any right, privilege, or immunity granted under the Constitution or any act of Congress.

Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 566, 40 L. ed. 539, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; DeSaussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133, 29 L. ed. 118, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Moore v. Mississippi, 21 Wall. 636, 22 L. ed. 653; Bolling v. Lersner, 91 U. S. 594, 23 L. ed. 366; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation, 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114; First Nat. Bank v. Home Sav. Bank, 21 Wall. 294, 22 L. ed. 560; Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200, 28 L. ed. 400, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Semple v. Hagar, 4 Wall. 431, 18 L. ed. 402; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Cox v. Texas, 202 U. S. 446, 50 L. ed. 1099, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 576, 40 L. ed. 540, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Both the trial court and the supreme court of North Carolina tried and decided this case under the broad principles of the common law, and no interpretation of the Federal employers' liability act of 1908 became necessary.

Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 374, 12 L. ed. 195; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 391, 9 L. ed. 467; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 581, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Kennard v. Nebraska, 186 U. S. 304, 46 L. ed. 1175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; 2 Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. 1187; Kennebec & P. R. Co. v. Portland & K. R. Co. 14 Wall. 23, 20 L. ed. 850; Adams County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 112 U. S. 123, 28 L. ed. 678, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200, 28 L. ed. 400, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Hopkins v. McLure, 133 U. S. 380, 33 L. ed. 660, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 33 L. ed. 442, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 141 U. S. 679, 35 L. ed. 900, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 208, 44 L. ed. 1039, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; 1 Rose, Code Fed. Proc. §§ 38 n, j; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 582, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 78, 35 L. ed. 942, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Wade v. Lawder, 165 U. S. 624, 41 L. ed. 851, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 193, 41 L. ed. 682, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Miller v. Illinois C. R. Co. 168 Fed. 982; Nelson v. Southern R. Co. 172 Fed. 478; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458; Bridge Proprs. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Brown v. Colorado, 106 U. S. 95, 27 L. ed. 132, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175.

The only reason suggested for the interference of this court with the opinion and judgment of the supreme court of North Carolina is by vague and inferential suggestions in prayers for instructions and in exceptions to certain instructions given by the trial court, which are in no way connected with the Federal employers' liability act.

Thomas v. Iowa, 209 U. S. 261, 262, 52 L. ed. 782, 783, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; 56 L. ed.

Kansas City Star Co. v. Julian, 215 U. S. 589, 54 L. ed. 340, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 52 L. ed. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. 157, 10 L. ed. 105; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 53 L. ed. 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

This court has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the highest court of a state upon pure questions of fact.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

There was no necessity of construing this act, but if the courts of North Carolina had been compelled to construe the act in order to render the judgments and orders therein, they would have had no other guide than the rules and principles of the common law and the decisions thereunder, and this court would have had no jurisdiction to review the construction of the act in question by the state courts of North Carolina.

Rakes v. United States, 212 U. S. 58, 53 L. ed. 402, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

If the court should be of the opinion that the right, title, privilege, or immunity relied on by the plaintiff in error was specially set up or claimed, it was not set up at the proper time, nor in the proper way.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 307, 47 L. ed. 484, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Reed v. Moore, 25 N. C. (3 Ired. L.) 310; State v. Gallimore, 29 N. C. (7 Ired. L.) 147; State v. Collins, 30 N. C. (8 Ired. L.) 407; Ring v. King, 20 N. C. 301 (4 Dev. & B. L. 164); Briggs v. Evans, 27 N. C. (5 Ired. L.) 16; State v. Langford, 44 N. C. (Busbee L.) 436; Brown v. Kyle, 47 N. C. (2 Jones, L.) 442; Michigan Sugar Co. v. Michigan (Michigan Sugar Co. v. Dix) 185 U. S. 112, 46 L. ed. 829, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Re Buchanan, 158 U. S. 31, 39 L. ed. 884, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Hughes, Fed. Proc. § 194, p. 489.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action by an employee of the plaintiff in error to recover damages for severe and permanent personal injuries alleged to have been received while in its service. The plaintiff alleged that he was baggage master and flagman on one of the defendant's passenger trains, running from Portsmouth, Virginia, to Monroe, North Carolina. That a head-on collision occurred with another of defendant's trains, whereby plaintiff and others were injured, and that the collision was due to the negligence of defendant's officers and agents. The answer was, in substance, a general denial for want of knowledge. There was a jury, verdict and judgment for the defendant in error, which was later affirmed by the supreme court of the state. This writ of error was allowed by the chief justice of that court upon the ground that "there was drawn into question a right, privilege, or immunity claimed by the railroad company under a statute of the United States, and the decision was against such right, privilege, or immunity so claimed and specially set up by said defendant," etc. Such a certificate is, however, not sufficient to confer jurisdiction to review the judgment of a state court under § 709 Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). That there was set up and denied some claim or right under the Constitution or a statute of the United States must appear upon the record; and such a certificate is only of value to make more definite or certain that the Federal right was definitely asserted and decided. Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 183, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; 482] Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Smith, H. & Co.* 204 U. S. 551, 51 L. ed. 612, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401.

The Federal question relied upon to sustain the writ of error to this court concerns the construction and application of the Employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322). Neither the complaint nor the answer makes any direct reference to that act; but the complaint did allege that the railroad company was operating a line of railroad between Portsmouth, Virginia, and Monroe, North Carolina, and that the plaintiff, while in its employment as baggage master and flagman upon a passenger train running between said points, was negligently injured by a head-on collision. This states a ground of action under that act, and it was so assumed by the trial court, as appears from that part of the charge relating to the effect of contributory negligence, as well as from some of the questions made in the supreme court of the state.

That the collision was due to negligence was conceded. The only defense which seems to have been made was that, under the rules of the company, the plaintiff was required to remain in the baggage car; but that he was hurt while in the express car, a place where, it is claimed, his duty did not call him, and therefore, he was not injured while employed in the service of the company, or engaged in any duty his employment devolved upon him.

The case was submitted upon these issues, and the finding of the jury upon each was as follows:

"1. Was the plaintiff injured by the negligence of the defendant? Answer. Yes.

"2. Was the plaintiff's injury caused by his contributory negligence? Answer. No.

"3. What damage is the plaintiff entitled to recover? Answer. $30,000."

Four requests for special charges, which bear upon this defense and which were denied, have been assigned here *as error[483 reviewable by this court. They were as follows:

"1. That where an employee undertakes to do something not his duty to do, the master is not negligent; and if the jury shall find by the greater weight of the evidence that the plaintiff was acting outside of the scope of his employment when he was injured, they will find the first issue 'No.'

"3. That as the plaintiff admits that he was in the express car at the time of his injuries, and as the rules of the receivers of the defendant (of which he admits he had that notice) required him to remain in the baggage car when not engaged in flagging the train, the burden is upon the plaintiff to satisfy the jury by the greater weight of evidence, that when he went into said express car, and was injured, he was engaged in the discharge of the duties of his employment; and if he has failed to so satisfy the jury, you will answer the first issue 'No.'

"4. That unless the jury shall find by the greater weight of the evidence that when the plaintiff went into the express car, he understood that he was going there to discharge some of the duties of his employment, the defendant's negligence in causing the derailment of said car would not be the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries, and the jury will answer the first issue 'No.'

"6. The admitted rules of the receivers of the defendant required the plaintiff to remain in the baggage car when not engaged in flagging the train, and the plaintiff had no right to go into the express car in violation of the provisions of the said rules, unless the conductor ordered him to do so for the purpose of discharging some one of the duties of his employment; and unless the jury shall find by the greater weight of the evidence that when the conductor told the plaintiff to go with him into said car, he thereby understood that the conductor 484] wished him to "go to discharge his duties as an employee of the defendant, the jury will answer the first issue 'No.'"

The plaintiff in error also excepted to a part of the court's charge which was in these words:

"If you find from the evidence that the plaintiff had no right to go into the express car; that he was not where he should have been; and you further find that he would not have been injured but for his going into the express car, and that his going into the express car was such an act on his part that a reasonably prudent man ordinarily would not have done under the circumstances of the situation, then he would be guilty of contributory negligence, and it would be your duty to answer the second issue 'Yes:'. If you do not so find, it would be your duty to answer the second issue 'No.'"

Not one of the requests asks any definite construction of any part of the employers' liability act, or, indeed, contains any reference whatever to the act.

They are based alone upon the admitted facts that at the time of the collision the plaintiff was in the express car, and that there was a rule of the company requiring him to be in the baggage car. They assume that, in being in the express car, he was where he had no right to be; and that if injured while there, the jury must acquit the company of negligence, and upon that issue find for the railroad company. The requests take no account of the legal effect of other evidence in the case. Thus, there was evidence tending to show that the express car was used for through baggage, and that baggage was often received from the platform into the express car, and carried to the adjacent baggage car. There was also evidence tending to show that the rule referred to was not enforced, and that the baggage master and express messenger frequently exchanged work, and that this was known to the conductor, who made no objection. There was also evidence tending to show that both the conductor and the 485]*plaintiff had gone to the express car, either upon the call of the messenger or for social purpose, the plaintiff in either event going by direction or on invitation of his immediate superior, the conductor of the train. Any question as to whether his being in the express car at the moment of the collision either contributed to the collision or to the injury sustained, as well as any consideration of the question whether he was in any way negligent in being there, as being in a place of greater danger than if in the baggage car, was ignored.

The trial court was under no obligation to give special charges based upon but a part of the evidence,—charges which, in effect, took from the jury every question save the single fact that plaintiff was, when hurt, in the express car, and that there was a rule which required him to remain in the baggage car.

But the plaintiff in error now urges that it was entitled to have construed that provision of the employers' liability act which requires that a plaintiff, to recover under it, must have been injured "while he was employed by such carrier in such commerce;" and that the requests denied were applicable to the evidence which tended to show that he had ceased to be such an employee, because he was not, at the moment of the injury, engaged in the conduct of interstate commerce, or at the place where his duty required him to be. That the plaintiff was in the general employment of an interstate railroad, and at the time was the baggage master of one of its trains running from one state to another, was shown by all the evidence. If his employment had been terminated, it was solely because he had momentarily gone into the adjacent express car. If he was injured while employed about something which it was not his duty to do, it was solely due to the fact that he had gone into that car either under direction or with the consent of his conductor.

This case does not come here from a Federal court, and *we are therefore not[486 a court of general review. It comes under § 709, Rev. Stat., and the power to review a judgment of a state court is limited and defined by that provision. The sole ground upon which our jurisdiction is invoked is found in the third clause of the section, which provides that, "where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the Constitution, or any treaty or statute . . . and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or immunity specially set up or claimed, . . . may be re-examined and reversed . . ."

This action was brought under an act of Congress. If the act has been erroneously construed and exceptions saved, or if a particular construction to which the party asking was entitled was denied, a right has been denied under the statute, and the question may be reviewed by this court. In St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 293, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, it was said:

"Where a party to litigation in a state court insists, by way of objection to or requests for instructions, upon a construction of a statute of the United States which will lead, or, on possible findings of fact from the evidence may lead, to a judgment in his favor, and his claim in this respect, being duly set up, is denied by the highest court of the state, then the question thus raised may be reviewed in this court. The plain reason is that in all such cases he has claimed in the state court a right or immunity under a law of the United States, and it has been denied to him. Jurisdiction so clearly warranted by the Constitution and so explicitly conferred by the act of Congress needs no justification. But it may not be out of place to say that in no other manner can a uniform construction of the statute laws of the United States be secured, so that they shall have the same meaning and effect in all the states of the Union."

That case came from a state court from a judgment against the plaintiff in error in 487]an action under the safety *appliance act. But in that case the Federal question was specially set up and definite rulings had upon definite questions requiring a construction of the act. Thus the court concludes the paragraph above set out by saying:

"The defendant, now plaintiff in error, objected to an erroneous construction of the safety appliance act, which warranted on the evidence a judgment against it, and insisted upon a correct construction of the act, which warranted on the evidence a judgment in its favor. The denials of its claims were decisions of Federal questions reviewable here."

It was the obvious duty of counsel, if they wished any particular construction of the act, to put the request in such definite terms as that the attention of the court might be directed to the point, and the record here should show that the right now claimed was the right "specially set up" and denied by the court. "It must appear on the face of the record that it was in fact raised; that the judicial mind of the court was exercised upon it; and then a decision against the right claimed under it." Or, at all events, it must appear from the record that there was necessarily present a definite issue as to the correct construction of the act, so directly involved that the court could not have given the judgment it did without deciding the question against the contention of the plaintiff in error. Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 515, 15 L. ed. 508; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 262, 275, 276, 45 L. ed. 855, 358, 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Gaar, S. & Co. v. Shannon, decided at present term [223 U. S. 468, ante, 510, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236]. In Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 529, 55 L. ed. 838, 840, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699, this court said:

"This court has had frequent occasion to say that its right to review the judgment of the highest court of a state is specifically limited by the provisions of § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. This right of review in cases such as the one at bar depends upon an *alleged[488 denial of some right, privilege, or immunity specially set up and claimed under the Constitution or authority of the United States, which it is alleged has been denied by the judgment of the state court. In such cases it is thoroughly well settled that the record of the state court must disclose that the right so set up and claimed was expressly denied, or that such was the necessary effect, in law, of the judgment. Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 183, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 97, 53 L. ed. 417, 424, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220."

Passing now to the error assigned to a paragraph in the general charge, the part objected to and assigned as error is the clause italicized. It was a part of the general charge in respect of contributory negligence. It was limited to the separate issue submitted to the jury as to such negligence.

It is not easy to see why the mere going into the express car would be negligent unless the conditions were such as to be an act of imprudence which a reasonable man would not have done. But this we pass by as pertaining to the merits. In any event the exception did not raise any specific question as to the proper construction of the act under which this action had been brought.

The jury was in explicit terms told that if they found the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence it would not bar a recovery, but that the damages assessed must be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the plaintiff. This was in pursuance of the statute. The jury specially found that the plaintiff had not been guilty of contributory negligence.

In conclusion, we are of opinion that neither the instructions denied nor that objected to are sufficient to raise any Federal question which this court may review. The motion to dismiss the writ for want of jurisdiction is therefore granted.

489]*DAVID LUPTON'S SONS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
AUTOMOBILE CLUB OF AMERICA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 489-501.)

Appeal — review of facts — findings of referee.

1. Exceptions to the findings of fact of a referee, or to his refusal to find facts as requested, cannot be considered on a writ of error to review a judgment entered upon the facts found.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4909-4930, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Foreign corporations — doing business in state — validity of contract — suit.

2. The prohibition against suit in the NOTE. — On construction and effect of "strike" clause in contract of sale and delivery—see note to Cottrell v. Smokeless Fuel Co. 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1187.

Enforceability in Federal court of contract made by a foreign corporation which had not complied with the conditions of doing business within the state.

It is held, practically without contradiction, that a state statute which merely closes the courts of the state to a foreign corporation which has not complied with the conditions of doing business within the state, without expressly or constructively declaring the contract itself void, does not prevent the maintenance of an action in a Federal court sitting in that state, by such foreign corporation, upon a contract made within the state. Barling v. Bank of British N. A. 1 C. C. A. 510, 7 U. S. App. 194, 50 Fed. 260; Sullivan v. Beck, 79 Fed. 200; Blodgett v. Lanyon Zine Co. 58 C. C. A. 79, 120 Fed. 893; Groton Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. American Bridge Co. 151 Fed. 871; Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 545; Vitagraph Co. v. Twentieth Century Optiscope Co. 157 Fed. 699; Johnson v. New York Breweries Co. 101 C. C. A. 639, 178 Fed. 513; Richmond Cedar Works v. Buckner, 181 Fed. 424; Thomas v. Birmingham R. Light & P. Co. 195 Fed. 340.

Generally the provision closing the courts to the foreign corporation is in the form that it shall not maintain any action or proceeding "in any of the courts of this state;" and the result in the cases just cited might, therefore, be sustained even as a matter for statutory construction; but it is clearly implied in the cases that such a provision could not be made operative upon the Federal courts, and it is expressly so declared in Barling v. Bank of British N. A. 1 C. C. A. 510, 7 U. S. App. 194, 50 Fed. 260; Groton Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. American Bridge Co. 151 Fed. 871; Vitagraph Co. v. Twentieth Century Optiscope Co. 157 Fed. 699. And in Groton Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. American Bridge Co. 151 Fed. 871, Johnson v. New York Breweries 56 L. ed.

New York courts, which is the only penalty prescribed for a disregard by a foreign corporation of the provisions of N. Y. Laws 1890, chap. 563, § 15, prohibiting the doing of local business by a foreign corporation without a certificate of authority, does not make the contract void, but it remains valid and enforceable by suit in the Federal courts.

[For other cases, see Corporations, XII. b; XII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Set-off — breach of building contract — expense of completion.

3. The amount necessarily expended by the owner to complete a building contract under an adjustment by the architect, after there had been a strike and cessation of work on account of the character and condition of the labor furnished by the con-

Co. 101 C. C. A. 639, 178 Fed. 513, and Richmond Cedar Works v. Buckner, 181 Fed. 424, the statute was in the form that no such corporation shall maintain any action "in this state" upon any contract made by it in this state,—being the same statute considered in DAVID LUPTON'S SONS CO. v. AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

It is also held or assumed by the Federal courts, with practically no dissent, that if the state statute, either in express terms or by construction, renders a contract void because made by a foreign corporation which had not complied with the conditions of doing business within the state, no action can be maintained thereon in a Federal court sitting in the state, and doubtless the rule would apply equally to a Federal court sitting in any other state. This, of course, assumes that the state statute applies to the particular contract or transaction in question, and that it is constitutional as so applied. McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 35 L.R.A. 236, 24 C. C. A. 11, 39 U. S. App. 332, 76 Fed. 420; Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co. 103 Fed. 838 (affirmed in 187 U. S. 611, 47 L. ed. 328, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206); Cyclone Min. Co. v. Baker Light & P. Co. 165 Fed. 996; LaMoine Lumber & Trading Co. v. Kesterson, 171 Fed. 980; Pittsburgh Constr. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co. 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1145, 83 C. C. A. 501, 154 Fed. 929; Thomas v. Birmingham R. Light & P. Co. 195 Fed. 340. This is also clearly implied in the Federal cases above cited in support of the rule that if the state statute merely closes the courts to the foreign corporation, and does not declare the contract void, the contract may be enforced in the Federal court.

The rule that if the state statute renders contracts within its operation void, such a contract cannot be enforced in a Federal court, was impliedly recognized in Butler Bros. Shoe Co. v. United States Rubber Co. 84 C. C. A. 167, 156 Fed. 1, although it was not applied, because the contracts in question were held not to be within the operation of the state statute, because they related to interstate commerce.

tractor, should be credited against the contract price, where the contract provides that under such circumstances the owner shall have full authority "to arbitrate or adjust the matter," and that the contractor shall make good the loss, to be fixed by the architect or by arbitration.
[For other cases, see Set-Off and Counterclaim, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 137.]

Argued December 20, 1911. Decided June 7, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment dismissing the complaint in an action by a foreign corporation upon a contract made by it in that state without a certificate of authority. Reversed and remanded with instructions to enter judgment for plaintiff.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William Ford Upson argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Forse Scott, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The judgment is reviewable.

Roberts v. Benjamin, 124 U. S. 64, 67, 71, 72, 31 L. ed. 334-337, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Clark, 178 U. S. 353, 364, 44 L. ed. 1099, 1105, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924; Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 80 C. C. A. 172, 150 Fed. 284.

The business of plaintiff, and the transaction in suit, are interstate commerce and, as such, under the protection of the Federal Constitution.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 447, 6 L. ed. 678, 688; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 734, 737, 28 L. ed. 1137, 1139, 1140, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 59, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Milan Mill. & Mfg. Co. v. Gorten, 93 Tenn. 590, 26 L.R.A. 135, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 851, 27 S. W. 971; Black-Clawson Co. v. Carlyle Paper Co. 133 Ill. App. 64; Chuse Engine & Mfg. Co. v. Vromania Apartment Co. 154 Mo. App. 139, 133 S. W. 624; Wolf Co. v. Kutch, 147 Wis. 209, 132 N. W. 981; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 511, 512, 51 L. ed. 295, 297, 298, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

The New York statute is in contravention of the Federal Constitution, and the provision that the corporation may not maintain any action in any court in the state is inseparable from the rest of the statute, and falls with it.

International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 108-112, 54 L. ed. 678, 686-688, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103.

The interference of defendant excused performance to the extent of the work which defendant caused to be done by others.

United States v. Peck, 102 U. S. 64, 26 L. ed. 46; Kingsley v. Brooklyn, 78 N. Y. 216.

While defendant was having frames set and sash hung by another contractor, it was still proceeding under the contract in suit and confirming it.

Elgee Cotton Cases (United States v. Woodruff) 22 Wall. 180, 187, 188, 22 L. ed. 863, 867, 868; Johnson v. Hunt, 11 Wend. 137; Bayley v. Anderson, 71 Wis. 417, 36 N. W. 863; Wooten v. Read, 2 Smedes & M. 589; Manchester Mills v. Rundlett, 23 N. H. 273.

Defendant also waived any previous default in strict performance of conditions by recalling plaintiff and allowing it to complete the work under the contract.

Phillips & C. Constr. Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646, 649, 656, 23 L. ed. 341, 342, 345.

Defendant became a party to an unlawful interference with interstate commerce, and cannot be allowed thereby to avoid payment under its contract.

Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 292-298, 52 L. ed. 488, 496-499, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Irving v. Joint Dist. Council, U. B. C. & J. 180 Fed. 901; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 174, 52 L. ed. 436, 442, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Purvis v. Local No. 500, U. B. C. & J. 214 Pa. 353, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 642, 112 Am. St. Rep. 757, 63 Atl. 585, 6 Ann. Cas. 275.

Mr. William W. Niles argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The judgment entered herein on the report of the referee is not reviewable.

York & C. R. Co. v. Myers, 18 How. 252, 253, 15 L. ed. 382, 383; Campbell v. Boyreau, 21 How. 223, 16 L. ed. 96; Kearney v. Case, 12 Wall. 275, 20 L. ed. 395.

The Supreme Court will not review alleged errors in the refusal of the court to find facts requested.

Shipman v. Straitsville Cent. Min. Co. 158 U. S. 361, 39 L. ed. 1016, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 886; Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Folsom, 18 Wall. 237, 21 L. ed. 827.

The transcript of record contains no bill of exceptions, and thus fails to show what questions were raised on the trial of the action before the referee, and fails to show that any question which would give this court jurisdiction was in issue in the court below.

Ibid.

All the alleged errors on rulings of law that the court might possibly review are immaterial in view of the finding by the referee of all material facts affecting the merits in favor of the defendant, and in view of said referee's finding that the plaintiff had substantially failed to carry out its contract and had broken its contract.

Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 669, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283-295, 49 L. ed. 482-486, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

The plaintiff having failed to perform, and there being no pretense that it had any excuse for nonperformance, or that performance had been waived, could not recover, and the complaint was properly dismissed.

Smith v. Brady, 17 N. Y. 173, 72 Am. Dec. 442; Spence v. Ham, 163 N. Y. 220, 51 L.R.A. 238, 57 N. E. 412; Fuchs v. Saladino, 133 App. Div. 710, 118 N. Y. Supp. 172; Schultze v. Goodstein, 180 N. Y. 249, 73 N. E. 21.

Impossibility of performance without fault of contractor does not excuse him from performing contract.

Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 527, 40 L. ed. 515, 524, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

This court cannot review any of the exceptions to the findings of fact by the referee, or to his refusal to find facts as requested.

Roberts v. Benjamin, 124 U. S. 74, 31 L. ed. 337, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393.

The referee was right in holding that an action could not be maintained by the plaintiff against the defendant under the circumstances of this case.

Wood & Selick v. Ball, 190 N. Y. 217, 83 N. E. 21; Colonial Trust Co. v. Montello Brick Works, 97 C. C. A. 144, 172 Fed. 310.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, David Lupton's Sons Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, was engaged in the business of manufacturing and installing metal window frames and sash. Its factory was in Pennsylvania. In 1905 it entered into a contract in New York with the defendant, the Automobile Club of America, by which it agreed to manufacture and to place in position frames and sash for the defendant's building, to be erected in the city of New York, for the sum of $10,344. While the Lupton Company was putting in the frames a strike occurred, and all the other persons employed by the defendant in the construction of the building stopped work on account, as it is found, "of the character and condition of labor" employed by the Lupton Company, and the material it furnished, of which complaint had been made by a New York labor union. After various negotiations, the defendant—under an adjustment by the architect, and in order to get its building constructed—employed another *con-[494] cern to complete the work embraced in the contract with the Lupton Company. The latter received, for what it did, $5,837.72; the defendant paid for the completion $3,796.76; and if this were credited against the contract price there would remain a balance of $709.52.

The Lupton Company, insisting that it was wrongfully prevented from performance, brought this suit in the circuit court of the United States to recover the sum of $5,000 as the damages sustained by the alleged breach. The defendant pleaded several defenses, as well as a counterclaim for damages for breach by the plaintiff. Among the defenses was one that the Lupton Company could not maintain this action because it was a foreign corporation doing business in the state of New York without a certificate of authority, in violation of § 15 of the general corporation law of that state. Laws of 1890, chap. 563, § 15; Laws of 1892, chap. 687, § 15, as amended.

Upon written stipulation the action was referred to a referee to hear and determine the issues. The referee reported his findings of fact and conclusions of law, holding that the contract was void under the statute and that the complaint should be dismissed. Upon the plaintiff's application, the report was recommitted in order that further findings might be proposed. The referee then passed on numerous requests submitted by the plaintiff, and on the filing of his supplemental report, which left unchanged the original conclusions of law, judgment was entered for the defendant. The Lupton Company brings the case here on writ of error to the circuit court, upon the ground that the New York statute, as applied to the transaction in question, was in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, as an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce.

As the trial was had before the referee, pursuant to the stipulation, the only question presented here is whether *there[495] is any error of law in the judgment rendered by the court upon the facts found by the referee. The findings of fact are conclusive in this court. We cannot review any of the exceptions to these findings or to the refusal of the referee to find facts as requested. Roberts v. Benjamin, 124 U. S. 64, 71, 74, 31 L. ed. 334, 336, 337, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Shipman v. Straitsville Cent. Min. Co. 158 U. S. 356, 361, 39 L. ed. 1015, 1016, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 886; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Clark, 178 U. S. 353, 364, 44 L. ed. 1099, 1105, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924; Hecker v. Fowler, 2 Wall. 123, 17 L. ed. 759; Bond v. Dustin, 112 U. S. 604, 28 L. ed. 835, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Paine v. Central Vermont R. Co. 118 U. S. 152, 158, 30 L. ed. 193, 195, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019.

Under § 15 of the general corporation law of the state of New York a foreign stock corporation, other than a moneyed corporation, is prohibited from doing business in the state without having first procured from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with certain prescribed conditions. The corporation is required (§ 16) to file with the secretary of state a sworn copy of its charter and a statement setting forth the business which it proposes to carry on in the state; to designate its principal place of business within the state, and to appoint a person upon whom legal process may be served. Wood & Selick v. Ball, 190 N. Y. 217, 224, 83 N. E. 21. Section 15 provides: "No foreign stock corporation doing business in this state shall maintain any action in this state upon any contract made by it in this state unless, prior to the making of such contract, it shall have procured such certificate." In his original report, the referee found that the Lupton Company was doing business in the state of New York, within the meaning of the statute, without a certificate of authority; and after the report was recommitted, he made additional findings with respect to the nature of its business, upon which the plaintiff in error bases its contention that the statute has been held to apply to transactions in interstate commerce which were not subject to the state's interdiction. It is not necessary, however, to review these findings, for the statute has received a construction by the 496] *highest court of the state of New York which precludes it, in any aspect of the case, from being regarded as a bar to the maintenance of this action.

The referee's ruling that the contract was void was based upon the statement in the opinion in Wood & Selick v. Ball, supra, that "the procuring of a license must precede the transaction of business, or the contracts of the corporation are not lawful." But in Mahar v. Harrington Park Villa Sites, 204 N. Y. 231, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 97 N. E. 587, the court of appeals of New York has declared that a contract made by a foreign corporation doing business within the state without certificate of authority is not absolutely void; that the only penalty prescribed by the general corporation law for a disregard of the provisions of § 15 is a disability to sue upon such a contract in the courts of New York; and that the contract remains valid and effective in all other respects.

In the Mahar Case, the action was brought to recover a sum deposited under a contract made in New York with the defendant, a foreign corporation, which it was alleged was transacting business in the state without authority at the time the contract was made. It was asserted, in support of the action, that the contract was void, and hence that there was a failure of consideration. The court of appeals held that the complaint did not state a cause of action. In the opinion delivered by Willard Bartlett, J., in which the majority of the court concurred, it is said: .

"It is assumed in the prevailing opinion" (that is, the opinion below, 146 App. Div. 756, 131 N. Y. Supp. 514) "that this court held in the case of Wood & Selick v. Ball, 190 N. Y. 217, 83 N. E. 21, that noncompliance with the requirements of that section has the effect of rendering any contracts made by such a corporation in this state absolutely void. Such is not my understanding of the purport of that decision. The only proposition decided in that case was 'that compliance with § 15 *of [497 the general corporation law should be alleged and proved by a foreign corporation such as the plaintiff, in order to establish a cause of action in the courts of this state.'

. . . The only penalty which the general corporation law itself prescribes for a disregard of the provisions of this section is a disability to sue upon such a contract in the courts of New York. 'No foreign stock corporation doing business in this state shall maintain any action in this state upon any contract made by it in this state, unless, prior to the making of such contract, it shall have procured such certificate.' Consol. Laws, chap. 23, § 15. This prohibition would be effective to prevent the appellant from suing the respondent upon the contract alleged in the complaint; but in my opinion it is not operative to wholly invalidate the contract. I think that the penalty imposed upon a foreign stock corporation for doing business in New York, without the certificate of authority required by § 15 of the general corporation law is limited to that thus prescribed in the section itself. No doubt the legislature could have gone further and declared all contracts to be void which were made by a foreign stock corporation doing business in this state without having obtained the certificate; but it has not done so. This was the view taken in J. R. Alsing Co. v. New England Quartz & Spar Co. 66 App. Div. 473, 73 N. Y. Supp. 347, affirmed in 174 N. Y. 536, 66 N. E. 1110, where it was held that § 15 did not prevent a foreign stock corporation doing business here without having procured the necessary certificate from recovering upon a counterclaim growing out of the transaction upon which the plaintiff sued. 'The defendant, having been brought into court, and thus made to defend,' said Mr. Justice O'Brien in that case, 'should be allowed, unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary, not only to defend, but also to litigate, any question arising out of the transaction that has been made the basis of the plaintiff's complaint. There is no such [498]prohibitive provision *in this statute, and therefore the obtaining of the certificate would not be a prerequisite to a recovery upon the counterclaim in question.' (P. 476.) The Supreme Court of the United States has distinctly held that a contract made by a foreign corporation with a citizen of another state is not necessarily void because the corporation had not complied with the laws of such other state, imposing conditions upon it as a prerequisite to the lawful transaction of business therein. In Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, a tract of land in Colorado had been conveyed to a Missouri corporation in disregard of constitutional and statutory provisions which prohibited a foreign corporation from purchasing or holding land in that state until it should acquire the right to do business therein by fulfilling certain prescribed conditions. Here the Missouri corporation had unquestionably violated the laws of Colorado when it purchased the property without having previously designated its place of business and an agent, as required by the Colorado statute. The only penalty which that statute provided, however, for noncompliance with these provisions, was that the officers, agents, and stockholders should be personally liable on any contracts of such foreign corporation as might be in default. The Supreme Court held the fair implication to be that, in the judgment of the Colorado legislature, this penalty was ample to effect the object of the statute prescribing the terms upon which foreign corporations might do business in that state; and hence the judiciary ought not to inflict the additional and harsh penalty of forfeiting the estate which had been conveyed to the Missouri corporation. In other words, the court refused to treat the conveyance as void, notwithstanding that it was made to a corporation which was forbidden to receive it.

56 L. ed.

"If I am right in assuming that the only infirmity in the contract mentioned in the complaint is the disability of one of the parties to it, namely, the foreign corporation, *to sue upon it in the courts of [499] this state, it remains a valid and effective instrument in all other respects."

In this view, despite its transaction of business without authority, the foreign corporation could sue upon its contracts in any court of competent jurisdiction other than a court of the state of New York. Accordingly, it was held by the court of errors and appeals of New Jersey that a suit might be brought by the corporation in that state upon a contract made in New York, where it was doing business without the prescribed certificate. Alleghany Co. v. Allen, 69 N. J. L. 270, 55 Atl. 724. The court conceded the general rule both in New Jersey and New York to be that a contract void by the law of the state where made would not be enforced in the state of the forum. But it was held that the New York statute did not in terms declare the contract void; it provided that no such action should be maintained in that state.

In dismissing the writ of error to review that judgment (Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 465, 49 L. ed. 551, 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311, this court commented upon the decision of the New York court in the case of the Neuchatel Asphalte Co. v. New York, 155 N. Y. 373, 49 N. E. 1043, which rose under the statute in an earlier form, the section (15) of the general corporation law then providing that the foreign corporation should not maintain "any action in this state upon any contract made by it in this state until it shall have procured such certificate." This court said: "The court of appeals in that case held that the purpose of the act was not to avoid contracts, but to provide effective supervision and control of the business carried on by foreign corporations; that no penalty for noncompliance was provided, except the suspension of civil remedies in that state, and none others would be implied. This corresponds with our rulings upon similar questions. Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93."

It must follow, upon the similar construction of § 15, as it read at the time of the transaction in question, that *the [500] Lupton Company, whether or not it was doing a local business in New York, had the right to bring this suit in the Federal court. The state could not prescribe the qualifications of suitors in the courts of the United States, and could not deprive of their privileges those who were entitled under the Constitution and laws of the United States to resort to the Federal courts for the enforcement of a valid contract. Union Bank v. Vaiden, 18 How. 503, 507, 15 L. ed. 472, 474; Hyde v. Stone, 20 How. 170, 175, 15 L. ed. 874, 875; Cowles v. Mercer County, 7 Wall. 118, 122, 19 L. ed. 86, 87; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 189, 37 L. ed. 689, 697, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 111, 42 L. ed. 964, 968, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526. The state in the statute before us made no such attempt. The only penalty it imposed, to quote again from the Mahar Case, was a disability to sue "in the courts of New York." Before this decision of the state court, the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit reached the same conclusion as to the meaning of the statute, and upheld the right of the foreign corporation to sue in the Federal court. Johnson v. New York Breweries Co. 101 C. C. A. 639, 178 Fed. 513. The court below erred in dismissing the complaint.

With respect to the facts going to the merits of the claim of the Lupton Company, the referee made numerous findings which it is not necessary to set forth or to review at length. The contract provided that "in the event of any strike or cessation of work, caused by character or condition of labor employed or material furnished," the owner should have full authority "to arbitrate or adjust the matter," and the contractor should make good the loss, to be fixed by the architect or by arbitration. This clause was evidently inserted to meet the sort of difficulty which actually arose. The referee found, as has been stated, that it was "on account of the character and condition of labor employed by the plaintiff and the 501] material furnished *by it" that the strike took place and all the other persons employed on the building stopped work. It was also found that to complete the contract the defendant necessarily expended the sum of $3,796.76. This was done under an adjustment by the architect, and upon the findings the defendant was properly allowed a credit for the amount thus paid. There remained due to the plaintiff the sum of $709.52, for which it was entitled to judgment with interest.

Judgment reversed and the cause remanded to the District Court with instructions to enter judgment in favor of the plaintiff for $709.52, with interest from the date of the commencement of the action.

MARION W. SAVAGE, Appt.,
v.

WILLIAM J. JONES, JR., State Chemist of the State of Indiana.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 501-540.)

Appeal — from circuit court — Federal question.

1. A suit to enjoin a state official from enforcing the provisions of a registration and inspection law is one in which the law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, so as to permit a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court, sustaining a general demurrer to the bill for want of equity, where such bill, although averring that complainant's product is not comprehended by the statute, properly interpreted, also alleges that the defendant, who was authorized to enforce the statute, had construed it to be applicable to such product, and challenges the constitutionality of the statute as so construed.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may assail validity.

2. The reduction in the interstate sales of a nonresident manufacturer by reason of a state registration and inspection law affecting the right of the importing purchasers to sell in the original packages,

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333; B. Altman & Co. v. United States, ante, 894.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

State licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On inspection laws as regulations of commerce—see note to New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 78.

which result he can avoid only by compliance with the statute, gives him a standing to challenge the validity of such act as an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — inspection laws.

3. The prohibition against sales by importing purchasers of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs in the original packages, which is made by Ind. Acts 1907, chap. 206, unless there be compliance with its requirements as to inspection and analysis, and the disclosure of the ingredients, including the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, and the maximum percentage of crude fiber, and its incidental provisions for the filing of a certificate, for registration, and for labels and stamps, is a proper exercise of the police power of the state, and not an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — inspection charge.

4. An inspection charge of 80 cents per hundred for stamps to be affixed to packages of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, made by Ind. Laws 1907, chap. 206, is not on its face so unreasonably in excess of the cost of analysis, salaries of officials, and other necessary expenses, as to invalidate the statute, when applied to sales by importers in the original packages, as a disguised revenue measure.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 546, 547, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — inspection.

5. Congress did not, by the passage of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), for the prevention of adulteration and misbranding of foods and drugs when the subject of interstate commerce, preclude the enactment of Ind. Acts of 1907, chap. 206, prohibiting sales of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs in the original packages unless there be compliance with its requirements as to inspection and analysis and the disclosure of the ingredients, including the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, and the maximum percentage of crude fiber, and with its incidental provisions for the filing of a certificate, for registration, and for labels and stamps.

[For other cases, see Commerce, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 68.]

Argued January 18, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana to review a decree sustaining a de-murrer to a bill to restrain the enforcement of a state inspection law. Affirmed.
56 L. ed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Hughes:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court, sustaining a demurrer to the bill for want of equity. The suit was brought by Marion W. Savage, a citizen of Minnesota, to restrain the defendant, the state chemist of Indiana, from taking proceedings to enforce an act of the general assembly of that state (Acts 1907, chapter 206) as applied to the sales of the complainant's product, a preparation for domestic animals known as "International Stock Food." The act is set forth in the margin. †

†Acts 1907, Chapter 206, Page 354, Indiana.

An Act to Provide for the Inspection and Analysis of, and to Regulate the Sale of, Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuff in the State of Indiana; to Prohibit the Sale of Fraudulent or Adulterated Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuffs; to Define the Term "Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuffs;" to Provide for Guaranties of the Ingredients of Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuffs; for the Affixing of Labels and Stamps to the Packages Thereof, as Evidence of the Guaranty and Inspection Thereof; to Provide for the Collection of an Inspection Fee from the Manufacturers of or Dealers in Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuffs; to Fix Penalties for the Violation of the Provisions of This Act, and to Authorize the Expenditure of the Funds Derived from the Inspection Fees.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Indiana, that before any concentrated commercial feeding stuff is sold, offered or exposed for sale in Indiana, the manufacturer, importer, dealer, agent, or person who causes it to be sold or offered for sale, by sample or otherwise, within this state, shall file with the state chemist of Indiana at the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, Purdue University, a statement that he desires to offer such concentrated commercial feeding stuff for sale in this state, and also a certificate, the execution of which shall be sworn to before a notary public or other proper official, for registration, stating the name of the manufacturer, the location of the principal office of the manufacturer, the name, brand, or trademark under which the concentrated commercial feeding stuff will be sold, the ingredients from which the concentrated commercial feeding stuff is compounded, and the minimum percentage of crude fat or crude protein, allowing 1 per cent of nitrogen to equal 6.25 per cent of protein, and the maximum percentage of crude fiber which the manufacturer or person offering the concentrated commercial feeding stuff for sale guarantees it to contain; these constituents to be determined by the methods recommended by the asso-

504] *The bill alleges that the complainant has for many years been engaged in Minnesota in the manufacture of medicinal 505]*preparations, one of which is called "International Stock Food," and is sold in 506]every state in the Union as *well as in many foreign countries; that he has invested large amounts of money in building 507]up a lucrative trade *in Indiana among the retail druggists, many hundreds of whom were "buying, carrying in stock, 508]and retailing to *the public" the complainant's preparations; that the complainant's gross annual sales in Indiana amount to many thousands of dollars; that the "International Stock Food" possesses effective curative properties for various diseases of domestic animals, and is composed of medicinal roots, herbs, seeds, and barks, combined by a secret formula of great value; and that the disclosure to his competitors of the proportion of the ingredients and the manner of combination would seriously injure his business; that the commercial designation "International Stock Food" is not used by the complainant as descriptive of feed of any kind, and is not so understood by retail druggists and purchasers, but is well known to the public as a trade name of a medicine for domestic animals, protected under trademarks *in the United States; that on[509 investigations made by the United States Internal Revenue Department it was determined that the preparation was not feeding stuff nor a condimental stock food, but was ciation of official agricultural chemists of the United States.

Sec. 2. Any person, company, corporation, or agent that shall sell or offer, or expose for sale, any concentrated commercial feeding stuff in this state, shall affix, or cause to be affixed, to every package or sample of such concentrated commercial feeding stuff, in a conspicuous place on the outside thereof, a tag or label which shall be accepted as a guaranty of the manufacturer, importer, dealer, or agent, and which shall have plainly printed thereon in the English language, the number of net pounds of concentrated commercial feeding stuff in the package, the name, brand, or trademark under which the concentrated commercial feeding stuff is sold, the name of the manufacturer, the location of the principal office of the manufacturer, and the guaranteed analysis, stating the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, determined as described in § 1, and the ingredients from which the concentrated commercial feeding stuff is compounded. For each 100 pounds, or fraction thereof, the person, company, corporation, or agent, shall also affix a stamp purchased from the state chemist, showing that the concentrated commercial feeding stuff has been registered as required by § 1 of this act, and that the inspection tax has been paid. When concentrated commercial feeding stuff is sold in bulk a tag, as hereinbefore described, and a state chemist stamp, shall be delivered to the consumer with each 100 pounds, or fraction thereof: Provided, That for wheat bran a special stamp covering 50 pounds shall be issued on request, and one such stamp, attached to the tag hereinbefore mentioned, shall be delivered to the purchaser with each 50 pounds or fraction thereof.

Sec. 3. The state chemist shall register the facts set forth in the certificate required by § 1 of this act in a permanent record, and shall furnish stamps or labels showing the registration of such certificate to manufacturers or agents desiring to sell the concentrated commercial feeding stuff so registered, at such times and in such numbers as the manufacturers or agents may desire:

Provided, That the state chemist shall not be required to sell stamps or labels in less amount than to the value of five dollars ($5) or multiples of five dollars for any one concentrated commercial feeding stuff: Provided further, That the state chemist shall not be required to register any certificate unless accompanied by an order and fees for stamps or labels to the value of five dollars ($5) or some multiple of five dollars: Provided further, That such stamps or labels shall be printed in such form as the state chemist may prescribe: Provided further, That such stamps or labels shall be good until used.

Sec. 4. On or before January 31st of each year, each and every manufacturer, importer, dealer, agent, or person, who causes any concentrated commercial feeding stuff to be sold or offered or exposed for sale in the state of Indiana shall file with the state chemist of Indiana a sworn statement, giving the number of net pounds of each brand of concentrated commercial feeding stuff he has sold or caused to be offered for sale in the state for the previous year, ending December 31st: Provided, That when the manufacturer, jobber, or importer of any concentrated commercial feeding stuff shall have filed the statement aforesaid, any person acting as agent for said manufacturer, importer, or jobber shall not be required to file such statement.

Sec. 5. For the expense incurred in registering, inspecting, and analyzing concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, the state chemist shall receive for stamps or labels furnished $1 per hundred: Provided, That for wheat bran a special stamp as required by § 2 of this act shall be furnished at 50 cents per hundred. The money for said stamps, or labels, shall be forwarded to the said state chemist, who shall pay all such fees received by him to the director of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, Purdue University, by whom they shall be paid into the treasury of said Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, the board of control of which shall expend the same, on proper vouchers to be filed with the auditor of state in meeta proprietary or patent medicine within the meaning of the revenue laws of 1863 and 1898; and that subsequent to the enactment by Congress of the food and drugs act of 1906 [34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354], the administrative officers of the United States government duly determined that it was a medicine, and not a food, within the meaning of that act.

The bill then avers the passage of the act above mentioned by the legislature of Indiana, and sets forth the provisions of §§ 1, 2, 8, 9, and 11. It is alleged that the defendant, the state chemist of Indiana, is asserting that the complainant's manufacture is one of the concentrated commercial feeding stuffs covered by the act, and that it is the duty of the complainant to comply with its provisions with reference to its sale in Indiana, "and has stated and declared to your orator, and now threatens, that unless your orator has attached in a conspicuous place on the outside of each package of your orator's said medicinal preparation offered for sale within the state of Indiana, a printed statement, clear and truthful, certifying, among other things, the name of the manufacturer and shipper, the place of manufacture, the place of business, and chemical analysis, stating the percentage of crude protein, crude fat, and crude fiber contained in said preparation, and have all its constituents determined by the methods adopted by the session of official agricultural chemists, and shall also ing all necessary expenses in carrying out the provisions of this act, including the employment of inspectors, chemists, expenses in procuring samples, printing bulletins giving results of the work of feeding-stuff inspection, as provided for by this act, and for any other expenses of said Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station as authorized by law. The director of said experiment station shall make to the governor, on or before February 15th of each year, a classified report showing the total receipts and expenditures of all fees received under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 6. Any person, company, corporation, or agent that shall offer for sale, sell, or expose for sale any package or sample, or any quantity of any concentrated commercial feeding stuff which has not been registered with the state chemist as required by § 1 of this act, or which does not have affixed to it the tag and stamp required by § 2 of this act, or which is found by an analysis made by or under the direction of the state chemist to contain a smaller percentage of crude fat or crude protein than the minimum guaranty, or which shall be labeled with a false or inaccurate guaranty, or who shall adulterate any concentrated commercial feeding stuff with foreign mineral matter or other foreign substance, such as rice hulls, chaff, mill sweepings, peanut shells, corn bran, corncorb meal, oat hulls, oat clippings, or other materials of less or of little or no feeding value, without plainly stating on the label hereinbefore described, the kind and amount of such mixture, or who shall adulterate with any substance injurious to the health of domestic animals, or who shall alter the stamp, tag, or label of the state chemist, or shall use the name and title of the state chemist on a stamp, tag, or label not furnished by the state chemist, or shall use the stamp, tag, or label of the state chemist the second time, or shall refuse or fail to make the sworn statement required by § 4 of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in the sum of $50 for the first offense, and in the sum of $100 for each subsequent offense. In all litigation arising from the purchase or sale of any concentrated commercial feeding stuff in which the composition of the same may be involved a certified copy of the official analysis, signed by the state chemist, shall be accepted as prima facie evidence of the composition of such concentrated commercial feeding stuff: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to restrict or prohibit the sale of concentrated commercial feeding stuff in bulk to each other by importers, manufacturers, or manipulators who mix concentrated commercial feeding stuff for sale, or as preventing the free, unrestricted shipment of these articles in bulk to manufacturers or manipulators who mix concentrated commercial feeding stuff for sale, or to prevent the state chemist, or the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, or any person or persons deputized by said state chemist, making experiments with concentrated commercial feeding stuffs for the advancement of the science of agriculture.

Sec. 7. The state chemist or any person by him deputized is hereby empowered to procure from any lot, parcel, or package of any concentrated commercial feeding stuff offered for sale or found in Indiana a quantity of concentrated commercial feeding stuff not to exceed 2 pounds: Provided, That such sample shall be drawn during reasonable business hours, or in the presence of the owner of the concentrated commercial feeding stuff, or of some person claiming to represent the owner.

Sec. 8. Any person who shall prevent or strive to prevent the state chemist, or any person deputized by the state chemist, from inspecting and obtaining samples of concentrated commercial feeding stuff, as provided in this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in the sum of $50 for the first offense, and in the sum of $100 for each subsequent offense.

Sec. 9. The state chemist is hereby empowered to prescribe and enforce such rules and regulations relating to concentrated commercial feeding stuff as he may deem necessary to carry into effect the full in-state upon said package the names of each ingredient of which said preparation is composed, he will cause the arrest and prosecution of every person dealing or trading in the medicinal preparation of your orator within the state of Indiana." That the defendant has sent, or caused to be sent, 510]broadcast *throughout the state of Indiana to dealers and others who are customers, directly or indirectly, of complainant, many thousand circular letters warning them against the sale of said preparation, and threatening that prosecution will be instituted against all persons engaged in the sale thereof, unless and until the complainant shall have complied with the provisions of said act.

It is also alleged that the sales made by the complainant "in the state of Indiana are made at the city of Minneapolis, state of Minnesota, to be delivered free on board of cars at Minneapolis, Minnesota, and delivered to purchasers and consumers within the state of Indiana in the original unbroken packages, freight being paid thereon by the consumers and purchasers." That unless restrained the defendant will continue to annoy and intimidate the numerous persons engaged in selling the preparation in Indiana, by threats of criminal prosecution, and will report to the various prosecuting attorneys of the state the sales that may come to his notice, and instigate prosecutions of the sellers as violators of the statute, thereby obstructing the complainant in the conduct of his business in the state of Indiana, and interfering with his property rights, to his irreparable injury, for which there is no adequate legal remedy. That many hundreds of persons engaged in selling the preparation have already discontinued their purchases and sales because of the fear of criminal prosecution induced by the defendant's threats, and that large numbers of those who are still handling it will be induced by such threats to discontinue its sale.

The bill further avers that the complainant's preparation is not in any sense either concentrated commercial feeding stuff, or condimental stock feed, or a patent proprietary stock feed within the proper construction of the act of Indiana, and is not advertised as possessing nutritive properties or used except as medicine; that the complainant does not "claim that said medicinal preparation contains *any[511 crude protein or crude fat;" that it does not contain, nor is it claimed on behalf of the defendant that it contains, any ingredient that is deleterious or injurious to animal life or health; that it is prescribed and administered in small doses as medicine, and "that the only nutritive substance or ingredients . . . are employed as diluents in so small an amount as to produce no feeding effect whatever, but for the sole purpose of rendering medicinal bitter roots, herbs, barks, and seeds more acceptable to the animal stomach;" that directions for use accompany each package, and in every case there is a statement plainly showing that the preparation is to be used to cure disease, and not in place of or as a substitute for any grain or feed. That nevertheless, the defendant, who, in his official capacity, is charged by law with the en-tent and meaning of this act, and to refuse the registration of any feeding stuff under a name which would be misleading as to the materials of which it is made, or when the percentage of crude fiber is above or the percentage of crude fat or crude protein below the standards adopted for concentrated commercial feeding stuffs. The state chemist is further empowered to refuse to issue stamps or labels to any manufacturer, importer, dealer, agent, or person who shall sell or offer or expose for sale any concentrated commercial feeding stuff in this state, and refuse to submit the sworn statement required by § 4 of this act.

Sec. 10. It shall be the duty of every prosecuting attorney to whom the state chemist shall report any violation of this act to cause proceedings to be commenced against the person or persons so violating the act, and the same prosecuted in the manner required by law.

Sec. 11. The term "concentrated commercial feeding stuff," as used in this act, shall include linseed meals, cocoanut meals, gluten feeds, gluten meals, germ feeds, corn feeds, maize feeds, dairy feeds, starch feeds, sugar feeds, dried brewers' grains, malt sprouts, dried distillers' grains, dried beet refuse, hominy feeds, cerealine feeds, rice meals, rice bran, rice polish, peanut meals, oat feeds, corn and oat feeds, corn bran, wheat bran, wheat middlings, wheat shorts and other mill by-products not excluded in this section, ground beef or fish scraps, dried blood, blood meals, bone meals, tankage, meat meals, slaughter-house waste products, mixed feeds, clover meals, alfalfa meals, and feeds, peavine meal, cotton seed meal, velvet bean meal, sucrose, mixed feeds, and mixed meals made from seeds or grains, and all materials of similar nature used for food for domestic animals, condimental feeds, poultry feeds, stock feeds, patented proprietary or trade and market stock and poultry feeds; but it shall not include straw, whole seeds, unmixed meals made directly from the entire grains of wheat, rye, barley, oats, Indian corn, buckwheat, and broom corn, nor wheat flours or other flours.

Sec. 12. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

forcement of the statute, has construed it to apply to complainant's product.

That under § 3 of the statute of Indiana the state chemist is to register the facts set forth in the certificate required by § 1 as a permanent record, and to furnish stamps or labels, showing such registration, to manufacturers or agents desiring to sell the concentrated commercial feeding stuff so registered in amounts not less than the value of $5 or multiples of $5 for any one such product; that by § 5 the state chemist is to receive $1 for each one hundred stamps, and that the proceeds thus derived are to be paid into the treasury of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, to be expended in carrying out the provisions of the statute and for any other expenses of such station, as authorized by law.

That the statute, and particularly §§ 1, 2, 7, 8, and 9, are repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, in that they require manufacturers of proprietary stock feed and condimental feeds, arbitrarily, without compensation, 512]and without due process *of law, whether such preparation contain any poisonous or deleterious element or ingredient, to disclose the formulæ by which they are compounded, and the ingredients and proportions thereof, which embody valuable trade secrets; and that if the act is enforced against the complainant he will be deprived of his property contrary to the said Amendment.

That the statute also violates § 8 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States as an unreasonable interference with interstate commerce in which the complainant is engaged.

That further, the statute is invalid under § 19 of article 4 of the Constitution of the state of Indiana in that the title does not express the requirement that manufacturers or dealers shall disclose the formulæ by which their products are manufactured, or the ingredients or proportions.

That for many years the complainant's preparation has been offered for sale in packages of different sizes, holding respectively 24 ounces, 3 pounds, 6 pounds, and 25 pounds; that under the terms of the statute the complainant would be required to pay the same amount of tax for a package of 24 ounces that other commodities and manufacturers thereof pay for a package of 100 pounds; and that this discrimination is unreasonable and unconstitutional.

That the enforcement of the requirement as to the affixing of stamps and payment therefor is a tax upon the complainant's property and business, and is not a license fee determined by any reasonable requirement, or for the purpose of carrying out the inspection required, but, on the contrary, under the guise of a police regulation, constitutes a measure for raising revenue for the general work and expense of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station. That the act is contrary to § 10 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, that no state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports, *except what may be absolute-513 ly necessary for executing its inspection law.

The bill prays that the defendant may be enjoined from taking any action against the complainant, interfering with his right to vend and convey his preparations in the state of Indiana, from instituting any proceedings to punish him for failure to comply with the defendant's demands, from giving out orally or in writing to the various prosecuting officers of the state, or to any other agents thereof charged with the enforcement of its law, or to the public, any threats of prosecution, or information upon which prosecutions are requested or may be based, and from otherwise seeking to prevent the conduct of the complainant's business in the state, or to discredit the reputation of his remedy.

The defendant demurred to the bill upon the ground that it was wholly without equity, and that the court was without jurisdiction. Upon the former ground the bill was dismissed.

Mr. M. H. Boutelle argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The constitutional question presented establishes the right of direct appeal from the decree of the circuit court to this court.

Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 694, 42 L. ed. 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 671, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Every question arising upon the record is open for consideration on the present appeal.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 181, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 576, 36 L. ed. 268, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The act is a direct regulation and consequent interference with commerce.

Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep.

674; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 254, 255, 52 L. ed. 778, 780, 781, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 214 U. S. 218, 53 L. ed. 972, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania (Paul v. Pennsylvania) 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768.

The law in question is not an inspection act.

Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 93, 99, 41 L. ed. 632, 642, 645, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Vance v. W. A. Vanderook Co. 170 U. S. 456, 42 L. ed. 1107, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. New Hope, 192 U. S. 55, 48 L. ed. 338, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Atlantic & P. Teleph. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

In considering this phase of the case, the self-characterization of the act is wholly immaterial. In the ascertainment of its natural effect and intendment, this court is neither concluded by its self-styled objects, or its local interpretation.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101.

The act in question as applied to interstate commerce is superseded and annulled by the act of Congress of June 30th, 1906, known as the pure food and drugs act.

Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. ed. 305, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 255, 52 L. ed. 778, 780, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 498, 24 L. ed. 547, 551; The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 198, 47 L. ed. 770, 774, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

Mr. Edwin Corr argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas M. Honan, filed a brief for appellee:

A party insisting on the invalidity of a statute, as violating any constitutional provision, must show that he may be injured by the unconstitutional law, before the courts will listen to his complaint.

Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 534, 54 L. ed. 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 419, 48 L. ed. 1050, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 160, 51 L. ed. 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 730.

It is only where the police power of a state law undertakes directly to regulate interstate commerce that it is invalid.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 50, 51 L. ed. 86, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 471, 39 L. ed. 226, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

A state has a right to require that any article of commerce, whether harmful or not, be sold for just what it is; and may require it to be labeled, showing of what it is composed. In its regulations to prevent fraud and deceit and adulteration in the sale of articles, it may require an inspection not only of adulterated articles, but of those which may not be adulterated. Inspection laws are not founded on the theory that the things on which they act are dangerous or noxious in themselves.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 488, 31 L. ed. 708, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Stolz v. Thompson, 44 Minn. 271, 46 N. W. 410; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 348, 43 L. ed. 191, 192, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 65 L.R.A. 864, 51 C. C. A. 122, 113 Fed. 616, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Unless the inspection fee is so unreasonably large as to show on its face the lack of good faith in the enactment of the law, the question of the amount of such inspection fee is a legislative, and not a judicial, question.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 55, 51 L. ed. 88, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 355, 43 L. ed. 195, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

The Indiana law being a valid exercise of the police power to enact proper inspection laws, if the same were in conflict with the pure food and drugs act the latter would have to give way, as Congress has no right to pass laws prohibiting a state from exercising its police powers in enacting proper inspection laws.

Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 190, 48 L. ed. 402, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

519] *Mr. Justice Hughes, after making the above statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal contention in support of this appeal is that the statute of Indiana (Acts 1907, chapter 206), the provisions of which have been set forth, is an unconstitutional interference with the complainant's right to engage in interstate commerce.

A preliminary question arises with respect to the jurisdiction of this court, by reason of the allegation of the bill that the complainant's product is not a "concentrated commercial feeding stuff" within the true meaning of the act, and that so interpreted the statute would not apply. But it was also alleged that the state chemist, who was authorized to enforce the statute, had construed it to be applicable to the commodity which is commercially known as "International Stock Food;" and thus charged by the officer with the duty of obedience, the complainant in his bill challenged the constitutionality of the legislation. The grounds for the attack were not found in the conclusions reached by the officer as to the nature of the article, in administering an act otherwise conceded to be valid (Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 414, 48 L. ed. 239, 241, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148), but in the provisions of the statute itself, as applied to the articles within its purview while in the course of interstate commerce. A general demurrer, for want of equity, was sustained, and in view of the substantial character of the contention, the case must be regarded as one in which the law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States. Act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 5, 26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 694, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 478, 45 L. ed. 280, 285, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Lampasas 56 L. ed.

v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 282, 45 L. ed. 527, 530, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

It is said that the complainant is not entitled to invoke the constitutional protection, in that he fails to show injury. Southern R. Co. v. King*, 217 U. S. 520 524, 534, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. The argument rests upon the averment in the bill that his sales were made at Minneapolis, the goods "to be delivered free on board of cars" at that point, "and delivered to purchasers and consumers within the state of Indiana in the original unbroken packages, freight being paid thereon by the consumers and purchasers." In answer, it must again be said that "commerce among the states is not a technical legal conception, but a practical one, drawn from the course of business." Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 398, 49 L. ed. 518, 525, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 512, 51 L. ed. 295, 297, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159. It clearly appears from the bill that the complainant was engaged in dealing with purchasers in another state. His product manufactured in Minnesota was, in pursuance of his contracts of sale, to be delivered to carriers for transportation to the purchasers in Indiana. This was interstate commerce, in the freedom of which from any unconstitutional burden the complainant had a direct interest. The protection accorded to this commerce by the Federal Constitution extended to the sale by the receiver of the goods in the original packages. Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 559, 560, 35 L. ed. 572, 575, 576, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 473, 39 L. ed. 223, 227, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 445, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 1104, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 22-25, 43 L. ed. 49, 57, 58, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 276, 51 L. ed. 178, 180, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 Ann. Cas. 1130. An attack upon this right of the importing purchasers to sell in the original packages bought from the complainant, not only would be to their prejudice, but inevitably would inflict injury upon the complainant by reducing his interstate sales,—a result to be avoided only through his compliance with the act by filing the statement and affixing to his goods the labels it required. According to the bill, the state chemist had threatened the complainant that, in default of such compliance, he would cause the arrest and prosecution of every 521] person dealing in the *article within the state, and had distributed broadcast throughout the state warning circulars. If the statute of Indiana, as applied to sales by importing purchasers in the original packages, constitutes an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce in the complainant's product, he had standing to complain, and was entitled to relief against enforcement by the defendant of the illegal demands. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 112, 41 L. ed. 648, 653, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 125, 159, 160, 52 L. ed. 714, 728, 729, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Hopkins v. Clemson Agri. College, 221 U. S. 636, 643-645, 55 L. ed. 890, 894, 895, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 620, 621, ante, 570, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340.

We are thus brought to the examination of the statute. The question of its constitutional validity may be considered in two aspects: (1) independently of the operation and effect of the act of Congress of June 30, 1906, chap. 3915 (34 Stat. at L. 768, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), known as "the food and drugs act," and (2) in the light of this Federal enactment.

First. The statute relates to the sale of various sorts of food for domestic animals, embraced in the term "Concentrated commercial feeding stuff," as defined in the act. It requires the filing of a statement and a sworn certificate, the affixing of a label bearing certain information, and a stamp.

By § 1 it is provided, in substance, that before any such feeding stuff is sold, or offered for sale, in Indiana, the "the manufacturer, importer, dealer, agent, or person" selling or offering it, shall file with the state chemist a statement that he desires to sell the feeding stuff, and also a sworn certificate, for registration, stating (a) the name of the manufacturer, (b) the location of the principal office of the manufacturer, (c) the name, brand, or trademark under which the article will be sold, (d) the ingredients from which it is compounded, and (e) the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, allowing 1 522] per cent of nitrogen to equal 6.25 *per cent of protein, and the maximum percentage of crude fiber which the manufacturer or person offering the article for sale guarantees it to contain; these constituents to be determined by the methods recommended by the association of official agricultural chemists of the United States. The state chemist is to register the facts set forth in the certificate in a permanent record (§ 3).

Section 2 provides that there shall be affixed to every package or sample of the article a tag or label which shall be accepted as a guaranty of the manufacturer, importer, dealer, or agent, and shall have plainly printed thereon (a) the number of net pounds of feeding stuff in the package, (b) the name, brand, or trademark under which it is sold, (c) the name of the manufacturer, (d) the location of the principal office of the manufacturer, and (e) the guaranteed analysis, stating the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, determined as described in § 1, and the ingredients from which the article is compounded.

A stamp purchased from the state chemist, showing that the article has been registered and that the inspection tax has been paid, is to be affixed for each 100 pounds or fraction thereof, special provision being made for the delivery of an equivalent number of stamps on sale in bulk. By an amendment of 1909, stamps are to be issued by the state chemist to cover 25, 50, and 100 pounds (Acts 1909, chapter 46). He is not required to sell stamps in less amount than to the value of $5, or multiples thereof, for any one feeding stuff, or to register any certificate unless accompanied by an order and fees for stamps to the amount of $5, or some multiple of that sum (§ 3). Sworn statements are to be filed annually of the number of net pounds of each brand of feeding stuff sold or offered for sale in the state (§ 4).

The price of the stamps under the original act was $1 *per hundred; but by [523 the amendment of 1909 (supra) the charge was made 80 cents per hundred, for stamps to cover 100 pounds, and 40 cents and 20 cents respectively for stamps to cover 50 and 25 pounds. The fees received are to be paid into the treasury of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, and expended "in meeting all necessary expenses in carrying out the provisions of this act, including the employment of inspectors, chemists, expenses in procuring samples, printing bulletins giving the results of the work of feeding-stuff inspection, as provided for by this act, and for any other expenses of said Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, as authorized by law." A classified report of the receipts and expenditures is to be made to the governor of the state annually (§ 5).

Anyone selling, or offering for sale, any feeding stuff which has not been registered and labeled and stamped, as required by the act, or which is found by an analysis made by the state chemist, or under his direction, to contain "a smaller percentage of crude fat or crude protein than the minimum guaranty," or is "labeled with a false or inaccurate guaranty," and anyone who adulterates any feeding stuff "with foreign mineral matter or other foreign substance, such as rice hulls, chaff, mill sweepings," etc.," "or other materials of less or of little or no feeding value without plainly stating on the label hereinbefore described, the kind and amount of such mixture," or who adulterates with any substances injurious to the health of domestic animals, or alters the state chemist's stamp, or uses it a second time, or fails to make the sworn statement as to annual sales as required, is guilty of a misdemeanor and is subject to fine (§ 6).

The state chemist and his deputies are empowered to procure from any lot or package of the described feeding stuffs offered for sale or found in Indiana a quantity not exceeding 2 pounds, to be drawn during reasonable *business hours, or in the presence of the owner or his representatives (§ 7), and it is made a misdemeanor to interfere with such inspection and sampling (§ 8). He is also authorized to prescribe and enforce regulations as he may deem necessary to carry the act into effect; and he may refuse "the registration of any feeding stuff under a name which would be misleading as to the materials of which it is made, or when the percentage of crude fiber is above or the percentage of crude fat or crude protein below the standards adopted for concentrated commercial feeding stuffs."

The evident purpose of the statute is to prevent fraud and imposition in the sale of food for domestic animals,—a matter of great importance to the people of the state. Its requirements were directed to that end, and they were not unreasonable. It was not aimed at interstate commerce, but, without discrimination, sought to promote fair dealing in the described articles of food. The practice of selling feeding stuffs under general descriptions gave opportunity for abuses which the legislature of Indiana determined to correct, and to safeguard against deception it required a disclosure of the ingredients contained in the composition. The bill complains of the injury to manufacturers if they are forced to reveal their secret formulas and processes. We need not here express an opinion upon this question, in the breadth suggested, as the statute does not compel a disclosure of formulas or manner of combination. It does demand a statement of the ingredients, and also of the minimum percentage of crude fat and crude protein, and of the maximum percentage of crude fiber,—a requirement of obvious propriety in connection with substances purveyed as feeding stuffs.

56 L. ed.

The state cannot, under cover of exerting its police powers, undertake what amounts essentially to a regulation of interstate commerce, or impose a direct burden upon that commerce. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 474, 24 L. ed. 527, 531; Walling v. Michigan*, 116 U. S. 446[525 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 13, 43 L. ed. 49, 53, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 52 L. ed. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 214 U. S. 218, 53 L. ed. 972, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633. But when the local police regulation has real relation to the suitable protection of the people of the state, and is reasonable in its requirements, it is not invalid because it may incidentally affect interstate commerce, provided it does not conflict with legislation enacted by Congress pursuant to its constitutional authority. Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 317, 41 L. ed. 166, 173, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Patapco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 48 L. ed. 401, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 50, 51 L. ed. 78, 86, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 254-256, 52 L. ed. 778, 780, 781, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

In Plumley v. Massachusetts, a law of that commonwealth was sustained which had been passed "to prevent deception in the manufacture and sale of imitation butter." The article for the sale of which the plaintiff in error was convicted in the state court had been received by him from the manufacturers in Illinois, as their agent, and had been sold in Massachusetts in the original package. The court said (155 U. S. pp. 468, 472), referring to the purpose and effect of the statute: "He is only forbidden to practice, in such matters, a fraud upon the general public. The statute seeks to suppress false pretenses and to promote fair dealing in the sale of an article of food. 526] It *compels the sale of oleomargarin for what it really is, by preventing its sale for what it is not. Can it be that the Constitution of the United States secures to anyone the privilege of manufacturing and selling an article of food in such manner as to induce the mass of people to believe that they are buying something which, in fact, is wholly different from that which is offered for sale? Does the freedom of commerce among the states demand a recognition of the right to practise a deception upon the public in the sale of any articles, even those that may have become the subject of trade in different parts of the country? . . . Such legislation may, indeed, indirectly or incidentally affect trade in such products transported from one state to another state. But that circumstance does not show that laws of the character alluded to are inconsistent with the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the [several] states."

In Patapasco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, the court had before it a statute of North Carolina relating to fertilizing materials. It provided: "Every bag, barrel, or other package of such fertilizers or fertilizing materials as above designated, offered for sale in this state, shall have thereon plainly printed a label or stamp, a copy of which shall be filed with the Commissioner of Agriculture, together with a true and faithful sample of the fertilizer or fertilizing material which it is proposed to sell, . . . and the said label or stamp shall truly set forth the name, location, and trademark of the manufacturer; also the chemical composition of the contents of such package, and the real percentage of any of the following ingredients asserted to be present: to wit, soluble and precipitated phosphoric acid, which shall not be less than 8 per cent; soluble potassa, which shall not be less than 1 per cent; ammonia, which shall not be less than 2 per cent, or its equivalent in nitrogen; together with the date of its analyzation, and that the requirements of 527] the law have *been complied with; and any such fertilizer as shall be ascertained by analysis not to contain the ingredients and percentage set forth as above provided shall be liable to seizure and condemnation." A charge of 25 cents per ton on such materials was laid for the purpose of defraying the expenses connected with the inspection; and the department of agriculture was authorized to establish an experiment station and to employ an analyst, whose duty it was to analyze such fertilizers and products as might be required by the department, and to aid, so far as practicable, in suppressing fraud in their sale.

The court upheld the statute, saying (supra, p. 357): "Whenever inspection laws act on the subject before it becomes an article of commerce they are confessedly valid, and also when, although operating on articles brought from one state into another, they provide for inspection in the exercise of that power of self-protection commonly called the police power." After referring to the decision in Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, the court, continued (pp. 358, 361): "Where the subject is of wide importance to the community, the consequences of fraudulent practices generally injurious, and the suppression of such frauds matter of public concern, it is within the protective power of the state to intervene. Laws providing for the inspection and grading of flour, the inspection and regulation of weights and measures, the weighing of coal on public scales, and the like, are all competent exercises of that power, and it is not perceived why the prevention of deception in the adulteration of fertilizers does not fall within its scope. . . . The act of January 21, 1891, must be regarded, then, as an act providing for the inspection of fertilizers and fertilizing materials in order to prevent the practice of imposition on the people of the state, and the charge of 25 cents per ton as intended merely to defray the cost of such inspection. It being competent for the state to pass laws of this character, does the requirement *of inspection and payment of its cost[528 bring the act into collision with the commercial power vested in Congress? Clearly this cannot be so as to foreign commerce, for clause 2 of § 10 of article 1 expressly recognizes the validity of state inspection laws, and allows the collection of the amounts necessary for their execution; and we think the same principle must apply to interstate commerce. In any view, the effect on that commerce is indirect and incidental, and 'the Constitution of the United States does not secure to anyone the privilege of defrauding the public.'"

It cannot be doubted that, within the principle of these decisions, and of the others above cited, the state of Indiana—assuming for the present that there was no conflict with Federal legislation—was entitled, in the exercise of its police power, to require the disclosure of the ingredients contained in the feeding stuffs offered for sale in the state, and to provide for their inspection and analysis. The provisions for the filing of a certificate, for registration and for labels, were merely incidental to these requirements, and were appropriate means for accomplishing the legitimate purpose of the act. It is said that the statute permits the state, through its officials, to set up arbitrary standards governing conditions of manufacture. But it does not appear that any arbitrary standard has been set up, or that there has been any attempt to enforce one against the complainant. See Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 224 U. S. 160, 168, ante, 710, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449. The complainant has declined to file the statement and to affix the labels containing the disclosure of ingredients for which the statute provides, and instead he resorts to this suit.

The contention is made that the statute is a disguised revenue measure; but on a review of its provisions we find no warrant for such a characterization of it. The bill sets forth no facts whatever to show that the charge for stamps is unreasonable in its relation to the costs of inspection, 529]*and certainly it cannot be said that aught appears "to justify the imputation of bad faith and change the character of the act." Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, supra; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 380, 393, ante, 240, 244, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152. With respect to the requirement of an advance payment for stamps, to the value of $5, to accompany the certificate, we need not say more than that the complainant is plainly not prejudiced, in view of the alleged extent of his sales.

Second. The question remains whether the statute of Indiana is in conflict with the act of Congress known as the food and drugs acts of June 30, 1906. For the former, so far as it affects interstate commerce even indirectly and incidentally, can have no validity if repugnant to the Federal regulation. Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 146, 147, 47 L. ed. 108, 113, 114, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 256, 257, 52 L. ed. 778, 781, 782, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 56 L. ed.

S. 370, 378, ante, 237, 238, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 436, ante, 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

The object of the food and drugs act is to prevent adulteration and misbranding, as therein defined. It prohibits the introduction into any state from any other state "of any article of food or drugs which is adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of this act." The purpose is to keep such articles "out of the channels of interstate commerce, or, if they enter such commerce, to condemn them while being transported or when they have reached their destinations, provided they remain unloaded, unsold, or in original unbroken packages." Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 45, 54, 55 L. ed. 364, 366, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364. To determine the scope of the act with respect to feeding stuffs we must examine its definitions of the adulteration and misbranding of food, the term "food" including "all articles used for food, drink, confectionary, or condiment by man or other animals, whether simple, mixed, or compound" (§ 6). *These definitions are found in §§ 7[530 and 8, which are set forth in the margin.†

*It will be observed that in its[531 enumeration of the acts which constitute a violation of the statute, Congress has not included the failure to disclose the ingredients of the article, save in specific instances, where, for example, morphine, opium, cocaine, or other substances particularly mentioned, are present. It is provided that the article "for the purposes of this act" shall be deemed to be misbranded if the package †Sec. 7. That for the purposes of this act an article shall be deemed to be adulterated:

In case of food:

First. If any substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength.

Second. If any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article.

Third. If any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted.

Fourth. If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Fifth. If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health: Provided, That when, in the preparation of food products for shipment, they are preserved by any external application applied in such manner that the preservative is necessarily removed mechanically, or by maceration in water, or otherwise, and directions for the removal of such preservative shall be printed on the covering or the package, the provisions of this act shall be construed as applying only when said products are ready for consumption.

532]or label bear any statement, *design, or device regarding it or the ingredients or substances it contains, which shall be false or misleading (§ 8). But this does not cover the entire ground. It is one thing to make a false or misleading statement regarding the article or its ingredients, and it may be quite another to give no information as to what the ingredients are. As is well known, products may be sold, and in case of so-called proprietary articles frequently are sold, under trade names which do not reveal the ingredients of the composition, and the proprietors refrain from revealing them. Moreover, in defining what shall be adulteration or misbranding for the purposes of the Federal act, it is provided that mixtures or compounds known as articles of food under their own distinctive names, not taking or imitating the distinctive name of another article, which do not contain "any added poisonous or deleterious ingredients" shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded if the name be accompanied on the same label or brand with a statement of the place of manufacture (§ 8).

Sixth. If it consists in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter.

Sec. 8. That the term "misbranded," as used herein, shall apply to all drugs or articles of food, or articles which enter into the composition of food, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding such article, or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to any food or drug product which is falsely branded as to the state, territory, or country in which it is manufactured or produced.

That for the purposes of this act an article shall also be deemed to be misbranded:

In the case of food:

First. If it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article.

Second. If it be labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part, and other contents shall have been placed in such package, or if it fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of any morphine, opium, cocaine, heroin, alpha or beta eucane, chloroform, cannabis indica, chloral hydrate, or acetanilid, or any derivative or preparation of any of such substances contained therein.

Third. If in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or meas-

Congress has thus limited the scope of its prohibitions. It has not included that at which the Indiana statute aims. Can it be said that Congress, nevertheless, has denied to the state, with respect to the feeding stuffs coming from another state and sold in the original packages, the power the state otherwise would have to prevent imposition upon the public by making a reasonable and nondiscriminatory provision for the disclosure of ingredients, and for inspection and analysis? If there be such denial it is not to be found in any express declaration to that effect. Undoubtedly Congress, by virtue of its paramount authority over interstate commerce, might have said that such goods should be free from the incidental effect of a state law enacted for these purposes. But it did not so declare. There is a proviso in the section defining misbranding for the purposes of the act, that "nothing in this act shall be construed" as requiring manufacturers of *proprie-[533 tary foods which contain no unwholesome added ingredient to disclose their trade formulas "except in so far as the provisions ure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

Fourth. If the package containing it or its label shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding the ingredients or the substances contained therein, which statement, design, or device shall be false or misleading in any particular: Provided, That an article of food which does not contain any added poisonous or deleterious ingredients shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded in the following cases:

First. In the case of mixtures or compounds which may be now or from time to time hereafter known as articles of food, under their own distinctive names, and not an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article, if the name be accompanied on the same label or brand with a statement of the place where said article has been manufactured or produced.

Second. In the case of articles labeled, branded, or tagged so as to plainly indicate that they are compounds, imitations, or blends, and the word "compound," "imitation," or "blend," as the case may be; is plainly stated on the package in which it is offered for sale: Provided, That the term "blend," as used herein, shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients used for the purpose of coloring and flavoring only: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary foods which contain no unwholesome added ingredient to disclose their trade formulas, except in so far as the provisions of this act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding.

of this act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding" (§ 8). We have already noted the limitations of the provisions referred to. It is clear that this proviso merely relates to the interpretation of the requirements of the act, and does not enlarge its purview or establish a rule as to matters which lie outside its prohibitions.

Is, then, a denial to the state of the exercise of its power for the purposes in question necessarily implied in the Federal statute? For when the question is whether a Federal act overrides a state law, the entire scheme of the statute must, of course, be considered, and that which needs must be implied is of no less force than that which is expressed. If the purpose of the act cannot otherwise be accomplished—if its operation within its chosen field else must be frustrated and its provisions be refused their natural effect—the state law must yield to the regulation of Congress within the sphere of its delegated power. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Albilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 378, ante, 237, 239, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 436, ante, 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

But the intent to supersede the exercise by the state of its police power as to matters not covered by the Federal legislation is not to be inferred from the mere fact that Congress has seen fit to circumscribe its regulation and to occupy a limited field. In other words, such intent is not to be implied unless the act of Congress, fairly interpreted, is in actual conflict with the law of the state. This principle has had abundant illustration. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 48 L. ed. 401, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 379, ante, 237, 240, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid*, 222 U. S. 424, 442, ante, 257, 262, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

In Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488, the supreme court of Kansas had affirmed a judgment against the railway company for damages caused by its having brought into the state certain cattle alleged to have been affected with Texas fever, which was communicated to the cattle of the plaintiff. The recovery was based upon a statute of Kansas which made actionable the driving or transporting into the state of cattle which were liable to communicate the fever. It was contended that the act of Congress of May 29, 1884, chap. 60 (23 Stat. at L. 31, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 299), known as the animal industry act, together with the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 544 (26 Stat. at L. 1044), appropriating money to carry out its provisions, and § 5258 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3564), covered substantially the whole subject of the transportation from one state to another state of live stock capable of imparting contagious disease, and therefore that the state of Kansas had no authority to deal in any form with that subject. The act of 1884 provided for the establishment of a bureau of animal industry, for the appointment of a staff to investigate the condition of domestic animals, and for report upon the means to be adopted to guard against the spread of disease. Regulations were to be prepared by the Commissioner of Agriculture, and certified to the executive authority of each state and territory. Special investigation was to be made for the protection of foreign commerce, and the Secretary of the Treasury was to establish such regulations as might be required concerning exportation. It was provided that no railroad company within the United States, nor the owners or masters of any vessel, should receive for transportation, or transport, from one state to another, any live stock affected with any communicable disease, nor should anyone deliver for such transportation, or drive on foot or transport in private conveyance from one state to another, any live stock, knowing them to be so affected. It was made the duty of the commissioner of agriculture to notify the proper officials or agents of transportation companies doing business in any infected locality of the existence of contagion; and the operators of railroads, or the owners or custodians of live stock within such infected district, who should knowingly violate the provisions of the act, were to be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment.

The court held that this Federal legislation did not override the statute of the state; that the latter created a civil liability as to which the animal industry act of Congress had not made provision. The court said (supra, pp. 623, 624):

"May not these statutory provisions stand without obstructing or embarrassing the execution of the act of Congress? This question must, of course, be determined with reference to the settled rule that a statute enacted in execution of a reserved power of the state is not to be regarded as inconsistent with an act of Congress passed in the execution of a clear power under the Constitution, unless the repugnance or conflict is so direct and positive that the two acts cannot be reconciled or stand together. Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 243, 16 L. ed. 243, 247. . . . Whether a corporation transporting, or the person causing to be transported, from one state to another, cattle of the class specified in the Kansas statute, should be liable in a civil action for any damages sustained by the owners of domestic cattle by reason of the introduction into their state of such diseased cattle, is a subject about which the animal industry act did not make any provision. That act does not declare that the regulations established by the Department of Agriculture should have the effect to exempt from civil liability one who, but for such regulations, would have been liable either under the general principles of law under some state enactment for damages arising 536] out of the introduction into that state of cattle so affected. And, as will be seen from the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, that officer did not assume to give protection to anyone against such liability."

In Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506, the question arose under a statute of Colorado which had been passed to prevent the introduction into the state of diseased animals. The statute made it a misdemeanor for anyone to bring into the state between April 1 and November 1 any cattle or horses from a state, territory, or county south of the 36th parallel of north latitude, unless they had been held at some place north of that parallel at least ninety days prior to importation, or unless the owner or person in charge should procure from the state veterinary sanitary board a certificate, or bill of health, to the effect that the cattle or horses were free from all infectious or contagious diseases, and had not been exposed thereto at any time within the preceding ninety days. The expense of any inspection in connection therewith was to be paid by the owner.

The plaintiff in error had been convicted of bringing cattle into the state in violation of the statute. There was no proof in the case that the particular cattle had any infectious or contagious disease, but it did appear that they were brought from Texas, south of the 36th parallel, without being held or inspected as the statute required. Its provisions were ignored altogether as invalid legislation. When the plaintiff in error refused assent to the state inspection, he showed to the authorities a certificate signed by an assistant inspector of the Federal bureau of animal industry, who certified that he had carefully inspected the cattle in Texas and found them free from communicable disease. It was insisted that the statute of Colorado was in conflict with the animal industry act of Congress, but the court sustained the state law for the *reason that, although the two stat- 537 utes related to the same general subject, they did not cover the same ground and were not inconsistent with each other.

The court thus emphasized the general principle involved (supra, p. 148): "It should never be held that Congress intends to supersede or by its legislation suspend the exercise of the police powers of the states, even when it may do so, unless its purpose to affect that result is clearly manifested. This court has said—and the principle has been often reaffirmed—that 'in the application of this principle of supremacy of an act of Congress in a case where the state law is but the exercise of a reserved power, the repugnance or conflict should be direct and positive, so that the two acts could not be reconciled or consistently stand together.'" And in the course of its review of the subjects embraced in the Federal legislation the court said (pp. 149, 150):

"Still another subject covered by the act is the driving on foot or transporting from one state or territory into another state or territory, or from any state into the District of Columbia, or from the District into any state, of any live stock known to be affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease. But this provision does not cover the entire subject of the transporting or shipping of diseased live stock from one state to another. The owner of such stock, when bringing them into another state, may not know them to be diseased; but they may, in fact, be diseased, or the circumstances may be such as fairly to authorize the state into which they are about to be brought to take such precautionary measures as will reasonably guard its own domestic animals against danger from contagious, infectious, or communicable diseases. The act of Congress left the state free to cover that field by such regulations as it deemed appropriate, and which only incidentally affected the freedom of interstate commerce. Congress went no farther than to make it an *offense 538 against the United States, for anyone knowingly to take or send from one state or territory to another state or territory, or into the District of Columbia, or from the District into any state, live stock affected with infectious or communicable disease. The animal industry act did not make it an offense against the United States to send from one state into another live stock which the shipper did not know were diseased. The offense charged upon the defendant in the state court was not the introduction into Colorado of cattle that he knew to be diseased. He was charged with having brought his cattle into Colorado from certain counties in Texas, south of the 36th parallel of north latitude, without said cattle having been held at some place north of said parallel of latitude for at least the time required prior to their being brought into Colorado, and without having procured from the state veterinary sanitary board a certificate or bill of health to the effect that his cattle—in fact—were free from all infectious or contagious diseases, and had not been exposed at any time within ninety days prior thereto to any such diseases, but had declined to procure such certificate or have the inspection required by the statute. His knowledge as to the actual condition of the cattle was of no consequence under the state enactment or under the charge made.

"Our conclusion is that the statute of Colorado, as here involved, does not cover the same ground as the act of Congress, and therefore is not inconsistent with that act; and its constitutionality is not to be questioned unless it be in violation of the Constitution of the United States, independently of any legislation by Congress."

In Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101, the plaintiff in error had been convicted under a statute of the state of Kansas which made it a misdemeanor to transport cattle into the state from any point south of the south line of the state, except for immediate slaughter, without having first *caused them to be inspected and passed as healthy by the proper state officials or by the bureau of animal industry of the Interior Department of the United States. The court held that the statute was a valid exercise of the power of the state unless it were, in conflict with the act of Congress. It appeared that since the decision in Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506, Congress had provided that where an inspector of the bureau of animal industry had issued a certificate that he had inspected live stock and found them free from communicable disease, they should be transported into any state or territory without further inspection or the exaction of fees of any kind, except such as might be required by the Secretary of Agriculture. But as the law of Kansas recognized the Federal certificate, a conflict with the act of Congress was avoided, and hence the conviction under the state law was sustained.

Applying these established principles to the present case, no ground appears for denying validity to the statute of Indiana. That state has determined that it is necessary, in order to secure proper protection from deception, that purchasers of the described feeding stuffs should be suitably informed of what they are buying, and has made reasonable provision for disclosure of ingredients by certificate and label, and for inspection and analysis. The requirements, the enforcement of which the bill seeks to enjoin, are not in any way in conflict with the provisions of the Federal act. They may be sustained without impairing in the slightest degree its operation and effect. There is no question here of conflicting standards, or of opposition of state to Federal authority. It follows that the complainant's bill in this aspect of the case was without equity.

Other objections urged by the bill to the validity of the statute, save so far as they may be deemed to involve the questions that have already been considered, have not been pressed in argument and need not be discussed. *Recurring to the contention that the product of the complainant is not within the statute, it is evident that, assuming the validity of the enactment, the complainant showed no ground for resorting to equity, as the nature of the composition must be determined according to the fact, in the course of due proceedings for that purpose.

The demurrer was properly sustained.

Affirmed.

STANDARD STOCK FOOD COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

H. R. WRIGHT, as State Food and Dairy
Commissioner of Iowa.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 540-550.)

Commerce — state regulation — inspection law.

1. The requirement that the name and percentage of the diluent or diluents or bases shall be stated in the labels, which is made by Iowa Code (Supp. 1907, §§ 5077-a6—5077-a24), relating to the sale within the state of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, is a proper exercise of the police

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry power of the state, and does not, as applied to sales by importers in the original packages, amount to an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, VI. c., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — inspection.

2. There is no conflict between the provisions of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), for the prevention of the adulteration and misbranding of foods and drugs when the subject of interstate commerce, and the requirement of Iowa Code (Supp. 1907, §§ 5077-a6—5077-a24), as applied to sales by importers in the original packages, that there shall be stated in the labels on concentrated commercial feeding stuffs offered for sale in the state the name and percentage of the diluent or diluents or bases.

[For other cases, see Commerce, VI. c., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — inspection charge.

3. The imposition by Iowa Code (Supp. 1907, §§ 5077-a6—5077-a24), governing the inspection and analysis of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, of an inspection fee of 10 cents per ton on such products when sold or offered for sale within the state, or the exaction, in lieu thereof, in the case of "condimental, patented, proprietary, or trademark stock or poultry foods," of an annual license fee of $100, does not render the statute invalid as applied to sales by importers in the original packages. [For other cases, see Commerce, 546, 547, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may assail validity.

4. Only those within the class injuriously affected by the alleged discriminatory features of a state statute can urge the invalidity of such statute under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as denying the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 222.]

Argued April 24, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to a bill in a suit to restrain the enforcement of a state statute relating to the sale of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. H. Gaines argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. G. McGilton, Sidney W. Smith, and A. L. Hager, filed a brief for appellant:

Unless the tax imposed against complainant herein is one absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws and to cover the cost thereof, it is void under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 150, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725.

No inspection of complainant's products is required before sale, and hence the tax of $100 cannot be sustained as an inspection fee.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

The specific questions involved have been decided adversely to the contentions of the state by the circuit court of the United States for the states of North Carolina and Kansas.

American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609; George H. Lee Co. v. Webster, 190 Fed. 353.

Mr. George Cosson, Attorney General of Iowa, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry E. Sampson, filed a brief for appellee:

The validity of the act must be determined not by the casual use of any word or phrase, but by its necessary and obvious result, and the purpose for which it was framed.

Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 319, 34 L.

Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

State licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; and Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041;

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On inspection laws as regulations of commerce—see note to New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 78.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954.

ed. 457, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

This is not an act created for the mere purpose of taxing foreign or interstate commerce, or raising revenue; but is an act honestly and wisely passed by the state in the exercise of its police powers, for the purpose of protecting its citizens against fraud, imposition, and deception in the sale of adulterated and fraudulent stock foods, and the false labeling of same.

Clintsman v. Northrup, 8 Cow. 46; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Inspection laws passed pursuant to the police powers do not act on the subject before it becomes an article of commerce, when the articles transported are interstate commerce, and not foreign commerce.

Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091; Clintsman v. Northrup, 8 Cow. 46; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 156 U. S. 590, 600, 39 L. ed. 544, 548, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 18, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 350, 43 L. ed. 193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

The law being otherwise valid, the amount of the inspection fee is not a judicial question. It rests with the legislature to fix the amount, and it can only present a valid objection when it is shown that it is so unreasonable and disproportionate to the services rendered as to attack the good faith of the law.

Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 350, 43 L. ed. 193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 55, 51 L. ed. 88, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Conceding, for the purpose of argument, that the act discriminates against the manufacturer doing a small amount of business in the state, who is required to pay a fee equal to that paid by the large manufacturer, doing a large business, as complainant herein, this objection to the statute cannot be raised by the appellant, for the reason that it is to his advantage, and not disadvantage.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 60, 61, 47 L. ed. 70, 74, 75, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. ed. 1046, 1050, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 534, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Collins v. Texas, 223 U. S. 288, 295, ante. 439, 443, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Quong Wing v. Kirkendall, 223 U. S. 59, ante, 350, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; People ex rel. 56 L. ed.

Stettaver v. Olsen, 215 Ill. 620, 74 N. E. 785.

The fact that each and every package is not inspected will not invalidate the act.

Frazier v. Warfield, 13 Md. 279; State v. Bixman, 162 Mo. 34, 62 S. W. 828; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 55, 51 L. ed. 88, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The statement in the act that the fee is in lieu of an inspection fee simply means that if the $100 fee is paid, no other fee is to be expected or required.

Tennessee v. Bank of Commerce, 53 Fed. 735.

It is the ultimate result which is to govern; in the final analysis the fee must be paid by some person or corporation, and necessarily by either the seller or the purchaser; and therefore the form of the imposition of the fee should not, in and of itself, invalidate the act.

Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. v. State, 18 Ohio St. 245.

The manner in which inspection shall be made depends entirely upon the requirements of a statute and the nature of the merchandise.

22 Cyc. 1366.

Legislation is not void because it meets the exigencies of a particular situation.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161.

If the act bears a real relation to the object to be accomplished, the method of its accomplishment is for the legislature.

Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 295, 52 L. ed. 1068, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The act is not invalid because it requires, among other things, a labeling so as not to deceive the purchaser, and a setting forth of the percentage of the diluent or base of the product.

Savage v. Wheaton (Nov. 15, 1907, C. C. D. S. D.) American Food Journal, pp. 26, 29; State v. Snow, 81 Iowa, 642, 11 L.R.A. 355, 47 N. W. 777; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Palmer v. State, 39 Ohio St. 236, 48 Am. Rep. 429; State v. Aslesen, 50 Minn. 5, 36 Am.

St. Rep. 620, 52 N. W. 220; State v. Sherod, 80 Minn. 446, 50 L.R.A. 660, 81 Am. St. Rep. 268, 83 N. W. 417; Ileath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania (Paul v. Pennsylvania) 171 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. ed. 49, 53, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Stolz v. Thompson, 44 Minn. 271, 46 N. W. 410; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 65 L.R.A. 864, 51 C. C. A. 122, 113 Fed. 626, affirmed in 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

The Iowa law is merely supplementary to the Federal law, and covers a field which is not covered by the act of Congress, and concerning which Congress would not have the power to legislate.

United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 15,867; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 472, 39 L. ed. 223, 227, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Crossman v. Lurman, 192 U. S. 189, 198, 48 L. ed. 401, 405, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 405, 501, 31 L. ed. 700, 712, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062.

If there is any doubt as to the constitutionality of the act, the doubt should be resolved in the interests of the people of the state.

Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. ed. 556; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 717, 25 L. ed. 500; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The Standard Stock Food Company, a Nebraska corporation, brought this suit against the state food and dairy commissioner of Iowa to restrain the enforcement of a statute of Iowa, effective July 4, 1907 (Code of Iowa, Supplement 1907, §§ 5077-a6—5077-a24), relating to the sale within the state of "concentrated commercial feeding stuffs," upon the ground that it was repugnant to the interstate commerce clause (§ 8, article 1), and to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. Demurrer to the bill was sustained by the circuit court and the complainant appeals.

It was alleged in the bill that the appellant's product was a "condimental stock food," sold in Iowa and other states under the trade name of "Standard Stock Food;" that it was prepared pursuant to a secret formula of great value, contained nothing deleterious or poisonous, and had "condimental and tonic properties and powers which aid animals in the digestion of food." It was further alleged that it was made in Nebraska and shipped into Iowa, where it was sold in the original packages either by agents of the appellant or by dealers.

The act required that each package of the described articles should have affixed thereto, in a conspicuous place on the outside, a printed statement giving certain information. The substance of this requirement, with respect to its products, is thus stated in the appellant's argument:

"The package or container of such products shall have printed on the outside thereof:

"First. The number of net pounds of feeding stuffs in the package.

"Second. The name, brand, or [548] trademark under which the article is sold.

"Third. The name and address of the manufacturer, importer, dealer, or agent.

"Fourth. The place of manufacture.

"Fifth. The name and percentage of any deleterious or poisonous ingredient or ingredients.

"Sixth. The name and percentage of the diluent or diluents or bases." (Sections 1, 2.)

The statute also contains the following provision (§ 5):

"Before any manufacturer, importer, dealer, or agent shall offer or expose for sale in this state any of the concentrated commercial feeding stuffs defined in section three (3) of this act, he shall pay to the state food and dairy commissioner an inspection fee of ten cents per ton for each ton of such concentrated commercial feeding stuffs sold or offered for sale in the state of Iowa, for use within this state; except that every manufacturer, importer, dealer, or agent for any condimental, patented, proprietary, or trademarked stock or poultry foods, or both, shall pay to the state food and dairy commissioner, on or before the fifteenth day of July of each year, a license fee of one hundred dollars ($100) in lieu of such inspection fee. Whenever the manufacturer or importer of such foods shall have paid the fee herein required, no other person or agent of such manufacturer or importer shall be required to pay such license fee."

The appellant challenges the constitutional validity of the statute in these two particulars: (1) The requirement that the name and percentage of the diluent or diluents or bases shall be stated, and (2) the exaction of the fee of $100.

1. With respect to the first question the case in its essential features is not to be distinguished from that of Savage v. Jones, decided June 7, 1912 [225 U. S. 501, ante, 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715], and *noth-[549] ing need be added to what was there said. It was competent for the state, in the exercise of its power to prevent imposition upon the public, to require the disclosure to which objection is made. The provision was not an unreasonable one and the effect upon interstate commerce was incidental only. Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 317, 41 L. ed. 166, 173, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Patapasco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 361, 43 L. ed. 191, 197, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 50, 51 L. ed. 78, 86, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 254, 256, 52 L. ed. 778, 780, 781, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101. Nor is there any conflict with the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, chap. 3915 (34 Stat. at L. 768, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), Savage v. Jones supra.

2. The statute provides for inspection and analysis. Under § 6, it is the duty of the state food and dairy commissioner to "cause to be made analyses of all concentrated commercial feeding stuffs and agricultural seeds sold or offered for sale in this state." For this purpose, that officer is authorized "in person or by deputy, to take for analysis a sample from any lot or package of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs in this state," and further provision is made to assure the representative character of the sample. The results of the analyses are to be published from time to time in official bulletins. The state food and dairy commissioner is required to enforce the statute, and to this end is authorized to appoint, with the approval of the executive council, such analysts and chemists as may be necessary to carry it into effect. Violation of any of the provisions of the act is made a misdemeanor.

We are of opinion that the statute must be considered as an inspection law which it was within the power of the state to enact, and that its fair import is that the fees exacted by § 5, above quoted, are for the purpose of meeting the expenses of inspection. The bill alleges no facts warranting the conclusion that the charge is unreasonable as compared with this expense. Patapasco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 347, 354, 361, 43 L. ed. 191, 192, 194, 197, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 50, 51 L. ed. 78, 86, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 380, 393, ante, 240, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Savage 56 L. ed.

age v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, ante, 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

The payment of the sum of $100 in the case of "condimental, patented, proprietary, or trademarked stock or poultry foods" was required in lieu of the inspection charge of 10 cents a ton, and was in effect a commutation of that charge. The essential character of the exaction was not altered. If it be said that this provision discriminates against one doing a small business, still the appellant wholly fails to show that it is thereby injured and thus entitled to complain. On the contrary, the bill alleges that the appellant "sells to more than eight hundred dealers in the state of Iowa, besides a very large number of customers who buy direct from your orator or through its agents," and that it "has been enabled to sell in the state of Iowa during the past year and for a number of years preceding a quantity of its goods in an amount exceeding $40,000 per annum."

The case in this aspect falls within the established rule that "one who would strike down a state statute as violative of the Federal Constitution must bring himself by proper averments and showing within the class as to whom the act thus attacked is unconstitutional. He must show that the alleged unconstitutional feature of the law injures him, and so operates as to deprive him of rights protected by the Federal Constitution." Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 534, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. See also Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 60, 47 L. ed. 70, 74, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 L. ed. 1046, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 160, 51 L. ed. 415, 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; Collins v. Texas, 223 U. S. 288, 295, ante, 439, 443, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

The Circuit Court was right in sustaining the demurrer.

Affirmed.

*HENRY CLAIRMONT, Pff. in Err., [551 v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 551-560.)

Intoxicating liquors — bringing into Indian country — railway right of way.

The right of way through the Flathead Indian Reservation granted to the Northern Pacific Railway Company by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, 367, chap.

217), § 2, the Indian title to which was extinguished without reservation by the agreement of September 2, 1882, is not "Indian country" within the meaning of the act of January 30, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 109), making it an offense for any person to introduce intoxicating liquors into the Indian country, "which term shall include any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States."

[For other cases, see Indians, 54-61, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 239.]

Submitted May 1, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Montana to review a conviction of introducing liquors into the Flathead Indian Reservation. Reversed and remanded, with directions to quash the indictment and discharge the defendant.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. O. W. McConnell and N. W. McConnell submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The act of Congress granting the right of way conveyed both the fee and possession of the land to the railroad company.

St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 30 L. ed. 330, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 186, 43 L. ed. 413, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Roberts, 152 U. S. 114, 38 L. ed. 377, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

The effect of the act of Congress granting the right of way over the Flathead Indian Reservation to the Northern Pacific R. Company was to withdraw such right of way from the operation of the former act of reservation.

Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. ed. 447, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

Indian lands cease, without any further act of Congress, to be Indian country, after the Indian title has been extinguished.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 208, 209, 24 L. ed. 471, 473.

It is a logical conclusion that the United States has no jurisdiction over the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railway Company across the Flathead Indian Reservation, by reason of the fact that it has granted and conveyed said land covered by the right of way to the railway company.

Ex parte Dick, 72 C. C. A. 667, 141 Fed. 5; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 505, 49 L. ed. 855, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; United States v. Four Bottles Sour-Mash Whisky, 90 Fed. 720; Utah & N. R. Co. v. Fisher, 116 U. S. 28, 29 L. ed. 542, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. ed. 447, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Truscott v. Hurlbut Land & Cattle Co. 19 C. C. A. 374, 44 U. S. App. 248, 73 Fed. 60; King v. McAndrews, 104 Fed. 434.

Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Louis G. Bissell was with him on the brief.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was indicted by the grand jury of the United States for the district of Montana for introducing intoxicating liquor into the Flathead Indian Reservation. It appeared upon the trial in the district court that he lived on the reservation, and at the time of the alleged offense was returning to his home from Missoula on a train of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, intending to leave the train at Ravalli. A special officer of the Interior Department boarded the train at Arlee, and, finding a pint of whisky on the person of the plaintiff in error, at once arrested him and took him back to Missoula. Both Arlee and Ravalli are points within the exterior limits of the reservation, which is crossed by the right of way of the railway company.

The jury rendered a verdict of guilty, whereupon it was urged by motion in arrest of judgment that the court was without jurisdiction. The motion was denied and the defendant was sentenced to imprisonment for sixty *days and to the pay-[554]ment of a fine of $100. The case comes here on writ of error, the district judge certifying the question of jurisdiction. The conviction was had under the act of January 30, 1897, chap. 109† (29 Stat. at L. 506), which provides:

"That any person who shall sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or other intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever . . . to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made, while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or to any Indian a ward of the government, under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent, or any Indian, including mixed bloods, over whom the government, through its departments, exercises guardianship, and any person who shall introduce or attempt to introduce any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever into the Indian country, which term shall include any Indian allotment, while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than sixty days, and by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars for the first offense and not less than two hundred dollars for each offense thereafter: Provided, however, That the person convicted shall be committed until fine and costs are paid."

†This repealed, so far as it was inconsistent, the act of July 23, 1892, chap. 234 (27 Stat. at L. 260), which amended § 2139 of the Revised Statutes.

We are not here concerned with that portion of the statute which penalizes selling or giving intoxicating liquors to the Indians described, or with the authority of Congress to protect the Indian wards of the 555] Nation. *The indictment charged that the plaintiff in error "did, then and there, wrongfully and unlawfully introduce" a quantity of intoxicating liquor "into the Flathead Indian Reservation, in the state and district of Montana," the said reservation "being an Indian country." The offense alleged was the introduction of the liquor into the reservation, and not "attempting to introduce."

The Flathead Indian Reservation was established by the treaty of July 16, 1855, between the United States and the confederated tribes of the Flathead, Kootenay, and Upper Pend d'Oreilles Indians. 12 Stat. at L. 975. It comprised a district now included within the boundaries of the state of Montana. The enabling act of 1889, under which the state was formed, required the adoption of an ordinance, irrevocable in the absence of the consent of the United States, providing: "That the people inhabiting" the proposed state "do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof, and to all lands lying within said limits, owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes; and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States." Act of February 22, 1889, chap. 180, 25 Stat. at L. 676, 677.

By the act of July 2, 1864. chap. 217, § 2 56 L. ed.

(13 Stat. at L. 365, 367), Congress granted a right of way through the public lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for the construction of a railroad and telegraph as proposed, "to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad," including all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, etc. It was provided that the United States should "extinguish, as rapidly as may be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the said *In-[556] dians, the Indian titles, to all lands falling under the operation of this act, and acquired in the donation to the [road] named in this bill." On July 5, 1882, the railroad company filed a map of definite location, showing its line of railroad across the southwestern part of the Flathead reservation. Thereupon, on September 2, 1882, the confederated tribes above mentioned entered into an agreement with the United States by which, after reciting the grant by Congress of the right of way, the treaties with the Indians, and the filing of the map of definite location, the Indians surrendered and relinquished to the United States "all the right, title, and interest which they now have under and by virtue of the aforesaid treaty of July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, in and to all that part of the Jocko (or Flathead) Reservation situate in the territory of Montana, and described as follows, namely: A strip of land not exceeding two hundred feet in width, that is to say, one hundred feet on each side of the line laid down on the map of definite location hereinbefore mentioned, wherever said line runs through said reservation." In consideration of the "surrender and relinquishment of lands as aforesaid," amounting in the aggregate to 1,430 acres, the United States agreed to pay to the Indians the sum of $16,000. Ex. Doc. No. 15, 48th Cong. 1st sess.

Thus, by the grant of Congress, the railroad company obtained the fee in the land constituting the "right of way" (Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 56, 66, 30 L. ed. 331, 334, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 271, 47 L. ed. 1044, 1046, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671), and by virtue of the agreement between the United States and the Indians this land was freed from the Indian right of occupancy. As the government states in its brief: "Beyond question the Indian land title in this strip had been entirely extinguished."

The question, then, is whether a person having intoxicating liquor in his possession on a railroad train running *on this[557] strip can be deemed to have introduced the liquor "into the Indian country" within the meaning of the act of 1897. Was the strip "Indian country," so that the district court of the United States can be said to have had jurisdiction of the alleged offense?

The act of June 30, 1834, chap. 161 (4 Stat. at L. 729), thus defined "the Indian country."

"That all that part of the United States west of the Mississippi, and not within the states of Missouri and Louisiana, or the territory of Arkansas, and also that part of the United States east of the Mississippi river, and not within any state to which the Indian title has not been extinguished, for the purposes of this act, be taken and deemed to be the Indian country."

This portion of the act of 1834 was not re-enacted in the Revised Statutes, though other parts of the statute were, and hence was repealed by § 5596 of the revision (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3750). But, as has frequently been stated by this court, the definition may still "be referred to in connection with the provisions of its original context, which remain in force, and may be considered in connection with the changes which have taken place in our situation, with a view of determining from time to time what must be regarded as Indian country where it is spoken of in the statutes." Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca.) 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. ed. 1030, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United State v. Le-Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 280, 30 L. ed. 946, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894.

The proper criterion to be applied was considered in Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471, where Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court, said (id. pp. 207, 208): "Notwithstanding the immense changes which have since taken place in the vast region covered by the act of 1834, by the extinguishment of Indian titles, the creation of states, and the formation of territorial governments, Congress has not thought it necessary to make any new definition of Indian country. Yet, during all this time, a large body of laws has been 558] in existence, *whose operation was confined to the Indian country, whatever that may be. . . .

"The simple criterion is that as to all the lands thus described it was Indian country whenever the Indian title had not been extinguished, and it continued to be Indian country so long as the Indians had title to it, and no longer. As soon as they parted with the title, it ceased to be Indian country, without any further act of Congress, unless by the treaty by which the Indians parted with their title, or by some act of Congress, a different rule was made applicable to the case."

It must be assumed that, in the act of 1897, Congress used the words "Indian country" in the accepted sense. And this is confirmed by the provision bearing witness to the policy which had been adopted looking to the dissolution of tribal relations and the distribution of tribal property in separate allotments. Thus, the act provides that the term "Indian country" "shall include any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States." United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 323, 324, 55 L. ed. 750, 753, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587.

That the effect of a cession by the Indians might be qualified by a stipulation in the treaty that the ceded territory, although within the boundaries of a state, should retain its original status of Indian country so far as the introduction into it of intoxicating liquors was concerned, was decided in United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846, 108 U. S. 491, 27 L. ed. 803, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906. But, as was pointed out in Bates v. Clark, supra, that decision proceeded upon the hypothesis that "when the Indian title is extinguished it ceases to be Indian country, unless some such reservation takes it out of the rule." The same principle of decision was recognized in *Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399. There, the plaintiff in error had been convicted of introducing intoxicating liquor into the Nez Percé Indian Reservation within the state of Idaho. The offense was committed, if at all, in the village of Culdesae, which, although within the boundaries of the reservation, as established before Idaho was admitted into the Union, was, at the time specified in the indictment, an organized village of that state. The lands upon which the village was located were part of those ceded to the United States by an agreement with the Indians in which it was stipulated that the ceded lands, as well as those retained, should be subject for the period of twenty-five years to all Federal laws prohibiting the introduction of intoxicants into the Indian country. It was held that this was a valid stipulation, based upon the treaty-making power of the United States and upon the power of Congress to regulate commerce with the Indians, and was "not inconsistent, in any substantial sense, with the constitutional principle that a new state comes into the Union upon entire equality with the original states." Upon this ground the judgment of conviction was affirmed.

While the Dick Case was thus found, owing to the stipulation in the agreement, to be within the exception, the court explicitly recognized the rule which governs in the absence of a different provision by treaty or by act of Congress. The court said: "If this case depended alone upon the Federal liquor statute forbidding the introduction of intoxicating drinks into the Indian country, we should feel obliged to adjudge that the trial court erred in not directing a verdict for the defendant; for that statute, when enacted, did not intend by the words 'Indian country' to embrace any body of territory in which, at the time, the Indian title had been extinguished, and over which and over the inhabitants of which (as was the case 560]of Culdesac) the jurisdiction *of the state, for all purposes of government, was full and complete. Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca) 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396."

In the present case there was no provision, either in the treaty with the Indians, or by act of Congress, which limited the effect of the surrender of the Indian title. We have been referred to certain statements made by the representative of the United States in the course of the negotiations with the Indians which preceded their agreement, but these were of an informal character and cannot be regarded as qualifying the agreement that was actually made. The Indian title or right of occupation was extinguished, without reservation; and the relinquished strip came under the jurisdiction of the then territory, and later under that of the state of Montana. It was not "unappropriated public land," or land "owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribe." Enabling act, supra.

To repeat, the plaintiff in error was not charged with "attempting to introduce" the liquor into Indian country, but with the actual introduction. If having the liquor in his possession on the train on this right of way did not constitute such introduction, it is immaterial, so far as the charge is concerned, whether or not he intended to take it elsewhere. Nor is it important that the plaintiff in error was an Indian. The statute makes it an offense for "any person" to introduce liquor into Indian country.

Our conclusion must be that the right of way had been completely withdrawn from the reservation by the surrender of the Indian title, and that in accordance with the repeated rulings of this court, it was not Indian country. The District Court, therefore, had no jurisdiction of the offense charged, and the judgment must be reversed.

The judgment is reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to quash the indictment and discharge the defendant.
56 L. ed.

*ALBERT W. SHULTHIS, Appt., [561
v.

D. A. McDOUGAL et al. (No. 156.)

GEORGE FRANKLIN BERRYHILL, Appt.,
v.

ALBERT W. SHULTHIS et al. (No. 157.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 561-572.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — jurisdiction below — diverse citizenship — intervention.

1. The finality of a decision of a circuit court of appeals under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 6, on the theory that diverse citizenship was the sole ground of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, is not affected by a petition in intervention which was entertained and disposed of in virtue of the jurisdiction already invoked.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 780-784, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals
— jurisdiction below — diverse citizenship.

2. Whether the jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court depended on diverse citizenship alone, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 6, making the decrees of the circuit courts of appeals final in such cases, or was rested on other grounds as well, must be determined from the complainant's statement of his own cause of action as set forth in the bill, without regard to any questions that might have been brought into the suit by the answers or in the course of the subsequent proceedings.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 768-774, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals
— jurisdiction below — diverse citizenship.

3. A decree of a circuit court of appeals is none the less final under the act of NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308; Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7; and Earnhart v. Switzler, 105 C. C. A. 262.

On citizenship of corporation for purposes of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 3 L. ed. U. S. 36; and National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 27 L. ed. U. S. 87.

March 3, 1891, § 6, upon the theory that the jurisdiction of the circuit court depended upon diverse citizenship alone, because other grounds of jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively from the statements in the bill.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 780-784, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — Federal question.

4. A suit involving rights to land acquired under a law of the United States does not arise under that law for jurisdictional purposes unless it really and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction, or effect of such law, upon the determination of which the result depends.

[For other cases, see Courts, 597-617, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — jurisdiction below — Federal question.

5. A suit to determine conflicting claims to a tract of land allotted to Creek Indians cannot be said to arise under the Federal statutes governing such allotments, so as to permit an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 6, from a decree of the circuit court of appeals, where the bill, although containing enough to indicate that those statutes constitute the source of the complainant's title or right, and that the defendants are in some way claiming the land, and particularly the oil and gas therein, adversely to him, makes no mention of those statutes or of any controversy respecting their validity, construction, or effect, and leaves the precise nature of the controversy unstated and uncertain.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 790-807, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — corporation.

6. A corporation originally incorporated in the Indian territory under the Arkansas statutes which were put in force therein by the act of Congress of February 18, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 379), became an Oklahoma corporation when that state was admitted to the Union, and must be regarded for jurisdictional purposes as a citizen of that state.

[For other cases, see Courts, 637-675, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 156, 157.]

Argued January 23 and 24, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPEALS from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review decrees which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, dismissing on the merits a bill in equity, together with a petition in intervention in a suit to determine conflicting claims to a tract of land allotted to Creek Indians. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 95 C. C. A. 615, 170 Fed. 529.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. L. Thomas and James P. Harrold argued the case, and, with Mr. Edgar A. de Meules, filed a brief for Shulthis and Berryhill:

Whether the appellant has any such right or title as claimed by him involves the construction of the acts of Congress under which the patents issued, and, necessarily, of the effect of the patents, and presents a Federal question.

Spokane Falls & N. R. Co. v. Ziegler, 167 U. S. 66, 42 L. ed. 79, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; McGilvra v. Ross, 215 U. S. 70, 54 L. ed. 95, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

An action brought against a corporation created by an act of Congress is a suit arising under the Federal Constitution or laws.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 739, 6 L. ed. 204; Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, 53 L. ed. 658, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. ed. 946, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Union P. R. Co. v. Myers, 115 U. S. 1, 11, 29 L. ed. 319, 323, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; Northern P. R. Co. v. Amato, 144 U. S. 465, 36 L. ed. 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Butler v. National Home, 144 U. S. 64, 36 L. ed. 346, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Union P. R. Co. v. Harris, 158 U. S. 326, 39 L. ed. 1003, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; Washington & I. R. Co. v. Cœur D'Alene R. & Nav. Co. 160 U. S. 77, 40 L. ed. 346, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 41 L. ed. 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Kalinski, 163 U. S. 289, 41 L. ed. 163, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 1132, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Wolff v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 133 Fed. 601; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. England, 36 C. C. A. 298, 94 Fed. 369; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Hill, 22 C. C. A. 280, 42 U. S. App. 200. 76 Fed. 468; United States Freehold Land & Emigration Co. v. Gallegos, 32 C. C. A. 470, 61 U. S. App. 13, 89 Fed. 769; Canary Oil Co. v. Standard Asphalt & Rubber Co. 182 Fed. 663.

An action brought jointly against a corporation chartered under an act of Congress, and a local defendant, upon a joint liability, is a suit arising under the laws of the United States.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. ed. 946, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, 53 L. ed. 558, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

Consent of parties cannot give the courts of the United States jurisdiction, but the parties may admit the existence of facts which show jurisdiction, and the court may act judicially upon such admission.

Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ramsey, 22 Wall. 322, 22 L. ed. 823.

Inasmuch as it appears from the face of the bill that the very life of the effectiveness of the right set up by the appellant in his bill is given it by the rules and regulations of the Secretary of the Interior,—laws of the United States,—this suit is one arising under the law of the United States, and consequently the jurisdiction of this court attaches.

United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 222, 38 L. ed. 419, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; United States v. Bailey, 9 Pet. 253, 9 L. ed. 119.

It matters not that the defendants may set up a defense in their answer not involving the construction of the rules and regulations,—the law of the United States. The answer or plea does not determine the jurisdiction of this court (Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 139, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35), but it is the statement of facts in the original bill in the circuit court (Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 L. ed. 1046, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 372, 48 L. ed. 484, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 824, 6 L. ed. 224; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654).

Where the original jurisdiction of the circuit court is invoked, that jurisdiction must appear upon the face of the bill by a statement of facts.

Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 L. ed. 1046, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 372, 48 L. ed. 484, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676, 46 L. ed. 754, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. 172 U. S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 139, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 139, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is so made to appear, the circuit court has jurisdiction over the whole case and over all questions of law and fact arising in such case.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 823, 6 L. ed. 224; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 25 L. ed. 648; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 144, 26 L. ed. 99.

The jurisdiction of this court is dependent solely upon the question: Was the original jurisdiction of the circuit court dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit being citizens of different states? If not, then the right of appeal to this court exists.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 680, 46 L. ed. 757, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. 172 U. S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233. Third Street & Suburban R. Co. v. Lewis, 173 U. S. 460, 43 L. ed. 767, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 380, 48 L. ed. 488, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 325, 44 L. ed. 488, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 142, 37 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

This court will not examine the opinion of either the circuit court for the eastern district of Oklahoma, or the circuit court of appeals, to determine the rationale of the decision in either court. If the jurisdiction of this court depended upon the result of the investigation as to whether or not the circuit court of appeals decided a Federal question either adversely to or in accordance with the contention of the parties, and determined its jurisdiction accordingly, what would become of the cases of Northern P. R. Co. v. Amato, 144 U. S. 465, 36 L. ed. 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; or that of Union P. R. Co. v. Harris, 158 U. S. 326, 39 L. ed. 1003, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; or the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 41 L. ed. 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; or the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 1132, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703, in error to the same court?

There is no authority for the contention that if the plaintiff could state his case logically and in the form of good pleading, without disclosing a Federal question, then the fact that it may appear from the bill that a Federal question may arise does not, however, confer upon the circuit court of the United States jurisdiction.

Mastin v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 123 Fed. 827; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 40 L. ed. 1048, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Kalinski, 163 U. S. 289, 41 L. ed. 163, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Butler v. National Home, 144 U. S. 64, 36 L. ed. 346, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Northern P. R. Co. v. Amato, 144 U. S. 465, 36 L. ed. 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 319, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; McGivra v. Ross, 215 U. S. 70, 54 L. ed. 95, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Spokane Falls & N. R. Co. v. Ziegler, 167 U. S. 65, 42 L. ed. 79, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Gage v. Kaufman, 133 U. S. 473, 33 L. ed. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

Messrs. George S. Ramsey and Preston C. West argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

Whether or not the jurisdiction of the circuit court depended solely upon the diversity of citizenship must be determined from an examination of the plaintiff's bill to the exclusion of all other parts of the record.

Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 325, 44 L. ed. 488, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867.

If the plaintiff could state his case logically and in the form of good pleading, without disclosing a Federal question, then the fact that it may appear from the bill that a Federal question may arise does not, however, confer upon the circuit courts of the United States jurisdiction.

Bonin v. Gulf Co. 198 U. S. 116, 49 L. ed. 971, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 198 U. S. 293, 49 L. ed. 1056, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 374, 48 L. ed. 485, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 406, 48 L. ed. 240, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon the circuit court by the defendants setting up a Federal question or making a claim to the title under some Federal law. The answer cannot be examined to aid the court in deciding this question.

Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 139, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35;

Ayres v. Polsdorfer, 187 U. S. 586, 47 L. ed. 314, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. v. McFadden, 180 U. S. 534, 45 L. ed. 656, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102, 39 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 1132, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 187, 46 L. ed. 145, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 315, 50 L. ed. 1047, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 107, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 322, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102, 39 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; East Lake Land Co. v. Brown, 155 U. S. 488, 39 L. ed. 233, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 491, 30 L. ed. 1049, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 527, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 633, 47 L. ed. 626, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Third Street & Suburban R. Co. v. Lewis, 173 U. S. 458, 43 L. ed. 766, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Shields v. Boardman, 98 Fed. 455; California Oil & Gas Co. v. Miller, 96 Fed. 19.

Where jurisdiction is claimed on the ground that there is a Federal question involved, it is not sufficient that the jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively under averments on the pleadings. The averments and allegations showing the Federal question must be positive, and the exact Federal question or law of the United States involved must clearly appear.

Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 274, 41 L. ed. 157, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 425, 33 Fed. 391; Manhattan R. Co. v. New York, 18 Fed. 195.

Plaintiff's allegation that he bases title to the oil and gas in the land, and right to operate the same and have defendants enjoined from operating said land, upon an oil and gas mining lease made by a Creek Indian and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, does not present any Federal question.

Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 508, 44 L. ed. 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 328, 329, 44 L. ed. 490, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 358; Romie

v. Casanova, 91 U. S. 379, 23 L. ed. 374; Blue Bird Min. Co. v. Largey, 49 Fed. 289; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248, 29 L. ed. 388, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Bonin v. Gulf Co. 198 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 970, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608.

An appeal will not lie from the circuit court of appeals to this court on the ground that the suit arose under the Constitution or laws of the United States, where, if the judgment of the circuit court of appeals disposed of such question, its disposition and decision were in favor of the appellant.

Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 198 U. S. 293, 49 L. ed. 1057, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 191 U. S. 376, 48 L. ed. 227, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

A Federal question is not involved unless the pleadings clearly show that the construction or application of the Constitution or some law of the United States will necessarily be involved.

Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 373, 48 L. ed. 485, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 315, 50 L. ed. 1047, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

The bill of intervention filed by George Franklin Berryhill, intervener, did not and could not import into the case a Federal question, so as to confer jurisdiction on the circuit court of the United States, or deprive the judgment and decree of the circuit court of appeals of finality.

St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. ed. 752, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

The allegation in the bill that the defendant Kiefer Oil & Gas Company is a corporation duly organized on the 26th day of April, 1907, under and by virtue of the laws of the United States in force in Indian territory, having its principal place of business in said territory, (and) that said defendant existed under the laws of said territory, and was a citizen of said territory up to and including November 16, 1907, (and) that at all times since the admission of Oklahoma as a state, said defendant has been and now is a citizen and resident of the state of Oklahoma, and a citizen and resident of the eastern district of Oklahoma, did not present a Federal question, and does not show that the controversy arises under the laws or Constitution of the United States.

Union P. R. Co. v. Harris, 158 U. S. 327, 39 L. ed. 1003, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; 56 L. ed.

Boyd v. Great Western Coal & Coke Co. 189 Fed. 115.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

These are appeals from decrees of the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, affirming a decree of the circuit court for the eastern district of Oklahoma, dismissing on the merits a bill in equity, as also a petition in intervention, brought to determine conflicting claims to a tract of allotted land in the Creek Nation. The allegations of the bill may be summarized as follows:

The complainant, Shulthis, is a citizen of Kansas. One of the defendants, the Kiefer Oil & Gas Company, is a corporation organized in the Indian territory under the Arkansas statutes which were put in force therein by an act of Congress, and since the admission of Oklahoma as a state "has been and now is a citizen and resident of said state" and of the eastern district thereof. The other defendants are citizens of that state, resident in that district. The intervener, George Franklin Berryhill, is a member by blood of the Creek Nation, duly enrolled as such, and his wife is not a member.

A son, named Andrew J. Berryhill, was born to the *intervener and his wife [566 in May, 1901, and died in November following, leaving no brother or sister surviving. In October, 1902, the deceased son's name was placed on the roll of the Creek Nation by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, and thereafter an allotment, including the tract in controversy, was made to his "heirs" from the lands of the Nation, and a deed or patent was issued to such heirs with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. Subsequently, and in March, 1906, George Franklin Berryhill and his wife, claiming to be the sole heirs of Andrew J., and the owners in fee of this tract, executed to the complainant a lease thereof, granting to him the right to explore for and extract oil and gas from the land for the term of fifteen years. The lease was made conformably to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, was filed with the United States Indian agent at Muskogee, in the Indian territory, March 21, 1906, and was approved by the Secretary of the Interior April 19, 1907. The complainant complied with the regulations, duly paid the advance royalty provided for in the lease, and claims the sole and exclusive right to prospect for and extract the deposits of oil and gas existing in and under the land, which are said to be extensive and to have a value many times in excess of $2,000. Respecting the claims and acts of the defendants the bill alleges:

"Your orator further shows that the defendants and each of them claim and assert some right, title, and interests in and to said lands, and particularly to the said oil and natural gas deposits, adverse to your orator, but the nature of said claims of said defendants is to your orator unknown; but your orator states that they have no such right, title, or interest in the said deposits of oil and natural gas or any part thereof; that whatever claimed rights the said defendants or any of them have therein were acquired long subsequent to the right 567] of *your orator, hereinbefore set forth; and further, were acquired with notice and knowledge of the lease to your orator so executed, filed, and approved as aforesaid; and also of facts and circumstances sufficient to put them and each of them upon inquiry with reference thereto.

"Your orator further states that the said defendant Kiefer Oil & Gas Company, combining and confederating with the other defendants named herein, have disregarded and still disregard the rights of your orator, and in violation thereof, and without right, unlawfully and wilfully, on or about the 1st day of April, 1907, entered upon the said above-described lands, and have stationed thereon divers agents, servants, and employees, whose names are to your orator unknown, and with force and arms exclude and have excluded your orator and his agents, servants, and employees therefrom; and further, that said defendants have bored and drilled oil and gas wells on said premises, and have and still are allowing large quantities of oil and natural gas to escape therefrom and be wasted. That by reason thereof your orator has been damaged in the sum of $25,000. And further, said defendants threaten to, and will, unless restrained by this court, drill other and further wells on said land for oil and natural gas, and have and are threatening to, and will, unless restrained, by means of such wells, extract said oil and gas deposits from said land, and convert the same to their own use and benefit against the manifest right of your orator."

The prayer of the bill is that the defendants be decreed to have no interest or estate in the deposits of oil and gas, save as any defendant may have an interest in the land and be thereby entitled to the royalties secured by the lease; that the cloud cast upon the complainant's title and rights under the lease by the claims of the defendants be removed and his title and rights thereunder be quieted, and that a receiver be 568] appointed to take possession and *proceed with the extraction and disposal of the oil and gas for the benefit of whomsoever may prove to be entitled to it. After the filing of the bill, a receiver was appointed, who took possession and proceeded as suggested. Thereafter George Franklin Berryhill, who had not been made a party to the bill, was permitted to file in the suit a petition in intervention, wherein he asserted full title in himself to the land, subject only to the lease to the complainant, specifically set forth the claims of the defendants, assailed those claims as invalid and clouds upon his title, and sought a decree establishing the latter as against the former. Answers and replications were filed, proofs were taken, and on the final hearing a decree was entered for the defendants. 162 Fed. 331. The complainant and the intervener separately appealed to the circuit court of appeals, where the decree was affirmed (95 C. C. A. 615, 170 Fed. 529), and then the case was brought here.

Our jurisdiction is challenged by a motion to dismiss the appeal. Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), declares that "the judgments or decrees of the circuit court of appeals shall be final in all cases in which the jurisdiction is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being . . . citizens of different states," and this refers to the jurisdiction of the Federal court of first instance. Thus, it becomes necessary to consider whether the jurisdiction of the circuit court depended entirely upon diversity of citizenship. If it did, the appeals must be dismissed.

The question is not affected by the petition in intervention, for it was entertained and disposed of in virtue of the jurisdiction already invoked; and if the decree is final in respect of the original suit, it is equally so in respect of the intervention. Rouse v. Letcher, 156 U. S. 47, 39 L. ed. 341, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Gregory v. Van Ee, 160 U. S. 643, 40 L. ed. 566, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Pope v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 173 U. S. 573, 43 L. ed. 814, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 250, 54 L. ed. 752, 754, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

*In opposing the motion, the appel-569] lants contend that the case arose under certain laws of the United States, presently to be mentioned, and therefore was not one in which the jurisdiction depended entirely on diversity of citizenship. The consideration of the contention will be simplified if, before taking up the specific grounds on which it is advanced, the rules by which it must be tested are stated. They are:

1. Whether the jurisdiction depended on diverse citizenship alone, or on other grounds as well, must be determined from the complainant's statement of his own cause of action, as set forth in the bill, regardless of questions that may have been brought into the suit by the answers or in the course of the subsequent proceedings. Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 333, 50 L. ed. 1046, 1053, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652.

2. It is not enough that grounds of jurisdiction other than diverse citizenship may be inferred argumentatively from the statements in the bill, for jurisdiction cannot rest on any ground that is not affirmatively and distinctly set forth. Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 279, 41 L. ed. 157, 159, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. v. McFadden, 180 U. S. 533, 45 L. ed. 656, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 383, 385, 48 L. ed. 484, 489, 490, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

3. A suit to enforce a right which takes its origin in the laws of the United States is not necessarily, or for that reason alone, one arising under those laws, for a suit does not so arise unless it really and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction, or effect of such a law, upon the determination of which the result depends. This is especially so of a suit involving rights to land acquired under a law of the United States. If it were not, every suit to establish title to land in the central and west-570]ern states would so arise, *as all titles in those states are traceable back to those laws. Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 358; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

To sustain the contention that the suit was one arising under the laws of the United States, counsel for the appellants point out the statutes (Acts March 1, 1901, 31 Stat. at L. 861, chap. 676; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. at L. 500, chap. 1323; April 26, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876, § 22) relating to the allotment in severality of the lands of the Creek Nation, the leasing and alienation thereof after allotment, the making of allotments to the heirs of deceased children, and the rights of the heirs, collectively and severally, under such allotments; but the bill makes no mention of those statutes or of any controversy respecting their validity, construction, or effect. Neither does it by necessary implication point to such a controversy. True, it contains enough to indicate that those statutes constitute the source of the complainant's title or right, and also shows that the defendants are in some way claiming the land, and particularly the oil and gas, adversely to him; but beyond this the nature of the controversy is left unstated and uncertain. Of course, it could have arisen in different ways, wholly independent of the source from which his title or right was derived. So, looking only to the bill, as we have seen that we must, it cannot be held that the case as therein stated was one arising under the statutes mentioned. As was said in Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 358, a controversy in respect of lands has never been regarded as presenting a Federal question merely because one of the parties to it has derived his title under an act of Congress.
56 L. ed.

It next is insisted that the bill shows that the Kiefer Oil & *Gas Company, one of [571 the defendants, is a Federal corporation, and therefore that under the decisions of this court in Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 319, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113, and Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, 53 L. ed. 558, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299, the case was one arising under the laws of the United States. The bill states that this company was incorporated in the Indian territory under the Arkansas statutes, which were put in force therein by an act of Congress, and then adds that since the admission of Oklahoma as a state, the company "has been and now is a citizen and resident of said state." Evidently, the pleader did not anticipate the present insistence, but proceeded on the theory that the company became an Oklahoma corporation when that state was admitted into the Union.

The corporation laws of Arkansas were put in force in the Indian territory by the act of February 18, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 379), which was but one of a series of acts of that character. Congress was then contemplating the early inclusion of that territory in a new state, and the purpose of those acts was to provide, for the time being, a body of laws adapted to the needs of the locality and its people in respect of matters of local or domestic concern. There being no local legislature, Congress alone could act. Plainly, its action was intended to be merely provisional, and not to encroach upon the powers which rightfully would belong to the prospective state. The situation, therefore, is practically the same as it would be had the corporation laws of Arkansas been adopted and put in force by a local or territorial legislature. United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 52-54, 38 L. ed. 631, 633, 634, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746.

In Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, this court had occasion to consider the effect of the admission of a territory as a state on corporations existing at the time under the territorial laws, and it was there said:

"The admission of Kansas as a state into 572] the Union, *and the consequent change of its form of government, in no respect affected the essential character of the corporations or their powers or rights. They must, after that change, be considered as corporations of the state, as much so as if they had derived their existence from its legislation. As its corporations they are to be treated, so far as may be necessary to enforce contracts or rights of property by or against them, as citizens within the clause of the Constitution declaring the extent of the judicial power of the United States."

Adhering to the principle of that ruling, we hold that the corporate defendant here is an Oklahoma, and not a Federal, corporation, and therefore must be regarded as a citizen of that state for jurisdictional purposes.

It follows from what has been said that the case is one in which the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court depended entirely on diverse citizenship, and so the decrees of the Circuit Court of Appeals are final.

Appeals dismissed.

EASTERN CHEROKEES, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 572-582.)

Appeal — judgment — subsequent proceedings below.

The right of the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation to counsel fees payable out of the moneys recovered for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees in a suit over a claim against the United States, arising out of treaty stipulations, cannot be challenged by a supplemental petition filed in the court of claims, where the decree of that court, as affirmed on appeal by the Supreme Court, has determined every question bearing upon the right of such attorneys to have their fees paid out of the award, save the single question of the amount of such fees.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 234.]

Argued April 30 and May 1, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

APPPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a decree which dismissed a supplemental petition in a suit over a claim against the United States, on the ground that the matter presented was foreclosed by a prior decree of that court, which had been affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 45 Ct. Cl. 104.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles Poe and Samuel A. Putman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

The controversy here to be considered arises in this way: In recent years there was litigated in the court of claims and this court a claim against the United States, arising under treaties with the Cherokee Indians, and consisting of four items, one of which, designated as item 2, was for $1,111,284.70, with interest at 5 per cent from June 12, 1838, to the date of payment. The litigation was conducted under § 68 of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, 726, chap. 1375), as construed and amplified by the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 982, 996, chap. 994), and the parties were the Cherokee Nation, the Eastern Cherokees, and the United States. Most of the Eastern Cherokees were members of the Cherokee Nation, but some were not, as was the case with those who remained in North Carolina *and other[574 adjacent states; and most of the members of the Nation were Eastern Cherokees, but some were not, as was the case with those who were known as Old Settlers. The principal questions in controversy in the litigation, so far as they are now material, were (a) whether there could be a recovery against the United States on item 2; (b) whether the recovery should be in the name of the Cherokee Nation or in that of the Eastern Cherokees; and (c) whether, if the recovery were in the name of the Cherokee Nation, it should be for the benefit of the members of the Nation, whether Eastern Cherokees or otherwise, or for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees, whether members of the Nation or otherwise. These questions were all stoutly contested in both courts. As to the first, the Cherokee Nation and Eastern Cherokees made common cause against the United States, and as to the other two, they advanced opposing contentions. The jurisdictional acts, before mentioned, required that "both the Cherokee Nation and said Eastern Cherokees" be made parties to the suit, and provided that if the claim were sustained the judgment should be "in favor of the rightful claimant," and should determine, "as between the different claimants, to whom the judgment so rendered equitably belongs, either wholly or in part." The acts also provided that the Cherokee Nation should be represented by attorneys to be employed and compensated in the manner prescribed in Rev. Stat. §§ 2103-2106, and that the Eastern Cherokees should be represented by attorneys employed by them, whose compensation should be fixed by the court of claims upon the termination of the suit.

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of the lower court to rehear a cause or grant new trial after remand by appellate court—see note to American Soda Fountain Co. v. Sample, 70 C. C. A. 416.

The litigation was started by the Cherokee Nation, which, on January 16, 1903, had entered into a contract, conformably to Rev. Stat. §§ 2103-2106, with the late Gustavus A. Finkelnburg and others, whereby the latter were to represent the Nation [575] as its attorneys in the prosecution *of the claim, and were to receive, as compensation for their services, 5 per cent of the first $1,000,000, or part thereof, collected, and 2½ per cent of the amount collected over and above the first $1,000,000, such compensation to be, by the proper officers of the United States, deducted from the amount recovered, and paid directly to such attorneys.

The court of claims held, and its decree was to the effect, that there should be a recovery against the United States on all the items of the claim; that the recovery on all should be in the name of the Cherokee Nation; and that the recovery on items 1, 3, and 4 should be for the benefit of the Nation, and on item 2 for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees, whether members of the Nation or otherwise; that the proceeds of items 1, 3, and 4 should be paid or credited to the Nation, less the percentage thereof contracted by the Nation to be paid as counsel fees, and that the proceeds of item 2, "less such counsel fees as may be chargeable against the same under the provisions of the contract with the Cherokee Nation of January 16, 1903, and such other counsel fees and expenses as may be hereafter allowed by this court under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1903," should be paid to the Secretary of the Interior, to be by him distributed directly to the Eastern Cherokees, inclusive of a class spoken of as Western Cherokees. The concluding portion of the decree declared: "So much of any of the above-mentioned items or amounts as the Cherokee Nation shall have contracted to pay as counsel fees under and in accordance with the provisions of §§ 2103 and 2106, both inclusive, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and so much of the amount shown in item numbered two (2) as this court hereafter, by appropriate order or decree, shall allow for counsel fees and expenses under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1903, above referred to, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to the persons entitled to receive *the same upon the making of an ap-[576] propriation by Congress to pay this judgment. The allowance of fees and expenses by this court under said act of March 3, 1903, is reserved until the coming in of the mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States." 40 Ct. Cl. 252, 365.

From that decree the parties severally appealed to this court, the United States complaining of the recovery against it on item 2, the Cherokee Nation claiming that the recovery on that item ought not to have been declared to be for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees, and the latter insisting (a) that the recovery on that item should have been in their name, and not in that of the Nation, (b) that the Western Cherokees, so-called, ought not to have been included among those who were to participate in the per capita distribution, and (c) that "the court erred in charging the said fund of $1,111,284.70 and interest, to be realized from its said judgment or decree, with the fees of the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation." This court overruled all objections to the decree, save the one relating to the inclusion of the Western Cherokees, and, after directing that the provision for the per capita distribution be so modified as to confine it to the Eastern Cherokees, whether east or west of the Mississippi, exclusive of the Old Settlers, affirmed the decree, with that modification. 202 U. S. 101, 50 L. ed. 949, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588.

In passing upon the question whether the recovery on item 2 was in the name of the rightful claimant, this court said: "The Cherokee Nation, as such, had no interest in the claim, but officially represented the Eastern Cherokees." And again: "We concur with the court of claims in the wisdom of rendering judgment in favor of the Cherokee Nation, subject to the limitation that the amount thereof should be paid to the Secretary of the Interior, to be distributed directly to the parties entitled to it."

In disposing of the insistence that the 577]proceeds arising *from that item ought not to have been charged with any fee for the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation, this court said: "In view of the language of the jurisdictional acts of 1902 and 1903 in respect of the Cherokee Nation, we are not disposed to interfere with the court of claims in the allowance of fees and costs." And then, after noticing the arguments advanced by counsel for the Eastern Cherokees in support of a contrary conclusion, which were based upon the fact, among others, that the Nation had asserted a right to collect that item, not for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees, but for the benefit of its members, whether Eastern Cherokees or otherwise, the court concluded the consideration of that insistence by saying: "Nevertheless, taking the entire record together, the various treaties and acts of Congress, and of the Cherokee Councils, and the language of the jurisdictional acts of 1902 and 1903, we leave the decree as it is in respect to counsel fees and costs."

On receipt of the mandate the court of claims modified its original decree so as to conform to the direction in respect to the persons who should participate in the per capita distribution, and, in pursuance of the reservation made before, entered a supplemental decree fixing the compensation of the attorneys for the Eastern Cherokees at 15 per cent of the amount of item 2, including interest. Thereafter, Congress made an appropriation to pay the original decree as modified (24 Stat. at L. 634, 664, chap. 3912), and the accounting officers of the Treasury computed the interest due on each item, thereby ascertaining that item 2 amounted to almost $5,000,000. Finkelnburg and his associates, the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation, then presented to the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs a sworn statement of their services under the contract of January 16, 1903, conformably to the requirements of Rev. Stat. § 2104, upon which statement that officer and the Acting Secretary of the Interior determined 578]and certified *that such attorneys had fully complied with the contract, and were entitled to the compensation therein provided, including the stipulated percentage of the amount recovered on item 2; and, upon the presentation of that certificate, the officers of the Treasury Department paid to such attorneys, out of the moneys applicable to the several items, the percentage named in the contract, and deducted the same from the proceeds of the several items, the amount so deducted from item 2 being $147,527.01. The certification and payment, in so far as they affected that item, were made over the objection and protest of the Eastern Cherokees, who insisted at the time that no fees or compensation for the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation lawfully could be paid out of, or charged against, the moneys arising therefrom.

Shortly thereafter the Eastern Cherokees filed in the court of claims, in the original cause, a supplemental petition wherein they challenged (a) the right of the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation to receive any fees or compensation out of the moneys recovered on item, 2, and (b) the authority of the officers of the Treasury Department to make any payment or deduction therefrom by reason of the contract between the Nation and its attorneys, and alleged, in substance, that the decree furnished no warrant for any such payment or deduction; that the jurisdictional acts had not conferred upon the court of claims any power to hear or determine any question pertaining to the fees of the attorneys for the Nation; and that throughout the litigation the Nation's attorneys had contended that the amount due on item 2 should be awarded and paid to the Nation for its own benefit, to the exclusion of the Eastern Cherokees, save as most of them might, as members of it, be benefited indirectly. The prayer of the petition was that the court would pass a further decree "construing and enforcing its former decrees" in such manner that the entire proceeds of item 2, *less the fees and ex- 579 penses theretofore or thereafter allowed by the court to the attorneys for the Eastern Cherokees, would be distributed as before directed, but without any payment therefrom to the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation, or any deduction by reason of any such payment. After a hearing on the petition, the court of claims entered a decree dismissing it for the reasons assigned in the following excerpts from the opinion of that court, delivered by Chief Justice Peelle (45 Ct. Cl. 104, 130, 131):

"The litigation was over a fund arising from treaty stipulations, supposed to be in the Treasury in trust for the parties entitled thereto. Surely the fund which was the stake in controversy should bear the expense, and such was the conclusion of this court. . . . The decree clearly recognized the distinction between the fees authorized by the separate acts. That is to say, the fees to be paid to the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation under the first act were to be governed by the contract made in accordance therewith, while under the second act the court was authorized to fix the fees of the attorneys for the Eastern Cherokees. . . . It was not until after the payment of the money under said contract that the Eastern Cherokees filed their supplemental petition herein, praying the court to so construe its decree as to provide that the sum of $1,111,284.70 [with interest] should not be chargeable with the fees of the attorneys of the Cherokee Nation. But independent of their delay, such construction would not only be contrary to the language of the decree, but would, in effect, be changing the decree after its affirmance by the Supreme Court, and, too, after the contention here was presented there and denied. . . . The Cherokee Nation was the proper party to the suit under both jurisdictional acts, and it had contracted to pay its attorneys, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, in strict accordance with the law, all of which was recognized by the court and sanctioned and 580]provided *for in its decree; and the decree, in respect to the payment of said fees, having been affirmed and executed, the court is not at liberty to modify the decree, or to construe it contrary to the clear import of the language used."

It was from this last decree that the present appeal was taken.

We pass other questions discussed in the opinion of the court of claims and elaborately argued by counsel, and come directly to consider whether further controversy over the matter presented by the supplemental petition was foreclosed by the original decree and the proceedings had in this court on the prior appeal, because, if it was, that alone requires that the action of the court of claims in dismissing the petition be affirmed.

By rendering a decree on item 2 in favor of the Cherokee Nation, over the objection of the Eastern Cherokees, the court of claims necessarily recognized the Nation as the titular claimant, and as authorized to prosecute the item to a recovery, even although the recovery was for the ultimate benefit of the Eastern Cherokees. The latter so understood the decree and accordingly repeated their objection on the prior appeal, but this court sustained the action of the court of claims, saying, as we have seen: "The Cherokee Nation, as such, had no interest in the claim, but officially represented the Eastern Cherokees." Of course, that was an adjudication of the controverted question whether, in view of the 56 L. ed.

treaties and congressional enactments bearing on the subject, and of the attitude of the Cherokee Nation, the recovery should be in its name or in that of the Eastern Cherokees.

When the court of claims determined that question in favor of the Cherokee Nation, and also that the recovery should be for the benefit of the Eastern Cherokees, the question naturally arose, whether the attorneys for the Nation should be paid out of the proceeds. That matter was dealt with in two paragraphs of the decree. In one *it was directed, in respect of the [581 moneys recovered on item 2, "that such counsel fees as may be chargeable against the same under the provisions of the contract" between the Cherokee Nation and its attorneys should be deducted in advance of the distribution among the Eastern Cherokees, and in the other that "so much of any" item on which recovery was had "as the Cherokee Nation shall have contracted to pay as counsel fees" under Rev. Stat. §§ 2103-2106 should be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to the attorneys entitled thereto, upon the making of an appropriation by Congress to pay the decree. In this there was a plain recognition of the services rendered by the Nation's attorneys in prosecuting item 2 and of their right to be compensated out of the moneys recovered, the amount of the compensation to be as provided in their contract. The Eastern Cherokees so understood the decree at the time, and on the prior appeal challenged it as unwarrantably charging a fund recovered for their benefit with fees for the Nation's attorneys. This court, as is manifest from its opinion, construed the decree as did the Eastern Cherokees, and affirmed it with that construction. And, while nothing was said about the power of the court of claims to provide for the payment of the Nation's attorneys out of the moneys recovered, the implication of the opinion was that the power existed; and, of course, the affirmance of the decree wherein the power was exercised was an affirmance of the power.

Thus it is apparent that the decree of the court of claims, as affirmed by this court, determined every question bearing upon the right of the attorneys for the Cherokee Nation to have their fees for the prosecution of item 2 paid out of the proceeds thereof, save the single question of the amount of the fees. That was left to be determined by the terms of the contract and the certification contemplated by Rev. Stat. § 2104. It is not charged that the amount actually paid was not the true amount under *the terms of the con-[582 tract, or that it was not duly certified under § 2104, and so it does not appear that the payment was not in accordance with the decree as construed on the prior appeal.

What really was sought by the supplemental petition was a modification of the decree in a particular wherein it had been affirmed by this court. But the court of claims was without power to grant any such relief, for it, like any other court whose judgment or decree has been reviewed by this court, was bound to give effect to the rule stated in Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 255, 40 L. ed. 414, 416, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291:

"When a case has been once decided by this court on appeal, and remanded to the circuit court, whatever was before this court, and disposed of by its decree, is considered as finally settled. The circuit court is bound by the decree as the law of the case, and must carry it into execution, according to the mandate. That court cannot vary it, or examine it for any other purpose than execution; or give any other or further relief; or review it, even for apparent error, upon any matter decided on appeal; or intermeddle with it, further than to settle so much as has been remanded."

Decree affirmed.

L. P. KINDRED et al., Appts.,

v.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 582-597.)

Public lands — railroad land grant — right of way — Indian lands.

1. Congress did not infringe any rights of the Indians to whom the lands in the Delaware Diminished Indian Reservation were assigned in severalty under the treaty of May 30, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 1129), in which it was agreed that a specified railway company should have the perpetual right of way over any of the lands so assigned on the payment of a just compensation to those whose lands were crossed by its railroad, by the grant to such railway of a right of way 400 feet in width through the public lands, made by the act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), which provided that the United States would, as rapidly as might be, extinguish the Indian titles to all lands required for such right of way, since the provisions of the statute and the treaty, taken together, mean that the right of way was granted not merely by the United States, but with the assent of the Indian assignees, and that the latter were to be justly compensated.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 202-208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Public lands — railroad land grant — right of way — Indian lands.

2. Lands in the Delaware Diminished Indian Reservation which had been assigned in severalty under the treaty of May 30, 1860, must be deemed included in the term "public lands," as used in the act of July 1, 1862, granting a right of way to the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company through the public lands, in view of the provision of that act that the United States should extinguish as rapidly as might be the Indian titles to all lands required for the right of way, and of the action of the Land Department in so interpreting the statute.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 202-208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Vendor and purchaser — purchaser's rights — existing burden — railroad right of way.

3. A vendee of land upon which a railroad company, entitled to enter and build its road thereon, on condition that compensation be made, had constructed and put into operation its road without any objection from the then owner to its failure to comply with such condition as to compensation, takes the land subject to the burden of the right of way, and the right to exact payment therefor belongs to the owner at the time the company entered and constructed the road.

[For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, IV. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 51.]

Argued November 9, 1911. Decided June 10, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree enjoining the entry upon, and interference with, a railway right of way. Affirmed.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 112, 168 Fed. 648.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward D. Osborn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. M. Harvey and Frank Doster, filed a brief for appellants:

The treaty-making power is competent to vest a legal title in severalty to Indian lands, and in the lack of restrictions on alienation the phrases "set apart to," "reserved to," "assigned to," etc., sufficiently evidence an intent to pass a fee-simple title.

Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 51 L. ed. 165, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129.

Where a grant is made to one "and his heirs," a restriction on alienation, either partial or entire, does not debase the grant to a mere right of occupancy, but a vested interest passes thereby under the cover and protection of the constitutional guaranties of property right.

Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 30 L. ed. 133, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1045; United States v. Paine Lumber Co. 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. ed. 1139, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. ed. 210; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 40 L. ed. 231, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965.

Congressional grants of land are not to be regarded as including lands which have been reserved or appropriated by the United States for any purpose whatever, even though they be not expressly excepted by the language of the grant.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 760, 23 L. ed. 645; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 24 L. ed. 440; Spokane Falls & N. R. Co. v. Ziegler, 9 C. C. A. 548, 15 U. S. App. 472, 61 Fed. 392; United States v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. 46 Fed. 502; Scott v. Carew, 196 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 403, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

It follows that grants of lands or rights out of the "public lands" are to be construed as excluding lands otherwise reserved or appropriated, unless a contrary intent is clearly and positively expressed.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 71 C. C. A. 598, 139 Fed. 614, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. ed. 438, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

A treaty of the United States, whether made with a foreign nation or with an Indian tribe, has the force of law equally with an act of Congress. Congress may abrogate such treaties, as it may repeal statutes, but in neither case is repeal or abrogation by implication favored. Unless the intent of Congress to abrogate the treaty is clear and undoubted from the language of the act, unless it admits of no other reasonable construction, it will not be construed as abrogating the treaty.

Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 770, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; United States v. Gue Lim, 176 U. S. 459, 44 L. ed. 544, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 244, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Turner v. American Baptist Missionary Union, 5 McLean, 349, Fed. Cas. No. 14,251.

Grants of public lands to railways do not apply to Indian reservations, even though such reservations be not expressly excepted from the grant.
56 L. ed.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. ed. 438, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 41 L. ed. 770, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; King v. McAndrews, 50 C. C. A. 29, 111 Fed. 860; United States v. Oregon Cent. Military Road Co. 103 Fed. 554; Northern P. R. Co. v. Maclay, 9 C. C. A. 609, 15 U. S. App. 438, 61 Fed. 554.

The settled rule of construction applies to right-of-way grants as well as to grants of land in aid of construction.

Washington & I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 160 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 356, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Union P. R. Co. v. Harris, 215 U. S. 386, 54 L. ed. 246, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138, 76 Kan. 255, 91 Pac. 68.

Extinguishment clauses extend the grant to wild, unceded Indian lands occupied by the Indians under their original right of occupancy, but not to lands expressly reserved for their occupation or use by treaty.

Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 30 L. ed. 330, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hinchman, 53 Fed. 523; Dellone v. Northern P. R. Co. 16 Land Dec. 229; Northern P. R. Co. v. Warren, 28 Land Dec. 494; Warren v. Northern P. R. Co. 22 Land Dec. 568; Northern P. R. Co. v. Eberhard, 19 Land Dec. 532; Northern P. R. Co. v. Haynes, 20 Land Dec. 90; Northern P. R. Co. v. Maclay, 26 Land Dec. 43; Northern P. R. Co. v. Clark, 5 Land Dec. 138; Whitney v. Northern P. R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 343; Phelps v. Northern P. R. Co. 1 Land Dec. 368; Re Maclay, 2 Land Dec. 675; Re Atlantic & P. R. Co. 13 Land Dec. 373; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Tiernan, 17 Land Dec. 587.

The construction given to a statute by those charged with its execution has much weight, and ought not to be overruled without cogent reasons. The decisions of the Department of the Interior in regard to the construction and effect of statutes relating to congressional grants of the public domain, especially when followed consistently for many years, will be accepted by the courts as correct, unless obviously wrong.

United States v. Hammers, 221 U. S. 220, 55 L. ed. 710, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 206, 6

L. ed. 603; United States v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 98 U. S. 334, 25 L. ed. 198; Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 34 L. ed. 767, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. 38 C. C. A. 354, 97 Fed. 670.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

At the time of the Pacific Railroad act of July 1, 1862, the Delaware Indians were the wards of the nation, and had only a right of occupancy in the lands in the Delaware Reservation, and such lands were at the time public lands of the United States, within the meaning of the 2d and 9th sections of the act of 1862.

Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 585, 5 L. ed. 681, 691; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 8, 44 L. ed. 49, 52, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Veale v. Maynes, 23 Kan. 1; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 15-17, 8 L. ed. 25, 30, 31; Grinter v. Kansas P. R. Co. 23 Kan. 642; State v. Horn, 34 Kan. 556, 9 Pac. 208, 35 Kan. 717, 12 Pac. 148; Union P. R. Co. v. Kindred, 43 Kan. 135, 23 Pac. 112.

The Indians to whom the allotments were made under the treaty of 1860 have already been paid for the right of way granted to the Leavenworth Company, and they and their successors in title have no claim of any kind to the lands in question.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 688, 49 U. S. App. 778, 84 Fed. 1022, 168 U. S. 505, 42 L. ed. 559, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167.

Equity has jurisdiction to protect a railroad company in the use and enjoyment of its right of way.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Smith, 63 C. C. A. 1, 128 Fed. 1; Cairo, V. & C. R. Co. v. Brevoort, 25 L.R.A. 527, 62 Fed. 129; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Freeport, 138 Pa. 91, 20 Atl. 940.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

The ultimate question to be decided on this appeal is whether the appellee, the Union Pacific Railroad Company, has a right of way 400 feet in width across certain lands in the state of Kansas, formerly 591] within the Delaware *Diminished Indian Reservation. The facts out of which the question arises are these:

By the treaty of 1829 (7 Stat. at L. 327) with the Delaware Indians, it was provided that certain lands in the fork of the Kansas and Missouri rivers should be "conveyed and forever secured" to those Indians "as their permanent residence." By the treaty of 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 1048) parts of the reservation so established were relinquished and the remainder retained for a "permanent home." Article 11 of this treaty declared that at the request of the Delawares the diminished reservation should be surveyed and each person or family assigned such portion as the principal men of the tribe should designate, the assignments to be uniform; and article 12 provided that railroad companies, when their lines of railroad necessarily passed through the diminished reservation, should have a right of way on payment of a just compensation. The treaty of 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 1129), after reciting such a request as was contemplated by the preceding treaty, provided that 80 acres of the diminished reservation should be assigned and set apart for the exclusive use and benefit of each Delaware and his heirs; that the tracts assigned should not be alienable in fee, leased, or otherwise disposed of, except to the United States or to other members of the tribe, and should be exempt from levy, taxation, sale, or forfeiture until otherwise provided by Congress; and that if any Delaware should abandon the tract assigned to him, the Secretary of the Interior should take such action in respect of its disposition as in his judgment might seem proper. Article 3 of this treaty gave to the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company, a Kansas corporation, a preferred right to purchase the unassigned lands in the reservation, and declared: "It is also agreed that the said railroad company shall have the perpetual right of way over any portion of the lands allotted to the Delawares in severalty, on the payment of a just compensation *therefor, in money. to[592 the respective parties whose lands are crossed by the line of railroad."

The act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), relating to the location, construction, and maintenance of the Union Pacific and other railroads, authorized the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company, before mentioned, to locate, construct, and maintain a railroad from the Missouri river, at the mouth of the Kansas river in Kansas, to a connection with the Union Pacific Railroad on the 100th meridian of longitude in Nebraska, and granted to it, as also to other companies named in the act, a right of way in the following terms:

"Sec. 2. . . . That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said company for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof; said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, and depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turntables, and water stations. The United States shall extinguish as rapidly as may be the Indian titles to all lands falling under the operation of this act and required for the said right of way and grants hereinafter made."

Other portions of the act required the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company to file with the Secretary of the Interior within six months after the date of the act an acceptance of its conditions, and within two years after such date a map of the general route of its road, and to complete 100 miles, commencing at the mouth of the Kansas river, within two years after such acceptance, and 100 miles per year thereafter until completion; and made provision for an official examination and approval of the completed road in sections of 40 consecutive miles. The company seasonably filed an acceptance of the conditions of the act and a map of the general route of its road, showing that the route extended from the mouth of the Kansas river to and across the Delaware Diminished Reservation. That part of the road was constructed on that route and put into operation within two years from the date of the act, and was duly examined and approved by the proper officers of the United States. Under Congressional authority the route for the remaining part of the road was subsequently changed so that the connection with the Union Pacific Railroad would be made at a point farther west than was originally intended, and the later construction conformed to this change, but this has no bearing here. The appellee, the Union Pacific Railroad Company, became in 1898, and now is, the successor in interest and title of the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company.

By the treaty of 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 793), provision was made for the removal of the Delawares from their home on the diminished reservation to lands secured for them in the Indian territory, and for the sale by the United States of the lands in the reservation, whether held in common or assigned in severalty, with the qualification that assignees electing to dissolve their tribal relations and become citizens of the United States might retain the tracts assigned to them and ultimately receive patents in fee simple with power of alienation. On receiving payment for the lands sold, the United States was to issue patents therefor to the purchaser or his assigns, and apply the proceeds to the benefit of the tribe or the assignees, depending upon whether the particular lands were held in common or had been assigned in severalty. The intended removal was effected, the reservation was extinguished, and the lands therein, including most of those assigned in severalty, were sold as intended.

*The lands through which the asserted right of way here in controversy extends were within diminished reservation at the date of the act of 1862, had then been assigned in severalty to individual Delawares under the treaty of 1860, were sold by the United States under the treaty of 1866, and are now claimed by the appellants through mesne conveyances under the patents issued to the purchaser at that sale. The railroad was located and constructed across these lands without the payment of any compensation for the right of way. But, so far as appears, no attempt was made by the tribe, the individual assignees, or the United States, to prevent the location and construction, and no controversy arose between them and the railroad company, save as there was a dispute as to whether the assignees were entitled to compensation, and, if so, as to who should pay it. See Grinter v. Kansas P. R. Co. 23 Kan. 642, 659; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 168 U. S. 505, 42 L. ed. 559, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167. In 1892 Congress recognized the right of the assignees to be compensated for the right of way, and made an appropriation to pay them, accompanying it with a direction to the Attorney General to institute proceedings against the railroad company to compel it to reimburse the government. See 27 Stat. at L. 120, 126, chap. 164; United States v. Union P. R. Co. supra.

The circuit court and the circuit court of appeals sustained the railroad company's claim to a right of way 400 feet in width (94 C. C. A. 112, 168 Fed. 648), and the present owners of the tracts affected prosecute this appeal.

It was contended in the courts below, and the contention is repeated here, that the individual Indians to whom the lands were assigned in severalty obtained no better or different right in them than the tribe had in the lands held in common; in other words, that the right was one of possession or occupancy only, the United States remaining the real proprietor and having full power to terminate the Indian right at will. But, without passing upon that contention, we think it may well be assumed for the purposes of this case that the assignees, although not possessing the legal title, and not promised a conveyance of it, had something more than the ordinary right of possession or occupancy of tribal Indians in lands set apart for tribal use. We say this, because the right of the assignees, whatever it may have been, was acquired and held under the treaty of 1860, wherein it was agreed that the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company should have a perpetual right of way over any of the lands assigned in severalty, on the payment of a just compensation to those whose lands were crossed by its railroad. It therefore is not as if Congress had undertaken to grant a right of way through these lands without either the assent of the assignees or any provision for compensating them. As respects these lands, the right-of-way section in the act of 1862 did not stand alone, but was to be taken in connection with the treaty provision. The two, together, meant that the right of way was granted, not merely by the United States, but with the assent of the Indian assignees, and that the latter were to be justly compensated. The only uncertainty, if any, introduced into the situation, arose from the presence in the right-of-way section of the promise on the part of the United States that it would, as rapidly as might be, extinguish the Indian title to all lands required for the right of way. This seems to have given rise to a question whether the United States was to bear the burden of extinguishing the title, as by compensating the Indians therefor, or only to assist in obtaining it, as by conducting negotiations with the Indians in respect of the compensation to be paid to them. But we are not here concerned with that question, because the right under the treaty to have the compensation seasonably ascertained and paid by whomsoever was liable therefor was not insisted upon. No 596]steps to that end *were taken, but, on the contrary, the construction of the railroad was permitted to proceed and the road was completed and put into operation as a public highway at least three years before the lands were sold under the treaty of 1866.

But it is said that the right-of-way section was inapplicable because it was confined to "public lands," a term used to designate such lands as are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws. No doubt such is its ordinary meaning, but it sometimes is used in a larger and different sense. We think that is the case here; first, because the provision in the same section, that the United States should extinguish as rapidly as might be the Indian title to all lands required for the right of way, implies that Indian lands as to which Congress properly could grant a right of way were intended to be included, and, second, because the section was so interpreted by the executive department charged with the administration of the act, as also of affairs pertaining to the Indians and public lands, and rights acquired thereunder ought not lightly to be disturbed after the lapse of so many years.

It results that the sole irregularity in respect of the acquisition of the right of way contemplated by the treaty provision and the statute, taken together, was the failure to make compensation therefor to the Indian assignees when the railroad was constructed, or until after the lands had been sold for their benefit to the remote grantor of the appellants. The railroad was in existence and being operated across the land at the time of the sale, as ever since, and therefore there can be no claim that that or any subsequent purchase was made without notice of the right of way.

So, if the appellants be regarded as claiming under the Indian assignees, which is the most favorable view for the appellants, the case still falls within the general rule that where a railroad company enters upon the land of another *and con-[597]structs a railroad thereover under a statute entitling it so to do on condition that compensation be made to the owner, and the latter permits the road to be constructed and put into operation without a compliance with that condition, a subsequent vendee of the owner takes the land subject to the burden of the right of way, and the right to exact payment therefor from the railroad company belongs to the owner at the time the company entered and constructed the road. Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 873, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, and cases cited.

At an early stage of the case it appears to have been contended that the appellants acquired title to parts of the right of way by adverse possession; but as the contention is expressly abandoned in the brief, evidently in view of the ruling in Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 157, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; and Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302, it need not be considered.

We conclude that the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals was right.

Decree affirmed.

JOHN FLANNELLY and Mary Ellen Flannelly, Petitioners,

v.

DELAWARE & HUDSON COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 597-604.)

Railroads — accident at highway crossing — contributory negligence.

A person attempting to drive across the tracks at a highway crossing without awaiting the further movements of a freight train which, after passing between her and the passenger tracks, had come to a full stop some 150 feet beyond the crossing, partly obstructing her view, is not, as a matter of law, guilty of such contributory negligence as will bar a recovery for the damages resulting from a collision with a rapidly moving passenger train not giving the usual warning signals,—especially where it was the rear wheel of the wagon which was struck, and the unexpected behavior of the horse delayed her forward progress.

[For other cases, see Railroads, 164-167, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 132.]

Argued December 19 and 20, 1911. Decided June 10, 1912.

ON WRIT of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania, in favor of plaintiffs in an action against a railroad company to recover damages for injuries received at a highway crossing. Reversed.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 112, 172 Fed. 328.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank W. Hackett and Paul J. Sherwood argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners.

Mr. James H. Torrey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. S. Opdyke and Lewis E. Carr, filed a brief for respondent.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action to recover damages for injuries and loss occasioned, as was alleged, by negligence of a railroad company, resulting in the collision of one of its trains with a vehicle passing over a grade crossing in Pennsylvania. The negligence charged against the defendant was the failure to give due and timely warning of the approach of the train, and the defense interposed was the freedom of the defendant from the negligence charged, and the failure of one of the plaintiffs, who was driving the vehicle, to take reasonable precautions, before attempting to drive over the crossing, to ascertain whether she could do so in safety. In the circuit court there was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs, and the defendant took the case on a writ of error to the circuit court of appeals. That court treated the record as presenting, in substance, two questions: First, whether there was any substantial evidence of actionable negligence on the part of the defendant, and, second, whether the evidence conclusively established the defense of contributory negligence. Upon examining the evidence purporting to be set out in the record, the circuit court of appeals answered the first question favorably to the plaintiffs and the second favorably to the defendant, and accordingly reversed the judgment. 97 C. C. A. 112, 172 Fed. 328. The case was then brought here on a writ of certiorari granted on the petition of the plaintiffs.

*Assuming, but without so deciding, [602 that the state of the record was such as to justify the circuit court of appeals in examining the evidence and determining whether it conclusively established the defense of contributory negligence, we come to consider whether that question was rightly decided.

As is often true in such cases, some matters were not disputed at the trial, while others were the subject of conflicting testimony or of testimony from which different inferences reasonably could be drawn. The matters not disputed were these: The injury occurred in the daytime, at a grade crossing in a small country village. The defendant's tracks, which were three in number, ran in a northerly and southerly direction and crossed the highway at right angles. About 700 feet south of the crossing the tracks curved to the west, and when cars were occupying the east track south of the crossing a traveler on the highway east of the crossing could not see a train approaching from the south on either side of the other tracks. Mrs. Flannelly, one of the plaintiffs and wife of the other, had occasion to drive along the highway from her home, a few miles east of the railroad, to a point on the other side of it. Seated in the vehicle with her were two small boys. As she neared the crossing a freight train was approaching on the east track from the north. She stopped about 40 feet from that track

NOTE.—On fright of team as excuse for omission to look and listen at railroad crossing—see note to Sarles v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 415.
56 L. ed.

On duty of traveler approaching railway crossing as to place and direction of observation—see note to Wallenburg v. Missouri P. R. Co. 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 135.

and waited for the train to pass, which took some time, as it was long and moving slowly. Before this train obscured the view she looked along the tracks to the south, and observed that no train was in sight, coming from that direction. After the rear of the freight train passed about 150 feet beyond the crossing she drove to the first track, or near it, and, on looking in both directions and seeing no train approaching, started to drive over the tracks. Her view at that time extended 300 feet or more to the south along the second track. As she 603] was passing over that *track a passenger train approaching thereon from the south sounded a sharp danger signal, and soon struck a rear wheel of her vehicle, thereby wrecking the latter, inflicting bodily injuries on her, and killing one of the boys. The train was moving at a rate of from 50 to 60 miles an hour, or from 73 to 88 feet per second. There was also testimony, more or less disputed, from which the jury reasonably could have found that no whistle was sounded by the passenger train at the place where such a warning of its approach was usually and properly given; that the freight train came to a stop before Mrs. Flannelly drove on the tracks; that she listened attentively for signals given by approaching trains, but heard none, other than the danger signal, which came too late to be of avail; that her horse became restive and nervous before she advanced to the crossing; that when the danger signal was sounded by the passenger train the horse halted, reared, and delayed their progress between five and ten seconds; and that as that signal was sounded she saw the passenger train emerge from a volume of smoke or steam which was hanging over the tracks to the south.

The law requires of one going upon or over a railroad crossing the exercise of such care for his own protection as a reasonably prudent person ordinarily would take in the same or like circumstances, including the use of his faculties of sight and hearing. And, generally speaking, whether such care has been exercised is a question of fact for the jury, especially if the evidence be conflicting or such that different inferences reasonably may be drawn from it.

We think the evidence in this case, when tested by these standards, required that the defense of contributory negligence be submitted to the jury as a question of fact, as was done by the circuit court. The conclusion to the contrary in the circuit court 604] of appeals was rested upon *the theory that the freight train did not stop after clearing the crossing, but continued in a southerly direction, thereby giving promise that the obstruction to the view along the tracks on that side of the crossing would quickly disappear. But a careful examination of the record satisfies us that there was evidence from which the jury could well have found that the train came to a full stop about 150 feet south of the crossing before Mrs. Flannelly started to cross over. If it did, she hardly could be declared negligent for failing to await its further movements, of which she knew nothing. Besides, if the action of her horse was as described, she ought not to be charged with negligence in not anticipating it.

Other questions were discussed at bar and in the briefs, but as, in the view which we take of the evidence examined by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the judgment of the Circuit Court should have been affirmed, the other questions need not be considered.

Judgment reversed. .

WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Petitioner,

v.

WAGNER ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604-623.)

Damages — in patent case — commingled profits.

1. Such part only of the commingled profits as are attributable to the use of his invention can be recovered by the patentee in a suit against an infringer who has added noninfringing and valuable improvements contributing to the profits.

[For other cases, see Damages, 293-312, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — burden of proof — patent case — separation of profits.

2. A patentee suing to recover profits from an infringer who has added noninfringing and valuable improvements discharges the burden resting upon him of showing what part of the commingled profits are attributable to the use of his invention by proving the existence of such profits and the impossibility of accurately or approximately separating them from those arising out of defendant's additions, and the defendant must then carry the burden of such separation if he is to escape liability for the entire profits.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 782-789, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 179.]

NOTE.—On damages for infringement of patents, copyrights, or trademarks as affected by loss of profits—see note to Rose v. Hirsh, 51 L.R.A. 801.

Argued March 1, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Missouri, awarding nominal damages only in a suit by a patentee to recover the profits attributable to the use by an infringer of his invention. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 621, 173 Fed. 361.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The current produced by an electric generator is of relatively low pressure, and for that reason it is impracticable to utilize it, for power purposes, more than 5 or 6 [606]*miles from the central station. It was found, however, that this pressure, or voltage, could be increased by the use of a transformer or converter, consisting of a metal core, through and around which are wound primary insulated wires leading from the generator. Secondary wires, also insulated, are wound through and around the same core, and carried thence to the point of application. The voltage is increased or decreased according as the secondary wires are wrapped around the core more or less frequently than the primary wires.

One of the consequences of thus transforming the current is the generation of heat. In small machines this is corrected by radiation, but in large ones the heat "ages" the iron, lessens the efficiency of the transformer, and, in time, deteriorates the insulation around the wires. This latter result causes short circuits, makes it impracticable to take advantage of the increased voltage, and thus again restricts the area in which currents of more than 10 K. W. can be used for producing light and power. 112 Fed. 418.

Many efforts were made to overcome this difficulty, but without success until July 12, 1887, when George Westinghouse, Jr., secured patent 366,362 for an "Electrical Converter," which, his application stated, was intended to prevent the converter becoming "overheated when employed for a long time in transforming currents of high electro motive force." Extracts from the specification and claims are copied in the margin.†

†"The core is preferably composed of thin plates of soft iron . . . separated individually or in pairs from each other by thin sheets of paper or other insulating material. . . . The plates are preferably constructed with two rectangular openings

*Referring specially to the specifications and claim 4, which is here involved, and speaking generally rather than technically, it will be seen that the transformer consisted of a core, composed of groups of thin metal plates, so plugged apart as to leave (a) open spaces in the core. The primary and secondary wires were wound through rectangular openings near the ends of these plates. The entire apparatus was then placed in a case filled with nonconducting oil, which, when heated, circulated in and around the transformer, being cooled by contact with the exterior surface of the inclosing box or receptacle. This invention proved to be of immense value and made it possible (112 Fed. 418, 422, 55 C. C. A. 230, 117 Fed. 498) to transmit and apply powerful currents so as to produce power and light at a great distance from the generating plant. The patent was utilized by the Union Carbide Company, and on May 10, 1900, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, as assignee of George Westinghouse, sued that company for infringing claim 4. The transformers which the Carbide Company was using had been sold by the Wagner Company. As vendor and *warrantor the latter there-[608 fore defended, and admits that the decree (112 Fed. 417) of November 11, 1901, sustaining the validity of claim 4, is, as to it, res judicata. That decree was affirmed May 29, 1902 (55 C. C. A. 230, 117 Fed. 495), and on June 24, 1902, the Westinghouse Company brought this suit (129 Fed. 604) against the Wagner Company, praying for damages and profits, and also for an injunction against further infringement.

It appeared that after the decree in the Carbide Case the Wagner Company had instructed its experts to build a transformer that would not infringe the Westinghouse patent. They thereupon devised one, referred to herein as type M, which omitted the (a) open spaces in the core, but substituted (b) spaces between the coil, and (c) spaces between the coil and the core.

The court held that these type M transformers, eliminating spaces in the core, were not an infringement of claim 4, and thereupon refused the injunction. 129 Fed. 604. But the defendant in its answer admitted that it had infringed claim 4 by the manufacture of transformers which, as it subsequently developed, contained openings (a) in the core, and also (b) openings between through which the wires pass. . . . Each group of—say five or six plates—is preferably separated from the succeeding group by air spaces. These may be produced by passing tubes, which may be of soft iron or other metal, or of vulcanized the coils, and (c) between the coil and core. The case was therefore referred to a master to state an account of damages and profits arising from the infringement of claim 4 prior to June 24, 1902.

On the hearing it appeared that the Wagner Company manufactured various electrical appliances that had been made in the same shop, by the same workmen, and under the same general superintendence as that employed in making the transformers. No account had been kept which would show the cost of labor and shop expenses attributable to these transformers. Nor was there anything on the books indicating what, if any, profit had been realized from their sales.

The gross receipts of $2,314,744.75 were mingled. The books only showed a gross profit of about 8 per cent, but it appeared that the plant had grown and the business had extended during the period covered by the accounting. There was testimony that the company had the general policy of fixing prices at a figure which would net 25 per cent. The master made an elaborate analysis of the data as to flat cost of labor and material, shop expenses, and commissions applicable to the transformers. From this data and the policy of the company he ultimately reached the conclusion that the company had made a profit of $132,433 on the $955,271.76 which the books showed had been received from the sale of several thousand infringing transformers. But at the close of the plaintiff's testimony the defendant demurred to the evidence on the ground that it failed to show that any profit had been made in the sale of the infringing transformers. The demurrer was overruled. The defendant then claimed that the infringing transformers contained elements of the patent which were not embraced in claim 4, for which alone this suit was proceeding, and that no profit due to those elements could be recovered in this case, unless the plaintiff apportioned the gains due solely to claim 4. It also offered evidence, including a heat test, tending to support its contention that a transformer containing only the elements covered by claim 4 was of little utility; that it operated mainly to reduce the heat in the core, when it was much more important to keep the coils cool; that the infringing transformers contained spaces (b) between the coils and (c) between coil and core which, it contended, were additions and noninfringing improvements, contributing to the profits, if any had been made.

In reply and to disprove the defendant's contention, the plaintiff relied, among other things, on the fact that, upon the hearing of the application to enjoin the defendant from manufacturing transformers containing only (b) spaces between the [610 coil and (c) between coil and core, the Wagner Company had contended that these grooves or channels had been used to avoid infringement, although they "crippled the coils" and actually "lessened the electrical efficiency of the transformers."

At the conclusion of the lengthy testimony, the substance of which is barely outlined above, the master found from the evidence and under the decision in 55 C. C. A. 230, 117 Fed. 498, binding on defendant, that claim 4 was an entirety, covering not only open spaces in the core, but the use of the oil in a closed receptacle for cooling the transformer; that all the commercial value of those sold by the defendant was due to the use of claim 4 of plaintiff's patent, and not to additions made by the defendant. He recommended that a decree should be entered against the defendant for $132,433.35, "being approximately 25 per cent on the net amount of the sales of infringing transformers after deducting commissions and fixing the factory cost at 40 per cent."

The defendant filed many exceptions, among others:

"That the complainant has not shown what was the profit made by defendant on its transformers, due to the patented invention of claim 4, as distinguished and fiber, along the lengths of the plates. It may be sufficient in other cases to block the group of plates apart at intervals instead of extending the tubes the entire length. Preferably also the primary and secondary coils are separated from each other in a similar manner."

Where the converter is to be used in the open air, the tube will permit a free circulation of air and thus aid in keeping the converter cool.

It may be preferred in some instances to surround the converter with some oil, or paraffin or other suitable material, which will assist in preserving insulating and will not be injured by heating. This material, when in a liquid form, circulates through the tubes and intervening spaces of the coils and plates, and preserves the insulation, excludes the moisture, and cools the converter.

The entire converter may be sealed into an inclosing case . . . which may or may not contain a nonconducting fluid or gas.

"I claim as my invention . . . 1 . . . ; 2 . . . ; 3 . . .

"4. The combination, substantially as described, of an electric converter constructed with open spaces in its core, an inclosing case, and a nonconducting fluid or gas in said case, adapted to circulate through said spaces and about the converter."

segregated from the other features contained in said transformers."

There were also numerous exceptions as to the master's method of stating the account. These and others were not specifically passed on because the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals (one judge dissenting) held (97 C. C. A. 621, 173 Fed. 361) that claim 4 was a limited, detailed claim; that the additions made by the defendant were noninfringing and valuable improvements which contributed to the profits; that the burden of apportionment was upon plaintiff, and, having failed to separate profits, it was only entitled to a decree for nominal damages. The court (one judge dissenting) also affirmed 611]*the decree that type M was not an infringement of claim 4.

Messrs. Thomas B. Kerr and Paul Bakewell argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The burden of proof was on respondent to show what profits, if any, were due to the additional spaces.

Elizabeth v. American Nicholson Pav. Co. 97 U. S. 141, 24 L. ed. 1006; Hurlbut v. Schillinger, 130 U. S. 456, 472, 32 L. ed. 1011, 1016, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; Crosby Steam Gage & Valve Co. v. Consolidated Safety Valve Co. 141 U. S. 454, 35 L. ed. 815, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 203, 26 L. ed. 980; Brennan & Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. 89 C. C. A. 392, 162 Fed. 475; Orr & L. Hardware Co. v. Murray, 89 C. C. A. 492, 163 Fed. 55.

Where the infringer has confused the profits made in the manufacture and sale of the infringing article with the general profits of his business, the master is warranted in estimating the profits to which complainant is entitled. And in estimating profits made by an infringer a compensation is granted, computed and measured by the same rules that courts of equity apply to the case of a trustee who has wrongfully used the trust property for his own advantage.

Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 148, 31 L. ed. 668, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 189, 214, 215, 26 L. ed. 975, 984; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, 26 L. ed. 693; The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575, 585, 586, 23 L. ed. 978, 981, 982; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 302-304, 19 L. ed. 570, 571; Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 665, 666, 32 L. ed. 547, 562, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Gould's Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, 105 U. S. 255, 26 L. ed. 988.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Melville Church argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The burden of proof is on complainant to show profit due to improvement covered by claim 4.

Mosher v. Joyce, 2 C. C. A. 322, 6 U. S. App. 107, 51 Fed. 441; Tomkinson v. Willets Mfg. Co. 34 Fed. 536; Robbins v. Illinois Watch Co. 27 C. C. A. 21, 53 U. S. App. 404, 81 Fed. 957; Brickill v. New York, 50 C. C. A. 1, 112 Fed. 65; Lattimore v. Hardsocg Mfg. Co. 58 C. C. A. 287, 121 Fed. 986; Cary Mfg. Co. v. De Haven, 71 C. C. A. 388, 139 Fed. 262; Westinghouse v. New York Air Brake Co. 72 C. C. A. 61, 140 Fed. 545; Force v. Sawyer-Boss Mfg. Co. 75 C. C. A. 102, 143 Fed. 894; Canda Bros. v. Michigan Malleable Iron Co. 81 C. C. A. 420, 152 Fed. 178; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Turrill, 94 U. S. 695, 24 L. ed. 238; Goulds Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, 105 U. S. 253, 26 L. ed. 987; Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 120, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Black v. Thorne, 111 U. S. 122, 28 L. ed. 372, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co. 114 U. S. 439, 29 L. ed. 177, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; McCreary v. Pennsylvania Canal Co. 141 U. S. 459, 35 L. ed. 817, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

That almost all of the value of defendant's transformers was attributable to that which was open and free to the defendant to use was thoroughly well proved by the defendant before the master, and no effort was made on the part of the complainant to show the value of the slight difference, though, as to this, the burden of proof was upon complainant.

Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 120, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 145, 38 L. ed. 104, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute makes the decision of the circuit court of appeals final in patent cases, and the plaintiff's petition for the writ of certiorari herein was not granted for the *purpose of re-examining the [614 court's ruling that defendant's type M transformer was not an infringement of claim 4 of the Westinghouse patent. The writ was issued in view of the holding that, though the master found that the defendant had made a profit of $132,000 from the sale of infringing transformers, the plaintiff could yet only recover $1, because it failed to separate the profits made by its patent from those made by the defendant's addition.

1. The question as to who has the burden of proof in cases like this is one of great practical importance, and constantly arises in patent cases. There has been much controversy on the subject and a conflict in the decisions. The authorities cited in the briefs of the two litigants, and others bearing on the subject, have been examined, but we shall not undertake to separately review them, for they disagree not so much as to the rule as to its application. It will be sufficient for the present purposes to say that—

(a) Where the infringer has sold or used a patented article, the plaintiff is entitled to recover all of the profits.

(b) Where a patent, though using old elements, gives the entire value to the combination, the plaintiff is entitled to recover all the profits. Hurlbut v. Schillinger, 130 U. S. 472, 32 L. ed. 1016, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584.

(c) Where profits are made by the use of an article patented as an entirety, the infringer is liable for all the profits “unless he can show—and the burden is on him to show—that a portion of them is the result of some other thing used by him.” Elizabeth v. American Nicholson Pav. Co. 97 U. S. 127, 24 L. ed. 1002.

(d) But there are many cases in which the plaintiff's patent is only a part of the machine and creates only a part of the profits. His invention may have been used in combination with valuable improvements made, or other patents appropriated by the [615]infringer, and each may have *jointly, but unequally, contributed to the profits. In such case, if plaintiff's patent only created a part of the profits, he is only entitled to recover that part of the net gains. He must therefore “give evidence tending to separate or apportion the defendant's profits and the patentee's damages between the patented feature and the unpatented features, and such evidence must be reliable and tangible, and not conjectural or speculative; or he must show, by equally reliable and satisfactory evidence, that the profits and damages are to be calculated on the whole machine, for the reason that the entire value of the whole machine, as a marketable article, is properly and legally attributable to the patented feature.” Garretson v. Clark. 111 U. S. 121, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

The real controversy arises in applying this principle to those cases where it is impossible to separate the single profit into its component parts.

2. In considering the question presented by the record here, it is to be borne in mind that Congress has legislated (Rev. Stat. § 4921, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3395) with a view of affording the patentee ample redress against the infringer. It not only makes the latter liable for damages,—sometimes three-fold damages,—but for all profits derived from the use or sale of plaintiff's invention. The rule as to the burden of proof has, however, been so applied that this statutory right has been often nullified by those infringers who had ingenuity enough to smother the patent with improvements belonging to themselves or to third persons. In such cases the greater the wrong, the greater the immunity; the greater the number of improvements, the greater the difficulty of separating the profits. And if that difficulty could only be converted into an impossibility, the defendant retained all of the gains, because the injured patentee could not separate what the guilty infringer had made impossible of separation.

Manifestly such consequences demonstrate that either *the rule or its applica-[616]tion is wrong. The rule is sound, for it but announces the general proposition that the plaintiff must prove its case and carry the burden imposed by law upon every person seeking to recover money or property from another. But the principle must not be pressed so far as to override others equally important in the administration of justice. It may serve to illustrate the rule and its limitations, if, at the risk of stating the obvious, we apply it to the various steps of this case.

The plaintiff proved its patent, and that it had been infringed by the defendant in the manufacture of several thousand transformers, which sold for $955,000. The patent was itself evidence of the utility of claim 4, and the defendant was estopped from denying that it was of value. Lehnbeuter v. Holthaus, 105 U. S. 94, 26 L. ed. 939. But no matter how great its presumptive or actual value, it did not follow that the defendant had made a profit by the sale of the infringing transformers. And so, having sued for profits, the Westinghouse Company was under the burden of showing they had been made. This it did to the satisfaction of the master, who found that the defendant had netted $132,000 from their sale.

The defendant then had the right either to disprove the plaintiff's case, or to offer evidence in mitigation, or both. Accordingly it submitted evidence tending to show that the spaces added by the defendants were noninfringing and valuable improvements which had contributed to the making of the profits. In reply the Westinghouse Company insisted that claim 4 was an entirety, covering a circulatory system in and around a transformer placed in an oil-filled receptacle; that it embraced the “intervening spaces in the coil” because at least a part of the coil was in the core; that if these spaces were held not to be infringements, they had in fact, as employed by the defendant, added nothing to the profits, but, on the contrary, had crippled the coil 617]and lessened the electrical *efficiency of the transformer. 129 Fed. 607. For that reason the plaintiff contended that it had shown that all the gains were "legally attributable to the patented feature." Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 121, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Elizabeth v. American Nicholson Pav. Co. 97 U. S. 127 (6), 24 L. ed. 1002; Crosby Steam Gage & Valve Co. v. Consolidated Safety Valve Co. 141 U. S. 454, 35 L. ed. 815, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 144, 145, 38 L. ed. 104, 105, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295. This view was sustained by the master. But if it be assumed, as was found to be the fact by the court, that the spaces were noninfringing and valuable improvements, it may then have prima facie appeared that these changes had contributed to the profits. If so, the burden of apportionment was then logically on the plaintiff, since it was only entitled to recover such part of the commingled profits as was attributable to the use of its invention.

3. Lindley, L. J., said in Siddell v. Vickers, 9 Rep. Pat. Cas. 162, that there "was no form of account more difficult to work out than an account of profits." But that is no reason why the plaintiff should be denied its rights. The problem here, though different, was in many respects analogous to that presented in those cases in which it is necessary to separate the interstate from the intrastate earnings made by a railroad where the same track, rolling stock, depots, and labor are employed at the same time in making gross receipts. These commingled expenses must be apportioned between the two classes of earnings in order to determine whether the intrastate rate is confiscatory. The courts, "while recognizing the impossibility of reaching a conclusion that is mathematically exact," have, in addition to all the other evidence bearing on the question, received "the testimony of experts as to the relative costs of doing a local and through business." Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 178, 44 L. ed. 422, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336. The converse is true. What is permissible in an effort to separate costs may also be done in a patent case where it is necessary to 618]separate profits. Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co.* 105 U. S. 198, 26 L. ed. 978. See also Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 802, 19 L. ed. 570. In effect, this was attempted in the present case. Witnesses who had been in the employment of the defendant, and who had kept the books, purchased the material, superintended the construction, and fixed the price of the transformers, were not able to show that profits had been made, and consequently were not able to show what part of the profits was attributable to the patent and what to the additions, if found to be noninfringing and valuable improvements.

4. Having, by books and other data, proved to the satisfaction of the master the existence of profits, the plaintiff had carried the burden imposed by law, and established every element necessary to entitle it to a decree, except one. As to that, the act of the defendant had made it not merely difficult but impossible to carry the burden of apportionment. But plaintiff offered evidence tending to establish a legal equivalent. It had proved the existence of a fact which, whether treated as a rule of evidence or as a matter of substantive law, would entitle it to a decree for all the profits. The method was different from that mentioned in the second branch of the rule in the Garretson Case, 111 U. S. 121, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291, but the plaintiff had now presented proof to demonstrate its right to the whole of the fund because of the fact that the defendant had inextricably commingled and confused the parts composing it. This result would not be in conflict with the principle which, in the first instance, imposed the burden of proof on the plaintiff, but merely gave legal effect to a new fact which, as a matter of law, entitled the patentee to a particular judgment. It presented a case where the court was called on to determine the liability of a trustee ex maleficio, who had confused his own gains with those which belonged to the plaintiff. One party or the other must suffer. The inseparable profit must be given to the patentee or infringer. *The loss had to fall 619 on the innocent or the guilty. In such an alternative the law places the loss on the wrongdoer.

5. It is said, however, that the rule does not apply to patent cases. Why it should be limited does not appear. It is admitted that an injunction may be granted against selling infringing devices, even though the result will be to prevent the defendant from using valuable appliances confused with the patented device. And Lord Eldon treated this conceded right to enjoin as an application of the rule relating to the confusion of goods. He therefore restrained the publication of a book, a large portion of which was original, because copyright matter was incorporated therein, saying in Mawman v. Tegg, 2 Russ. Ch. 390:

"As to the hard consequences which would follow from granting an injunction when a very large proportion of the work is unquestionably original, I can only say that if the parts which have been copied cannot be separated from those which are original, without destroying the use and value of the original matter, he who has made an improper use of that which did not belong to him must suffer the consequence of so doing."

This case was cited and approved in Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 658, 32 L. ed. 559, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177, where the infringer, who had blended his own with copyright matter, in a volume which sold for a profit, was made to "abide the consequences on the same principle that he who has wrongfully produced a confusion of goods must alone suffer." In one of these cases the original matter was less, and in the other more, than that unlawfully appropriated. In both, as in patent cases, the infringer was a "trustee for the plaintiff in respect of profits." Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 214, 26 L. ed. 984. And the liability is not lessened because the confusion is due to a wrongful appropriation by a trustee de son tort, instead of carelessness of a trustee lawfully appointed. Nor [620] is it limited to those cases where *the patented device is shown to have preponderated in the creation of the profits. The owner of a small part of the fund is as much entitled to the protection of the law as the owner of a larger share. The rule, however, is not intended to penalize the infringer, nor to give the patentee profits to which he is clearly not entitled. So that where, by general evidence, expert testimony, or otherwise, it is shown that his patent is of relatively small value, it will often be possible to prove that, at the utmost, it could not have contributed to more than a given amount of the profits. Lupton v. White, 15 Ves. Jr. 432-440, 10 Revised Rep. 94, 2 Mor. Min. Rep. 430. In such cases, except possibly against one who had concealed or destroyed evidence or been guilty of gross wrong, the plaintiff's recovery cannot exceed the amount thus proved, even though it be impossible otherwise more precisely to apportion the profits.

6. But when a case of confusion does appear,—when it is impossible to make a mathematical or approximate apportionment,—then, from the very necessity of the case, one party or the other must secure the entire fund. It must be kept by the infringer or it must be awarded by law to the patentee. On established principles of equity, and on the plainest principles of justice, the guilty trustee cannot take advantage of his own wrong. The fact that he may lose something of his own is a misfortune which he has brought upon himself; and if, as argued, the fund may have been made by the use of other patents also, for which he may be liable in another case, it is again a misfortune which he has brought upon himself and an instance of a double wrong causing double liability. He cannot appeal to a court of conscience to cast the loss upon an innocent patentee and by judicial decree repeal the provision of Rev. Stat. § 4921, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3395, which declares that, in case of infringement, the complainant shall be entitled to recover the "profits to be accounted for by the defendant."

This conclusion is said to be in conflict with the Garretson *and other deci-[621] sions, which, it is claimed, justify the conclusion that the defendant is entitled to retain all of the profits, even where the patentee is unable to make an apportionment. Warren v. Keep, 155 U. S. 265, 39 L. ed. 144, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83. An analysis of the facts of those cases will show that they do not sustain so extreme a doctrine. For they deal with instances where the plaintiff apparently relied on the theory that the burden was on the defendant, and for that, or other reasons, made no attempt whatever to separate the profits. None of the cases cited discuss the rights of the patentee who has exhausted all available means of apportionment, who has resorted to the books and employees of the defendant, and by them, or expert testimony, proved that it was impossible to make a separation of the profits. This distinction between difficulty and impossibility is involved in the ruling by the circuit court of appeals of the sixth circuit in Brennan & Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. 89 C. C. A. 396, 162 Fed. 476, where the Garretson Case was distinguished, and the court said:

"In the present case the infringer's conduct has been such as to preclude the belief that it had derived no advantage from the use of the plaintiff's invention. . . . In these circumstances, upon whom is the burden of loss to fall? We think the law answers this question by declaring that it shall rest upon the wrongdoer, who has so confused his own with that of another that neither can be distinguished. It is a bitter response for the court to say to the innocent party, 'You have failed to make the necessary proof to enable us to decide how much of these profits are your own;' for the party knows, and the court must see, that such a requirement is impossible to be complied with. The proper remedy to be applied in such cases is that stated by Chancellor Kent in Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. 62, 108 where he said: 'The rule of law and equity is strict and severe on such occasion. . . . All the inconveniences of the confusion is thrown upon the 622]*party who produces it, and it is for him to distinguish his own property or lose it.'"

It may be argued that, in its last analysis, that is but another way of saying that the burden of proof is on the defendant. And no doubt such, in the end, will be the practical result in many cases. But such burden is not imposed by law; nor is it so shifted until after the plaintiff has proved the existence of profits attributable to his invention, and demonstrated that they are impossible of accurate or approximate apportionment. If then the burden of separation is cast on the defendant, it is one which justly should be borne by him, as he wrought the confusion.

7. This conclusion would apparently result in a decree in favor of the appellant. But such an order, under the peculiar facts of this case, would operate to deprive the defendant of the right to a ruling on the exceptions filed to the report. The master held that the entire commercial value of the transformer was due to the invention covered by claim 4, and that therefore all the profits belonged to the Westinghouse Company. The court, on the other hand, found that the defendant's additions were not infringements, and had contributed to the profits, and that because of the failure to make a separation the plaintiff was entitled only to nominal damages. For this reason it did not specifically pass on defendant's exceptions. Other questions of law and fact involved in the accounting were not considered. Neither the court nor the master discussed the question of apportionment, and the record does not afford satisfactory data for entering a final decree. This no doubt arises from the fact that both parties relied so entirely upon their theory that the burden was on the other, that facts were not proved which might otherwise have been established. The decree is therefore reversed and the case remanded, with power to hear and determine motions to amend the pleadings, and with directions that the case be recommitted to a master 623]for a new hearing on *all the questions involved in the original reference, and, on evidence already submitted and such additional testimony as may be offered, for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

56 L. ed.

J. L. MURPHY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 623-631.)

Constitutional law — police power — prohibiting billiard or pool rooms.

1. The police power of a state justifies a municipal ordinance prohibiting the keeping of billiard or pool tables for hire or public use, but permitting hotel keepers to maintain a billiard or pool room in which their regular and registered guests may play.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 881-890, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — property rights — prohibiting billiard or pool rooms.

2. The proprietor of an existing billiard and pool room is not deprived of his property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by the passage of a municipal ordinance prohibiting the keeping of billiard or pool tables for hire or public use.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 441-489, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — prohibiting billiard or pool rooms.

3. A municipal ordinance prohibiting the keeping of billiard or pool tables for hire or public use does not deny the equal protection of the laws because hotel keepers are permitted to maintain a billiard or pool room in which their regular and registered guests may play.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 183-196, 337-339, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may assail validity.

4. Only hotel keepers having less than twenty-five bedrooms are in a position to assail the validity of a discrimination made

NOTE.—For a discussion of police power generally—see notes to State v. Marshall, 1 L.R.A. 51; Electric Improv. Co. v. San Francisco, 13 L.R.A. 131; State v. Schlemmer, 10 L.R.A. 135; and Barbier v. Connolly, 28 L. ed. U. S. 923.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 954.

in favor of larger hotels by a municipal ordinance forbidding the keeping of billiard or pool tables for hire or public use, but permitting hotel keepers having twenty-five or more bedrooms to maintain a billiard or pool room in which their regular and registered guests may play.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 204.]

Argued March 11, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, State of California, to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Recorder's Court in the City of South Pasadena, in that state, of keeping billiard or pool tables for hire or public use. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred S. Austrian argued the cause, and, with Mr. Levy Mayer, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The police power may be exercised to protect the public health, morals, safety, and the general welfare, but it is, at all times, subject to the constitutional limitations that it may not arbitrarily take away the lawful rights of a citizen.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 593, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 610, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175.

Whether a particular regulation is a valid exercise of the police power is ultimately a judicial, not a legislative, question.

Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 235, 49 L. ed. 169, 174, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 622, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 60, 49 L. ed. 937, 942, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

If a business may be so conducted as to be harmful to the public welfare, but is not necessarily so, the legislature, under its police power, may regulate, but it cannot prohibit, such business.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 431; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 593, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 610, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 60, 49 L. ed. 937, 942, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; State v. Hall, 32 N. J. L. 159; Pfingst v. Senn, 94 Ky. 556, 21 L.R.A. 569, 23 S. W. 358; State ex rel. McMonies v. McMonies, 75 Neb. 443, 106 N. W. 454; also Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 558.

If a thing is not in fact a nuisance per se, it cannot be made so by a mere declaration of the legislative will, expressed in an ordinance.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 505, 19 L. ed. 984, 986; Boyd v. Frankfort, 117 Ky. 199, 111 Am. St. Rep. 240, 77 S. W. 669; Opelousas v. Norman, 51 La. Ann. 736, 25 So. 401; Hume v. Laurel Hill Cemetery, 142 Fed. 565.

A billiard and pool room is not a nuisance per se; it is not necessarily harmful to the public welfare.

State ex rel. McMonies v. McMonies, 75 Neb. 443, 106 N. W. 454; Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199; Ex parte Meyers, 7 Cal. App. 528, 94 Pac. 870; Pfingst v. Senn, 94 Ky. 556, 21 L.R.A. 569, 23 S. W. 358; State v. Hall, 32 N. J. L. 159; State, Breninger, Prosecutor, v. Belvidere, 44 N. J. L. 350; Morgan v. State, 64 Neb. 369, 90 N. W. 108.

Even if an ordinance prohibiting all billiard and pool rooms were valid, the present ordinance is unconstitutional, in that it confers privileges and immunities on some citizens which it denies to others; and the distinctions and classification sought to be drawn by the ordinance are arbitrary, are not based on natural grounds of reasonableness or public policy, and do not tend to promote the public welfare; for (a) it permits owners and managers of hotels, and no others, to conduct pool and billiard rooms; (b) it permits guests of such hotels, and no others, to participate in the game of pool and billiards; (c) it in effect gives such hotel owners a monopoly in this regard; (d) it vests in the board of trustees of South Pasadena an arbitrary discretion, uncontrolled by any rules or conditions governing the granting or refusing of the right to conduct such business.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Connolly v. Union Sewer-Pipe

Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 563, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 112, 46 L. ed. 92, 109, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Re Yot Sang, 75 Fed. 983; Nichols v. Walter, 37 Minn. 271, 33 N. W. 800; State ex rel. McCue v. Ramsey County, 48 Minn. 236, 31 Am. St. Rep. 650, 51 N. W. 112; Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 78; Fiscal Court v. F. & A. Cox Co. 132 Ky. 738, 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 83, 117 S. W. 296; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 37, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 159, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 668, 669, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; People ex rel. Tyroler v. Warden, 157 N. Y. 116, 43 L.R.A. 264, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006; Boyd v. Frankfort, 117 Ky. 199, 111 Am. St. Rep. 240, 77 S. W. 669.

Mr. John E. Carson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lynn Helm, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Municipalities in the state of California, in the exercise of the police power conferred upon them by § 11, article 11, of the Constitution of California, may either regulate or prohibit, and under such power they may prohibit a thing which is not a nuisance per se.

Odd Fellows' Cemetery Asso. v. San Francisco, 140 Cal. 226, 73 Pac. 987; Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199; Ex parte Lacey, 108 Cal. 326, 38 L.R.A. 640, 49 Am. St. Rep. 93, 41 Pac. 411.

The conducting and keeping of billiard halls and pool rooms for hire or public use is a constant menace to the public peace and morals, and such places have a tendency to weaken and deprave public morals; and anything which is a menace to the public peace and morals, and which tends to weaken and deprave public morals, may be regulated by control and regulation, or entirely prohibited.

Goytino v. McAleer, 4 Cal. App. 655, 88 Pac. 991; Ex parte Meyers, 7 Cal. App. 528, 94 Pac. 870; Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199; Tarkio v. Cook, 120 Mo. 1, 41 Am. St. Rep. 678, 25 S. W. 202; Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589, 27 Pac. 933; Odd Fellows' Cemetery Asso. v. San Francisco, 140 Cal. 226, 73 Pac. 987; Clearwater v. Bowman, 72 Kan. 92, 82 Pac. 526; State v. Williams (State v. Thompson) 160 Mo. 333, 54 L.R.A. 950, 83 Am. St. Rep. 468, 60 S. W. 1077; Tanner v. Albion, 5 Hill, 121, 4 Am. Dec. 337; Cooley, Const. Lim. 56 L. ed.

7th ed. p. 884; Hall v. State, — Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 34 S. W. 122; Webb v. State, 17 Tex. App. 205; State v. Jackson, 39 Mo. 420; Rex v. Hall, 2 Keble, 846; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 669, 31 L. ed. 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 87, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 705; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Corinth v. Crittenden, 94 Miss. 41, 47 So. 525.

A broad distinction is recognized between useful and nonuseful business in the exercise of the police power by municipalities, and the billiard and pool-room business is not a useful business.

Freund, Pol. Power, § 59; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199; Goytino v. McAleer, 4 Cal. App. 655, 88 Pac. 991; Tarkio v. Cook, 120 Mo. 1, 41 Am. St. Rep. 678, 25 S. W. 202; Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589, 27 Pac. 933; Odd Fellows' Cemetery Asso. v. San Francisco, 140 Cal. 226, 73 Pac. 987; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Re Smith, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180.

The ordinance prohibits the public pool and billiard business, making no exceptions; hence it is not discriminative or class legislation.

Ex parte Christensen, 85 Cal. 208, 24 Pac. 747; Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199, 155 Cal. 322, 100 Pac. 1134; Ex parte Koser, 60 Cal. 177; Goytino v. McAleer, 4 Cal. 655, 88 Pac. 991; People ex rel. Schwab v. Grant, 126 N. Y. 473, 27 N. E. 964; Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 587, 70 Pac. 674; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 61 C. C. A. 91, 126 Fed. 29; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589, 27 Pac. 933; State v. Williams (State v. Thompson) 160 Mo. 333, 54 L.R.A. 950, 83 Am. St. Rep. 468, 60 S. W. 1077; Re Kelso, 147 Cal. 609, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 796, 109 Am. St. Rep. 178, 82 Pac. 241; Ex parte Haskell, 112 Cal. 412, 32 L.R.A. 527, 44 Pac. 725.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

In 1908 the city of South Pasadena, California, in pursuance of police power conferred by general law, passed an ordinance which prohibited any person from keeping or maintaining any hall or room in which billiard or pool tables were kept for hire or public use, provided it should not be construed to prevent the proprietor of a hotel using a general register for guests, and having twenty-five bedrooms and upwards, from maintaining billiard tables for the use of regular guests only of such hotel, in a room provided for that purpose.

The plaintiff in error was arrested on the 628] charge of *violating this ordinance. His application for a writ of habeas corpus was denied by the court of appeals and supreme court of the state. Ex parte Murphy, 8 Cal. App. 440, 97 Pac. 199, 155 Cal. 322, 100 Pac. 1134. Thereafter the case came on for trial in the recorder's court, where the defendant testified that, at a time when there was no ordinance on the subject, he had leased a room in the business part of the city, and at large expense fitted it up with the necessary tables and equipments; that the place was conducted in a peaceable and orderly manner; that no betting or gambling or unlawful acts of any kind were permitted; and "that there was nothing in the conduct of the business which had any tendency to immorality, or could in the least affect the health, comfort, safety, or morality of the community or those who frequented said place of business." This evidence was, on motion, excluded, and testimony of other witnesses to the same effect was rejected.

The defendant was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine, or, in default thereof, to be imprisoned in the county jail. The conviction was affirmed by the superior court of the county, the highest court to which he could appeal. The case was then brought here by writ of error, the plaintiff contending that the ordinance violated the provisions of the 14th Amendment, claiming, in the first place, that in preventing him from maintaining a billiard hall it deprived him of the right to follow an occupation that is not a nuisance per se, and which therefore could not be absolutely prohibited.

The 14th Amendment protects the citizen in his right to engage in any lawful business, but it does not prevent legislation intended to regulate useful occupations which, because of their nature or location, may prove injurious or offensive to the public. Neither does it prevent a municipality from prohibiting any business which is inherently vicious and harmful. But, between the 629] *useful business which may be regulated and the vicious business which can be prohibited lie many nonuseful occupations which may or may not be harmful to the public, according to local conditions, or the manner in which they are conducted.

Playing at billiards is a lawful amusement; and keeping a billiard hall is not, as held by the supreme court of California on plaintiff's application for habeas corpus, a nuisance per se. But it may become such; and the regulation or prohibition need not be postponed until the evil has become flagrant.

That the keeping of a billiard hall has a harmful tendency is a fact requiring no proof, and incapable of being controverted by the testimony of the plaintiff that his business was lawfully conducted, free from gaming or anything which could affect the morality of the community or of his patrons. The fact that there had been no disorder or open violation of the law does not prevent the municipal authorities from taking legislative notice of the idleness and other evils which result from the maintenance of a resort where it is the business of one to stimulate others to play beyond what is proper for legitimate recreation. The ordinance is not aimed at the game, but at the place; and where, in the exercise of the police power, the municipal authorities determine that the keeping of such resorts should be prohibited, the courts cannot go behind their finding and inquire into local conditions; or whether the defendant's hall was an orderly establishment, or had been conducted in such manner as to produce the evils sought to be prevented by the ordinance. As said in Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 429, 46 L. ed. 623, 626, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425:

"A calling may not in itself be immoral, and yet the tendency of what is generally or ordinarily or often done in pursuing that calling may be towards that which is admittedly immoral or pernicious. If, looking at all the circumstances that attend, or which may ordinarily attend, *the pur-[630 suit of a particular calling, the state thinks that certain admitted evils cannot be successfully reached unless that calling be actually prohibited, the courts cannot interfere, unless, looking through mere forms and at the substance of the matter, they can say that the statute enacted professedly to protect the public morals has no real or substantial relation to that object, but is a clear, unmistakable infringement of rights secured by the fundamental law."

Under this principle ordinances prohibiting the keeping of billiard halls have many times been sustained by the courts. Tanner v. Albion, 5 Hill, 121, 40 Am. Dec. 337; Tarkio v. Cook, 120 Mo. 1, 41 Am. St. Rep. 678, 25 S. W. 202; Clearwater v. Bowman, 72 Kan. 92, 82 Pac. 526; Corinth v. Crittenden, 94 Miss. 41, 47 So. 525; Cole v. Culbertson, 86 Neb. 160, 125 N. W. 287; Re Jones, 4 Okla. Crim. Rep. 74, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 548, 140 Am. St. Rep. 655, 109 Pac. 570.

Indeed, such regulations furnish early instances of the exercise of the police power by cities. For Lord Hale in 1672 (Rex v. Hall, 2 Keble, 846) upheld a municipal by-law against keeping bowling alleys because of the known and demoralizing tendency of such places.

Under the laws of the state, South Pasadena was authorized to pass this ordinance. After its adoption, the keeping of billiard or pool tables for hire was unlawful, and the plaintiff in error cannot be heard to complain for the money loss resulting from having invested his property in an occupation which was neither protected by the state nor the Federal Constitution, and which he was bound to know could lawfully be regulated out of existence.

There is no merit in the contention that he was denied the equal protection of the law because, while he was prevented from so doing, the owners of a certain class of hotels were permitted to keep a room in which guests might play at the game. If, as argued, there is no reasonable basis for making a distinction between hotels with twenty-five rooms and those with twenty-631four rooms or less, the plaintiff *in error is not in position to complain, because, not being the owner of one of the smaller sort, he does not suffer from the alleged discrimination.

There is no contention that these provisions permitting hotels to maintain a room in which their regular and registered guests might play were evasively inserted, as a means of permitting the proprietors to keep tables for hire. Neither is it claimed that the ordinance is being unequally enforced. On the contrary, the city trustees are bound to revoke the permit granted to hotels in case it should be made to appear that the proprietor suffered his rooms to be used for playing billiards by other than regular guests. If he allowed the tables to be used for hire, he would be guilty of a violation of the ordinance, and, of course, be subject to prosecution and punishment in the same way, and to the same extent, as the defendant.

Affirmed.

D. L. HENDERSON, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Joseph Burns, Bankrupt, Petitioner,

v.

SAMUEL MAYER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 631-640.)

Bankruptcy — preference — landlord's lien — levy.

The general lien of a landlord for rent, given by Ga. Code, § 2795, to "date from the time of the levy of a distress warrant 56 L. ed.

to enforce the same," is not created by judgment, nor obtained through legal proceedings, within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3450), § 67f, and is therefore not defeated by the provisions of that section, although the levy was made within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against the tenant.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 202-204, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 219.]

Argued April 19, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Western Division of the Southern District of Georgia, sustaining a landlord's general lien over the objection that it was obtained by legal proceedings within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against the tenant. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

Samuel Mayer owned a plantation in Dooley county, Georgia, which he rented to Joseph Burns for one year. The rent not having been paid at maturity, Mayer, on November 13, 1908, made an affidavit in conformity with the statute, and a justice of the peace thereupon issued a distress warrant, which, on the same day, was levied upon the cotton, corn, and other products of the place. The crops found on the premises being, apparently, insufficient to pay what was due, the sheriff, at the same time, levied upon other property by virtue of § 2795 of the Code of Georgia, which declares that "landlords shall have a special lien for rent on crops made on land rented from them, superior to all other liens except liens for taxes, . . . and shall also have a general lien on the property of the debtor liable to levy and sale, and such general lien shall date from the time of the levy of a distress warrant to enforce the same."

Three days after the levy a petition in bankruptcy was filed against Burns, the tenant, who was subsequently adjudged a bankrupt. The trustee, when elected, obtained possession of all the property seized by the sheriff, and subsequently sold it in the due administration of the estate. The proceeds of the cotton and corn were paid over to Mayer, it being conceded that the landlord's *special lien on the crops [633 had not been affected by the bankruptcy proceedings.

Mayer also claimed that, by virtue of his general lien, he was entitled to have the balance of the rent paid out of the proceeds arising from the sale of the other property levied on, and filed his intervention to secure such an order. The trustee's objection was sustained by the referee on the ground that the landlord's general lien was discharged because it had been "obtained by legal proceedings" or levy made three days before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. His ruling was reversed by the district court (175 Fed. 633). That judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals without opinion. The case was then brought here by writ of certiorari, granted at the instance of the trustee, who claims that under the Georgia Code the landlord had no lien on the property prior to the levy of the distress warrant, and that whatever right had been acquired by that seizure was discharged by § 67f, which declares that "all levies, judgments, attachments, or other liens obtained through legal proceedings against a person who is insolvent at any time within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him shall be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt." [30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3450.]

Mr. Orville A. Park argued the cause, and Messrs. George S. Jones, Merrel P. Callaway, Isaac Hardeman, and E. P. Johnston filed a brief for petitioner:

The Georgia law must govern the bankruptcy court sitting in that state as to what liens are recognized in Georgia and how and when they arise or are obtained.

Collier, Bankr. 8th ed. p. 741.

The landlord's general lien is created by, begins with, and is obtained through, the levy of the distress warrant, which, in Georgia, is a legal proceeding.

Hobbs v. Davis, 50 Ga. 214; Johnson v. Emanuel, 50 Ga. 590; Elam v. Hamilton, 69 Ga. 736; Re D. H. Dougherty Co. 109 Fed. 480; Re M. C. Vandiver, October 5, 1908, Fed.; Thornton v. Wilson, 55 Ga. 608; Jones v. Howard, 99 Ga. 451, 59 Am. St. Rep. 231, 27 S. E. 765. See also Morgan v. Campbell, 22 Wall. 381 22 L. ed. 796.

Mr. Arthur H. Coddington argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The statutes of Georgia relating to the security of the landlord for rent are analogous to such statutes of other states. The essential nature of all is the creation of a lien or right in the landlord, to perfect which requires certain legal proceedings for its enforcement.

2 Tiffany, Land. & T. p. 1925; Austin

v. O'Reilly 2 Woods, 670, Fed. Cas. No. 665, 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 426-432.

The right of the landlord against the goods and chattels of his tenant inheres in the relationship of the parties, and the statutes themselves, which are designed to protect, enforce, or enlarge the ancient common-law right of distraint. This lien or right under such statutes is not founded upon the legal proceedings, which are merely the machinery for its enforcement.

24 Cyc. 1249, 1250; Sims v. Price, 123 Ga. 97, 50 S. E. 961; Cohen v. Broughton, 54 Ga. 296; Tyner v. Slappey, 74 Ga. 364; Austin v. O'Reilly, 2 Woods, 670, Fed. Cas. No. 665, 2 Tiffany, Land. & T. p. 1925.

The bankrupt act preserves and gives effect to all priorities and liens which are not preferential or in fraud of the act, and which are recognized by the several states.

Collier, Bankr. 7th ed. 741, 742, 761; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 92-95, 49 L. ed. 956-959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401-408, 26 L. ed. 1075-1077; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 351-353, 50 L. ed. 782, 784-786, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Bacon v. International Bank, 131 U. S. cxxvi Appx. and 26 L. ed. 439; Longstreth v. Pennock, 20 Wall. 576, 22 L. ed. 452.

The uniform construction by the courts of § 67 (f) of the bankrupt act, which alone is relied upon in the case at bar, has been to invalidate only such "levies" and "liens" as, under the strict terms of the statute, are "obtained through legal proceedings," by persons who occupy under general law or state statutes no other relationship and have no other right than that of common creditors suing a debtor for his indebtedness. Such provisions of the act have been consistently held not to apply to those liens or rights which, although strictly they may be regarded as inchoate until perfected by enforcement, are yet regarded by the laws and policies of the states where particular rights of the landlord exist as created and obtained by the contract or relationship of the parties; and where such contract or relationship was made and begun beyond the four months period before bankruptcy, the priority given thereunder will be protected and enforced in the national courts.

Re Robinson v. Smith, 83 C. C. A. 121, 154 Fed. 343; Re West Side Paper Co. 89 C. C. A. 110, 162 Fed. 110, 15 Ann. Cas. 384; Re Hoover, 113 Fed. 136; Wilson v. Pennsylvania Trust Co. 52 C. C. A. 374, 114 Fed. 742; Re Duble. 117 Fed. 794; Re Pittsburg Drug Co. 164 Fed. 482; Re Byrne, 97 Fed. 762; Re Mitchell, 116 Fed. 87; Re Bishop, 153 Fed. 304; Malcomsson v.

Wappoo Mills, 85 Fed. 916; Re Hersey, 171 Fed. 1001; Re Bayley, 177 Fed. 522; Re Bourlier Cornice & Roofing Co. 133 Fed. 958; Re Seebold, 45 C. C. A. 117, 105 Fed. 910; Collier, Bankr. 7th ed. 742, 743; 1 Remington, Bankr. §§ 1160, 1163; Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. 368; Longstreth v. Pennock, 20 Wall. 575, 577, 22 L. ed. 451, 452; Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 554, 555, 21 L. ed. 481, 483, 484; Schall v. Kinsella, 117 La. 687, 42 So. 221; Re Wynne, Chase, 227, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; Re Trim, 2 Hughes, 355, Fed. Cas. No. 14, 174; Re Appold, 6 Phila. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 499; Re Bowne, 1 N. Y. Week. Dig. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 1,741; Re Dunham, 7 Phila. 611, Fed. Cas. No. 4,145; Re Hoagland, Fed. Cas. No. 6,545; Re Rose, Fed. Cas. No. 12,043; Lambert v. De Saussure, 4 Rich. L. 248; Austin v. O'Reilly, 2 Woods, 670, Fed. Cas. No. 665; Re Bennett, 82 C. C. A. 531, 153 Fed. 673; Central Trust Co. v. Richmond N. I. & B. R. Co. 41 L.R.A. 458, 15 C. C. A. 273, 31 U. S. App. 675, 68 Fed. 90; Re Laird, 48 C. C. A. 538, 109 Fed. 550; Re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co. 98 Fed. 592; Re Emslie, 42 C. C. A. 350, 102 Fed. 291; Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer, 53 C. C. A. 321, 115 Fed. 689; Re Kerby-Dennis Co. 36 C. C. A. 677, 95 Fed. 116; Re Lewis, 99 Fed. 935; Re Grissler, 69 C. C. A. 406, 136 Fed. 754; Re Dey, 9 Blatchf. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 3,871; Re Georgia Handle Co. 48 C. C. A. 571, 109 Fed. 632; John P. Kane Co. v. Kinney, 174 N. Y. 69, 66 N. E. 619; Loudon v. Blandford, 56 Ga. 153; Hight v. Fleming, 74 Ga. 592; Davis v. Meyers, 41 Ga. 95; Boehm v. Nelson, 61 Ga. 441; Taliaferro v. Pry, 41 Ga. 622; Crine v. Davis, 68 Ga. 138; Andrews Mfg. Co. v. Porter, 112 Ala. 384, 20 So. 475; Abraham v. Nicrosi, 87 Ala. 175, 6 So. 293; Gibson v. Gautier, 1 Mackey, 35; Harris v. Dammann, 3 Mackey, 90; Webb v. Sharp, 13 Wall. 14, 20 L. ed. 478; Fowler v. Rapley, 15 Wall. 328, 335, 21 L. ed. 35, 37; Fox v. Jones, 26 Fla. 276, 8 So. 449; Weed v. Standley, 12 Fla. 166; Finney v. Harding, 136 Ill. 580, 12 L.R.A. 605, 27 N. E. 289; Gilbert v. Greenbaum, 56 Iowa, 211, 9 N. W. 182; Scully v. Porter, 57 Kan. 324, 46 Pac. 313; Grant v. Whitwell, 9 Iowa, 152; Loth v. Carty, 85 Ky. 596, 4 S. W. 314; Carroll v. Bancker, 43 La. Ann. 1078, 10 So. 187; Bazin v. Segura, 5 La. Ann. 718; Merrick v. La Hache, 27 La. Ann. 88; Silliman v. Short, 26 La. Ann. 512; Bacon v. Howell, 60 Miss. 362; Richardson v. McLaurin, 69 Miss. 70, 12 So. 264; Paine v. Aberdeen Hotel Co. 60 Miss. 360; Rosenberg v. Shaper, 51 Tex. 138.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The provisions of the bankruptcy act, preventing an insolvent from giving or the creditor from securing preferences for pre-existing debts, apply not only to mortgages and transfers voluntarily made by the debtor, but also to those preferences which are obtained through legal proceedings, *whether the lien dates from the[637 entry of the judgment, from the attachment before judgment, or, as in some states, from the levy of execution after judgment. But the statute was not intended to lessen rights which already existed, nor to defeat those inchoate liens given by statute, of which all creditors were bound to take notice, and subject to which they are presumed to have contracted when they dealt with the insolvent.

Liens in favor of laborers, mechanics, and contractors are of this character; and although they may be perfected by record or foreclosure within four months of the bankruptcy, they are not created by judgments, nor are they treated as having been "obtained through legal proceedings," even when it is necessary to enforce them by some form of legal proceeding. The statutes of the various states differ as to the time when such liens attach, and also as to the property they cover. They may bind only what the plaintiff has improved or constructed; or they may extend to all the chattels of the debtor, or "all the property involved in the business." Re Bennett, 82 C. C. A. 531, 153 Fed. 673.

In some cases the lien dates from commencement of the work, or from the completion of the contract. In others, prior to levy they are referred to as being dormant or inchoate liens, or as "a right to a lien." Re Bennett, 82 C. C. A. 531, 153 Fed. 677; Re Laird, 48 C. C. A. 538, 109 Fed. 554. But the courts, dealing specially with bankruptcy matters, have almost uniformly held that these statutory preferences are not obtained through legal proceedings, and therefore are not defeated by § 67f, even where the registration, foreclosure, or levy necessary to their completion or enforcement was within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

Similar rulings have been made where the landlord has only a common-law right of distress. Re West Side Paper Co. 89 C. C. A. 110, 162 Fed. 110, 15 Ann. Cas. 384. This is often referred to as a lien, *but[638 it is "only in the nature of security." 3 Bl. Com. 18. The pledge, or quasi pledge, which the landlord is said to have, is, at most, only a power to seize chattels found on the rented premises. These he could take into possession and hold until the rent was paid. Doe ex dem. Gladney v. Deavors, 11 Ga. 84. But before the distraint the landlord at common law has "no lien on any particular portion of the goods, and is only an ordinary creditor, except that he has the right of distress by reason of which he may place himself in a better position." Sutton v. Rees, 9 Jur. N. S. 456, 1 New Reports, 464, 8 L. T. N. S. 343, 11 Week. Rep. 413. A right fully as great is created by the Georgia statute here in question. For while giving the owners of agricultural lands a special lien on the crops, there was no intention to deprive the proprietor of urban and other real estate of the lien for rent which there, as in other states, is treated as an incident growing out of the relation of landlord and tenant.

The Code (§ 2787) expressly "establishes liens in favor of landlords." It (§ 3124) gives them "power to distrain for rent as soon as the same is due." It declares (§ 2795) that landlords "shall have a general lien on the property of the tenant, liable to levy and sale . . . which dates from the levy of the distress warrant to enforce the same." It is true that prior to levy it covers no specific property, and attaches only to what is seized under the distress warrant issued to enforce the lien given by statute. But in this respect it is the full equivalent of a common-law distress—the lien of which is held not to be discharged by § 67f. Re West Side Paper Co. supra; Austin v. O'Reilly, 2 Woods. 670, Fed. Cas. No. 665.

The fact that the warrant could be levied upon property which had never been on the rented premises does not change the nature of the landlord's right, though it may increase the extent of his security. The statutory restrictions as to date, rank, and priority may be important in a controversy with 639] other lienholders, but was wholly *immaterial in this contest between the landlord and trustee, where the latter was only representing general creditors. As against them the landlord had, from the beginning of the tenancy, the right to a statutory lien, which had completely ripened and attached before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The priority arising from the levy of the distress warrant was not secured because Mayer had been first in a race of diligence, but was given by law because of the nature of the claim and the relation between himself as landlord and Burns as tenant. In issuing the distress warrant the justice acted ministerially. Savage v. Oliver, 110 Ga. 638, 36 S. E. 54. The sheriff was not required to return it to any court, and no judicial hearing or action was necessary to authorize him to sell for the purpose of realizing funds with which to pay the rent. Such a lien was not created by a judgment nor "obtained through legal proceedings."

Decisions to the same effect were made under the bankruptcy act of 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 522, § 14, chap. 176), which dissolved attachments or mesne process within four months prior to the filing of the petition. In Austin v. O'Reilly, supra, decided in 1875, it appeared that in Mississippi the landlord had no lien, but, as in Georgia, was authorized to seize (but by attachment) the tenant's goods wherever found. Justice Bradley, presiding at circuit, said that the landlord's right to a distress at common law was not a strict lien, but "being commonly called a lien, and being a peculiar right in the nature of a lien, . . . the Supreme Court of the United States, and most of the district and circuit courts, have regarded it as fairly to be classed as a lien, within the true intent and meaning of the bankrupt act," and that the statutory attachment being in the nature of a common-law distress was not nullified or discharged by the bankruptcy proceedings.

There is nothing in the act of 1898 opposed to this conclusion. On the contrary, its general provisions indicate a *pur-[640 pose to continue the same policy, and an intent, as against general creditors, to preserve rights like those given by the Georgia statute to landlords, even though the lien was enforced and attached by levy of a distress warrant within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

Affirmed.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 640-650.)

Postoffice — railway mail service — regulation.

1. The authority of the Postmaster General under the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1212, chap. 2513, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1148), to name any rate for additional compensation for railway postoffice car service not exceeding the statutory maximum, which varies in proportion to the length of the car, extends to fixing the same price for the longer as for the shorter cars, and to abolishing "full lines" or establishing "half lines," and adjusting the rates accordingly.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, IV., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Postoffice — railway mail service — compensation — implied contract.

2. The United States is not liable as on an implied contract to pay the reasonable value of the railway postoffice car service furnished and actually used by the Postoffice Department, consisting of "full lines" of cars 60 feet in length, where the railway company, being under no obligation to carry the mails or to supply postoffice cars, chose to furnish such service after being informed that the Department only needed and would only pay for 50-foot cars on the return trip, and had established "half lines" consisting of 60-foot cars going and 50-foot cars returning, instead of exercising its right to decline to supply the service on the conditions named.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, IV., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 716.]

Argued April 30, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas to review a judgment dismissing the complaint in a suit to recover the reasonable value of railway postoffice car service furnished to, and actually used by, the Postoffice Department. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert Dunlap argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William R. Smith, Lee F. English, and James L. Coleman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The parties were agreed upon the value of 60-foot postal car lines as the maximum rate prescribed by Congress, and as such car lines were in fact used by the government, it must be held as having agreed to pay that value.

Thompson v. Sanborn, 52 Mich. 141, 17 N. W. 730; Griffin v. Knisely, 75 Ill. 417; Conway v. Starkweather, 1 Denio, 113.

The half lines R. P. O. cars order made by the Postmaster General, effective July 23, 1907, was made without authority, is evidently contrary to the act of Congress, is oppressive and unreasonable, and therefore invalid.

Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 467, 27 L. ed. 267, 268, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Bruhl Bros. v. Wilson, 123 Fed. 958; Hoover v. Salling, 49 C. C. A. 26, 110 Fed. 43; United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. 199 U. S. 422, 423, 50 L. ed. 254, 255, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69; United States v. Bostwick, 94 U. S. 66, 24 L. ed. 66; United States v. Symonds, 120 U. S. 46, 48, 49, 30 L. ed. 557, 558, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414; United States v. Barnette, 165 U. S. 174, 178, 179, 41 L. ed. 675-677, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; 2 Willoughby, Const. p. 1326.

56 L. ed.

If there was no express agreement fixing the price for each car line, yet, inasmuch as the government in fact accepted and used 60-foot cars for the round trips, it was bound to pay the reasonable value thereof, and the record shows the government to have admitted such value of such car line to be the maximum fixed by Congress, and the railway company was entitled to demand and receive that maximum unless and until it agreed to lease its cars for a less sum, which was not either claimed or shown.

Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. v. Brown, L. R. 8 App. Cas. 715, 53 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 124, 50 L. T. N. S. 281, 32 Week. Rep. 207, 48 J. P. 388; Great Western R. Co. v. McCarthy, L. R. 12 App. Cas. 235, 56 L. J. P. C. N. S. 33, 56 L. T. N. S. 582, 35 Week. Rep. 429, 51 J. P. 532; Beals v. Amador County, 35 Cal. 624; Archibald v. Thomas, 3 Cow. 289; Horton v. Cooley, 135 Mass. 589; Vail v. Jersey Little Falls Mfg. Co. 32 Barb. 564; Sidener v. Fetter, 19 Ind. 310; Smithmeyer v. United States, 147 U. S. 343, 359, 360, 37 L. ed. 197, 201, 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; The Albert Dumois, 177 U. S. 255, 44 L. ed. 760, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Wolcott v. Yeager, 11 Ind. 87.

On quantum meruit, where the contract has been varied or departed from by the parties during performance, such contract is admissible as containing admission of the standard of value, etc.

Reynolds v. Jourdan, 6 Cal. 109; Castagnino v. Balletta, 82 Cal. 250, 23 Pac. 127; Shirk v. Brookfield, 77 App. Div. 295, 79 N. Y. Supp. 225; Boyd v. Vale, 84 App. Div. 414, 82 N. Y. Supp. 932; Schulze v. Farrell, 142 App. Div. 13, 126 N. Y. Supp. 678.

Messrs. Robert Dunlap, William R. Smith, and Gardiner Lathrop filed a brief in opposition to the motion to dismiss the writ of error.

Mr. Joseph Stewart argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Thompson and Mr. S. S. Ashbaugh, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The United States is the employer, and, like any other employer, has the right to state the terms upon which the employment shall arise. Where the railroad company accepts the terms fixed by the United States, whether by express words or by acquiescence and performance, an agreement is effected upon the terms proffered by the government, and the railroad company cannot be heard to urge a contract with other and different terms of its own making.

Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 65 L.R.A.

397, 54 C. C. A. 608, 117 Fed. 434; Texas & P. R. Co. v. United States, 28 Ct. Cl. 379; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 350.

The orders of the Postmaster General and the business of carrying the mails are subject to the statutes and regulations of the Department, which, with the usual and ordinary customs and practices of the Department in relation to railroads and mail service, constitute the terms of the contract.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 350.

The plaintiff was under no obligation to the government to carry the mails or furnish the space in cars for railway postoffice service, but was free to carry the mails or to decline to carry them, or to contract with the government for the performance of such services, or to decline to contract.

Eastern R. Co. v. United States, 129 U. S. 391, 32 L. ed. 730, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. United States, supra.

The Postmaster General had power to make the order complained of, authorizing "half car lines," and subsequently to fix the pay for the railway postoffice car service at a rate below the maximum provided by law for full lines of railway postoffice cars.

Eastern R. Co. v. United States, 20 Ct. Cl. 23, affirmed in 129 U. S. 391, 32 L. ed. 730, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 350; Texas & P. R. Co. v. United States, 28 Ct. Cl. 379.

The orders were offers of business, which were, in effect, accepted by furnishing the cars and performing the service.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. United States, 15 Ct. Cl. 232; Eastern R. Co. v. United States, 20 Ct. Cl. 23, 129 U. S. 391, 32 L. ed. 730, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 350; Texas & P. R. Co. v. United States, 28 Ct. Cl. 379.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson and Mr. P. M. Cox filed a brief in support of the motion to dismiss the writ of error.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad had a four-year contract with the Postoffice Department to carry *the mail between Chicago and Kansas City. Payment was made on the basis of weight hauled and the speed with which the service was performed. The company also furnished sufficient "railway postoffice cars," 60 feet in length, to make three round trips each twenty-four hours. This constituted three "car lines," for which the plaintiff received the maximum additional compensation then allowed by Rev. Stat. § 4004 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2721), under which the pay varied in proportion to the length of the car.

This contract was to expire June 30, 1907, by limitation; and, with a view of obtaining data, and proposing terms for a new arrangement to begin July 1st, 1907, the postal authorities, in February, mailed to the company a "Distance Circular," which, among other things, stated that the company was "to accept and perform mail service under the conditions prescribed by law and the regulations of the Department." The form was filled out and signed by an agent of the company. He, however, noted exceptions to certain postal orders previously promulgated, and "future regulations which, in the company's opinion, might be unjust or unfairly reduce its compensation for services." The circular, with these objections, was not received by the Department until July 24th, but the company, in the meantime, and without any express contract, continued to carry the mails and to furnish the three car lines. Payment therefor was made at the maximum rate allowed by the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1212, chap. 2513, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1148), which declared:

"Additional pay allowed for every line comprising a daily trip each way of railway postoffice cars shall be at a rate not exceeding $25 per mile per annum for cars forty feet in length . . . $32.50 per mile per annum for fifty-foot cars, and $40 per mile per annum for cars fifty-five feet or more in length."

The reports and returns as to the amount of mail carried *over plaintiff's road [648 during the spring of 1907 indicated that the quantity of east-bound matter was less than that going west from Chicago to Kansas City. Accordingly the Department, on July 18, 1907, "authorized 'three half lines' R. P. O. cars 50 feet in length . . . to supersede three 'half lines' of such cars 60 feet in length over route 135,098, Chicago to Kansas City." As the distance between the two cities was about 450 miles this change would largely reduce the rate of pay, and the company at once objected, claiming in the lengthy correspondence and subsequent suit which followed, that the statute did not authorize "half car lines;" that the order would require the company to furnish 60-foot cars in one direction and 50-foot cars on the return, thus involving an empty haul one way, or forcing the company to furnish 60-foot cars both ways, without corresponding or adequate compensation.

The Department, on the other hand, insisted that under the statute, regulations, and long-continued practice it had the right to establish "half lines;" that "no contract would be made with any railroad by which it could be excepted from the postal laws and regulations," and that compensation would only be made in accordance with the orders of the Department establishing the three half lines.

The warrant in settlement of the September quarter was made out on this basis. It was accepted by the Company, but under protest. In answer the Department again repeated the statement that any service performed by the company must be with the distinct understanding that payment was to be made in accordance with the orders for space, facilities, and car service required by the postal authorities. The plaintiff continued to protest and to furnish the three full lines. They were daily used by the Department for postal purposes, but payment was made only for half lines.

The plaintiff thereupon brought suit, under the Tucker Act [24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752], claiming that even though there was no express agreement, it was entitled, as under an implied contract, to recover the reasonable value of the three car lines authorized by law, furnished by the company, and actually used by the Postoffice Department. This contention should have been sustained but for the fact that neither party was bound to continue the indefinite relation begun July 1, 1907, and under which the rights and liabilities of each arose, from day to day, as the facilities were furnished by the one and used by the other. Whatever may be the rule between private parties where both are demanding performance, and each is insisting on different terms (Thompson v. Sanborn, 52 Mich. 141, 17 N. W. 730; Jenkins v. National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. 111 Ga. 734, 36 S. E. 945), no such question arises in a controversy like this between the railroad on the one hand and the postoffice on the other. For public policy requires that the mail should be carried subject to postal regulations, and that the Department, and not the railroad, should, in the absence of a contract, determine what service was needed and under what conditions it should be performed. The company, in carrying the mails, was not hauling freight, nor was it acting as a common carrier, with corresponding rights and liabilities, but in this respect it was serving as an agency of government, and as much subject to the laws and regulations as every other branch of the Postoffice.

The statute defined a car line, but did not fix the compensation. It left that to be determined by the Postmaster General, who could have named any rate, not to exceed the statutory maximum. By virtue of that authority he could have made the same price for 60-foot cars as for 50-foot cars, and, as the greater includes the less, he could abolish full lines, or establish "half lines," and adjust the rates accordingly. Such had been the practice before the passage of the act of 1907, and there is nothing in its language indicating any intent to change the construction previously given Rev. Stat. § 4004, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2721.

The railroad, however, was not bound to furnish "half lines" nor to accept the terms named by the Postmaster General. For Congress had not legislated so as to require compulsory service, at adequate compensation, to be judicially determined, or in a method provided by statute. And as the plaintiff's road between Chicago and Kansas City had not been aided by a land grant, it was, under existing law, not obliged to carry the mails when tendered, nor to supply R. P. O. cars when demanded. Eastern R. Co. v. United States, 129 U. S. 395, 396, 32 L. ed. 731, 732, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306. It may have been impracticable to furnish long cars one way and short ones the other. But there was in that fact no hardship imposed by law. The company could have protected itself against onerous terms or inadequate compensation by refusing to supply the facilities on the conditions named by the Department. But if, instead of availing itself of that right, it preferred to furnish 60-foot cars after having been informed that the Department only needed and would only pay for those 50 feet in length, the company cannot recover for more than the Department ordered; nor, under the statute, can it demand compensation for full lines, when the Postmaster General had established "half lines" consisting of cars of one length going and of another returning on the route between Chicago and Kansas City.

There was no error in dismissing the complaint, and the judgment is affirmed.

651] *THOMAS H. PICKFORD and John H. Walter, Appts.,
v.
HENRY M. TALBOTT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 651-662.)

Injunction — against judgment — newly discovered evidence.

1. A court of equity will not restrain the enforcement of a judgment at law on a showing that by reason of some newly discovered evidence pertaining to an issue in the case, or because of some newly discovered fact that might have been put in issue, the defeated party would probably have a better prospect of success on a retrial. He must show something to render it manifestly unconscionable for his successful adversary to enforce the judgment.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On general equitable jurisdiction in regard to injunctions against judgments—see notes to Jarrett v. Goodnow, 32 L.R.A. 321, and Davis v. Tileston, 12 L. ed. U. S. 366.

On injunction against judgment for matters arising subsequently to its rendition—see note to Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Wells, 30 L.R.A. 560.

On injunctions against judgments for defenses existing prior to their rendition—see note to Norwegian Plow Co. v. Bollman, 31 L.R.A. 747.

On loss of defenses by reason of negligence or unskilfulness of attorney as ground for enjoining judgment—see note to Donovan v. Miller, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 524.

Injunction against judgment for newly discovered evidence.

An injunction will be granted against a judgment at law on the ground of newly discovered evidence which is material, and which could not have been had on the trial at law by the use of diligence. Billups v. Sears, 5 Gratt. 31, 50 Am. Dec. 105; Rust v. Ware, 6 Gratt. 50, 52 Am. Dec. 100; Winthrop v. Lane, 3 Desauss. Eq. 310; Venum v. Davis, 35 Ill. 568.

An injunction will be granted, on the discovery after judgment that a partnership note sued upon was not one for which the defendant was liable, because not given by firm during the time of partnership, where complainant had used due diligence in making his defense, and obtained evidence since the trial that he was in no way responsible for its payment. Venum v. Davis, 35 Ill. 568.

In Baltzell v. Randolph, 9 Fla. 366, where a judgment was taken against complainant on a note made in the firm name long after he had left the firm, and he was unable to make the defense for the reason that the party who had executed the note was sick, and no information could be had because the clerk of the firm had left for parts unknown, and a continuance was prevented for the same reason, because it was not known what could be proved, and in-

Injunction — against judgment — newly discovered evidence.

2. The enforcement of a judgment for damages recovered in an action of libel will not be restrained in equity on the ground of newly discovered evidence as to the truth of the libel which not only does not conclusively establish that fact, but does not render it clear beyond a reasonable doubt that such evidence would produce a different verdict on a retrial.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — burden of proof — establishing allegations — diligence.

3. Complainants urging newly discovered evidence as to the truth of a libel as a ground for enjoining the enforcement of a judgment for damages recovered in an action for the libel, in which justification was not pleaded, must prove that their failure junction against an execution and proceedings on the judgment, was allowed. Complainant in this case had acted under a delusion, until a short time before the term of court at which the judgment was rendered, that his former partner would attend to the matter, and being then powerless to defend himself, withdrew his pleas and suffered judgment by default.

Injunctive relief will be granted where a corporation was in ignorance of its equitable title to lands recovered from it in ejectment, and had used diligence to ascertain the fact, and failed to discover the same until after the expiration of the time for a new trial. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Hay, 119 Ill. 493, 507, 10 N. E. 29, 34.

And such relief will be granted on discovery after judgment of defects of title, where the judgment was obtained on purchase-money notes, and complainant had been deceived by false representations of the vendor. Fitch v. Polke, 7 Blackf. 564.

Injunctive relief will be granted on a discovery that the plaintiff had obtained a decree for a greater sum than he was entitled to, of which he had knowledge, and of which complainant was ignorant. Basye v. Beard, 12 B. Mon. 581.

A judgment in covenant obtained on a tender of "M. & N.'s" notes was enjoined where the notes were signed by N. and indorsed by M., and therefore not the notes of "M. and N.," and M. had become bankrupt, which was not known at the time of the judgment. Armstrong v. Hickman, 6 Munf. 287.

An injunction will be granted on the ground of fraud, where a note indorsed for accommodation, to be used in a particular manner, was given to another party, subject to equities, and the note was used in a different manner, and the fraud was not known at the time of judgment, as the complainant believed the note to have been properly used. Hickerson v. Raiguel, 2 Heisk. 329.

Injunctive relief will be granted for new material evidence consisting of the confessions of a party, deliberately and volunto discover such evidence and plead it by way of defense was not attributable to their own want of diligence, where the answer calls for strict proof of the averments of the bill that they made diligent but unsuccessful efforts to discover such evidence both before and after the filing of their plea.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against judgment — new defense.

4. A defense in an action at law is not to be deemed newly discovered or lost by accident or mistake, for the purpose of invoking equitable relief against the enforcement of the judgment, if such defense was or should have been within the knowledge of the party when called upon for his defense in the action.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

tarily made, repeated at different times and to different persons, and where the evidence at the trial on which the judgment was obtained was of the same character, consisting principally of declarations. Colyer v. Langford, 1 A. K. Marsh. 237.

New evidence discovered after judgment—such as that a surety was released by an extension—will entitle to relief against the same where it could not have been discovered by due diligence. Cox v. Mobile & G. R. Co. 44 Ala. 611.

An affidavit of a witness that he had given testimony erroneously by mistake will authorize an injunction on the ground of accident, against proceedings on a judgment, where a sudden and unlooked-for adjournment of the court prevented a motion for a new trial. Tarver v. McKay, 15 Ga. 550.

A judgment will be enjoined on the discovery of evidence showing payment, where such evidence could not have been discovered by the use of diligence. Winehester v. Jackson, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 305; Hubbard v. Hobson, Breese (Ill.) 147; Harvey v. Seashol, 4 W. Va. 115; Wales v. Bank of Michigan, Harr. Ch. (Mich.) 308; Pearce v. Chastain, 3 Ga. 226, 46 Am. Dec. 423; McGehee v. Gold, 68 Ill. 215.

This is true where complainant was only surety (McGehee v. Gold, 68 Ill. 215); or an administrator (Terrill v. Southall, 3 Bibb, 458).

And where the evidence of payment through an agent was destroyed by fire, and could not be discovered with reasonable diligence until after the judgment at law, an injunction against proceedings on the judgment should be granted. Brown v. Luehrs, 79 Ill. 575.

So, in Price v. Fuqua, 4 Munf. 68, where an executor found evidence of a receipt against the debt after the judgment, and had failed to make a defense of the statute of limitations under the mistake of counsel, and there was misconduct of the jury, an injunction was granted.

And in Gainsborough v. Gifford, 2 P. Wms. 424, it was said that if, after a judgment, Injunction — against judgment — new defense.

5. Newly discovered evidence of the truth of a libel will not justify equitable relief against the enforcement of a judgment for damages recovered in the libel action, on the theory that the failure to plead justification was through accident or mistake, where that defense was considered by the defendants and their counsel and deliberately and advisedly rejected, first, because it could not be sustained, and second, because a failure to sustain it would probably result in increasing the damages.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 512.]

Argued April 29, 1912. Decided June 7, 1912.

ment, a receipt is found under the plaintiff's own hand for the debt, equity will grant relief.

The discovery after judgment that the plaintiff knew that a blank note was filed in with too large an amount, and that the bank suing as usee had only a nominal interest, but the suit was in pursuance of a conspiracy to cut off defenses, will authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment, where the same could not have been discovered by the use of diligence. Goad v. Hart, 8 Smedes & M. 787.

And a judgment in favor of bank B on a note payable to bank A will be enjoined where it is discovered after judgment that bank B did not own the note or authorize the suit, and that the same was a fraudulent transaction to prevent a set-off against bank A in favor of the defendant. Stovall v. Northern Bank, 5 Smedes & M. 17.

The discovery of a lost agreement after judgment at law by which the defendant can establish the defense of fraud in the consideration, which was not made at law, justifies injunctive relief against the judgment, where complainant has not been negligent, and alleges that the indorsee of a note in whose favor the judgment was rendered took it with notice of fraud. Vatthir v. Zane, 6 Gratt. 246.

And newly discovered evidence of the existence of a contract in the possession of adverse parties, which was concealed by them during the trial, and which would have changed the result, will authorize an injunction against the judgment, where the complainant has not been guilty of negligence, although such facts might possibly have been elicited on cross-examination. Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Titus, 28 N. J. Eq. 269, reversing 27 N. J. Eq. 102.

So, where defense was not made at law because it was believed that the bill upon which suit was brought was a genuine one, and after time for a new trial had passed it was discovered that it was a forged one, relief was granted by injunction against the judgment. Ferrell v. Allen, 5 W. Va. 43.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, enjoining the enforcement of a judgment for damages recovered in an action for libel, and remanded the cause with directions to dismiss the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 36 App. D. C. 289.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry E. Davis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley, filed a brief for appellants:

Where a defendant is prevented by fraud or accident, unminged with any fault or negligence in himself, from availing himself of a proper defense, he will be justified in applying to a court of chancery for relief.

Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 336, 3 L. ed. 363; Williams v. Lee, 3 Atk. 223; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Fields, 2 Story, 72, Fed. Cas. No. 10,406; Gardiner v. Hardey, 12 Gill. & J. 365; Fitch v. Polke, 7 Blackf. 564; Reed v. Harvey, 23 Ark. 44; Iglehart v. Lee, 4 Md. Ch. 514; Taylor v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 86 Tenn. 228, 6 S. W. 393; Powers v. Butler, 4 N. J. Eq. 471; Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 203 U. S. 64, 51 L. ed. 91, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19.

As distinguished from fraud, accident, within the meaning of equity, is a wholly different thing, and is not easily to be defined; largely for the reason that, as in the case of fraud in general, equity hesi-

Discovery of new material evidence after a sentence in admiralty court will authorize an injunction against the judgment, when, at the time of trial, such evidence could not have been received according to the practice in that court, and the judgment was unjust. Jarvis v. Chandler, 1 Turn. & R. 319.

In Texas & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 91 Ark. 362, 121 S. W. 282, the court, in denying a motion for a new trial, based upon newly discovered evidence which was not relevant to any issue in the original case, and would therefore not have been admissible at the trial without an amendment of the pleadings, said that the defendant was not without remedy, but had his remedy in equity.

The cases all being very insistent upon the exercise of due diligence to discover the evidence in time for use at the trial, and usually attaching the other conditions that the judgment attacked be wrong or unjust, and that the newly discovered evidence be such as will change the result, it naturally follows that where some or all of these conditions are not fulfilled, relief will be refused.

An injunction will not be granted for newly discovered evidence unless it is shown that the judgment is wrong, that the evidence has been discovered since the trial, that diligence has been used, and that such new evidence will make a different result. Holmes v. Stateler, 57 Ill. 209.

In order to enjoin a judgment on the ground of new evidence, the evidence should be stated, must be material, must be such as would change the result, and complainant must have been diligent. Smith v. McLain, 11 W. Va. 654; Burnley v. Rice, 21 Tex. 171; Cadwalader v. Atchison, 1 Mo. 659.

Newly discovered evidence will not furnish ground for enjoining the enforcement of a judgment in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, or other adventitious circumstances preventing the introduction of such evidence at the trial. Farmers' & S. Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Pride-more, 55 W. Va. 451, 47 S. E. 258.

Newly discovered evidence that would not have changed the result is not ground for enjoining the judgment. Graham v. Roberts, 1 Head, 56; Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. 376.

The collection of a judgment on a promissory note should not be enjoined for newly discovered evidence of payment which is insufficient to sustain that plea. Ludington v. Handley, 7 W. Va. 269.

Newly discovered evidence which is quite generally impeaching, cumulative, and inconclusive in character, is insufficient to justify injunctive relief against a judgment entered after a trial at law, and in the regular course of judicial procedure. Sargent Co. v. Ives, 156 Ill. App. 446.

When additional evidence was discovered and could not be used in a court at law by obtaining a new trial, an injunction was refused, where it was not shown that such evidence was material, relevant, and not cumulative. Hannon v. Maxwell, 31 N. J. Eq. 318.

In Bloss v. Hull, 27 W. Va. 503, it was said that an injunction will not be granted for newly discovered evidence, when it goes merely to impeach the testimony of a witness, to let in cumulative evidence as to matter which was principally controverted at the former trial; but if the newly discovered evidence is sufficient utterly to destroy the former testimony by showing it was false, or founded on perjury, then a new trial will be granted.

In order to obtain an injunction against a judgment on the ground of newly discovered evidence, the complainant must show that he has not been guilty of laches in making the discovery; that the evidence is material to the issue; that it is not merely cumulative, or in addition to other evidence of like import, heard at the trial. Harnsbarger v. Kinney, 13 Gratt. 511; Akers v. Akers, 83 Va. 633, 8 S. E. 260; Forsythe v. McCreight, 10 Rich. Eq. 308.

Notes and policies against plaintiff, found among the papers of a debtor after a judgment rendered against his administrator, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, where such debts were paid by decedent out of money in his tates to hamper itself by a definition of a head of its jurisdiction so varying, elastic, and salutary.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 836.

Every attempt to define "accident" in its judicial acceptation, even in modern times, has failed.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 277, note 2, p. 278 and notes.

A good definition is indicated in the statement that the word ordinarily imports something outside of a party's own control, or, at least, something which a reasonably prudent man would not be expected to guard against or to provide for.

Pickering v. Cassidy, 93 Me. 139, 44 Atl. 683.

hands belonging to plaintiff, and not with his own money. Segond v. Remy, 3 La. Ann. 126.

And the discovery of proposals for marriage settlement after a decree will not authorize enjoining the decree on the ground of reformation of settlement on account of mistake, where complainant is not entitled to such relief on the evidence. Breadalbane v. Chandos, 2 Myl. & C. 711, 7 L. J. Ch. N. S. 28, 4 Clark & F. 43.

Newly discovered evidence is not of itself sufficient to enjoin a judgment and execution sale, where such matters were in issue and determined by the trial court and have become res judicata. Gusman v. DePoret, 33 La. Ann. 333.

A bill of complaint for an injunction against a judgment on the ground of newly discovered evidence must set forth the evidence in the bill, so that its materiality may be seen. Miller v. McGuire, Morris (Iowa) 150.

And such bill must be supported by the affidavits of the witnesses and the complainant must have used diligence. Fuller v. Little 69 Ill. 229.

To justify enjoining the collection of a judgment for newly discovered evidence it must appear to the court that all proper diligence has been employed by the party seeking injunctive relief to discover or obtain the evidence upon which he now relies. Ludington v. Handley, 7 W. Va. 269.

And an injunction will not be granted if the newly discovered evidence is not material, or complainant has not exercised diligence. Ibid.; Titcomb v. Potter, 11 Me. 218; Holmes v. Stater, 57 Ill. 209; Hill v. Harris, 42 Ga. 412; Peace v. Nailing, 16 N. C. (1 Dev. Eq.) 289; Cunningham v. Buchanan, 10 Grant, Ch. (U. C.) 523; Levan v. Patton, 2 Heisk. 108; Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Erb, 16 W. N. C. 113.

And an injunction will not be granted where complainant is guilty of negligence, and does not show that the evidence could not have been discovered by the use of diligence. Greenfield v. Frierson, 7 Heisk. 633; Fuller v. Little, 69 Ill. 229; Kirby v. Pascault, 53 Md. 531; Munn v. Worrall, 16 56 L. ed.

Another definition is that, though not necessarily synonymous with surprise when used as a ground of a new trial, accident has substantially the same meaning in legal practice, as each is used to denote some condition or situation in which a party to a cause is unexpectedly placed, to his injury, without any fault or neglect of his own, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.

McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 229, 23 Pac. 312; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N. W. 849.

Mr. John Ridout argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

As matter of law and under settled legal principles the court below ought not to have

Barb. 221; Glover v. Hedges, 1 N. J. Eq. 113; Faulkner v. Harwood, 6 Rand. (Va.) 125; Hevener v. McClung, 22 W. Va. 81; De Lima v. Glassell, 4 Hen. & M. 369; Cantev v. Blair, 1 Rich. Eq. 41.

The same was held on the discovery of evidence showing payment of the debt (Semple v. McGatagan, 10 Smedes & M. 98; Slack v. Wood, 9 Gratt. 40; Floyd v. Jayne, 6 Johns. Ch. 479); or showing that the consideration was contrary to public policy (Green v. Robinson, 5 How. [Miss.] 80).

A judgment for medical services should not be enjoined for newly discovered evidence consisting of the opinions of physicians to the effect that the plaintiff was entirely mistaken in his diagnosis of the disease from which the defendant was suffering, without showing any reasons why such physicians were not consulted at an earlier period, since an ordinary degree of diligence would have brought such opinions to light before the trial quite as well as after. Lee v. Hooker, 7 Smedes & M. 601.

A judgment in ejectment, founded upon a deed executed pursuant to a sale and foreclosure, will not be enjoined because of the subsequent discovery that the sale was made without the requisite publication of notice, since, even if this could be regarded as new matter, the exercise of anything like a reasonable degree of diligence would have accomplished the discovery in time for the original trial. Peyton v. Kruger, 77 Ind. 486. The court said: The appellant and his counsel had no right to rest upon a presumption that the sale was regular. The appellee's action depended entirely on the regularity of that sale, and the bringing of the action put or ought to have put the plaintiff on immediate inquiry into every possible ground for challenging the validity of the conveyance; and the failure to make the inquiry, whether attributable to himself or another, can be characterized only as culpable carelessness. Equity affords no relief in such cases.

The failure to use due diligence was held fatal in Leggett v. Morris, 6 Smedes & M. 723, where the note sued on was executed by complainant's partner after a settleenjoined the collection of a judgment approved by three courts.

Maryland Steel Co. v. Marney, 91 Md. 360, 46 Atl. 1077; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93; Pico v. Cohn, 91 Cal. 129, 13 L.R.A. 336, 25 Am. St. Rep. 159, 25 Pac. 970, 27 Pac. 537; New York v. Brady, 115 N. Y. 599, 22 N. E. 237.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an equity action, brought by the appellants against the appellee and others, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to obtain an injunction restraining the enforcement of a judgment theretofore recovered by the appellee against the appellants in an action for libel. That action was on the law side of the supreme court of the District, and resulted in a verdict and judgment for $8,500 damages, which on review was affirmed by the court of appeals (28 App. D. C. 498), and by this court (211 U. S. 199, 53 L. ed. 146, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75).

The present action was commenced after the final affirmance of the judgment at law. Upon the filing of the bill of complaint herein, with accompanying exhibits, the court made a temporary restraining order. This was continued until the final hearing, and that hearing resulted in a decree granting a perpetual injunction against the enforcement of the judgment. The defendants in the equity action, other than the present appellee, were joined for reasons not now material. He alone appealed from the final decree to the court of appeals of the District and dissolution, and fraudulently antedated.

An injunction will not be allowed against a judgment in trespass, obtained by a fraudulent grantee, for levying upon his property, where the fraud in his obtaining title had been tried at law, and there is no showing but what the newly discovered evidence could have been obtained by due diligence. Bishop v. Duncan, 3 Dana, 15.

Where a party has reason to expect that evidence on behalf of the issue will be offered, he cannot obtain an injunction on the ground of surprise, and if he was not ready for a trial, or was surprised, he should have moved for a new trial; and the fact that he took an appeal, and was disappointed that evidence was not permitted on the appeal, will not justify an injunction, as ignorance or mistake of law will not excuse a party in a case like this, nor tend to show either fraud or surprise on the testimony which had already been heard. Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. 376.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground of newly discovered evidence, or of a defense of which trict, which reversed the decree, and ordered the cause to be remanded to the court below, with direction to dismiss the bill of complaint (36 App. D. C. 289). From the decree of reversal Pickford and Walter have appealed to this court, thus presenting for our decision the question whether, upon the pleadings and proofs, they are entitled to an injunction restraining the enforcement of Talbott's judgment against them.

*The equitable jurisdiction is invoked upon the ground that after the conclusion of the litigation at law the appellants discovered certain evidence which, if known at the time, might and would have enabled them to make a different defense in the court of law, and which it is alleged would assuredly have led to a different result there; it being insisted that the appellants were not at fault in failing to discover the evidence referred to.

A brief history of the controversy between the parties is essential to an understanding of the questions presented.

In the month of March, 1901, while the appellee, Talbott, was state's attorney for Montgomery county, Maryland, an indictment was returned by the grand jury of that county charging Pickford and Walter, the appellants, and two others named in the indictment, with having unlawfully, wilfully, and maliciously set fire to and burned a certain untenanted dwelling house, the property of said Pickford and Walter. A dwelling house owned by them, situate in Montgomery county, had in fact been destroyed by fire in the latter part of the year 1897, and the fire insurance companies, complainant was ignorant until the judgment was rendered, unless he shows that, by the exercise of ordinary diligence, he could not have discovered such evidence or defense, or that he was prevented from obtaining the same by fraud, accident, or the act of the opposite party, unmixed with laches or negligence on his part. Bloss v. Hull, 27 W. Va. 503.

Failure to show that relief could not have been obtained at law will prevent an injunction. Hintarger v. Sumbargo, 54 Iowa, 604, 7 N. W. 92; Hamel v. Grimm, 10 Abb. Pr. 150.

And an injunction will not be granted on newly discovered evidence where the facts on which the complaint is founded, although discovered since the trial, might have been established at the trial upon cross-examination. Taylor v. Sheppard, 1 Younge & C. Exch. 271.

The enforcement of a judgment at law will not be enjoined for newly discovered evidence which was discovered in time to have been used upon a motion for a new trial in the legal action. Snider v. Rinehart, 20 Colo. 448, 39 Pac. 408.

after some demur, had paid to the owners sums aggregating $22,500. It is said to have been the purpose of the indictment to attribute to the defendants named therein an attempt to defraud the insurance companies. Three of those defendants (including Walter, but not Pickford) being arrested in the District of Columbia, where they resided, sued out writs of habeas corpus in the District, and were released on the ground that the indictment did not set forth any crime. Pickford surrendered himself in Montgomery county, and gave bail to answer the indictment, and his trial was set down for a day in the following November before the circuit court. He duly appeared, but Talbott, as state's attorney, asked for a postponement on the ground that he was not ready for trial. The court strongly intimated that there ought to be no postponement, and upon this intimation 654] (and *perhaps partly because of the question that had been raised about the sufficiency of the indictment) Talbott entered a nolle prosequi as to Pickford. Later, he did the same with respect to Walter.

Thereafter, and in the month of December, 1901, Pickford and Walter procured to be published in the columns of a newspaper in Washington an article concerning Talbott which was the ground of his action against them for libel. A copy of the article was included in the declaration in that suit, and was attached to and made a part of the bill of complaint herein. Through some inadvertence it was omitted in the printing of the record, but upon the argument we were, by consent of counsel, referred for information as to its contents to the record that was here on the former occasion (211 U. S. 199, 53 L. ed. 146, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75). The article purported to show "the true inwardness of the criminal scheme that culminated in this nefarious indictment," and declared that "we shall state the facts as we have learned them after a thorough investigation." It charged Talbott, as state's attorney, with participation in an alleged conspiracy to force Pickford and Walter, by means of an unfounded indictment, to repay to the insurance companies the moneys that had been paid by them to Pickford and Walter for the fire loss.

The libel suit was commenced in the year 1902. The final affirmance of the judgment therein was on November 30, 1908. The present action was begun in the following month of January.

The bill of complaint avers that at the time of the filing of the declaration in the libel suit the complainants believed it to be true (the ground of that belief is not distinctly averred) that Talbott had caused the indictment to be procured for the purpose of obtaining from the insurance companies certain large sums of money, and had thus used his public office for his personal gain; that they so informed their counsel before the filing of their pleas, *but[655 were advised by counsel that should they attempt to justify the publication of the article by pleading the truth thereof, and fail to make good such plea by evidence to the satisfaction of the court and jury, the attempt at justification would be held to be a repetition and republication of the libel, and would aggravate the damages to be recovered in the action; that they were, on the other hand, advised by their counsel that if they should plead "not guilty" to the declaration, they would probably be excluded from endeavoring to prove the truth of the alleged libel; and that the complainants, being unable, after due diligence, to procure and submit to their counsel evidence which, in the opinion of counsel, might properly and safely be offered on the trial of the action in justification of the alleged libel and in proof of the truth thereof, were compelled to confine, and did confine, their defense to the general issue, and were thereby deprived of the opportunity to offer evidence tending to prove its truth; but that upon the trial they were permitted to introduce, and did introduce (not in justification of the alleged libel nor to prove the truth thereof, but to show absence of malice on their part, and thus to mitigate the damages), sundry matters and things which are set forth at great length in the bill, all of which, it is averred, were known to the complainants at and before the composition and publication of the libel.

So far as appears, the matters thus recited furnished the sole basis for their alleged belief that Talbott had prostituted his office in the manner alleged in the newspaper article. Without repeating them here, it is enough to say that if those matters did in fact constitute their whole case against Talbott, their counsel was probably correct in his judgment that a plea of justification, supported by such evidence alone, would be deemed a republication of the libel and a ground for allowing increased damages against them.

The bill of complaint further avers that before pleading *to the declaration the[656 appellants and their counsel diligently inquired of every person believed to have any possible knowledge in the premises, with the view to obtaining and producing testimony tending to support a plea of justification and to prove the truth of the matter alleged as libelous, but without avail.

It also alleges that the like diligent inquiries were continued after the trial of the cause down to the filing of the bill, but wholly without result until the 29th day of December, 1908, when, in an accidental meeting between one of the counsel for the appellants and Hon. James B. Henderson, one of the judges of the circuit court for Montgomery county, who held that office at the time of the indictment referred to, Judge Henderson informed counsel of a conversation said to have taken place between him and Talbott while the indictment was pending, in which conversation Talbott stated to the judge in substance that he was keeping the indictment alive in order to assist the insurance companies in an effort to recover from Pickford and Walter the moneys that had been paid to them for the fire loss; and that he, Talbott, or his firm, would get a large fee out of the business.

The bill rests upon the prayer for relief against the judgment at law solely upon the ground that the evidence of Judge Henderson, taken in connection with the other matters and things that were given in evidence on the trial of the libel suit as mentioned, would have caused the jury to render a verdict in favor of the defendants, Pickford and Walter.

Talbott answered the bill, fully and specifically denying all allegations thereof that attributed improper conduct to him, and expressly denying the alleged conversation between him and Judge Henderson, and denying that he had kept the indictment alive for personal gain, and every other improper inference deducible from the alleged conversation. The answer called upon complainants to make ⁶⁵⁷strict proof of the averments of the bill respecting the conferences between complainants and their counsel and respecting what was done by them about the preparation of their defense in the action at law, and denied that if the truth of the libelous matter had been pleaded and the evidence of Judge Henderson introduced the result of the trial would have been different; averring that, if the pleadings had been such as to admit his testimony, the door would have been opened for the admission of other evidence unfavorable to the complainants.

After the filing of this answer the complainants, by leave of the court, amended and supplemented their original bill of complaint by the addition of a considerable amount of new matter. Included in it is an averment that the indictment of Pickford and Walter, as above mentioned, was in fact caused by and through a conspiracy between Talbott and others, with the object of extorting money from the complainants, and that everything done by Talbott in reference to the indictment was done in pursuance of that conspiracy. To this, by a further answer, Talbott entered an unequivocal denial.

Upon these pleadings, and upon proofs submitted by the respective parties in support thereof, the cause was brought to final hearing, with the result already mentioned.

The principles upon which the decision of the case must turn are entirely familiar. In order to warrant the interposition of a court of equity to restrain the enforcement of a judgment at law, it is, of course, not sufficient for the defeated party to show that because of some newly discovered evidence pertaining to an issue in the case, or because of some newly discovered fact that might have been put in issue, he would probably have a better prospect of success on a retrial of the action. He must show something to render it manifestly unconscionable for his successful adversary to enforce the judgment.

*As Chief Justice Marshall said:[⁶⁵⁸ "Without attempting to draw any precise line to which courts of equity will advance, and which they cannot pass, in restraining parties from availing themselves of judgments obtained at law, it may safely be said that any fact which clearly proves it to be against conscience to execute a judgment, and of which the injured party could not have availed himself in a court of law; or of which he might have availed himself at law, but was prevented by fraud or accident unmixed with any fault or negligence in himself or his agents, will justify an application to a court of chancery." Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332, 336, 3 L. ed. 362, 363. Or, as Mr. Justice Curtis expressed it, in Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 445, 15 L. ed. 123, 124: "A court of equity does not interfere with the judgments at law unless the complainant has an equitable defense, of which he could not avail himself at law, because it did not amount to a legal defense, or had a good defense at law, which he was prevented from availing himself of by fraud or accident, unmixed with negligence of himself or his agents."

One who seeks relief in equity against a judgment at law on the ground that through accident or mistake alone, unmixed with fraud, he has lost the benefit of a defense that would have been available in the court of law, must show entire freedom from fault or neglect on the part of himself and his agents, and must also make it manifest that the judgment against him is wrong on the merits, that he ought in justice to prevail, and that upon a retrial, with the aid of the newly discovered matter of fact or of evidence, it is reasonably certain that he will prevail. Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. §§ 1364, 1365, and notes.

The trial court rested its decision adverse to Talbott upon the theory that, if it were true that he had misused his office as state's attorney, and, because of spite or for any other selfish or personal reason, had wrongfully procured an unjust indictment against Pickford and Walter, *he ought not, in equity and good conscience, to be permitted to collect damages against them for publishing his misconduct, because he would thereby be taking advantage of his own wrong. The court recognized that this theory was applicable only if the statements made in the libelous article were true; and, accepting Judge Henderson's testimony as conclusive upon that issue, the court held it to be unconscionable for Talbott to enforce his judgment. We find it unnecessary to test the correctness of the theory, because, like the court of appeals, we differ with the trial court upon the question of fact. Under the pleadings, the burden was upon the complainants (now appellants) to prove the official misconduct of Talbott, and this they failed to prove.

The court of appeals, correctly considering that most of the evidence was wholly irrelevant to the issues, and that substantially the only material evidence in support of the bill was that of Judge Henderson, and reviewing his testimony in extenso, came to the conclusion that it not only did not conclusively establish the truth of the matters alleged in the libelous article, but did not render it clear beyond reasonable doubt that it would produce a verdict favorable to the complainants if a new trial of the libel suit should be had. Attention was called to the fact that Judge Henderson testified to a conversation had with Talbott about nine years before, of which he had no memorandum to refresh his memory; that his examination showed his memory to be not entirely reliable; that Talbott expressly denied making the incriminatory statements attributed to him; that it was improbable that a lawyer of his standing, holding the important office of state's attorney, would, without apparent motive, deliberately make an admission to anyone, much less to the judge of his circuit, that he was using the powers and opportunities of his office for private gain; and that it was improbable that such an admission, if 660] make under such circumstances, *would go unrebuked at the time. With this view we agree.

All question of fraud in the procurement of the judgment at law is thus eliminated. Indeed, counsel for appellants disavow any reliance upon fraud as a ground of relief. To quote from the brief: "The bill makes no averment whatever as to any fraud on the part of the appellee, plaintiff in the lawsuit, in procuring the judgment in question; the ground on which relief is prayed is accident, as distinguished from fraud."

Next, we agree with the court of appeals that, assuming the newly discovered evidence elicited from Judge Henderson would otherwise be sufficient ground for restraining the enforcement of the judgment, it was incumbent upon the appellants under the pleadings in the present action to prove that their failure to discover evidence of the truth of the libel and plead the same by way of defense in the action at law was not attributable to their own want of diligence. The bill alleges that they made diligent but unsuccessful efforts to discover such evidence, both before and after the filing of their plea. The answer calls for strict proof of this. But the averment is left entirely unsupported by the proofs in the case. Neither Pickford nor Walter nor their counsel in the libel suit gave any evidence tending to show any effort, diligent or otherwise, to discover evidence of the truth of the libel.

We do not hold them negligent merely because of not having sooner discovered that Judge Henderson was available as a witness. He himself testified to the effect that, because of the character of the communication, he was careful not to reveal what was said by Mr. Talbott to him until after the conclusion of the libel suit. But, assuming that what was charged against Mr. Talbott in the newspaper article was true, it is not to be assumed that diligent efforts would have discovered no other evidence of its truth. All of Talbott's dealings with the insurance *companies[661 and with the other persons concerned in his alleged misconduct were within the range of investigation, had diligence been exercised.

Again, one of the peculiar features presented by this case is the following: Appellants, coming into equity for relief on the basis of Judge Henderson's evidence, rely upon it not as newly discovered evidence alone, but as evidence of a newly discovered fact. Merely as evidence it would not have been admissible on the former trial, justification not having been pleaded. It is upon the fact alleged to have been disclosed by Judge Henderson—the fact being Mr. Talbott's alleged misconduct, and not merely his alleged admission of it—that appellants are relying as a newly discovered defense to the action for libel. Now, the settled rule in equity is that a defense is not to be deemed "newly discovered," or as lost by "accident or mistake," if it was or ought to have been within the knowledge of the party when he was called upon for his defense in the action at law. As Lord Hardwicke said: "As to relieving against verdicts, for being contrary to equity, those cases are where the plaintiff knew the fact of his own knowledge to be otherwise than what the jury find by their verdict, and the defendant was ignorant of it at the trial." Williams v. Lee, 3 Atk. 223, 224. Chancellor Kent said: "The general rule is, that this court will not relieve against a judgment at law, on the ground of its being contrary to equity, unless the defendant below was ignorant of the fact in question, pending the suit, or it could not have been received as a defense." Lansing v. Eddy, 1 Johns. Ch. 49, 51. See also Taylor v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 86 Tenn. 228, 6 S. W. 393, and cases cited.

But how can the appellants be heard to say that when making their defense at law they were ignorant of the truth of the matters charged against Talbott in the newspaper article, when they themselves were the authors of those charges? Not only do 662] the verdict and judgment in *the libel suit legally establish their responsibility for the published accusation, but such responsibility is tacitly admitted in the bill of complaint herein, and there is nothing to throw doubt upon it.

Upon the whole case, therefore, it cannot be said that appellants omitted to plead justification in the libel suit because of any "accident" or "mistake" within the meaning of the equitable rule. That defense was considered by them and their counsel and deliberately and advisedly rejected because (a) it could not be sustained, and (b) a failure to sustain it would probably embarrass them in their defense under the general issue; or rather, would render it probable that in the anticipated event of the plaintiff prevailing over them on the general issue, increased damages would be awarded against them because of the reiteration of the libel in a plea of justification. And if, when called upon to make defense in the libel suit, they had no sufficient evidence at hand to maintain the truth of the published matter, this must on the present record be attributed to one or the other of two causes. One is, that the published matter was in fact untrue; the other is, that they did not use proper diligence to discover evidence of its truth. Either explanation leaves them without claim to relief in this action.

The question whether appellants, because of having originally made a public accusation of malfeasance in office against the appellee without having evidence of the truth of the accusation sufficient even to warrant prudent counsel in making an issue of it in a libel suit are barred from relief in equity under the doctrine of "clean hands," it is unnecessary to consider.

It seems to us that the case of the appellants is without merit, and the decree under review will be affirmed.

*EX PARTE CHARLEY WEBB, Pe-[663 titioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 663-691.)

Habeas corpus — scope of review — sufficiency of indictment.

1. Whether the offense is sufficiently alleged in the indictment is a question which is not a proper subject-matter for inquiry on habeas corpus.

[For other cases, see Habeas Corpus, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal regulation — implied repeal.

2. An intention to repeal the existing Federal laws and regulations respecting the Indians cannot be gathered from the proviso in the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335), § 1, reserving to the government of the United States the authority to make laws and regulations in the future respecting such Indians.

[For other cases, see Indians, II.; Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal regulation — admission of state.

3. The reservation in the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906, § 1, of the authority of Congress to legislate in the future respecting the Indians residing within the new state, is within the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes.

[For other cases, see Indians, II.; State, XI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal regulation — intoxicating liquors — implied repeal — admission of state.

4. The scope of any repeal of the prohibitions of the act of March 1, 1895 (28 Stat. at L. 693, chap. 145), § 8, against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the Indian territory, or the bringing of such liquors into such territory, ef-

NOTE.—On questions reviewable by habeas corpus—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 373; Bion's Appeal, 11 L.R.A. 694; Glass v. The Betsy, 1 L. ed. U. S. 489; United States v. Hamilton, 1 L. ed. U. S. 490; Ex parte Carll, 27 L. ed. U. S. 288; Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; and Pearce v. Texas, 39 L. ed. U. S. 164.

On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L.R.A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. Henderson, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235.

On the power of Congress over the Indians—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 484.

fectured by implication from the provisions of the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906, which, in addition to a requirement that the state constitution shall prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in that part of the proposed state known as the Indian territory, and their shipments from other parts of the state into such protected territory, with a proviso for the establishment of state agencies for the sale of liquors for certain limited purposes specified, contains a reservation to the government of the United States of authority to make laws and regulations in the future respecting the Indians, and declares that the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within the state as elsewhere within the United States,—must be limited to the extent that the two acts cover the same field, thus leaving in full force so much of the prohibitions of the earlier act as relates to the carriage of such liquors from without the state of Oklahoma into that part of it which was the Indian territory, except liquors brought in by the state for the use of the state agencies.

[For other cases, see Indians, II.; State, XI.; Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — congressional control — intoxicating liquors — admission of state.

5. Congress, in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce between the states and with the Indian tribes situate within the limits of a state, may so legislate, when creating a new state out of territory inhabited by Indian tribes, into which territory the introduction of intoxicating liquors is, by existing laws and treaties, prohibited, as to preserve those laws and treaties in force to the extent of excluding interstate traffic in intoxicating liquors that would be inconsistent with the prohibition. [For other cases, see Indians, II.; State, XI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 11, Original.]

Argued May 13, 1912. Decided June 10, 1912.

ORIGINAL APPLICATION for Habeas Corpus and Certiorari to inquire into a detention under a bench warrant issued upon an indictment charging the petitioner with bringing intoxicating liquors into that part of the state of Oklahoma formerly known as the Indian territory. Denied.

Statement of the Case.

This is an original application for a writ 665]of habeas corpus *to inquire into the arrest and detention of the petitioner, who is held in custody by the United States marshal for the eastern district of Oklahoma, under a capias or bench warrant issued out of the United States district court, upon an indictment of which the following is a copy:

United States of America,

Eastern District of Oklahoma, ss:

In the District Court of the United States in and for the Eastern District aforesaid, at the March Term thereof, A. D. 1912, at Vinita, Oklahoma.

The grand jurors of the United States, impaneled, sworn, and charged at the term aforesaid of the court aforesaid on their oath present, that Otis Tittle and Charley Webb, and each of them, on the 23d day of January, in the year 1912, in the said division of said district, and within the jurisdiction of said court in Craig county, in the state of Oklahoma, the same then and there being and constituting a portion of the Indian country of the said United States, did at the time and place aforesaid unlawfully, knowingly, wilfully, and feloniously introduce, and attempt to so introduce and carry into the said Indian country, from without the said Indian country, 17 gallons of spirituous, ardent, and intoxicating liquor, to wit: alcohol, which said alcohol was by the said Otis Tittle and Charley Webb and each of them so introduced and carried into that portion of said eastern district of Oklahoma, so being then and there Indian country, as above set forth and described, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the United States.

Petitioner also applies for a writ of certiorari to review the action of the district court in refusing, on habeas corpus, to discharge him from custody under the bench warrant.

For present purposes it is admitted that petitioner is a *white man, not of In-[666 dian blood; that the intoxicating liquors described in the indictment were shipped on his order from the city of Joplin, in the state of Missouri, by way of a railway that is a common carrier of interstate shipments, consigned to petitioner at the city of Vinita, in the state of Oklahoma; that the same reached the latter city over said railway line in the course of ordinary transportation at the time of the alleged offense set forth in the indictment, to wit, January 23, 1912; that said intoxicating liquors were delivered by the transportation company to the petitioner within the city of Vinita, and he received them upon a public street and highway, and not upon restricted land, for the purpose and with the intent of carrying and transporting the liquors along the streets and highways to another point within the same city, and that while he was in the act of so receiving the same he was arrested. That the city of Vinita is situate in Craig county, Oklahoma, which county constitutes a part of what was formerly the Cherokee Nation; that all the lands of the Cherokee Nation have been either allotted to individual citizens of the Cherokee Tribe under the terms of the Cherokee Agreement and the several acts of Congress providing for the allotment of said lands, or sold by the United States for the benefit of the citizens of the Cherokee Nation, either as town sites or otherwise, under the authority of the several acts of Congress providing therefor; that the city of Vinita, including the place where the intoxicating liquor was delivered to and received by the petitioner, is a part of the original town site of Vinita, Indian territory; and that the status of the lands and of the enrolled members of the Cherokee Tribe of Indians are such as are fixed by law.

The petitioner contends that the district court is without jurisdiction, because there is no existing law under which the offense alleged against him is punishable in the Federal courts. He claims that he is obliged to resort to this court for relief because the United States circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit has decided the questions involved, adversely to his contention, in the case of United States Exp. Co. v. Friedman, 191 Fed. 673.

Messrs. Joseph C. Stone and Lawrence Maxwell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James S. Davenport, Thomas H. Owen, and Joseph S. Graydon, filed a brief for petitioner:

The police provisions of the act of January 30, 1897, do not apply to Oklahoma since its admission into the Union. Their continued existence is inconsistent with the enabling act and the state Constitution and laws expressly authorized thereby.

Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 243, 41 L. ed. 419, 420, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 505, 49 L. ed. 848, 855, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

As the enabling act deals with and affects the same subjects and persons as the act of 1897, it must repeal it entirely, unless it can be contended that it repeals it only pro tanto by way of amendment. But the objection to such construction of the two statutes is that its acceptance results in a statute so incongruous and indefinite in purpose and effect that it would be impossible to enforce it.

United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 288, 35 L. ed. 190, 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1250

538; The Enterprise, 1 Paine, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 4,499; Bishop, Statutory Crimes, § 41; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 1st ed. pp. 438, 439; Aukland, Principles of Penal Law, (1771) pp. 312-314.

The question whether the act of January 30, 1897, remained in force in that part of Oklahoma which was formerly Indian territory after the admission of the state, is one of statutory construction, the presumption being that it did not, because its continued existence implies inequality of statehood.

United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 26 L. ed. 869; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 41 L. ed. 419, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

The place where the alleged offense was committed was not "Indian country" within the meaning of the act of January 30, 1897.

Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca.) 109 U. S. 556, 27 L. ed. 1030, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. LeBris, 121 U. S. 278, 30 L. ed. 946, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; United States v. Four Bottles Sour-Mash Whisky, 90 Fed. 720; United States v. Knowlton, 3 Dak. 58, 13 N. W. 573; Re 43 Cases Cognac Brandy, 14 Fed. 539; United States v. Martin, 8 Sawy. 473, 14 Fed. 817.

Petitioner is entitled to habeas corpus.

Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Re Nielson, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. ed. 118, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. ed. 635, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. ed. 149, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Re Schneider, 148 U. S. 162, 37 L. ed. 406, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; May, U. S. Sup. Ct. Pr. p. 440.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause, and Assistant Attorney General Denison and Mr. Louis G. Bissell filed a brief for respondent:

The extinguishment of the Indian land title to the particular lot in question did not remove it from the sphere of the Federal liquor laws, because the very treaties and statutes which authorized the extinguishment reserved the operation of those laws.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 208, 209, 24 L. ed. 471-473; Diek v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 358, 52 L. ed. 520, 527, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lari-viere) 93 U. S. 188, 193, 195, 197, 23 L. ed. 846-848; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca) 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 38 L. ed. 276, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426.

Neither by admitting Oklahoma to statehood, nor by anything in the enabling act, did Congress renounce its control over the interstate liquor traffic into the Indian territory.

United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. ed. 182; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca) 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Thomas, 151 U. S. 577, 38 L. ed. 276, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426; United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 624, 26 L. ed. 869, 870; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 41 L. ed. 419, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

Among the provisions essential to the complete protection of the Indians against the liquor traffic, only those were assigned by the enabling act to the state which, under the decisions of this court, the state could clearly and naturally exercise.

The state, for instance, was not required to prohibit the introduction of liquor from other states, because that would involve a regulation of interstate commerce.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. F. W. Cool-Brewing Co. 223 U. S. 70, ante, 355, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; United States Exp. Co. v. Friedman, 112 C. C. A. 219, 191 Fed. 673.

Nor was the state required to prohibit the use of liquors by the consignees (who might be Indians), because the state power does not attach to "use" as distinguished from "disposition."

Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

But the state is empowered and required to prohibit the advertising for sale or soliciting the purchase of liquors, which have been held to be within the valid police powers of the state under the Wilson act (Delamater v. South Dakota, 205 U. S. 93, 51 L. ed. 724, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 447, 10 Ann. Cas. 733), so that the enabling act has in this particular also required the action by the 56 L. ed.

state at the precise point where its power begins.

Nor was the state required to exercise a police power at the crossing of the boundary line with other states, because the existence of that power has not been determined, having been expressly reserved from decision in Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The draftsman of the indictment evidently intended to charge the offense known as "introducing liquor into *the Indian[671 country," made punishable by § 2139, Rev. Stat. as amended by act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 260, chap. 234), and by the "Act to Prohibit the Sale of Intoxicating Drinks to Indians," etc., approved January 30, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 109).

The circuit court of appeals in United States Exp. Co. v. Friedman, 191 Fed. 673, dealt with the question whether that portion of Oklahoma formerly known as the Indian territory ceased to be "Indian country" upon the admission of Oklahoma as a state, so that these acts were no longer applicable, and with the question whether the admission of Oklahoma as a state had the effect of repealing them so far as pertained to the introduction of liquors into the territory. Petitioner's application to this court for a habeas corpus was intended to bring that decision under review, and the agreed statement of facts was designedly so framed as to show the grounds of his contention that the locus in quo is no longer "Indian country."

The government, however, in resisting the application, relied for support of the jurisdiction of the district court not only upon the acts just referred to, but also upon § 8 of "An Act to Provide for the Appointment of Additional Judges of the United States Court in the Indian Territory, and for Other Purposes," approved March 1, 1895 (28 Stat. at L. 693, chap. 145).

The three enactments in question are set forth in chronological order in the margin.†

†Act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 260).

"Chap. 234.—An Act to Amend Sections Twenty-one Hundred and Thirty-nine, Twenty-one Hundred and Forty, and Twenty-one Hundred and Forty-one of the Revised Statutes Touching the Sale of Intoxicants in the Indian Country, and for Other Purposes.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled, That 672] *At the time of the passage of the act of 1895, the territory known as the Indian territory was that which was *described by metes and bounds in the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, 93, chap. 182, § 29). It included the lands of 674] *the Cherokee Nation and the city of Vinita, where the petitioner's alleged offense was committed. It is now, of course, a part of the state of Oklahoma.

It is not open to serious dispute that if the prohibition of the act of 1895 against "carrying into said territory any such liquors or drinks" remains operative so far as pertains to the carrying of intoxicating liquors from another state into that part of Oklahoma which was the Indian territory, the acts admittedly done by the petitioner constitute an offense thereunder, of which the United States district court has jurisdiction. Whether the offense is sufficiently alleged in the indictment is another question, which, on familiar grounds, is not a proper subject-matter for inquiry on habeas corpus. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 27 L. ed. 288, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 253; Re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 40 L. ed. 88, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 987; Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 40 L. ed. 787, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689. Recognizing this, counsel section twenty-one hundred and thirty-nine of the Revised Statutes be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 2139. No ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquor or liquors of whatever kind, shall be introduced, under any pretense, into the Indian country. Every person who sells, exchanges, gives, barter, or disposes of any ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors of any kind to any Indian under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent, or introduces or attempts to introduce any ardent spirits, ale, wine, beer, or intoxicating liquor of any kind into the Indian country, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years, and by fine of not more than three hundred dollars for each offense. But it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge of introducing or attempting to introduce ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors into the Indian country that the acts charged were done under authority in writing from the War Department, or any officer duly authorized thereunto by the War Department. All complaints for the arrest of any person or persons, made for violation of any of the provisions of this act, shall be made in the county where the offense shall have been committed; or, if committed upon or within any reservation not included in any county, then in any county adjoining such reservation; and, if in the Indian territory, befor the petitioner, upon the oral argument and in a supplemental brief, modified his original contentions so as to deal with the act of 1895. As thus modified, the grounds upon which he relies are the following:

1252

First, that the act of 1895, being a special act applicable to the Indian territory, had the effect of superseding, as to that territory, the existing general statute against the introduction and sale of intoxicating liquors in the Indian country.

Secondly, that the act of 1897, being amendatory of the general statute against the introduction and sale of intoxicating liquors in the Indian country, did not apply to the Indian territory, because that territory was covered by the special act of 1895.

*Thirdly, that the jurisdiction cannot be rested upon the act of 1897, because the place where the alleged offense was committed was not Indian country within the meaning of that act, since there was no Indian title remaining in the town site of Vinita; the insistence being that where there is no Indian title, no inalienable land, and no allotted land held in trust, there can be no "Indian country."

Fourthly, that, whether the act of 1895 or the act of 1897 would otherwise be applicable, these acts were both repealed as to that part of Oklahoma which was formerly the Indian territory, by the force fore the United States court commissioner, or commissioner of the circuit court of the United States residing nearest the place where the offense was committed, who is not for any reason disqualified; but in all cases such arrests shall be made before any United States court commissioner residing in such adjoining county, or before any magistrate or judicial officer authorized by the laws of the state in which such reservation is located to issue warrants for the arrest and examination of offenders by section ten hundred and fourteen of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 716). And all persons so arrested shall, unless discharged upon examination, be held to answer and stand trial before the court of the United States having jurisdiction of the offense."

Act of March 1, 1895 (28 Stat. at L. 693).

*Chap. 145.—An Act to Provide for the Appointment of Additional Judges of the United States Court in the Indian Territory, and for Other Purposes.

"Sec. 8. That any person, whether an Indian or otherwise, who shall, in said territory, manufacture, sell, give away, or in any manner or by any means furnish to anyone, either for himself or another, any vinous, malt, or fermented liquors, or any other intoxicating drinks of any kind what-of the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906, chap. 3335, 34 Stat. at L. 267, under the authority of which the Constitution of Oklahoma was adopted and a state government established, covering the territory previously known as Oklahoma and the Indian territory; and pursuant to which certain statutes were afterwards enacted by the state legislature, viz., an act of March 24, 1908, known as the Billups law, being §§ 4156-4209 of the Compiled Laws of Oklahoma of 1909, and an act passed March 11, 1911, Session Laws of Oklahoma, 1910-1911, pp. 154-156.

225 U. S.

The contentions of the government, on the other hand, are:

First, that the act of 1895 prohibits the liquor traffic in the Indian territory, regardless of any question concerning the term "Indian country," or concerning the title to particular lands, or the race or color of the persons affected.

Secondly, that the extinguishment of the Indian land title to the particular locus in quo did not remove it from the operation of § 2139, Rev. Stat. as amended by the acts of 1892 and 1897, because (among other reasons) a contrary intent is manifested in the treaties and statutes under which that title was extinguished.

Thirdly, that neither by admitting Oklahoma to statehood, nor by anything in the 676] enabling act, did Congress *renounce its control over the interstate liquor traffic in what had been the Indian territory.

The question whether the act of 1895 was superseded by the act of 1897 was not much discussed in the argument. It is a question of nicety, having an importance extending beyond the exigencies of the present case. In the view we take of the other questions, however, we may simplify the discussion by assuming (without conceding) that petitioner's first two points are well taken, and that the act of 1897 did not apply to the Indian territory because that territory was covered by the special act of 1895. This at the same time renders it unnecessary for us to consider his third contention, viz., that the locus in quo was not Indian country within the meaning of the act of 1897, because of the extinguishment of the Indian title.

We may thus proceed at once to the question of the effect upon the act of 1895 of the Oklahoma enabling act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335), and the admission of the state of Oklahoma into the Union pursuant thereto. Since the government concedes that the act of 1895 has been thereby repealed, saving so far as it prohibited the carrying of intoxicating liquors, etc., from another state into the territory, the matter to be discussed is still further narrowed.

Before passing, however, it should be soever, whether medicated or not, or who shall carry, or in any manner have carried, into said territory, any such liquors or drinks, or who shall be interested in such manufacture, sale, giving away, furnishing to anyone, or carrying into said territory any of such liquors or drinks, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than five years."

Act of January 30, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 506).

"Chap. 109.—An Act to Prohibit the Sale of Intoxicating Drinks to Indians, Providing Penalties Therefor, and for Other Purposes.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person who shall sell, give away, dispose of, exchange, or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or other intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever, or any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever, under any name, label, or brand, which produces intoxication, to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or to any Indian a ward of the government, under charge of any Indian superintendent or agent or any Indian, including mixed bloods, over whom the government, through its departments, exercises guardianship, and any person who shall introduce or attempt to introduce any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever into the Indian country, which term shall include any Indian allotment, while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government, or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than sixty days, and by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars for the first offense and not less than two hundred dollars for each offense thereafter: Provided, however, That the person convicted shall be committed until fine and costs are paid. But it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge of introducing or attempting to introduce ardent spirits, ale, beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors into the Indian country that the acts charged were done under authority, in writing, from the War Department, or any officer duly authorized thereunto by the War Department.

Sec. 2. That so much of the act of the twenty-third day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, as is inconsistent with the provisions of this act, is hereby repealed."

noted that § 2139, Rev.Stat., and the act of 1897, contain prohibitions respecting the sale of intoxicating liquor to Indians, and in this, and perhaps in other important respects, cover ground not covered by the act of 1895. We must not be understood as deciding that these prohibitions are no longer in force within what was the Indian territory, either because of the assumed effect of the act of 1895 in superseding the previous general statute of which the act of 1897 was amendatory, or because of the Oklahoma enabling act and the admission of the state thereunder. 677] *The assumption we make in favor of the petitioner is for the purposes of the present argument only.

The title and pertinent sections of the enabling act are set forth in the margin.† 678] *It will be observed that its 1st section provides that nothing in the constitution of the new state shall be construed to limit or effect the authority of the[679 government of the United States to make any law or regulation respecting *such[680 Indians, their lands, property, or other right by treaties, agreement, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to make if this act had never been passed." Also that § 3 requires that the constitution shall prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors within those parts of the proposed state known as the Indian territory and the Osage Indian Reservation, and within any other parts of said state which existed as Indian reservations on January 1, 1906, and shall prohibit the shipment or conveyance of such liquors from other parts of the state into the portions just described; the prohibition to continue for a period of twenty-one years, and thereafter until the †Oklahoma Enabling Act (34 Stat at L. 267, chap. 3335).

"An Act to Enable the People of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to Form a Constitution and State Government and Be Admitted into the Union on an Equal Footing with the Original States," etc.

Section 1. "That the inhabitants of all that part of the area of the United States now constituting the territory of Oklahoma and the Indian territory, as at present described, may adopt a constitution and become the state of Oklahoma, as hereinafter provided: Provided, That nothing contained in the said constitution shall be construed to limit or impair the rights of person or property pertaining to the Indians of said territories (so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished) or to limit or affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any law or regulation respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, by treaties, agreement, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to make if this act had never been passed.

"Sec. 2. That all male persons over the age of twenty-one years, who are citizens of the United States, or who are members of any Indian nation or tribe in said Indian territory and Oklahoma, and who have resided within the limits of said proposed state for at least six months next preceding the election, are hereby authorized to vote for, and choose delegates to form a constitutional convention for, said proposed state; and all persons qualified to vote for said delegates shall be eligible to serve as delegates; . . .

"Sec. 3. . . . Said convention shall, and is hereby authorized to, form a constitution and state government for said proposed state. . . . And said convention shall provide in said constitution:

"Second. That the manufacture, sale, barter, giving away, or otherwise furnishing, except as hereinafter provided, of intoxicating liquors within those parts of said state now known as the Indian territory and the Osage Indian reservation, and within any other parts of said state which existed as Indian reservations on the first day of January, nineteen hundred and six, is prohibited for a period of twenty-one years from the date of the admission of said state into the Union, and thereafter until the people of said state shall otherwise provide by amendment of said constitution and proper state legislation. Any person, individual or corporate, who shall manufacture, sell, barter, give away, or otherwise furnish any intoxicating liquor of any kind including beer, ale, and wine, contrary to the provisions of this section, or who shall, within the above-described portions of said state, advertise for sale or solicit the purchase of any such liquors, or who shall ship or in any way convey such liquors from other parts of said state into the portions hereinbefore described shall be punished, and conviction thereof by fine not less than fifty dollars and by imprisonment not less than thirty days for each offense: Provided, That the legislature may provide by law for one agency under the supervision of said state in each incorporated town not less than two thousand population in the portions of said state hereinbefore described; and if there be no incorporated town of two thousand population in any county in said portions of said state, such county shall be entitled to have one such agency, for the sale of such liquors for medicinal purposes; and for the sale, for industrial purposes, of alcohol which shall have been denaturized by some process approved by the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and for the sale of alcohol for scientific purposes to such scientific institutions, universities, and colleges as are authorized to procure the same free of tax under the laws of the United States; people shall otherwise provide by constitutional amendment and proper state legislation; with a proviso for the establishment of state agencies for the sale of liquors for medicinal purposes and to bonded apothecaries, or denaturized alcohol for industrial purposes and of alcohol for scientific purposes; and with elaborate provisions for carrying the prohibition into effect and preventing any abuse of the limited privileges conferred; it being declared, at the same time, that "upon the admission of said state into the Union these provisions shall be immediately enforceable in the courts of said state."

Pursuant to this act, a constitutional convention prepared and submitted to the people for adoption a constitution containing the clauses thus prescribed by Congress. At the same time a separate constitutional provision was submitted, for establishing state-wide liquor prohibition, substantially in the same terms and subject to the same provisions that were prescribed, with respect to the Indian territory and the Indian reservations, by the enabling act. The constitution and [681 the separate constitutional provision were duly adopted by the people, and on November 16, 1907, by proclamation of the President, Oklahoma was admitted as a state of the Union. [35 Stat. at L. 2160.]

No doubt the enabling act, followed by the adoption of the constitution therein prescribed and the admission of the new state, had the effect of remitting to the state government the enforcement of the prohibition respecting the manufacture, sale, barter, etc., of intoxicating liquors within the state, and respecting commerce in such liquors conducted wholly within the state; and, to the extent that the

and for the sale of such liquors to any apothecary who shall have executed an approved bond, in a sum not less than one thousand dollars, conditioned that none of such liquors shall be used or disposed of for any purpose other than in the compounding of prescriptions or other medicines, the sale of which would not subject him to the payment of the special tax required of liquor dealers by the United States, and the payment of such special tax by any person within the parts of said state hereinabove defined shall constitute prima facie evidence of his intention to violate the provisions of this section. No sale shall be made except upon the sworn statement of the applicant in writing, setting forth the purpose for which the liquor is to be used, and no sale shall be made for medicinal purposes except sales to apothecaries as hereinabove provided unless such statement shall be accompanied by a bona fide prescription signed by a regular practicing physician, which prescription shall not be filled more than once. Each sale shall be duly registered, and the register thereof, together with the affidavits and prescriptions pertaining thereto, shall be open to inspection by any officer or citizen of said state at all times during business hours. Any person who shall knowingly make a false affidavit for the purpose aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of perjury. Any physician who shall prescribe any such liquor, except for treatment of disease which, after his own personal diagnosis, he shall deem to require such treatment, shall, upon conviction thereof be punished for each offense by fine of not less than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not less than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and any person connected with any such agency who shall be convicted of making any sale or other disposition of liquor contrary to these provisions shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year and one day.

Upon admission of said state into the Union these provisions shall be immediately enforceable in the courts of said state.

"Third. That the people inhabiting said proposed state do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title in or to any unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof, and to all lands lying within said limits, owned or held by any Indian, tribe, or nation; and that until the title to any such public land shall have been extinguished by the United States, the same shall be and remain subject to the jurisdiction, disposal, and control of the United States."

Sec. 4 provides for the submission to the people of the constitution to be adopted by the constitutional convention, and the admission of the state (on ratification of the constitution by the people) "on an equal footing with the original states."

"Sec. 13. That said state, when admitted as aforesaid, shall constitute two judicial districts, to be known as the eastern district of Oklahoma and the western district of Oklahoma; the said Indian territory shall constitute said eastern district, and the said Oklahoma territory shall constitute said western district. . . . The circuit and district courts for each of said districts, and the judges thereof, respectively, shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties required to be performed by the other circuit and district courts and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations. . . ."

"Sec. 21. . . . All laws in force in the territory of Oklahoma at the time of the admission of said state into the Union shall be in force throughout said state, except as modified or changed by this act or by the constitution of the state, and the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within said state as elsewhere within the United States."

scheme of prohibition established by the enabling act covered the same field that had been covered by the act of 1895, the latter act must be considered as impliedly repealed. But the act of 1895 included offenses that are not covered by the prohibition scheme of the enabling act; it prohibited the carrying of intoxicating liquors from other states into territory that was included in the state of Oklahoma. And the question for present solution is whether the act of 1895, having been partially repealed, as just indicated, remains in force as a prohibition against such interstate traffic. In deciding it we shall do well to bear in mind that the offense of importing or "introducing" or "carrying in" such liquors into a protected district is different in its nature and readily distinguishable from the offenses of manufacturing, selling, etc., within the district; that from the earliest times they have been treated in Federal legislation as different offenses; that Congress for many years has consistently pursued the policy of forbidding sales of liquor to Indians and excluding it from country occupied by them; that the prohibition of importations has been deemed necessary to effectuate the purpose of preventing the use of it in protected districts; that the act of 1895 was passed for the evident purpose of enforcing the two-fold prohibition in the Indian territory; and that by agreements with the Indian 682]tribes *inhabiting the territory (as will appear below) the United States was, to some extent, at least, pledged to maintain the prohibition. Besides these considerations, it is to be noted that the enabling act, while containing most stringent clauses for preventing (at least for twenty-one years) the manufacture of and traffic in liquors within the Indian territory, and their transportation from other parts of the new state into the territory, imposes no duty upon the new state with respect to preventing liquors from being brought into the territory from other states.

In view of these considerations, and others to be mentioned, it seems to us that Congress, so far from intending by the enabling act to repeal so much of the act of 1895 as prohibits the carrying of intoxicating liquors into the Indian territory from points without the state, framed the enabling act with a clear view of the distinction between the powers appropriate to be exercised by the new state over matters within her borders, and the powers appropriate to be exercised by the United States over traffic originating beyond the borders of the new state and extending within the Indian territory.

In addition, there is the proviso contained in § 1 of the act, that nothing contained in the state Constitution shall be construed "to limit or affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any law or regulation respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights by treaties, agreement, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to make if this act had never been passed." It is contended that this does not preserve the existing laws and regulations respecting the Indians, but rather excludes the inference of their continued force and existence by indicating a purpose on the part of Congress to thereafter enact regulations for the protection of the Indians in Oklahoma if necessity requires. This, we think, is an inadmissible *con- 683]struction. We deem it unreasonable to suppose that Congress, possessing the constitutional power and recognizing the moral duty to make laws and regulations respecting the Indians, and having already established laws and regulations of this character applicable in the territory, including some that were established by treaties and agreements, should resolve to wipe them out, and thereby impose upon future Congresses the labor and difficulty of establishing other proper laws and regulations in their stead. In our opinion, the purpose expressed in the proviso to reserve to the government of the United States the authority to make laws and regulations in the future respecting the Indians is, under the circumstances, evidence tending to negative a purpose to repeal by implication the existing laws and regulations on the subject.

Of course, an act of Congress may repeal a prior treaty as well as it may repeal a prior act. The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 720, 37 L. ed. 905, 915, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 511, 41 L. ed. 244, 246, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 243, 41 L. ed. 419, 420, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107.

But it is a settled rule of statutory construction that repeals by implication are not favored, and will not be held to exist if there be any other reasonable construction. Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 686, 34 L. ed. 832, 833, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, and cases cited; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 511, 41 L. ed. 244, 246, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076.

The reservation of the authority of Congress to legislate in the future respecting the Indians residing within the new state is clearly supportable under the Federal Constitution, art. 1, § 8, which confers upon Congress the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes." It has been repeatedly held by this court that under this clause traffic or intercourse with an Indian tribe or with a member of such a tribe is subject to the regulation of Congress, although it be within the limits of a state. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 418, 18 L. ed. 182, 684]186; *United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 195, 197, 23 L. ed. 846-848; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399, and cases cited.

And it is as clearly consistent with the Constitution to maintain in force an existing act of Congress relating to such traffic and intercourse, so that it shall continue effective within the limits of the new state, as it is to reserve the right to enact new laws in the future upon the same subject-matter.

We must read the proviso contained in § 1 of the enabling act, and also the declaration in § 21, that "the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within said state as elsewhere within the United States," in the light of the existing relations, then recently established by treaties and by acts of Congress, between the government of the United States and the Five Civilized Tribes that occupied the area known as the Indian territory. Although those tribes had long been treated more liberally than other Indians, they remained none the less wards of the government, and in all respects subject to its control. Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 653, 34 L. ed. 295, 301, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965, and cases cited. And after Congress, in the year 1893, had inaugurated the policy of terminating their tribal existence and government and allotting their lands in severalty (act of March 3, 1893, chap. 209, § 16; 27 Stat. at L. 645), agreements were negotiated by the Dawes Commission with each of the tribes, designed to carry out the objects indicated; and in each of those agreements there was some recognition of the importance of preserving restrictions upon the introduction of intoxicating liquors from without and the traffic in them within the Indian territory.

The agreement with the Seminoles was made in 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 542), with the Creeks in 1901 and 1902 (31 Stat. at L. 861, chap. 676, 32 Stat. at L. 500, chap. 1323), with the Choctaws and Chickasaws in 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 507, chap. 517), and in 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), and with the Cherokees 56 L. ed.

in the latter year (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375).

*Section 73 of the agreement with the [685 Cherokees (32 Stat. at L. 727, chap. 1375) continued in force in that Nation the 14th section of an act of June 28, 1898, entitled, "An Act for the Protection of the People of the Indian Territory and for Other Purposes" (30 Stat. at L. 500, chap. 517), which contained a proviso against the sale of liquor in the territory, and against the introduction thereof into the territory.

In the first Choctaw and Chickasaw agreement there was a provision (30 Stat. at L. 509, chap. 517) that no law or ordinance should be passed by any town interfering with the enforcement of, or conflicting with the laws of, the United States in force in said territory, "and the United States agrees to maintain strict laws in the territory of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes against the introduction, sale, barter, or giving away of liquors and intoxicants of any kind or quality."

In the Choctaw-Chickasaw agreement of 1902, § 64, which provided for the cession to the United States of lands at the Sulphur Springs, contained a provision (32 Stat. at L. 656, chap. 1362) that "until otherwise provided by Congress, the laws of the United States relating to the introduction, possession, sale, and giving away of liquors or intoxicants of any kind within the Indian country or Indian reservations shall be applicable to the lands so ceded, and said lands shall remain within the jurisdiction of the United States court for the southern district of Indian territory."

The Seminole agreement likewise provided that "the United States agrees to maintain strict laws in the Seminole country against the introduction, sale, barter, or giving away of intoxicants of any kind or quality." (30 Stat. at L. 568, chap. 542.)

The first Creek agreement provided that "the United States agrees to maintain strict laws in said Nation against the introduction, sale, barter, or giving away of liquors or intoxicants of any kind whatsoever." Act of March 1, 1901, chap. 676, § 43, 31 Stat. at L. 872. And this was not modified *by the supplemental [686 agreement Act of June 30, 1902, chap. 1323, 32 Stat. at L. 500.

It seems to us that the provisions of the enabling act show that Congress recognized that, because of these agreements or otherwise, the government of the United States was under a duty to the inhabitants of the Indian territory different from its duty to the inhabitants of the other territory that went to form the new state.

We are unable otherwise to explain the insertion in the proposed constitution of the clause establishing liquor prohibition within the Indian territory, and the exclusion of the other territory from the operation of this clause. This action is indicative of a purpose on the part of Congress to fulfil the spirit as well as the letter of the agreements with the Five Tribes. There were differences in those treaties, so far as the liquor traffic is concerned. But in the enabling act all the tribes were treated alike, and in a manner to fulfil the amplest promise given to any tribe, so far—but only so far—as the establishment of general prohibition within the new state was concerned.

But if the Federal law that had prevented the bringing in of intoxicating liquors from without the state was at the same time repealed, the pledges of the government were thereby in a material part broken. For manifestly it would be of comparatively little use to prohibit the manufacture of intoxicating liquors within the territory and their shipment from other parts of the state into the territory, if at the same time all laws prohibiting the introduction of such liquors from other states into the territory were to be repealed.

And it is clear that in framing the enabling act, Congress was mindful not only of its jurisdiction over commerce with the Indian tribes, but was mindful that traffic in liquors between one state and another is subject only to the control of Congress. 687] *Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561.

It is argued that the result of engrafting the provisions of the enabling act upon that part of the act of 1895 which remains unrepealed is a statutory system “so incongruous and indefinite in purpose and effect that it would be impossible to enforce it.”

This contention is based largely upon the fact that the prohibition of the manufacture, sale, barter, etc., of intoxicating liquors within those parts of the state that were known as the Indian territory and Osage Indian Reservation, and the other parts of the state which were Indian reservations on January 1, 1906, and the prohibition of the shipment or conveyance of such liquors from other parts of the state into the portions just mentioned, is subject to a proviso that the legislature may provide by law for state agencies for the sale of such liquor for medicinal purposes, for the sale of denaturalized alcohol for industrial purposes, for the sale of alcohol for scientific purposes, and for the sale of liquors to bonded apothecaries.

It is argued that in the interim between the admission of the state and the enactment of legislation for establishing state liquor agencies, there would necessarily be a period of considerable duration (as the event happened, it was over four months) during which, in what was formerly the Indian territory, it would be doubtful whether sales of liquor would be punishable in the Federal or in the state courts, and whether according to the act of 1895 or under the different penalties of the enabling act.

It may be conceded that until the state took action, in accordance with the constitution, for the establishment of agencies for the sale of liquors for the limited purposes mentioned, such sales could not be made at all, and that all sales which otherwise were in violation of the prohibition of the constitution were punishable in the courts; to what extent punishable in the Federal courts, and to what extent in the state courts, it is not worth while to spend time in considering. Some temporary confusion and uncertainty may be unavoidable upon the establishment of a state government under such conditions: but this has little bearing upon the question before us.

A more serious argument is that which is based upon the effect of the constitutional provision respecting the establishment and maintenance of state agencies for the disposition of liquor, after the state legislature shall have provided by law for such agencies; for when such a law has been enacted we are brought to the permanent condition of things that was in the contemplation of Congress.

And here it is urged that as to the offense of carrying intoxicating liquor into the territory, it must be that the introduction thereof for supplying the needs of the state agencies was permitted by the enabling act, and that the provisions of the act of 1895 must be taken to be repealed to that extent, leaving the act in force against the introduction of liquor for other purposes. But it is said (to quote from the brief): “If that was the purpose of the enabling act, it entirely fails to express it, because it does not provide who may so introduce liquors into the territory, and who may not, for the purpose of supplying local agencies, and the law would be so framed that neither court nor layman could ascertain by reading it by whom and under what circumstances such introduction was innocent or criminal.”

No doubt, in order to give effect to the constitutional provision that permits the legislature to provide by law for agencies under the supervision of the state for the sale of liquors for the limited purposes specified, it is necessary that the state agencies shall procure these liquors from some source.

The authorization is in the form of a proviso. Whether, by fair construction, it 689]qualifies merely the force of the *clause to which it is subjoined,—that is, qualifies, merely the prohibition against the manufacture, sale, etc., of intoxicating liquors within the Indian territory and the Indian reservations, and the prohibition against the shipment of such liquors from other parts of the state into the portions mentioned,—or whether, on the other hand, it has the effect of permitting liquors to be introduced from without the state, is a question that need not detain us. Upon the former construction, the state would presumably be obliged to cause the liquors to be manufactured within its own borders for the supply of its distributing agencies. Upon the latter construction, the state would be at liberty to import the necessary liquors from beyond its borders. In the one case, as in the other, the operation would be lawful and innocent when conducted under the authority of the state; otherwise unlawful. It is not to be presumed that the state would conceal or cloak its operations, or leave its agents without evidence of their authority. We can see no more practical difficulty here than there is in determining in any other matter that is subject to public regulation—for instance, the killing or transportation of game, the manufacture or sale of liquor—whether a given act is done with or without a license from the state. The argument ab inconvenienti is without force.

We are reminded that “laws which create crime ought to be so explicit that all men subject to their penalties may know what acts it is their duty to avoid” (United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 288, 35 L. ed. 190, 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; and that ambiguity and uncertainty about the meaning of a criminal statute ought to be resolved by a strict interpretation in favor of the liberty of the citizen.

But there is no uncertainty or ambiguity about the prohibition of the act of 1895 against carrying intoxicating liquors into the Indian territory. It is not suggested that there is any express repeal of that 690]prohibition. And *we are unable to see that a pro tanto repeal by implication leaves anything doubtful or ambiguous in the meaning of that which remains.

It is not our purpose to qualify the doctrine established by repeated decisions of 56 L. ed.

this court that the admission of a new state into the Union on an equal footing with the original states imports an equality of power over internal affairs. The cases cited by counsel for the petitioner under this head are cases that dealt with matters wholly internal. United States v. McBratney, 104 U. S. 621, 26 L. ed. 869; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 41 L. ed. 419, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 505, 49 L. ed. 848, 855, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506. And see Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 244, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 288, 54 L. ed. 195, 199, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 294, 54 L. ed. 200, 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 323, 55 L. ed. 750, 753, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

The most recent decision of this court upon the subject of the proper construction of acts of Congress passed for the admission of new states into the Union is Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; where it was held that the Oklahoma enabling act (34 Stat. at L. chap. 3335, p. 267), in providing that the capitol of the state should temporarily be at the city of Guthrie, and should not be changed therefrom previous to the year 1913, ceased to be a limitation upon the power of the state after its admission. The court, however, was careful to state (221 U. S. 574): “It may well happen that Congress should embrace in an enactment introducing a new state into the Union legislation intended as a regulation of commerce among the states, or with Indian tribes situated within the limits of such new state, or regulations touching the sole care and disposition of the public lands or reservations therein, which might be upheld as legislation within the sphere of the plain power of Congress. But in every such case such legislation would derive its force not from any agreement or compact with the proposed new state, nor by reason of its acceptance of such enactment as a term of admission, but *sole-[691 ly because the power of Congress extended to the subject, and therefore would not operate to restrict the state’s legislative power in respect of any matter which was not plainly within the regulating power of Congress.”

We are here dealing with one of those matters such as are referred to in this citation. The power of Congress to regulate commerce between the states, and with Indian tribes situate within the limits of a state, justifies Congress when creating a new state out of territory inhabited by Indian tribes, and into which territory the introduction of intoxicating liquors is by existing laws and treaties prohibited, in so legislating as to preserve those laws and treaties in force to the extent of excluding interstate traffic in intoxicating liquors that would be inconsistent with the prohibition. Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 353, 52 L. ed. 520, 525, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399. This being so, and since we find in the Oklahoma enabling act no repeal, express or implied, of the act of 1895 so far as pertains to the carrying of liquor from without the new state into that part of it which was the Indian territory (saving as to liquor brought in by the state for the use of state agencies established under the provisions of the enabling act), it follows, upon the admitted facts, that the United States district court has jurisdiction to punish the petitioner for the offense that he has committed.

The petition for a writ of habeas corpus and the accompanying application for certiorari will be denied.

act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176). The decree of the circuit court is final.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 725, 726, 738, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 972.]

Submitted March 11, 1912. Decided March 18, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, an appeal from an order of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts, entered upon a revisory proceeding filed under the bankruptcy act of 1867. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 659, 186 Fed. 989.

Mr. Warren Ozro Kyle submitted the cause for appellants.

Mr. Hollis R. Bailey submitted the cause for appellees.

Per Curiam:

Before the repeal of the bankruptcy act of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176] the decision of the circuit court would have been final. Wiswall v. Campbell, 93 U. S. 347, 348, 23 L. ed. 923, and cases cited; Cleveland Ins. Co. v. Globe Ins. Co. 98 U. S. 366, 25 L. ed. 201. In view of the saving clause of the repealing act of June 7, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 99, chap. 160) we are of opinion the review of such an order was not provided for by the judiciary act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488].

The decision in Huntington v. Saunders, 163 U. S. 319, 41 L. ed. 174, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1120, is not to the contrary. There it was merely decided that if the act of 1891 authorized a review of analogous orders, the one sought to be reviewed did not involve the requisite jurisdictional amount.

The appeal is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

692] *WARREN OZRO KYLE et al.,
Appts.,

v.

JOHN C. HAMMOND et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 692.)

Appeal — in bankruptcy cases — revisory proceedings.

The Federal Supreme Court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from a decree of a circuit court of appeals, dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, an appeal from an order of a circuit court, entered upon a revisory petition filed under the bankruptcy

NOTE.—On appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

695]*LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. FRANÇOIS DE BEARN et al. [No. 797]; LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. FRANÇOIS DE BEARN [No. 798]; LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. ODON DE BEARN [No. 799]; LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. PIERRE DE BEARN [No. 800]; and LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. JEAN BAPTISTE CHAUMET [No. 801].

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland to review a judgment which reversed an order of the Superior Court for Baltimore city, releasing and discharging certain bonds and coupons attached thereto from the operation of a writ of attachment.

See same case below, 115 Md. 668, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 421, 81 Atl. 223.

Messrs. Maurice Leon and Charles Stewart Davison for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. J. Kemp Bartlett and Edgar Allen Poe for defendants in error.

April 8, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Toland v. Sprague, 12 Pet. 300, 331, 9 L. ed. 1093, 1105; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. 648, 8 L. ed. 532; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe, 222 U. S. 185, ante, 155, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46.

JOSEPH D. SULLIVAN, Trustee, etc., Appellant, v. AARON GOLDMAN. [No. 874.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. Joseph D. Sullivan and L. P. Loving for appellant.
56 L. ed.

Messrs. Henry E. Davis and Alexander Wolf for appellee.

April 8, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, ante, 118, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

*HANNAH L. ANDREWS, Executrix, [696 etc., Appellant, v. HARVEY K. PARTRIDGE, Trustee, etc. [No. 907.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a revisory order which reversed a decree of the District Court for the District of New Jersey, adjudging the executrix of a deceased bankrupt to be entitled to the proceeds of policies of insurance upon the bankrupt's life.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 191 Fed. 325.

Messrs. Thomas E. French and Samuel H. Richards for appellant.

Messrs. Henry F. Stockwell and John D. McMullin for appellee.

April 8, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 116, 48 L. ed. 116, 117, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, 218 U. S. 299, 54 L. ed. 1047, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, ante, 118, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF CHARLEY WEBB, Petitioner. [No.—Original.]

Motion to file petition for writ of habeas corpus.

Mr. J. S. Davenport for petitioner.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

See ante, p. 1248.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY, Plaintiff in Error, v. ALONZO C. LESSENDEN. [No. 949.]

Error to state court—raising Federal question on rehearing.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri to review a judgment which affirmed conditionally a judgment of the Jackson Circuit Court in favor of plaintiff in an action founded on a Kansas statute making a railway company liable for injuries inflicted on an employee through the negligence of a fellow servant.

See same case below, 238 Mo. 247, 142 S. W. 332.

Mr. M. L. Clardy for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. F. Guthrie for defendant in error.

April 29, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. McCorquodale v. Texas, 211 U. S. 432, 437, 53 L. ed. 269, 270, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 118, 53 L. ed. 431, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

STATE NATIONAL BANK, Plaintiff in Error, v. D. P. RICHARDSON, City Tax Collector for the City of Frankfort, et al. [No. 223.]

Error to state court—final judgment.

697] In Error to the Court *of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Franklin Circuit Court, sustaining a demurrer to the answer in a suit to enjoin an assessment for taxing purposes.

See same case below, 135 Ky. 772, 123 S. W. 294, 1189.

Messrs. James P. Helm and Thomas Kennedy Helm for plaintiff in error.

Mr. F. M. Dailey for defendants in error.

April 29, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 175, 49 L. ed. 1000, 1002, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

ELMER H. DUFFIELD, Appellant, v. HENRY F. ASHURST, as District Attorney, etc. [No. 231.]

Abatement—termination of office.

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to the petition for mandamus to compel a district attorney to institute and prosecute a quo warranto proceeding.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 360, 100 Pac. 820.

1262

Messrs. Robert Dunlap, T. J. Norton, and Gardiner Lathrop for appellant.

Mr. Edward M. Doe for appellee.

April 29, 1912. Per Curiam: Appeal dismissed with costs. United States ex rel. Warden v. Chandler, 122 U. S. 643, 30 L. ed. 1244; United States ex rel. Bernardin v. Butterworth, 169 U. S. 600, 42 L. ed. 873, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 200 U. S. 446, 449, 50 L. ed. 545, 549, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314, and cases cited, and cause remanded to the Supreme Court of the State of Arizona.

COALGATE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. W. HURST, as Administrator or Trustee, etc. [No. 294.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Coal County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to recover damages for the death of an employee.

See same case below, 25 Okla. 588, 107 Pac. 657.

Mr. Arthur G. Moseley for plaintiff in error.

Mr. James R. Wood for defendant in error.

May 13, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 38, 48 L. ed. 328, 331, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 53, 54, 38 L. ed. 631, 633, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 508, 44 L. ed. 864, 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Re Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 104, 51 L. ed. 105, 108, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

*INDIAN PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION, Appellant, v. HUGH H. GORDON. [No. 262.] Foreign corporation—suit by.

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing the bill of a foreign corporation to establish an interest in a fund.

See same case below, 34 App. D. C. 553.

Messrs. Charles Poe, Benjamin S. Minor, Hugh B. Rowland, C. C. Calhoun, and Daniel B. Henderson for appellant.

Mr. John Lewis Smith for appellee Gordon.

May 27, 1912. Per Curiam: Decree as to Hugh H. Gordon affirmed, with costs, upon the opinion of the court below (34 App. D. C. 553).

225 U. S.

EVAN B. ROSENKRANS, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF RHODE ISLAND. [No. 870.] Constitution law—registration of dentists.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Rhode Island to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Superior Court for Providence and Bristol counties, in that state, of practising dentistry without registration and examination.

See same case below, 30 R. I. 374, 75 Atl. 491, 19 Ann. Cas. 824.

Mr. Amasa M. Eaton for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Percy W. Gardner and Alexander L. Churchill for defendant in error.

June 7, 1912. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed with costs. Collins v. Texas, 223 U. S. 288, ante, 439, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

ARTHUR HIRSH et al., Appellants, v. J. W. TAYLOR et al., etc. [No. 841.]

Error to circuit court—jurisdiction below.

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of West Virginia to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to a bill which seeks the dissolution of a corporation.

See same case below, 196 Fed. 104.

Mr. John H. Holt for appellants.

Messrs. C. W. Campbell and Douglas W. Brown for respondents.

June 10, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Bache v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 48 L. ed. 774, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547. Cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of West Virginia.

699]*CLARENCE DAYTON HILLMAN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1020.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 264.

Messrs. Wade H. Ellis, T. F. Bevington, and Abner H. Ferguson for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann, for respondent.

April 1, 1912. Denied.

56 L. ed.

EDWARD B. GOODMAN & COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1024.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Customs Appeals.

Messrs. Charles J. Kappler, Charles H. Merillat, and Joseph S. Kammerlohr for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Wemple for respondent.

April 1, 1912. Denied.

HANNAH L. ANDREWS, Executrix, etc., Petitioner, v. HARVEY K. PARTRIDGE, Trustee, etc. [No. 907.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Thomas E. French and Samuel H. Richards for petitioner.

Messrs. Henry F. Stockwell and John D. McMullin for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Granted, and ordered that transcript on file herein stand as the return to the Writ of Certiorari.

SAMUEL LEWIS, Petitioner, v. G. OLIVER FRICK, United States Immigration Inspector, etc. [No. 1010.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Philip T. Van Zile for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

*April 8, 1912. Granted. [700]

ATLANTIC TRANSPORT COMPANY OF WEST VIRGINIA, Petitioner, v. FRANK IMEROVEK [No. 1028]; ATLANTIC TRANSPORT COMPANY OF WEST VIRGINIA, Petitioner, v. STATE OF MARYLAND, to the use, etc. [No. 1029.]

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. Nicholas P. Bond and Edward Duffy for petitioner.

Mr. John E. Semmes, Jr., for respondents.

April 8, 1912. Granted.

A. LEO EVERETT, Trustee, etc., Petitioner, v. WILLIAM D. JUDSON, Executor, etc. [No. 1046.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Charles K. Beckman for petitioner.

Mr. William A. Keener for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Granted.

HARRISON T. GROOM, Petitioner, v. MORTIMER LAND Co. et al. [No. 1000.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 849.

Messrs. Maurice E. Locke, Eugene P. Locke, and Eugene Marshall for petitioner.

Mr. Sam J. Hunter for respondents.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

701]*ST. LOUIS SOUTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. LEWELLEN BROTHERS. [No. 1018.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 540.

Messrs. Roy F. Britton, E. B. Perkins, and Samuel H. West for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

JOSEPH D. SULLIVAN, Trustee, etc., Petitioner, v. AARON GOLDMAN. [No. 1021.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 319.

Messrs. Joseph D. Sullivan and L. P. Loving for petitioner.

Messrs. Henry E. Davis and Alexander Wolf for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

NATIONAL EQUIPMENT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GEORGE C. HOLT, United States District Judge, etc. [No. 1037]; JAMES C. KUH, Petitioner, v. GEORGE C. HOLT, United States District Judge, etc. [No. 1038]; POWELL's, a Corporation, v. GEORGE C. HOLT, United States District Judge, etc. [No. 1039]; JAMES A. McCLURG & SONS, Petitioner, v. GEORGE S. HOLT, United States District Judge, etc. [No. 1040.]

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 488.

Mr. Livingston Gifford for petitioners.

Mr. Ferdinand E. M. Bullowa for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

HERSCHEL MARTIN BACON, Bankrupt, Petitioner, v. BUFFALO COLD STORAGE COMPANY. [No. 1048.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the *United States Circuit Court of Ap-[702 peals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 34.

Mr. Sam J. Hunter for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph M. McCormick for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

FREDERICK C. TIEDT, Petitioner, v. ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FÉ RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 1049.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Fred W. Bentley for petitioner.

Messrs. Robert Dunlap and J. L. Coleman for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

MARIA A. EVANS, Executrix, etc., Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1054]; STEPHEN M. WELD, Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1055]; THEOPHILUS PARSONS, Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1056]; ALBERT S. BIGELOW, Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1057]; WILLIAM M. CONANT, Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1058]; RUSSELL S. CODMAN, Petitioner, v. KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY [No. 1059].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 347, 188 Fed. 549.

Mr. Felix Raekemann for Evans, Weld, Parsons, Conant, and Codman.

Mr. Burton E. Eames for Bigelow.

Messrs. Julien T. Davies and John G. Milburn for respondents.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

WILLIAM SEYMOUR, Petitioner, v. A. M. McDANIEL. [No. 1060.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for *the Fifth Circuit. [703

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 672, 191 Fed. 1005.

Mr. William E. Mason for petitioner.

Messrs. Hiram Glass, John J. King, W. L. Estes, and A. L. Burford for respondent.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE, Petitioners, v. ANDREW MILLER et al. [No. 1064].

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. Sylvan Hayes Lauchheimer and Alexander Preston for petitioners.

No appearance for respondents.

April 8, 1912. Denied.

CHOEMON KI KUCHI, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1036.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 282, 190 Fed. 450.

Mr. A. R. Serven for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann, for respondent.

April 15, 1912. Denied.

TEXARKANA GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MRS. OLLIE POWELL et al. [No. 1069.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 673, 191 Fed. 1006.

Messrs. Max Pam, Charles S. Todd, and John J. King for petitioner.

Mr. Charles A. Culberson for respondents.

April 15, 1912. Denied.

ARTHUR JOHNSON, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1075.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. Paca Oberlin and Joseph Salomon for petitioner.

Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

April 22, 1912. Granted, the record presented with the petition *to stand as a return to the writ.

MERCHANTS & MINERS' TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ROBINSON BAXTER-DISSOSWAY TOWING & TRANSPORTATION COMPANY et al. [No. 1051]; MERCHANTS & MINERS' TRANSPORTATION COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GENERAL CHEMICAL COMPANY [No. 1052]; MERCHANTS & MINERS' TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. LOUIS GILDERSLEEVE et al. [No. 1053].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 191 Fed. 769

56 L. ed.

Mr. Daniel H. Hayne for Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company.

Mr. Samuel Park for Robinson Baxter-Dissosway Towing & Transportation Company.

Messrs. James J. Macklin and de Lagnel Berier for General Chemical Company and Gildersleeve et al.

April 22, 1912. Denied.

ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. PENINSULAR & OCCIDENTAL STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Owner, etc. [No. 1066.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 84.

Messrs. Walter F. Taylor and George E. Hamilton for petitioner.

Messrs. John F. Lewis and Francis L. Laws for respondent.

April 22, 1912. Denied.

DARIUS COLE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WHITE STAR LINE. [No. 1079.]

*Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 165, 186 Fed. 63.

Messrs. George L. Canfield and F. H. Canfield for petitioner.

Messrs. William J. Gray for respondent.

April 22, 1912. Denied.

ST. LOUIS & SAN FRANCISCO RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. W. A. HERR, Administrator, etc. [No. 1082.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 950.

Messrs. H. Generes Dufour, L. Russell Alden, W. F. Evans, and E. T. Miller for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

April 22, 1912. Denied.

SALMEN BRICK & LUMBER COMPANY, LIMITED, Petitioner, v. DONALD & TAYLOR. [No. 1083.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 800.

Messrs. John D. Grace and Gustave Lemle for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

April 22, 1912. Denied

WILLIAM R. HOPKINS et al., Petitioners, v. CHARLES HEBARD et al. [No. 1087.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. C. Bentley Matthews for petitioners. Messrs. William A. Stone and John Franklin Shields for respondents.

April 29, 1912. Granted.

FRANK N. CHAPLIN and DAVID H. CHAPLIN, Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1072.]

706] *Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 879.

Messrs. P. F. Dunne, Charles H. Bates, Oscar A. Trippett, and Sherley C. Ward for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Knaebel for respondent.

April 29, 1912. Denied.

CITY OF ST. AUGUSTINE, Petitioner, v. MINNIE THOMPSON. [No. 1081.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 1019.

Messrs. E. P. Axtell and C. B. Rinehart for petitioner.

Messrs. William W. Dewhurst, Horatio Bisbee, and George C. Bedell for respondent.

April 29, 1912. Denied.

J. C. TURNER CYPRESS LUMBER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HENRY M. PFANN et al., etc. [No. 1095.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 69.

Messrs. Horatio Bisbee and George C. Bedell for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles M. Cooper and John C. Cooper for respondents.

April 29, 1912. Denied.

EMMA HARRIS, alias Emma R. Smith, et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA [No. 1067]; and DELLA BENNETT, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA [No. 1068]. Petitions for Writs of Certiorari.

Mr. Max Levy for plaintiffs in error. Solicitor General Lehmann and Assistant Attorney General Haar for defendant in error.

May 13, 1912. Granted.

1266

*FRANK M. ASHLEY, Petitioner, v. SAMUEL G. TATUM COMPANY. [No. 1042.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, first appeal, 108 C. C. A. 539, 186 Fed. 339, second appeal, 111 C. C. A. 279, 189 Fed. 357.

Mr. Frank E. Rapp for petitioner.

Messrs. Edmund E. Wood and William Ray Wood for respondent.

May 13, 1912. Denied.

WYLIE PERMANENT CAMPING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GAIL V. LYNCH. [No. 1088.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 386.

Mr. George E. Price for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Bernard Handlan and John H. Holt for respondent.

May 13, 1912. Denied.

CITY AND COUNTY OF DENVER et al., Petitioners, v. NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY et al. [No. 1127]; and CITY AND COUNTY OF DENVER et al., Petitioners, v. DENVER UNION WATER COMPANY et al. [No. 1128].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. George L. Nye, H. A. Lindsley, C. S. Thomas, C. W. Waterman, W. H. Bryant, and G. W. Richmond for petitioners.

Messrs. Joel F. Vaile, Henry McAllister, Jr., Gerald Hughes, and Clayton C. Dorsey for respondents.

May 27, 1912. Granted.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. TWENTY-FIVE PACKAGES OF PANAMA HATS. [No. 1134.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

*Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Mr. J. C. Adkins for petitioner.

Mr. Albert H. Washburn for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Granted.

225 U. S.

M. ANDERSON v. PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Claimant of the Steamship "Queen," etc. [No. 641]; and N. JORDAN v. PACIFIC COAST COMPANY, Claimant of the Steamship "Umatilla," etc. [No. 642].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to bring up the whole record.

Messrs. Graham Sumner and George W. Towle in support of the petition.

Mr. William Denman in opposition.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

W. H. STALEY et al., Petitioners, v. W. L. DERDEN. [No. 1080.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 672, 190 Fed. 1021.

Messrs. R. S. Neblett and Richard Mays for petitioners.

Messrs. W. J. McKie and Horace Chilton for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX REL. BEN B. JONES, Petitioner, v. WALTER L. FISHER, Secretary of the Interior. [No. 1105.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 46.

Messrs. Charles Cowles Tucker, H. B. F. Macfarland, J. Miller Kenyon, and E. S. Bailey for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Knaebel for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

PAUL A. PRIMEAU, Petitioner, v. OLIVE L. GRANFIELD, Executrix, etc. [No. 1106.]

709] Petition *for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 911.

Mr. Clarence J. Shearn for petitioner.

Mr. Clarence Blair Mitchell for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

HYGIENIC FLEECE UNDERWEAR COMPANY, Petitioner, v. PHOENIX KNITTING WORKS et al. [No. 1110.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 763.

Mr. Hector T. Fenton for petitioner.

Messrs. Joseph C. Frailey and H. N. Paul, Jr., for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

56 L. ed.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. J. E. HELMS. [No. 1119.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. William A. Blount and A. C. Blount, Jr., for petitioner.

Mr. R. P. Reese for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

MARX & RAWOLLE et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1121.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Customs Appeals.

Mr. B. A. Levett for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann and Assistant Attorney General Wemple for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

GERMAN BANK OF CARROLL COUNTY, Iowa, et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGE C. BALL, Receiver, etc. [No. 1122.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to the United States Circuit Court [710 of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 498, 187 Fed. 750.

Mr. Benjamin I. Salinger for petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

A. W. LAWTON, Petitioner, v. N. LESLIE CARPENTER et al., etc. [No. 1124.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 362.

Messrs. Joseph A. McCullough and William Garrard for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph E. Johnson for respondents.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

GEORGE ROUKOUS, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1126.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 353.

Messrs. Boyd B. Jones and Walter H. Barney for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

EDWARD H. HANCE et al., etc., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1135.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 191 Fed. 573.

Messrs. Joseph C. Frailey, H. N. Paul, Jr., and Charles L. Sturtevant for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

May 27, 1912. Denied.

UNITED RAILROADS OF SAN FRANCISCO, Petitioner, v. CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO et al. [No. 888.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 339, 190 Fed. 507.

Messrs. William M. Abbott and Joseph D. Redding for petitioner.

Messrs. Percy V. Long and Thomas E. Haven for respondents.

711] *June 7, 1912. Denied.

MERCHANTS & MINERS TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1143.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Samuel B. Adams and Daniel H. Hayne for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, and Solicitor General Lehmann, for respondent.

June 7, 1912. Denied.

W. B. QUAINANCE, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1144.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Customs Appeals.

Messrs. Wade H. Ellis, John A. Kratz, Jr., and Albert H. Washburn for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Wemple for respondent.

June 7, 1912. Denied.

HENRY F. SAMSTAG et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGE FROST COMPANY et al. [No. 830.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 105 C. C. A. 37, 180 Fed. 739.

Mr. John S. Seymour for petitioners.

Mr. Horace A. Dodge for respondents.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

FRED W. WOLF COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MOUNT VERNON REFRIGERATING COMPANY. [No. 1141.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Frank H. Scott, Edgar A. Bancroft, John E. MacLeish, and Ernest Wilkinson for petitioner.

Messrs. Murray Seasongood and J. B. Waight for respondent.

*June 10, 1912. Denied.

[712]

CENTRAL PARK, NORTH & EAST RIVER RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. FARMERS LOAN & TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, et al. [No. 1146.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 963.

Messrs. William N. Dykman and Arthur E. Goddard for petitioner.

Messrs. Frederick Geller and Bronson Winthrop for respondents.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

WILLIAMS SOAP COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. J. B. WILLIAMS COMPANY. [No. 1158.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 384.

Messrs. Charles T. Hanna and Thomas A. Daily for petitioners.

Mr. V. H. Lockwood for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

DEGRASSE PAPER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN SULPHITE PULP COMPANY. [No. 1161.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 193 Fed. 653.

Mr. Henry Schreiter for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

*BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HARRY A. GAWINSKE. [No. 1162.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Mr. George E. Hamilton for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

VICKSBURG, SHREVEPORT, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ANNIE MAY ROGERS et al. [No. 1163.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 65.

Messrs. Joseph Hirsh and J. Blanc Monroe for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

STEAMSHIP GOOD HOPE, J. Harding, Claimant, Petitioner, v. CHELSEA FIBRE MILLS [No. 1164]; STEAMSHIP GOOD HOPE, Edward N. Norton et al., Claimants, Petitioners, v. ROBERT BALFOUR et al., etc. [No. 1165]; and STEAMSHIP GOOD HOPE, Edward N. Norton et al., Claimants, Petitioners, v. HENRY P. WINTER et al., etc. [No. 1166].

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for petitioners.

Mr. Douglas Campbell for Chelsea Fibre Mills, Mr. George Whitefield Betts, Jr., for Balfour et al. and Winter et al., respondents.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

GIUSEPPE MORELLO, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1168.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals 714for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 37, 189 Fed. 305.

Mr. W. Bourke Cockran for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann, for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

FRANK T. WELLS, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES [No. 1011]; RUFUS J. IRELAND, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES [No. 1012]; WILBERFORCE SULLY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES [No. 1013]; GEORGE W. DALLY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES [No. 1014].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 870.

Messrs. John C. Spooner and Joseph P. Cotton, Jr., for petitioners.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

56 L. ed.

ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF HARTFORD, CONN., Petitioner, v. BENJAMIN LUCAS OUTLAW. [No. 1156.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 862.

Mr. Levi H. David for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Denied.

ORDER OF ST. BENEDICT OF NEW JERSEY, Petitioner, v. ALBERT STEINHAUSER, Individually, etc. [No. 1157.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. J. Warren Greene and Frank W. Arnold for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Granted.

WILLIAM M. MCCOACH, Collector, etc., Petitioner, v. MINEHILL & SCHUYLKILL HAVEN *RAILROAD COMPANY. [715 [No. 1169].

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann, for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

June 10, 1912. Granted.

KATE C. ARCHER, Petitioner, v. GREENVILLE SAND & GRAVEL COMPANY et al. [No. 1170.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. T. M. Miller and Percy Bell for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

June 10, 1912. Granted.

A. D. GIBBS, Appellant, v. INTERNATIONAL BANKING CORPORATION et al. [No. 127.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Allison D. Gibbs for appellant.

No appearance for appellees.

April 2, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

COMMERCIAL STATE BANK & TRUST COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. L. BATES, Trustee. [No. 284.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi.

See same case below, 96 Miss. 386, 51 So. 599.

Messrs. Marcellus Green, Charles A. Douglas, Gibbs L. Baker, Thomas Ruffin, and Hugh H. O'Bear for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. W. R. Harper and Robert P. Willing for defendant in error.

April 2, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for plaintiff in error.

[716] *TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. B. B. CAUBLE. [No. 493.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. W. L. Hall for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Theodore Mack for defendant in error.

April 2, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

CHICAGO GREAT WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM F. OWENS. [No. 538.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Asa G. Briggs for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson for defendant in error.

April 2, 1912. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF ARKANSAS. [No. 1078.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas.

Mr. James P. Clarke for defendant in error.

April 9, 1912. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. James P. Clarke for the defendant in error.

TRUSSED CONCRETE STEEL COMPANY, Appellant, v. FIDELITY STORAGE CORPORATION et al. [No. 291.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. Jackson H. Ralston, Frederick L. Siddons, and William E. Richardson for appellant.

Messrs. Alan O. Clephane and Walter C. Clephane for appellees.

April 11, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

*W. H. BYLES, Plaintiff in Error, v. [717] STATE OF ARKANSAS. [No. 267.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas.

See same case below, 93 Ark. 612, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 774, 126 S. W. 94.

Mr. A. C. Lyon for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Hal L. Norwood for defendant in error.

April 18, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

JUSTO ARMSTERDAM et al., Appellants, v. FELIX PUENTE et al. [No. 402.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill, H. P. Leake, and W. V. Robbins for appellants.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, Myer Cohen, and John Spalding Flannery for appellees.

April 22, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellants.

CITIZENS' SAVING & TRUST COMPANY, Appellant, v. C. C. FOERSTNER, Trustee, etc. [No. 628.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Thomas H. Hogsett for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

April 22, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

SAMUEL LOEB, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF GEORGIA. [No. 237.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Georgia.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder for defendant in error.

April 25, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

May 27, 1912. Motion to set aside judgment of dismissal for failure to print the record granted, and cause restored to the docket.

*JOHN F. HANSON, Plaintiff in Error, [718] v. EMIL GUSTAFSON. [No. 241.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

May 1, 1912. Dismissed with costs pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

May 13, 1912. Ordered that the order entered herein on May 1, dismissing this case for failure to print the transcript of the record, be set aside and the cause restored to the docket.

JACOB OPPENHEIMER, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA. [No. 245.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

Mr. Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

May 2, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JOHN L. JAMES, Bankrupt, Appellant, v. STONE & COMPANY, Creditors, et al. [No. 403.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. L. L. Lewis, Samuel A. Anderson, and H. L. Stevens, for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

56 L. ed.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. ELIZABETH BOUCHER, as Administratrix, etc. [No. 253.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin.

Messrs. John L. Erdall and William A. Hayes for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Oscar H. Eeke for defendant in error.

January 9, 1912. Dismissed per stipulation.

STATE OF ARKANSAS, Complainant, v. STATE OF TENNESSEE. [No. 8, Original.]

Messrs. Hal L. Norwood and Caruthers Ewing for complainant.

Mr. Charles T. Cates, Jr., for defendant.

April 22, 1912. Ordered that the demurrer of the defendant, filed herein, be overruled, and leave is granted to answer by the first day of the next term.

1271

APPENDIX I.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

IN MEMORIAM JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN.

On Monday, October 16, 1911, two days after the event, the Chief Justice said:

Gentlemen of the Bar:

It is my painful duty to announce the death of Mr. Justice Harlan. The court will stand adjourned until Wednesday morning next, without the transaction of business of any kind to-day.

The Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States and the officers of the court met in the court room in the Capitol at 12 o'clock, Saturday, December 16, 1911.

On motion of Mr. Louis T. Michener, Mr. Augustus E. Willson was chosen Chairman and Mr. James H. McKenney, Secretary.

On taking the Chair, Mr. Willson said:

Gentlemen of the Bar:

In the death of John Marshall Harlan, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, our country has suffered a very great public loss, and the Bar of the Supreme Court and a host of personal friends bear a very great personal as well as official loss. I feel that the suggestion that I should be Chairman of this meeting is a token of your loving recollection of Justice Harlan and his loyalty to his friendships, which never depended on eminence, rank, wealth, or power, but folded to himself many, just because they loved him faithfully.

As a boy in his office, I loved and honored him, then, as devotedly as when he came to be the great Judge, and, in the best sense of the expression and its most eminent instance, the Grand Old Man of the United States, and I realize that I have been called here because it would have pleased him.

I leave to others, long and constant in attendance in this great court, and versed in its ways and traditions, to review his work as that of one of the noblest figures in judicial history. He was greatly loved and honored by his intimates, younger friends, who knew him in everyday life of office and home, and with even greater affection and respect than by those who saw him only in the robes of the Justice.

He was a great big man physically, mentally, and in spirit, simple-hearted as a child, and his rugged, sturdy, great-hearted and kindly spirit shone in his face and his walk.

His work as a member of the Louisiana Commission, which solved a grave domestic complication in a way long justified by the course of our country's history, and as a member of the Behring's Sea Tribunal, which arranged satisfactorily a great international dispute, constitute a part of the great peace-making events of history.

His record as a Judge is wonderful, in the long period which it covered, nearly two generations of sustained hard work of the very greatest importance, interest, and usefulness; in his strong common sense, wisdom, energy, industry, and strength; wonderful in his spiritual consciousness of the will of the people and the future of our country; and wonderful in his power to understand the lessons of the past and the hopes and chances of the future of our people. No man in all our history, not even Abraham Lincoln, was, in the best spirit of the expression, more truly the man of the people, more naturally and instinctively part of the people, in blood and bone, in character and temper, in their ideas and their feelings, their likes and their dislikes, their hopes and their fears, and their joys and their sorrows.

He walked and talked and lived and toiled among the people as one of them, set apart from them only by the eminence of soul and body which made him a great and natural leader of men by sheer force of his splendid gifts of character and presence.

But he was most wonderful of all in his great spirit. He loved his God and his service devotedly and vitally. He honored and loved his father and mother, his brothers and sisters, and all his kin better than he loved himself.

He tenderly cherished and loved his wife best of all, who, through all their life together, far past their golden wedding, was his dear helpmeet and his best, most trusted and most revered counselor; and he loved his children and grandchildren and his friends and neighbors in the good old-fashioned way. He was the devoted friend of every one of the judges of this court from the beginning to the end of his work here. He was cordially friendly to the members of the bar, and felt deeply their friendship to him, and the ties of mutual regard and esteem between him and the lawyers were exceptionally strong and warm.

I can see him to-day as I saw him when as a boy I entered his office forty-one years ago. He seemed a very mountain of a man, of noble presence, one of the tallest and most superbly built men in all Kentucky, a giant at a bar which was rich in great judges and distinguished lawyers, and in that goodly company he was easily the leader.

He was great as a pleader, and of such tremendous earnestness and power as an advocate that it was not easy at first to understand how such an impassioned advocate could make an impartial judge. And, withal, he was always most regardful of the rights and feelings and opinions of others.

He had a splendid memory, kindly and joyful, a genuine great-hearted sense of humor, keen, wholesome, natural, and easy coming, which made him a delightful host, a joyful guest, and loved friend and neighbor. He loved liberty above all other rights and blessings, and sternly resisted every power and influence which tended to restrict it; but it was liberty under the law, and he had no toleration for violence or lawlessness in society or business.

He was Adjutant General of Kentucky at twenty. He was a brave and gallant soldier of the Union, Colonel of the Tenth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and Brevet and Acting Brigadier General.

He was twice nominated by acclamation, without seeking it, for Governor of Kentucky, and his campaigns were models of intrepid courage, patriotism, statesmanship, and manly spirit. He was also the hero in his youth of a noted campaign for Congress.

Of his life as a Judge, I shall only mention his dissenting opinion in the Civil Rights cases, of which Roscoe Conkling, a great leader, and until then not wholly friendly, wrote to Justice Harlan that it was the greatest opinion, in its learning, patriotism, and statesmanship, in the history of our country and court. I state this substance of the letter from my recollection of reading it many years ago.

A mighty host of people, both lawyers and laymen, have always believed, and still cling to the faith, that that opinion expresses with great force, insight, and clearness, the spirit of our race and breed of people, and that it will yet be the law of our folk and land, expressly declared by the court, and written into the Bill of Rights.

To the last week of his life, he worked steadily, through practically every day of every term of his long judicial career, excepting while absent on the Behring Sea Tribunal, and died in the harness. He had a strong and useful part in considering and deciding thousands of Supreme Court cases. He read hundreds of thousands of pages of records and briefs, and heard thousands of arguments. He did his whole duty, throughout, loyally, bravely, and unselfishly, with dauntless faith and zeal, and won the love and respect of every person of the many thousands that got to know him.

At his last breath, suddenly, for just an instant, his eyes, which had been for some time closed, suddenly opened, with a bright and clear light, and his whole expression changed and a look of strength and youth seemed to come into his face and form, as if he had rallied the spirit and strength of his manhood's prime in a supreme effort to meet the trial of the crossing over, and as if a blessed vision opened before him to cheer him, as he answered the last summons, and this mortal put on immortality, and then his eyes closed, the muscles relaxed, and in his last sleep he lay, and said no more.

APPENDIX I.

On motion of Mr. Solicitor General Lehmann, the Chair appointed a Committee on Resolutions.

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Frederick W. Lehmann, Missouri, Chairman; Mr. Joseph W. Bailey, Texas; Mr. Elihu Root, New York; Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Ohio; Mr. William O. Bradley, Kentucky; Mr. Henry E. Davis, District of Columbia; Mr. Swagar Sherley, Kentucky; Mr. William F. Mattingly, District of Columbia; Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Illinois.

Mr. Solicitor General Lebmann, for the committee, presented the following RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the members of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States record their profound appreciation of the life and labors which were brought to a close by the death of Mr. Justice Harlan.

He was dedicated at his birth to the profession of the law by his father, who was himself an honored and distinguished member of that profession, and prophecy of a personal career was never more completely fulfilled than that which spoke in the christening of John Marshall Harlan. He came into an heroic epoch of American history, and, mentally and physically, was cast in an heroic mold. In his earliest manhood he entered upon the practice of his profession and at the same time took part in the political controversies by which the country was then deeply disturbed, and which nowhere tried the mettle of American manhood more than in that border land of contention of which his native state of Kentucky was a part; and when the discussion of the hustings and of legislative halls proved unequal to the settlement of the problems, he met the full measure of patriotic duty by responding to the call to arms and sharing in the perils and privations which an appeal to the arbitrament of war made necessary. Returning, after distinguished service in the field, to the practice of his profession, he continued his interest and his efforts in behalf of the public welfare, and in the contests of politics was a willing leader of the forces which held his faith, alike whether the prospect was of victory or of defeat.

Disciplined by the experiences of civil and military life and by the duties of public and private station, he came, in the full maturity of his powers, to this tribunal, whose broad jurisdiction imposes upon its members responsibilities as serious as can rest upon the conscience of man. For nearly thirty-four years he honored his high position by faithful discharge of its duties. The record of his service is to be found in a hundred and twenty-six volumes of reported cases in the determination of which, with few exceptions, he participated. In seven hundred cases he wrote the opinion of the court, and in many others he wrote opinions, sometimes of concurrence, for reasons separately stated, and sometimes of radical dissent; but whether he spoke for others or only for himself, and whether in assent or in dissent, it was always in the language of honest and earnest conviction.

Personal and property rights, individual and corporate interests, the reciprocal relations of citizen, state, and nation, in ever-changing phases, presented themselves as subjects for adjudication. Indifferent in no instance, there was, however, an especial appeal to him in cases involving those rights of the individual which it was the purpose of the Amendments to the Federal Constitution to secure, and he supported the national authority in its fullest scope as the sure means of maintaining those rights.

His style proclaimed the man. It was simple, direct, strong, and rugged. His opinions are supported by abundant authority, but make no vain display of learning, and of their meaning there is no room for doubt.

Virile and masterful, his strength was subdued to a conscience sensitive to right, and his purposes were shaped by a character of perfect integrity. Throughout the many years that fell to his part, as a man, citizen, soldier, and judge, he kept without stain the name he bore and which he cherished as the guide and inspiration of his life.

Resolved, That the Attorney General be requested to present these resolutions to the court for entry upon the record, and that the chairman of the meeting be directed to send to the family of Justice Harlan a copy of the resolutions, with an expression of our sympathy for them in the loss they have sustained.

REMARKS OF MR. SOLICITOR GENERAL LEHMANN.

Mr. Chairman:

It was just nine years ago that the members of this Bar gathered at a dinner given to Mr. Justice Harlan in recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession to the Supreme Court. Speaking of the court on that occasion, he said : "There is abundant reason to believe that the people confide in its patriotism, its integrity, and its learning, and have an abiding faith that no permanent or irreparable harm will come to the Republic by any action that court will ever take."

For the standing of the court with the people, Justice Harlan was under great responsibility, for to him had come great opportunity.

Of the sixty-five men who hold and have held positions on this Bench, only two exceeded him in length of service, and no one of them all participated in the determination of so many cases.

The position of Marshall must always remain distinctive, for he was the pioneer in a new field of jurisprudence,—that of constitutional law; and not only was he Chief Justice for so many years, but through a large part of that time he seemed to be the court itself. In the thirty volumes of reports which record his service, from first Cranch to ninth Peters, the opinion of the court in nearly one half of the cases was delivered by the Chief Justice. The business of the court has grown too much to permit any member now to bear so large a share of its burdens.

The record of Justice Field runs through a hundred volumes of reports, from the sixty-eighth to the one hundred and sixty-seventh; and in six hundred and twenty cases he delivered the opinion of the court. Justice Harlan begins with volume ninety-five and continues to volume two hundred and twenty-one. Evidence of his labors is to be found in every volume of that long series save three, and these cover the time of his absence from the bench, but not from public duty, during his service as an arbitrator appointed by the United States in the Fur Seal Arbitration. In more than seven hundred opinions he spoke for the court.

But length of service and number of opinions, in themselves, attest nothing more than opportunity and industry. Justice Harlan had by nature the patriotism, the integrity, and the capacity for learning required for judicial service, and his faculties were developed to their highest efficiency by the education of schools and the experiences of active life. He was a country lawyer of the type of Otis and Adams in Massachusetts, Henry and Marshall in Virginia, Clay and Crittenden in his own State, and Lincoln and Douglas in Illinois. These men were general practitioners from necessity. Their situation and surroundings forbade specialization. The interests they represented were human. The issues in the cases they tried were of life, liberty, reputation, and property, in which the entire community felt a deep concern, and they became, as Justice Miller has said, by the nature of their duties, the molders of public sentiment on questions of government, and were every day engaged in the formation, the construction, and the enforcement of the laws.

The courthouse then, rather than the counting room, was the seat and center of political power, and proved ability in the contests of the forum was regarded as the best qualification for duty in legislative halls, on the bench, and in executive office.

The state of Kentucky was prolific of such men, and among them in his generation Justice Harlan stood in the front rank. At the age of forty-four he was a lawyer of ripe experience, had served with distinction in office and in the field, had met victory and defeat with the same temper, was strong, broad-minded, and sympathetic with his fellowmen, and so was equal to the great mission to which he was then called; and throughout his thirty-four years of service he contributed in the full measure of his great opportunity to strengthening the people's confidence in the patriotism, integrity, and learning of the court, and to confirming their faith that no permanent or irreparable harm will come to the Republic from any action the court will ever take.

Any expression we may record in appreciation of his career will be but a mockery of his memory if we do not take inspiration from his example and recognize that upon us, also, in our service at the bar, rests the duty to maintain undisturbed the confidence, and unshaken the faith of the people in their highest tribunal.

REMARKS OF MR. JOSEPH W. BAILEY.

In this place on any occasion, and in any place on this occasion, a lawyer would be naturally inclined to exaggerate—if, indeed, it could be exaggerated—the importance of the judiciary in our system of government; but I shall not yield to that inclination, because my training has produced in my mind a conviction that the legislative, executive, and judicial departments are each as essential as the others to the preservation of this Republic. In saying this, I do not mean that under all circumstances, and from every point of view, these three departments are equally important, for the most superficial thinking will convince us that they are not. In regulating the rights of property, and in defining the relation of men towards each other, obviously the legislature is more important than either the executive or the judiciary department; for if wicked or unwise legislators enact unjust or foolish laws, the more fearless the executive may be in their enforcement, and the more correct the judiciary may be in their construction, the worse it will be for our country and her people. Nor is the executive department without its greater importance in some respects; for upon the prompt and impartial enforcement of the law depends not only the peace and good order of every community, but also the personal protection of every citizen. The courts could exert but little power over such matters unless the executive department should do its duty.

There is, however, an office performed by the judiciary which exceeds in its consequences for good or evil, according as it is well done or otherwise, anything which our legislatures and executives have been authorized to do. We speak of these three departments as distinct, independent, and co-ordinate; but even those who assert and strive to maintain that relation between them fully understand that the judiciary alone can undo what both of the other departments have joined in doing. The judiciary is often required to hold the balance between the executive and legislative departments, and in obedience to its command each must forbear to encroach upon the rights or duties of the other. In that respect, it is supremely true that the judiciary is more than co-ordinate with the others, and is obviously superior to both of them.

This was the first government ever organized in the history of the world under which a court was empowered to annul legislative acts. There were some wise men, it is true, in our early days, who denied the existence of that power, but it was vindicated for all time to come in a memorable opinion delivered by the great Chief Justice whose name was bestowed upon our departed brother. I have never been a partisan of John Marshall, and in other places I have not hesitated to criticize some of his opinions; but no man has ever answered, and no man can ever answer, the overwhelming argument by which he asserted and established the right and duty of this court to hold null and void every act which contravenes our Constitution.

With such a function to perform, and clothed with a power greater than any court before it has ever possessed, it is as much to the credit of our people as it is to the honor of this court that we can still repeat, as the learned Solicitor General has done, the memorable sentence in which Judge Harlan declared that there is a universal confidence that no harm will ever come to this Republic through the judgments or through the conduct of this great tribunal. To have been even the humblest member of such a court would be enough to satisfy the ambition of any man; but to have been, as Judge Harlan was, a conspicuous member of it for so many years, and to have borne himself through all that time with a dignity and a wisdom that has inseparably linked his name with the names of Marshall, Story, and Taney, is a glory which can come to but few men in our country.

Judge Harlan was not always of gentle manner on the bench; but his interruptions, which sometimes appeared to proceed from that impatience with which a great and highly trained intellect follows the halting processes of a less luminous mind, were often due to a wholly different reason. I witnessed an episode which so well illustrates what I have just said that I think it worth relating in this presence. Something like two years ago, I was called here to argue a case in which a sovereign state was the complainant, and my associate was a talented young lawyer who was letter perfect in that case, but who had never before appeared in this court. The matter was to be presented on a motion for which, under the rules, as they then stood, an hour was allowed to each side, and I suggested that my associate should open our case, intending that if he presented it satisfactorily I would leave him to occupy the entire time allotted to us; but he was so full of his case that he began the presentation of it in a way that would have required hours. I was growing a little nervous over the situation myself, but I hesitated to interrupt him, because I thought it might confuse him; and just as I was debating with myself what it was best to do, Judge Harlan called on him in a stern voice to "come to your point." My young friend, confused beyond description, managed to say that he was coming to it; but Judge Harlan replied that his time would be consumed before he reached it, and that in the meantime the court would have no idea of the question he was presenting to it. It was a trying experience for a new member of the bar, and I felt it so keenly that I shared the young man's resentment. A few days afterwards I happened to meet Judge Harlan as he was coming to the Capitol, and I told him bluntly that I regarded his rebuke of that young man as little less than cruel. Instead of exhibiting an irritation, which would have been entirely permissible against a member of his Bar who had presumed to criticize his conduct, he turned to me and, smiling, said: "My dear Senator, you do not understand my purpose. I saw that the young man was embarrassed by his surroundings, and I desired to relieve him from his embarrassment." I told him that I thought he had chosen a curious way of producing such a result, and he advised me to watch that young man when he next appeared in this court. It so happened that a reargument of that very case was ordered, and when my associate and myself appeared here to argue it at the next term, I found Judge Harlan's remedy for a lawyer's embarrassment completely justified. When the learned Justices interrogated my associate upon the second argument, he answered them with as little embarrassment and with more confidence than I could summon, and acquitted himself so admirably from the beginning to the end of his address to the court that at the close of it Judge Harlan looked over to me, plainly pleased with the outcome, and afterwards recalled the circumstance more than once.

But, Mr. Chairman, I will not detain this meeting longer, for our resolutions and our memorial addresses will not perpetuate Judge Harlan's fame. By his own words and deeds he has builded a monument to his memory which will inspire our children to venerate his name long after we have followed him across the river. As long as this court exists, and it will exist as long as this Republic survives, the fame of John Marshall Harlan will be cherished in undiminished honor and glory.

REMARKS OF MR. ELIHU ROOT.

Mr. Chairman:

I beg to second the resolutions which have been presented, and by doing so to pay the tribute of gratitude which every lover of his country must feel for a life devoted to its service with power and sincerity.

The passing of Mr. Justice Harlan severs the tie between two eras of our national development. When he came to the court thirty-four years ago, he became a part of a court made up by the men of the great Civil War, all appointed by President Lincoln and President Grant, except one, Mr. Justice Clifford, who was the surviving connecting link between the court of the War and of the preceding era in which he received his commission from President Buchanan. Justice Harlan was the sole connection between the court of the War, the court of Lincoln and Grant, with the new court that faces the new problems in a new period of our national development; and as he goes, the old court disappears and the new times confront us. There are clocks moved by electricity from some central station; their hands remain motionless as the minute passes, but at its end they move instantly to the next, and lo, another minute of time has come. As Mr. Justice Clifford passed away, the hand moved from the ante-bellum days to the period of war and reconstruction, and as Mr. Justice Harlan passed, the hand moved from the period of war and reconstruction to the new times and new problems before us. He, Mr. Chairman, was a conspicuous illustration of a truth so often exhibited in the history of American jurisprudence,—often in that of England, more often in that of America,—the truth that more important than learning, more important than the logical faculty, more important than all scholastic qualities, is the force of character, the sympathy with life, the capacity for measuring the needs and the impulses of constantly developing and changing life which come to the men who have been significant figures in great affairs, to men who are intensely human and who have dealt with great forces. Justices Harlan did not reason about it, but his nature compelled him to illustrate the truth that in every judicial decision there are two primary elements; one is the ascertainment of the law, and the other is the application of the law to the human problems of the moment. He was intensely human, a natural contender, and he rejoiced in conflict. Life upon the Bench never emasculated him. He never wrapt himself about with the mantle of over-sensitive dignity, which sometimes minimizes judicial strength. He asked for no subservience from the Bar, and he rejoiced in the presence of counsel who stood up with manly assertion of a client's rights. His intense interest in the affairs of the world kept him young, and his youth maintained his usefulness. He could not lose his interest in the affairs of life. Sometimes, when, in executive office, I myself have been struggling with difficult questions that were attracting public attention and interest and public thought, his tall form would make its appearance in my office, and he would come in the kindly confidence of old friendship and sympathy, to tell me how, from his point of view, it would seem, and to warn me of dangers he could foresee. Sometimes he would say: "Be careful not to run against the doctrine of that or the other case in what you do." And so he lived a full life to the end, rendering service for which no one could compensate, and for which we can only render that great appreciation which is, after all, more important for us than for him. For, to mark such a life and such a career of service with honor, in order that all men may realize their worth, is of primary consequences to the pure and devoted administration of our law, and the just exercise of our governmental powers in all departments for the future. No one can be a pessimist, no one can despair of his country's future, who sees that such men as John Marshall Harlan can live in honor and can be appreciated by his countrymen.

REMARKS OF MR. WILLIAM O. BRADLEY.

Mr. Chairman:

When I entered this chamber I did not intend to say one word, but have concluded that, coming from the state that gave the great Justice birth, from the people who knew him better than any other people, from the people who loved him better than any other people could love him, it would be very inappropriate for me to be silent on this occasion. I knew Justice Harlan intimately from my young manhood, and during all those years I sincerely loved him, up to the moment of his death. No man who was ever born in Kentucky, was better loved than John Marshall Harlan save, perhaps, Abraham Lincoln. I esteem it one of the great privileges and honors of my life to have intimately known Justice Harlan, and to have enjoyed his friendship. Judge Harlan was in truth a many-sided man, as a lawyer, soldier, jurist, politician, Christian, citizen, and friend. As a man, measured by the highest standard, I never knew his superior, and doubt if I have ever known his equal. Kindness of heart, generosity of spirit, were traits of his character well known to all. As a soldier, he was a brave and just man, treating at all times those with whom he met in combat and those who fell into his hands as prisoners with the very greatest kindness and humanity. He was a patriot; he was a true American. There has never lived a greater American. He despised oppression. His heart went out, as his opinions will show, to those who were weak and defenseless. There never was a time when he was either ashamed, afraid, or unable to take the part of the lowly. As a politician in Kentucky, he has had but few equals. In the great campaigns that he made in that state, he stirred into life and awoke to action men who, through his example, after he came upon the Bench, constructed a great party, which, when he was a candidate, was in its infancy. He intensely loved his state, and his heart was big enough to love the whole country. I remember when the case of Taylor v. Beckham was argued in this court. At that time intense feeling existed in Kentucky. It was indeed a period that tried men's souls as well as appealed to the sound judgment of the people of our state. During the argument the sympathies of Justice Harlan were so awakened that he shed tears. They were tears of love and sympathy for his great state, tears because of her misfortunes, tears because of the distressing and acute situation. No man was ever more loyal to his state, and no man ever more loyal to his country. As has been said, the monument of Justice Harlan has been erected by his own hand. Never was there a truer statement. Through all these long years, more or less marked with strife growing out of the War and great political agitation, Justice Harlan slowly, but surely, builded that monument. In sunshine and storm, one stone after another was laid by his master hand, until, when the end came, the monument had been completed. He was a most imposing specimen of manhood. I doubt if in this nation of ours there has ever been a more commanding figure than that of Mr. Justice Harlan, and in the midst of all his experiences as a man as well as a politician and as a great Judge, I have often thought of the peculiar aptness to him of the poem—

“As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swell from the vale and midway leaves the storm—
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.”

Ripe as a scholar, ripe as a man, ripe as a jurist, ripe as a citizen, there has never been gathered to the Harvest Home a richer sheaf than when his life ended here and he entered into a glorious eternity.

REMARKS OF MR. HANNIS TAYLOR.

Mr. Chairman:

During the storm of death that recently raged in this court, a great oak went down with all of its leaves fresh and green upon it. There had been no decay at the roots, no weakening at the heart, no “dying in the top.” The pride of the forest was simply forced to yield to an irresistible power no mortal, however strong, could resist. Whenever I meditate upon the masterful men who founded this Republic, they always loom up large before me, like the original forest trees,—stern, stately, heroic men who were never touched by the refining yet enervating influence of an over-culture. As our civilization advanced, the initial growth was cut down and its place taken by smaller trees perhaps of finer fibre. But the new growth does not so appeal to the imagination. It is not so luxuriant. Among the new and more severely trained men, we often find a mind like an old sedge field, worn out by excessive cultivation.

John Marshall Harlan was an American man of the old type. He sprang from a race of men who were at once jurists and statesmen. We should never forget that those who founded this government and administered it down to the Civil War were jurists and statesmen of a type which the English Bar never produced. When Lord Erskine, after he had become the monarch of Westminster Hall, passed into Parliament, he shriveled like a weakling. When the younger Pitt, who became the leader of Parliament, tried his fortunes in Westminster Hall, he shriveled like a weakling. The peculiar political conditions created by the new American democracy forced the leaders of the American Bar to become both jurists and statesmen. The ideal product of the new system was Daniel Webster, who could have overthrown Erskine in Westminster Hall and then surpassed the younger Pitt in Parliament. Mr. Justice Harlan had in a high degree the dual equipment. He was not only a great advocate with an inborn genius for law, but he was a great tribunitian orator who would have adorned a Senate anywhere. I have heard many say that if fortune had detained him in the political arena, he would have become President of the United States. Nature made him of Presidential size. I can never forget a scene I once witnessed at Paris, when the Behring Sea Arbitration Tribunal was sitting there, with John Marshall Harlan of Kentucky at one end of the court, and John Tyler Morgan of Alabama at the other. Both were then in the Indian summer of their manhood,—Harlan with his noble and matchless form, the God-gifted Morgan, with that beautiful face and head that sculptors and painters might have loved to copy. My heart swelled with pride as I looked upon those two great American citizens, who had been opposing generals in the Civil War, and fancied that I saw in them reproductions of Brutus and Cicero. The fact is that there is a very close resemblance between the Roman Bar and the American Bar. The members of each had to be masters in the forum and in the Senate; the members of each had to be masters of parliamentary as well as legal procedure.

Destiny was kind when it led Mr. Justice Harlan away from the turbid arena of national politics into the "unvexed silence of a student's cell," where he was able to work for more than thirty years for the expansion and readjustment of our marvelously flexible Federal Constitution. I say expansion and readjustment because we should never forget that all law, public and private, is a living and growing organism that changes as the relations of society change. In the words of the great German jurist, Savigny, "law is simply a part and parcel of national life; a member of a nation's body, not a garment merely, which has been made to please the fancy, and which can be taken off at pleasure and exchanged for another." Law is a part of the life of people, like their social habits and their language, and as such it must grow with their growth and wither with their decay. Never in the constitutional life of any people has the organic development been so vast and rapid as that which has taken place here since the existing Federal Constitution went into effect. During the very short period in which the thirteen scattered communities that fringed our Atlantic seaboard towards the close of the seventeenth century have been expanding across the continent the dissolving views of change have followed each other like the pictures in a panorama. In expanding with that expansion, in adapting itself to the changes and relations resulting therefrom, the American Constitution has developed an elasticity, a growing power, entirely beyond the cumbrous process of amendment its terms provide. When the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, involving a single subject-matter, are considered as they should be, as a single transaction, the fact remains that the Constitution of the United States has been amended but once since 1804, a period of one hundred and seven years. And yet, during all that time, it has been passing rapidly, despite its rigid and dogmatic form, through a marvelous process of unparalleled development, chiefly through the subtle agency of judge-made law, ever flowing from a generous fountain, the Supreme Court of the United States.

No man who has been a member of that court during the last fifty years has done more than Mr. Justice Harlan to enrich that stream of judge-made law, whereby our apparently rigid Constitution has been enabled to expand with the growth of the nation. Without the elasticity drawn from that source our intricate Federal system would have perished long ago, as did the rigid paper constitutions born of the French Revolution. No man has done more of recent years than Mr. Justice Harlan to infuse into our growing Constitution the advancing spirit of the people which is its very breath of life. His popular tendencies were always helpful, because they were always in the right direction. Sixteen years ago, in the Sugar Trust Case, he foresaw all that was to come when he said: "In my judgment, the general government is not placed by the Constitution in such a condition of helplessness that it must fold its arms and remain inactive while capital combines under the name of a corporation to destroy competition, not in one state only, but throughout the entire country, in the buying and selling of articles—especially the necessities of life—that go into commerce among the states. . . . To the general government has been committed the control of commercial intercourse among the states, to the end that it may be free at all times from any restraints except such as Congress may impose or permit for the benefit of the whole country. The common government of all the people is the only one that can adequately deal with a matter which directly and imperiously affects the entire commerce of the country, which concerns equally all the people of the Union, and which, it must be confessed, cannot be adequately controlled by any one state.” It was his comfort to see before he died these great and necessary principles fully recognized.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKBURN ESTERLINE.

Mr. Chairman:

In seconding the resolutions I shall speak only of the deep interest which Mr. Justice Harlan always entertained for young men. Even though he lived more than seventy-eight years, he never grew old. And from the time he first began to think for himself until he closed that long and remarkable career, he never failed in his interest and efforts for the young men of his time. For them he seemed to feel a real responsibility. Of him this should not now fail to be said. His efforts for them were directed in various ways. He drew them about him in earnest conversation always lofty. He bestowed upon them that sound and invaluable advice and counsel which came from his extensive acquaintance with great men and his vast knowledge of big things and the wonderful ways of the world. For more than twenty years he lectured in one of the great law schools of the nation located at the Capital. Thousands of students drawn from all the states and from foreign nations have sat before him and listened in admiration while he expounded the Constitution and the great opinions of Marshall. Dull was the man who was not thrilled when he dwelt on such mighty words as “the trial of all crimes shall be by jury;” or, “no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law;” or, “this Constitution and all laws passed in pursuance thereof shall be the supreme law of the land.” It was written by the poet Goethe that “the destiny of any nation at any given time depends on the opinions of its young men under five-and-twenty.” If that statement be but partly true, Mr. Justice Harlan rendered a service to his country in teaching and inspiring its young men, the length and breadth of which service the world may never know. It stands to his everlasting credit.

As the students left him and went back to the various states, his spirit and hope and good will went along. In many instances a correspondence ensued. Unlike most men, he had a capacity for letter writing. And here was a trait of character which portrayed the colossal mind always at work on current and great subjects,—always urging,—always encouraging,—always inspiring by his own unique personality. As late as August 12, 1911, only sixty-three days before he triumphed in death, and while in the quiet of his summer home on the banks of the St. Lawrence,—it must have been about the going down of the sun,—he wrote with his own hand a long letter to a young friend, in which these remarkable words appear: “The passage of the Veto Bill in Parliament practically wipes out the House of Lords as a power in England. We are to have no more governing there by titles or heredity. This is good. In the end Britain, if it is to last, must have a union of states or dominions with local Parliaments to deal with domestic matters and a General Parliament to deal with imperial or Empire matters.” But he did not stop there. While writing the same letter, he shifted his mind from the affairs of the people of the Old World to the affairs of the people of the country he had served so long and loved so well, and continued: “I hope that the President will put his feet down firmly on the recall of judges in Arizona and New Mexico, while in territorial condition. It is one thing for these people, after becoming states, to amend their constitutions, and provide for the recall of judges. It is quite a different thing for Congress to give its sanction to the principle of the ‘recall’ by admitting those territories into the Union with constitutions providing for the recall of judges. No people, it seems to me, are fit to come into the Union as states who are willing to put the 'recall' of judges into their fundamental law. Whether a particular territory shall be admitted into the Union as a state is a matter of discretion with Congress. That discretion should be exercised so as to maintain sound principles that are recognized as such by Anglo-Saxon people. Upon the question whether the 'recall' of judges is republican in the constitutional sense, I express no opinion; for that question may come up for judicial determination. I only speak of the 'recall,' as a matter of public policy, and that far I may appropriately go."

Mr. Chairman, we shall miss him, but his influence can never die. Oh, the clods of the valley shall be sweet unto him. The result of his labors will endure as long as the Constitution and liberty shall last. Of all that is so worthily and truly said of this great and good man, to my mind the noblest and sweetest phase of his life is his association with the young men of his country, exchanging ideas and expressing sentiments of liberty and the Constitution, national sovereignty and state's rights. Even now I can hear his parting voice repeating unto them the inspiring words of the poet:

"Are these thy views, proceed, illustrious youth,
And virtue guard thee to the throne of truth."

REMARKS OF MR. FRANKLIN W. COLLINS.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Bar:

If I may be permitted to add a word to the tributes which have been paid to the memory of this illustrious man,—speaking for the younger members of the bar and the younger men of the country, who regarded Mr. Justice Harlan with a feeling akin to reverence, for to them he was both oracle and friend,—his loss, or rather our loss, seems well nigh irreparable, and his passing will be deeply mourned for many years to come.

To us he was indeed the ideal jurist, patriot, and citizen.

At the time of his demise I doubt if any man in the whole land occupied a higher or larger niche in the affections of the American people than he. This is not difficult to understand. His love of and faith in the people were only equalled by their affection for and confidence in him.

He never lost sight of the fact that he was a minister of justice, and that the humblest as well as the highest are entitled to its protecting arm.

Justice, equal, exact, and eternal, seasoned with mercy, was his constant aim.

He was a hard hitter but a fair fighter, and after the smoke of battle had cleared away, there was no rancor in his bosom, there was no bitterness in his soul. This marks the line of cleavage between the truly great and the really little. This is what lifted Lincoln above his contemporaries.

In his reverence for the organic law, in bodily and mental stature, in imperial brow, in militant and majestic mien, as well as strength of purpose, he more nearly resembled Daniel Webster than any man of his time.

There were three strong strands running through the life mantle which the great Justice wove and wore for seventy-eight honored years,—piety, philanthropy, and patriotism,—love of God, love of man, and love of country.

In his death the American people have suffered an incomparable loss, for indeed he was their faithful counselor and protector, a great tribune of the people, on whose wisdom, patriotism, and probity, they could confidently rely in every crisis with which the highest court had to deal. I knew him well and count the remembrance of his friendship as one of my most cherished possessions. To know him intimately was to love him devotedly, and to enlarge the understanding greatly.

Of him another Tennyson might as worthily sing, as England's great bard once sang of Wellington:

"And thus he bore without abuse
The grand old name of Gentleman."

for he was indeed one of

"God Almighty's Gentlemen."

I lay this simple but sincere tribute upon this great man's tomb.

The resolutions were then adopted, and, on motion of Mr. Louis T. Michener, the meeting adjourned.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

MONDAY, JANUARY 29, 1912.

Present: The Chief Justice, Mr. Justice McKenna, Mr. Justice Holmes, Mr. Justice Day, Mr. Justice Lurton, Mr. Justice Hughes, Mr. Justice Van Devanter, and Mr. Justice Lamar.

Mr. Attorney General Wickersham presented the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the members of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States record their profound appreciation of the life and labors which were brought to a close by the death of Mr. Justice Harlan.

He was dedicated at his birth to the profession of the law by his father, who was himself an honored and distinguished member of that profession, and prophecy of a personal career was never more completely fulfilled than that which spoke in the christening of John Marshall Harlan. He came into an heroic epoch of American history, and, mentally and physically, was cast in an heroic mold. In his earliest manhood he entered upon the practice of his profession and at the same time took part in the political controversies by which the country was then deeply disturbed and which nowhere tried the mettle of American manhood more than in that borderland of contention, of which his native state of Kentucky was a part, and when the discussion of the hustings and of legislative halls proved unequal to the settlement of the problems, he met the full measure of patriotic duty by responding to the call to arms and sharing in the perils and privations which an appeal to the arbitrament of war made necessary. Returning, after distinguished service in the field, to the practice of his profession, he continued his interest and his efforts in behalf of the public welfare, and in the contests of politics was a willing leader of the forces which held his faith, alike whether the prospect was of victory or of defeat.

Disciplined by the experiences of civil and military life and by the duties of public and private station he came, in the full maturity of his powers, to this tribunal, whose broad jurisdiction imposes upon its members responsibilities as serious as can rest upon the conscience of man. For nearly thirty-four years he honored his high position by faithful discharge of its duties. The record of his service is to be found in 126 volumes of reported cases, in the determination of which, with few exceptions, he participated. In 700 cases he wrote the opinion of the court, and in many others he wrote opinions, sometimes of concurrence, for reasons separately stated, and sometimes of radical dissent, but whether he spoke for others or only for himself, and whether in assent or in dissent, it was always in the language of honest and earnest conviction.

Personal and property rights, individual and corporate interests, the reciprocal relations of citizen, state, and nation, in ever-changing phases, presented themselves as subjects for adjudication. Indifferent in no instance, there was, however, an especial appeal to him in cases involving those rights of the individual which it was the purpose of the amendments to the Federal Constitution to secure, and he supported the national authority in its fullest scope as the sure means of maintaining those rights.

His style proclaimed the man. It was simple, direct, strong, and rugged. His opinions are supported by abundant authority, but make no vain display of learning, and of their meaning there is no room for doubt.

Virile and masterful, his strength was subdued to a conscience sensitive to right, and his purposes were shaped by a character of perfect integrity. Throughout the many years that fell to his part, as a man, citizen, soldier, and judge, he kept without stain the name he bore, and which he cherished as the guide and inspiration of his life.

Resolved, That the Attorney General be requested to present these resolutions to the court for entry upon the record, and that the chairman of the meeting be directed to send to the family of Justice Harlan a copy of the resolutions, with an expression of our sympathy for them in the loss they have sustained.

The Attorney General then said:

May it please the court, on the first page of the tenth volume of Peter's Reports of the decisions of this court is recorded the fact that John Marshall, its chief justice, died at Philadelphia on the 6th day of July, 1835, and, in a brief minute, it is added:

"His judgments upon great and important constitutional questions, affecting the safety, the tranquillity, and the permanency of the government of his beloved country,—his decisions on international and general law, distinguished by their learning, integrity, and accuracy,—are recorded in the reports of the cases adjudged in the Supreme Court of the United States, in which he presided during a period of thirty-four years."

This simple bald recital of the services of the great expounder of our Constitution concludes with these words:

"As long as the Constitution and laws shall endure and have authority, these will be respected, regarded, and maintained."

Perhaps by no other member of this court have these decisions been more highly respected, regarded, and maintained than by John Marshall Harlan, the Associate Justice of this court, who departed this life on October 14, 1911, after a length of service nearly coincident with that of the great judge whose name he bore.

Mr. Justice Harlan was born in Boyle county, Kentucky, on June 1, 1833. His commission as an Associate Justice of this court is dated November 29, 1877, and he took the oath of office on December 10 of that year, being then little more than forty-four years of age.

His first recorded opinion is that in First Nat. Bank v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 563. His last opinion expressing the judgment of the court is that in Northern P. R. Co. v. Trodick, 221 U. S. 208, 55 L. ed. 704, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 607, rendered May 15, 1911. In the same volume is recorded his very last written opinion, delivered two weeks later, in the case of United States v. American Tobacco Co., concurring in part and in part dissenting from the opinion of court.

The records of his activities as a Justice of this court during the thirty-four years of his service are therefore to be found in the one hundred and twenty-six volumes of its published opinions, from the ninety-fifth to the two hundred and twenty-first, and they cover the entire range of subjects which have come before this court during all those years. From the first to the last, these opinions breathe what Lowell called the "brave old wisdom of sincerity."

Justice Harlan was born, educated, and came to manhood in Kentucky, then a border state. His father, James Harlan, was a Whig, a devoted friend of Henry Clay, an admirer of Webster, and an earnest believer in the principles of constitutional law as expounded by Marshall. He intended his son to be a lawyer and, in the expression of his hopes, he named him John Marshall. The future Justice was brought up in the school of thought represented by Marshall, Webster, and Clay. He began to take part in political affairs when he was but twenty. He was elected county judge of Franklin county when twenty-five. He was an elector on the Bell and Everett ticket, which carried Kentucky in 1860. He threw himself actively into the controversy which developed into civil war in 1861, and, together with James Speed, Attorney General of the United States under Mr. Lincoln, labored successfully to prevent Kentucky from joining the Confederacy. In July, 1861, he was commissioned captain of a company of zouaves. His military service lasted until the death of his father in 1863, when, upon resigning his military commission, he was elected attorney general of his state. He continued active in political affairs and, in 1877, was one of the commissioners charged with settling certain disputes which threatened to disturb the peace of the state of Louisiana. In December of that year President Hayes appointed him an Associate Justice of this court.

Perhaps the fact that his native state was divided in the great contest of 1861-1865 lent a greater intensity to Justice Harlan's convictions concerning the true meaning and correct interpretation of the Constitution than he might otherwise have felt, and inclined him to a construction which gave to the national government the maximum power which the language of the fundamental law would permit. The Constitution and the Bible were the objects of his constant thought and consideration, and if the latter was to him always vox Dei, the former vox populi, was no less so. His opinions were expressed in forceful and vigorous language, and his convictions upon questions of public policy which were involved in the decision of cases in which he wrote blazed out in language whose meaning admitted of no doubt. When he did not agree with his brethren, he said so in unmistakable terms.

He was impatient of a construction which limited what he believed to be the intention of the people in adopting the war amendments to the Constitution, and which thwarted the entire equalization of the negro with the white man in all political and public relations. He expressed the judgment of the court in Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, where it was held that the adoption of the 15th Amendment rendered inoperative a provision in the then-existing Constitution of the state of Delaware, whereby the right of suffrage was limited to the white race, and that a statute of the state confining the selection of jurors to persons possessing the qualifications of electors was enlarged in its operation so as to embrace all those who, by the Constitution of the state as modified by the 15th Amendment, were entitled to vote.

But in the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 836, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, he vigorously dissented from the view taken by the majority of the court respecting the civil rights act of March 1, 1875, contending that their opinion proceeded "upon grounds entirely too narrow and artificial."

"I cannot resist," he said, "the conclusion that the substance and spirit of the recent Amendments of the Constitution have been sacrificed by a subtle and ingenious verbal criticism. 'It is not the words of the law, but the internal sense of it, that makes the law; the letter of the law is the body; the sense and reason of the law is the soul.' Constitutional provisions adopted in the interest of liberty and for the purpose of securing, through national legislation, if need be, rights inhering in a state of freedom and belonging to American citizenship have been so construed as to defeat the ends the people desired to accomplish, which they attempted to accomplish, and which they supposed they had accomplished by changes in their fundamental law. By this I do not mean that the determination of these cases should have been materially controlled by considerations of mere expediency of policy; I mean only, in this form, to express an earnest conviction that the court has departed from the familiar rule requiring, in the interpretation of constitutional provisions, that full effect be given to the intent with which they were adopted."

Again, in Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138, he dissented, with equal vigor, from the decision which sustained the constitutionality of an act of the legislature of Louisiana, requiring railway companies carrying passengers in their coaches in that state to provide equal, but separate, accommodations for the white and colored races.

"The sure guaranty of the peace and security of each race," he wrote, "is the clear, distinct, unconditional recognition by our governments, national and state, of every right that inheres in civil freedom, and of the equality before the law of all citizens of the United States without regard to race. State enactments regulating the enjoyment of civil rights upon the basis of race, and cunningly devised to defeat legitimate results of the War, under the pretense of recognizing the equality of rights, can have no other result than to render permanent peace impossible and to keep alive a conflict of races, the continuance of which must do harm to all concerned. This question is not met by the suggestion that social equality cannot exist between the white and black races in this country. That argument, if it can be properly regarded as one, is scarcely worthy of consideration, for social equality no more exists between two races when traveling in a passenger coach or a public highway than when members of the same races sit by each other in a street car or in the jury box, or stand or sit with each other in a political assembly, or when they use in common the streets of a city or town, or when they are in the same room for the purpose of having their names placed on the registry of voters, or when they approach the ballot box in order to exercise the high privilege of voting."

In Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6, he dissented from the decision of the majority that the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution operate solely on state action, and not on individual action, and that the remedy for wrongs committed by individuals on persons of African descent is through state action and state tribunals, subject to supervision of this court by writ of error in proper cases; and that, consequently, the United States district courts have no jurisdiction under the 13th Amendment, or §§ 1978, 1979, 5508 or 5510, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1262, 1263, 3712 or 3713), of a charge of conspiracy made and carried out in a state to prevent citizens of African descent, because of their race and color, from making or carrying out contracts and agreements to labor.

He protested against the decision in Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292, that the words "due process of law" in the 14th Amendment do not necessarily require an indictment by a grand jury in a prosecution by a state for murder, contending that "due process of law," within the meaning of the national Constitution, does not import one thing with reference to the powers of the state, and another with reference to the powers of the general government.

"My brethren concede," he wrote, "that there are principles of liberty and justice lying at the foundation of our civil and political institutions which no state can violate consistently with that due process of law required by the 14th Amendment in proceedings involving life, liberty, or property. Some of these principles are enumerated in the opinion of the court. But for reasons which do not impress my mind as satisfactory they exclude from that enumeration the exemption from prosecution, by information, for a public offense involving life. . . ."

It is said by the court that the Constitution of the United States was made for an undefined and expanding future, and that its requirement of due process of law in proceedings involving life, liberty, and property must be so interpreted as not to deny to the law the capacity of progress and improvement; that the greatest security for the fundamental principles of justice resides in the right of the people to make their own laws and alter them at pleasure. It is difficult, however, to perceive anything in the system of prosecuting human beings for their lives, by information, which suggests that the state which adopts it has entered upon an era of progress and improvement in the law of criminal procedure."

He concurred with the majority of the court in De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743, in holding that territory (in this case, Porto Rico) acquired by the United States by cession from a foreign power is not "foreign country" within the meaning of the tariff laws. But in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 245, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, he was one of the justices who agreed with the Chief Justice in dissenting from the conclusion that, after its cession to the United States by Spain, the island of Porto Rico was not a part of the United States within that provision of the Constitution which declares that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."

In Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465, again dissenting from the majority of the court, he maintained that, after the annexation of Hawaii, and before the passage of the act of Congress providing a government for that territory, a conviction for manslaughter upon an indictment not found by a grand jury, and by the verdict of nine only out of twelve jurors, in accordance with the laws of Hawaii in force at the time of annexation, could not be legal.

But if he was strong and vigorous in dissent, he was equally so in voicing the conclusions of the majority of the court. The vigorous line of opinions dealing with the power of the Federal government over interstate commerce are the best examples of the strength of his convictions and the lucidity of his reasoning in constitutional exposition. In them the principles of Marshall's interpretation of the Constitution were fully recognized and applied. In the Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561, he demonstrated the proposition that legislation, under the power to regulate commerce among the several states, may sometimes properly assume the form or have the effect of prohibition, and that Congress, under this power, might prohibit the carriage of lottery tickets from one state to another. In Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, he wrote the decision holding to be unconstitutional a statute of the state of Minnesota which prohibited the sale in that state of fresh beef, veal, pork, etc., for human food, unless the animals from which taken should have been inspected within that state before being slaughtered. In a series of forceful opinions, the last of which was written at the very close of his life, he upheld the right of corporations to engage in interstate commerce without interference or restriction by state authority. These opinions illustrate the surprising freshness and vigor of Justice Harlan's mind. In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, and in Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232, it was held that the right to carry on interstate commerce is not a privilege granted by the states, but a constitutional right of every citizen of the United States; that the Congress alone can limit the right of corporations to engage therein, and that no state may impose, as a condition of carrying on interstate commerce within its borders, a tax of a given percentage of all the capital of a corporation, represented by its business interests and property, everywhere, within and outside of the state; that a corporation organized in one state, and doing an interstate business, is not bound to obtain the permission of another state to transact business within its limits, but can go into the latter for the purpose of interstate business, although subject to reasonable legal regulations for the safety, comfort, and convenience of the people, which do not, in a real, substantial sense burden or regulate its interstate business, nor subject its other property and interests, outside of the state, to taxation. In the case of the International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103, he applied these principles, in a most interesting and lucid manner, to the case of a Pennsylvania corporation engaged in furnishing instruction by correspondence with students in various states.

"It is true," he said, "that the business in which the International Textbook Company is engaged is of a somewhat exceptional character, but, in our judgment, it was, in its essential characteristics, commerce among the states within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States. It involved, as already suggested, regular and practically continuous intercourse between the Textbook Company, located in Pennsylvania, and its scholars and agents in Kansas and other states. That intercourse was conducted by means of correspondence through the mails with such agents and scholars. While this mode of imparting and acquiring an education may not be such as is commonly adopted in this country, it is a lawful mode to accomplish the valuable purpose the parties have in view. . . . Intercourse of that kind, between parties in different states,—particularly when it is in execution of a valid contract between them,—is as much intercourse in the constitutional sense as intercourse by means of the telegraph, —'a new species of commerce,' to use the words of this court in Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 9, 24 L. ed. 708, 710."

While always asserting with vigor the supremacy of Federal control over interstate commerce, he yet wrote the opinion of the court in the case of Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086, holding valid statutes of the state of Georgia which forbade the running of freight trains on any railroad in that state on Sunday, upon the ground that, while such legislation affected interstate commerce in a limited degree, it was not, for that reason, a needless intrusion upon the domain of Federal jurisdiction, and would be respected by the Federal courts until superseded and displaced by some act of Congress, passed in exclusion of the power to regulate commerce granted by the Constitution. Where the people of a state deem it necessary to their peace, comfort, and happiness, to say nothing of the public health and the public morals, that one day in each week be set apart by law as a day when business of all kinds carried on within the limits of that state shall cease, whereby all persons of every race and condition in life may have an opportunity to enjoy absolute rest and quiet, that result, he said, speaking for the court, was obtainable by state legislation, which would be valid until Congress should occupy the field by some inconsistent provision of law.

In an opinion remarkable for learning and research, in the case of Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 39 L. ed. 343, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 168, he expressed the judgment of the court that, in the courts of the United States, it is the duty of the jury, in criminal cases, to receive the law from the court, and to apply it as given by the court, subject to the condition that, by a general verdict, a jury, of necessity, determines both law and fact as compounded in the issues submitted to them in a particular case. He summed up the argument in these words:

"We must hold firmly to the doctrine that in the courts of the United States it is the duty of juries in criminal cases to take the law from the court, and apply that law to the facts as they find them to be from the evidence. Upon the court rests the responsibility of declaring the law; upon the jury the responsibility of applying the law so declared to the facts as they, upon their conscience, believe them to be. Under any other system the courts, although established in order to declare the law, would, for every practical purpose, be eliminated from our system of government as instrumentalities devised for the protection equally of society and of individuals in their essential rights. When that occurs our government will cease to be a government of laws, and become a government of men. Liberty regulated by law is the underlying principle of our institutions."

It would prolong this address far beyond the proper limits of this occasion to continue much further the review of Justice Harlan's many contributions to the records of the court during his service of more than one third of a century. Yet no review of his services would be adequate which failed to refer to his participation in the construction and enforcement of the law against unlawful restraints upon interstate commerce and monopolies. Strongly individual in his views and in his characteristics, he was keenly sympathetic with the widespread public dread of the effect upon individualism of the tendencies toward concentration of control over great industries, and the creation of monopolistic combinations, which found expression in the now famous Sherman act of 1890. When the court, upon the presentation of the facts in the Knight Case, (156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249), held that act to be ineffective in checking monopoly at its inception, and powerless in the face of the acquisition by a great corporation of 98 per cent of all the manufactories in the United States of a commodity of common necessity, his dissent was expressed in vigorous language.

"If this combination," he wrote, "so far as its operations necessarily or directly affect interstate commerce, cannot be restrained or suppressed under some power granted to Congress, it will be cause for regret that the patriotic statesmen who framed the Constitution did not foresee the necessity of investing the national government with power to deal with gigantic monopolies, holding in their grasp and injuriously controlling in their own interest the entire trade among the states in food products that are essential to the comfort of every household in the land. . . ."

"Undoubtedly the preservation of the just authority of the states is an object of deep concern to every lover of his country. No greater calamity could befall our free institutions than the destruction of that authority, by whatever means such a result might be accomplished. . . . But it is equally true that the preservation of the just authority of the general government is essential as well to the safety of the states as to the attainment of the important ends for which that government was ordained by the people of the United States; and the destruction of that authority would be fatal to the peace and well-being of the American people." (p. 19.)

"There is no dispute here as to the lawfulness of the business of refining sugar, apart from the undue restraint which the promoters of such business who have combined to control prices seek to put upon the freedom of interstate traffic in that article.

"It may be admitted that an act which did nothing more than forbid, and which had no other object than to forbid, the mere refining of sugar in any state, would be in excess of any power granted to Congress. But the act of 1890 is not of that character. It does not strike at the manufacture simply of articles that are legitimate or recognized subjects of commerce, but at combinations that unduly restrain, because they monopolize the buying and selling of articles which are to go into interstate commerce." (p. 34.)

He summed up the discussion in these words:

"Whatever improperly obstructs the free course of interstate intercourse and trade, as involved in the buying and selling of articles to be carried from one state to another, may be reached by Congress under its authority to regulate commerce among the states. The exercise of that authority so as to make trade among the states in all recognized articles of commerce absolutely free from unreasonable or illegal restrictions imposed by combinations is justified by an express grant of power to Congress, and would redound to the welfare of the whole country. I am unable to perceive that any such result would imperil the autonomy of the states, especially as that result cannot be attained through the action of any one state.

"Undue restrictions or burdens upon the purchasing of goods in the market for sale, to be transported to other states, cannot be imposed even by a state without violating the freedom of commercial intercourse guaranteed by the Constitution. But if a state within whose limits the business of refining sugar is exclusively carried on may not constitutionally impose burdens upon purchases of sugar to be transported to other states, how comes it that combinations of corporations or individuals within the same state may not be prevented by the national government from putting unlawful restraints upon the purchasing of that article to be carried from the state in which such purchases are made?" (pp. 37-38.)

Mr. Justice Harlan wrote the opinion in the Northern Securities Case (193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436), which was concurred in by three other justices, and in which the conclusions reached were agreed to by Mr. Justice Brewer in an opinion expressing his dissent from the statement of some of the propositions set forth by Mr. Justice Harlan with his accustomed vigor. The case presented was the acquisition by a New Jersey corporation of the control of the capital stocks of two competing trans-continental railroad systems. The majority of the court held that the acquisition by the Securities Company, through such stock ownership, of the power to prevent or restrain competition between the companies, brought the case within the statute. Justice Harlan, in the argument to sustain the conclusion reached, contended that every combination or conspiracy which would extinguish competition between otherwise competing railroads engaged in interstate trade or commerce, and which would in that way restrain such trade or commerce, is made illegal by the act which embraces all direct restraints imposed by any combination, conspiracy, or monopoly upon such trade or commerce, and was not limited in its effect to restraints that are unreasonable in their nature.

Justice Brewer, on the other hand, maintained that the correct ruling in the case would have been that the contracts under consideration were unreasonable restraints of interstate trade, and as such, within the prohibition of the anti-trust act.

Justice Harlan wrote the opinion in Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Louis Voight & Co. 212 U. S. 227, 53 L. ed. 486, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280, which involved the right of a purchaser of goods from a combination unlawful under the anti-trust act to plead such illegality in defense of his failure to pay for goods. Holding that upon the facts admitted by the demurrer the plaintiff in effect was seeking the aid of the court to enforce a contract for the sale and purchase of goods which was in fact, and was intended to be, based upon agreements that were parts of an illegal scheme,—a scheme based upon a combination intended and which would have the effect directly to restrain and monopolize trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations,—Justice Harlan, speaking for the majority of the court, held that the plaintiff could not have judgment for the account sued on, because such judgment would in effect aid the execution of the agreements which constituted the illegal combination.

In the decisions in the cases against the Standard Oil Co. (221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502), and the Tobacco Combination (221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632), Justice Harlan, while concurring in the decisions, read opinions expressing dissent from opinions which were concurred in by the other members of the court, with respect to a part of the reasoning advanced in support of the conclusions reached.

Justice Harlan's individuality and his mental characteristics were the results of heredity and early environment. Another Kentuckian who attained fame in a very different line, writing in his autobiography of experiences gained during three months' adventurous voyage in Canadian waters, and speaking of the Canadian sailors whose courage and fortitude in the face of hardship and danger had greatly impressed him, says:

"These men taught me much of human nature. I found in them the value of the common man as I probably should have found it nowhere else; for it is so well hidden in our more organized societies that many persons far more discerning than myself fail for all of their lives to see the meaning of ordinary life, and so fail to get the most important teaching the world has to give. In a way, I had been prepared for this coming revelation by my contact with the frontier type of man in Kentucky. But at his best, the man of the forests and plains cannot compare with the seaman in the even, rounded culture of human quality. As I had known him in Kentucky, he was a fine fellow of the conquering type. He had beaten his brute and human enemies and subjugated the wilderness; but he had never well learned what it was to follow a leader, to put his life in his chief's hands in a ceaseless war with a mastering deep." (Autobiography of Nathaniel Southgate Shaler, p. 165.)

Justice Harlan was a refined example of the type of Kentuckian referred to by Prof. Shaler. He had learned, in the fierce warfare of personal strife during the Civil War, and in the intensity of political contests after the war, to beat his brute and human enemies as his fathers had learned to subjugate the wilderness. But he never well learned what it was to follow a leader,—at least, not a living one. He was a student and disciple of Marshall, but among living men he could lead, but he could not follow. Where others agreed with his views he would march with them, but when they differed he marched on alone. His was not the temper of the negotiator. Strong, vigorous, self-confident, he stands out as the representative of a type which has made the American character dominant among the nations.

The Chief Justice responded:

Mr. Attorney General, your words go home to our hearts and the resolutions of our brethren of the Bar move us, since they show both the confidence which the Bar reposed in and the affection they bore Mr. Justice Harlan, as well as the veneration they cherish for his memory. The depth with which these feelings are by us shared, and the greatness of the sorrow which has come to us by the death of our brother, cannot be appreciated without understanding how completely the discharge of judicial duty in a court of last resort necessitates an effort by all to efface every merely incidental mental and moral tendency to difference of opinion in order that, by the perfect equipoise of mind with mind and the union of heart with heart, a composite, wise, and just judgment may result.

The disintegration by death of the union resulting from such ties of intimate and affectionate association brings with it not only bereavement, but a sense of despondency, because of the fleeting and perishable result of all human efforts which it apparently exemplifies. The contemplation, however, of the great life which we commemorate, dispels the miasma of despondency, and calls us to the onward and upward struggle for higher and holier things; since, when rightly measured, the lessons of that life point to the continuing and enduring result for good of duty conscientiously performed. Through the mists of parting and the shadows of death itself, clearing our vision by the light which that life affords, we are enabled to see how greatly the dedication of the life of our Brother Harlan to the service of his country, during his more than thirty-three years of judicial labor, serves to sustain and to make fruitful for the benefit of all his countrymen the power for good of that ideal and undying personality, the Supreme Court of the United States,—the offspring of the devotion of our forefathers to human liberty and their genius in creating institutions for its perpetuation. So noble in conception and yet so simple in execution; so ordinary in its incidents and yet so majestic as the servant of the whole people; so weak and yet so strong, because founded upon the affection of all the people, and depending for its existence upon their continued support.

It would not be appropriate on this occasion, nor is there presently time, Mr. Attorney General, to afford the opportunity, to add to the condensed statement which you have made of the career of Mr. Justice Harlan by giving an outline of his services in peace and in war. I shall, therefore, leaving the general subject to some more appropriate occasion, seek only now to depict in the briefest manner some of the most dominant of the moral and mental forces which characterized Mr. Justice Harlan's discharge of judicial duty, as seen from the angle of vision of those engaged with him in such duty; thus, perhaps, speaking from a point of observation which, if not stated now, might possibly pass out of view.

In the first place, there was ever manifested the supreme importance which he attached to the performance of his judicial work, and the consequent dedication which followed of every mental and moral faculty of his being to the doing of that work. In the second place, there was likewise consequently manifested a purpose to do justice as it was given him to see it,—a justice not resting upon mere metaphysical conceptions or distinctions of casuistry concerning the lines of separation between right and wrong, but a justice based upon what seemed to him to be a common sense of justice, begetting an ever-present and vivid purpose to uphold the right and to frustrate the wrong, and ever to see to it that the weak were not overmastered by the strong. In the third place, —and this was the most prominent of all,—he possessed a reverence for and an implicit faith in our constitutional institutions,—a faith which knew no doubt, and caused him to believe that the power of adaptability of those institutions was adequate to meet and provide for any possible condition, however complex or novel. And as these dominant qualities were potential in giving shape and form to his mental attributes, the latter in substance were but the reflex of the former. His methods of thought, in disregard of mere subtleties or refined distinctions, led him to the broadest lines of conviction, and as those lines were by him discerned and differences between himself and others became impossible of reconciliation, the warfare of mind with mind was by him carried on, not with adroit fence or subtle play of reason, but with a directness and entire disregard of all narrower points of view. This was particularly observable with reference to his conclusions on questions concerning powers of government arising from constitutional limitations, and the consideration of asserted violations of the rights of individuals protected by such limitations. Once his convictions were definitely formed, so complete was his faith, so ardent was his devotion, so unalterable was his purpose to maintain and perpetuate in each and every particular, as he understood it, the government under the Constitution which he so much loved, that sometimes the very ardor and zeal with which, when he differed from others, the reasons for his differences were expounded, produced upon the merely superficial observer the impression that there was doubt on his part as to the power of the Constitution, if interpreted in conflict with the views which he held, to successfully continue to accomplish the great purpose which it was ordained to secure; but this was indeed a singularly mistaken view, since it engendered doubt and weakness merely because of the forms in which supreme and perfect faith had found their expression.

It being true, as I have said, that the lessons afforded by the life of the great American whose loss we commemorate and deplore afford a correction of despondency and constitute an incentive, calling upon all to dedicate their lives to a higher and completer fulfilment of duty, why is it not also true that a right contemplation of that life and its results will serve in some measure to assuage the feeling of sorrow begotten by his death? It was given him to exceed the allotted span of mortal existence, and during his long and useful career to faithfully serve, in war and in peace, his country; to win the affection of all his countrymen, and to afford an elevating and noble example of duty well and faithfully performed. Ah! contemplating that life, its simplicity, its courage, its devotion to duty, its love of country, does not the faith come to us that in the transition from things finite to things infinite it has been given to him to hear the ineffable melody of those words of benediction, the hope of hearing which has led so many millions to consecrate ~~their~~ lives to the performance of duty and the service of God and their country,—“Well done, thou good and faithful servant.”

Mr. Attorney General, the resolutions which you present will be ordered spread upon the records along with such other tributes concerning the life and character of Mr. Justice Harlan which were evoked by his death.

APPENDIX II.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

IN MEMORIAM MRS. WILLIAM RUFUS DAY.

On January 8, 1912, Mr. Justice McKenna said:

“I will say to the gentlemen of the Bar that the Chief Justice is detained at home, and I will read a statement prepared by him:

“‘Mrs. Day, wife of Mr. Justice Day, died on Friday afternoon at their home in Canton, Ohio.

“‘When we assembled for the commencement of the term, Mr. Justice Day was absent, and we learned that he was prevented from coming by illness of Mrs. Day. We soon came further to know the serious character of that illness and the ever-present dread which existed that any moment it might terminate fatally. Indeed, during the time which has elapsed our sympathy has gone out to our brother in the cruel and relentless anguish with which he has been incessantly encompassed, ending in the dread bereavement which has come to him.

“‘The funeral services take place at Canton this afternoon. Were it possible, we should attend the ceremonies in a body, and to enable us to do so would adjourn for the day. Unable to be present, however, we shall yet in spirit be there. As a manifestation of our participation in spirit in the ceremonies, and as a mark of our sorrow and affection for the living and respect and tenderness for the memory of the dead, we shall transact no business to-day, but will adjourn until to-morrow morning.”

APPENDIX III.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is ordered that the rules of this court be amended as follows, viz.:

RULE 6.

Strike out § 2, and insert the following:

2. Forty-five minutes on each side shall be allowed to the argument of a motion, and no more, without special leave of the court, granted before the argument begins.

Strike out § 5, and insert the following:

5. The court in any pending cause will receive a motion to affirm on the ground that it is manifest that the writ or appeal was taken for delay only, or that the questions on which the decision of the cause depend are so frivolous as not to need further argument. The same procedure shall apply to and control such motions as are provided for in cases of motions to dismiss under paragraph 4 of this rule. Although the court, upon consideration of a motion to affirm, may refuse to grant the motion, it may nevertheless, if the conclusion is arrived at that the case is of such a character as not to justify extended argument, order the cause transferred for hearing to a summary docket. The hearing of the causes on such docket will be expedited, the court providing from time to time for such speedy disposition of the docket as the regular order of business may permit, and on the hearing of such causes one-half hour will be allowed each side for oral argument.

RULE 22.

Strike out § 3, and insert the following:

3. One and one-half hours on each side will be allowed for the argument, and no more, without special leave of the court, granted before the argument begins. But in cases certified from the circuit courts of appeals, cases involving solely the jurisdiction of the court below, and cases under the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564), forty-five minutes only on each side will be allowed for the argument unless the time be extended. The time thus allowed may be apportioned between the counsel on the same side, at their discretion: Provided, always: That a fair opening of the case shall be made by the party having the opening and closing arguments.

October 23, 1911.

APPENDIX IV

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is now here ordered that the Rules of Practice for the Courts of Equity of the United States, as heretofore promulgated by this court, be, and the same are hereby, so far as not inapplicable, continued in full force and effect, and made in all respects controlling in the courts of equity created by the act of Congress entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," going into effect January 1, 1912, until the further order of this court.

December 22, 1911.

APPENDIX V.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is ordered that the Rules of Practice of this court, as revised this day, be, and the same are hereby, promulgated for the guidance of all concerned, to take effect on the 1st day of January, 1912.

December 22, 1911.

RULES

OF THE

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

1.

CLERK.

1. The clerk of this court shall reside and keep the office at the seat of the national government, and he shall not practice, either as attorney or counsel or, in this court, or in any other court, while he shall continue to be clerk of this court.
56 L. ed.

2. The clerk shall not permit any original record or paper to be taken from the court room, or from the office, without an order from the court, except as provided by rule 10.

2.

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS.

1. It shall be requisite to the admission of attorneys or counselors to practice in this court, that they shall have been such for three years past in the highest courts of the states to which they respectively belong, and that their private and professional characters shall appear to be fair.

2. They shall respectively take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation, viz.:

I, ———, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will demean myself, as an attorney and counselor of this court, uprightly and according to law; and that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

3.

PRACTICE.

This court considers the former practice of the courts of King's bench and of chancery, in England, as affording outlines for the practice of this court; and will, from time to time, make such alterations therein as circumstances may render necessary.

4.

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.

The judges of the district courts in allowing bills of exception shall give effect to the following rules:

1. No bill of exceptions shall be allowed which shall contain the charge of the court at large to the jury in trials at common law, upon any general exception to the whole of such charge. But the party excepting shall be required to state distinctly the several matters of law in such charge to which he excepts; and those matters of law, and those only, shall be inserted in the bill of exceptions and allowed by the court.

2. Only so much of the evidence shall be embraced in a bill of exceptions as may be necessary to present clearly the questions of law involved in the rulings to which exceptions are reserved, and such evidence as is embraced therein shall be set forth in condensed and narrative form, save as a proper understanding of the questions presented may require that parts of it be set forth otherwise.

5.

PROCESS.

1. All process of this court shall be in the name of the President of the United States, and shall contain the Christian names, as well as the surnames, of the parties.

2. When process at common law or in equity shall issue against a state, the same shall be served on the governor, or chief executive magistrate, and attorney general of such state.

3. Process of subpœna, issuing out of this court, in any suit in equity, shall be served on the defendant sixty days before the return day of the said process; and if the defendant, on such service of the subpœna, shall not appear at the return day, the complainant shall be at liberty to proceed ex parte.

6.

MOTIONS.

1. All motions to the court shall be reduced to writing, and shall contain a brief statement of the facts and objects of the motion.

2. Forty-five minutes on each side shall be allowed to the argument to a motion, and no more, without special leave of the court, granted before the argument begins.

3. No motion to dismiss, except on special assignment by the court, shall be heard, unless previous notice has been given to the adverse party, or the counsel or attorney of such party.

4. All motions to dismiss writs of error and appeals, except motions to docket and dismiss under rule 9, must be submitted in the first instance on printed briefs or arguments. If the court desires further argument on that subject, it will be ordered in connection with the hearing on the merits. The party moving to dismiss shall serve notice of the motion, with a copy of his brief of argument, on the counsel for plaintiff in error or appellant of record in this court, at least three weeks before the time fixed for submitting the motion, in all cases except where the counsel to be notified resides west of the Rocky Mountains, in which case the notice shall be at least thirty days. Affidavits of the deposit in the mail of the notice and brief to the proper address of the counsel to be served, duly postpaid, at such time as to reach him by due course of mail, the three weeks or thirty days before the time fixed by the notice, will be regarded as prima facie evidence of service on counsel who reside without the District of Columbia. On proof of such service, the motion will be considered, unless, for satisfactory reasons, further time be given by the court to either party.

5. The court in any pending cause will receive a motion to affirm on the ground that it is manifest that the writ or appeal was taken for delay only, or that the questions on which the decision of the cause depend are so frivolous as not to need further argument. The same procedure shall apply to and control such motions as is provided for in cases of motions to dismiss under paragraph 4 of this rule.

6. Although the court upon consideration of a motion to dismiss or a motion to affirm may refuse to grant the motion, it may nevertheless, if the conclusion is arrived at that the case is of such a character as not to justify extended argument, order the cause transferred for hearing to a summary docket. The hearing of the causes on such docket will be expedited, the court providing from time to time for such speedy disposition of the docket as the regular order of business may permit, and on the hearing of such causes one-half hour will be allowed each side for oral argument.

7. The court will not hear arguments on Saturday (unless for special cause it shall order to the contrary), but will devote that day to the other business of the court. The motion day shall be Monday of each week; and motions not required by the rules of the court to be put on the docket shall be entitled to preference immediately after the reading of opinions, if such motions shall be made before the court shall have entered upon the hearing of a case upon the docket.

7.

LAW LIBRARY.

1. During the session of the court, any gentleman of the bar having a case on the docket, and wishing to use any book or books in the law library, shall be at liberty, upon application to the clerk of the court, to receive an order to take the same (not exceeding at any one time three) from the library, he being thereby responsible for the due return of the same within a reasonable time, or when required by the clerk. And in case the same shall not be so returned, the party receiving the same shall be responsible for and forfeit and pay twice the value thereof, and also $1 per day for each day's detention beyond the limited time.

2. The clerk shall deposit in the law library, to be there carefully preserved, one copy of the printed record in every case submitted to the court for its consideration, and of all printed motions, briefs, or arguments filed therein.

3. The marshal shall take charge of the books of the court, together with such of the duplicate law books as Congress may direct to be transferred to the court, and arrange them in the conference room, which he shall have fitted up in a proper manner; and he shall not permit such books to be taken therefrom by anyone except the justices of the court.

8.

WRIT OF ERROR AND APPEAL, RETURN, AND RECORD.

1. The clerk of the court to which any writ of error may be directed shall make return of the same, by transmitting a true copy of the record, and of the assignment of errors, and of all proceedings in the case, under his hand and the seal of the court.

In order to enable the clerk to perform such duty, and for the purpose of reducing the size of transcripts of record in cases brought to this court by appeal or writ of error, by eliminating all papers not necessary to the consideration of the questions to be reviewed, it shall be the duty of the appellant or plaintiff in error or his attorney to file with the clerk of the lower court, together with proof or acknowledgment of service of a copy on the appellee or defendant in error, or his counsel, a præcipe which shall indicate the portions of the record to be incorporated into the transcript of the record on such appeal or writ of error. Should the appellee or defendant in error, or his counsel, desire additional portions of the record incorporated into the transcript of the record to be filed in this court, he shall file with the clerk of the lower court his præcipe also, within ten days thereafter (unless the time shall be enlarged by a judge of the lower court or by a justice of this court), indicating such additional portions of the record desired by him.

The clerk of the lower court shall transmit to this court as the transcript of the record in the case only the portions of the record below designated by both parties as above provided.

The parties or their counsel, however, may agree by written stipulation to be filed with the clerk of the lower court the portions of the record which shall constitute the transcript of record on appeal or writ of error, and the clerk in such case shall transmit only the papers designated in such stipulation.

If this court shall find that portions of the record unnecessary to a proper presentation of the case have been incorporated into the transcript by either party, the court may order that the whole or any part of the clerk's fee for supervising the printing and of the cost of printing the record be paid by the offending party.

2. In all cases brought to this court by writ of error or appeal, to review any judgment or decree, the clerk of the court by which such judgment or decree was rendered shall annex to and transmit with the record a copy of the opinion or opinions filed in the case.

3. No case will be heard until a complete record, containing in itself, and not by reference, all the papers, exhibits, depositions, and other proceedings which are necessary to the hearing in this court, shall be filed.

4. Whenever it shall be necessary or proper, in the opinion of the presiding judge in any district court, that original papers of any kind should be inspected in this court upon writ of error or appeal, such presiding judge may make such rule or order for the safe-keeping, transporting, and return of such original papers as to him may seem proper, and this court will receive and consider such original papers in connection with the transcript of the proceedings.

5. All appeals, writs of error, and citations must be made returnable not exceeding thirty days from the day of signing the citation, whether the return day fall in vacation or in term time, and be served before the return day, except in writs of error and appeals from California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Alaska, Idaho, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, when the time shall be extended to sixty days, and from the Philippine Islands to one hundred and twenty days.

6. The record in cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, when, under the requirements of law, the facts have been found in the court below, and the power of review is limited to the determination of questions of law arising on the record, shall be confined to the pleadings, the findings of fact, and conclusions of law thereon, the bills of exceptions, the final judgment or decree, and such interlocutory orders and decrees as may be necessary to a proper review of the case.

9.

DOCKETING CASES.

1. It shall be the duty of the plaintiff in error or appellant to docket the case and file the record thereof with the clerk of this court by or before the return day, whether in vacation or in term time. But, for good cause shown, the justice or judge who signed the citation, or any justice of this court, may enlarge the time, by or before its expiration, the order of enlargement to be filed with the clerk of this court. If the plaintiff in error or appellant shall fail to comply with this rule, the defendant in error or appellee may have the cause docketed and dismissed upon producing a certificate, whether in term time or vacation, from the clerk of the court wherein the judgment or decree was rendered, stating the case and certifying that such writ of error or appeal has been duly sued out or allowed. And in no case shall the plaintiff in error or appellant be entitled to docket the case and file the record after the same shall have been docketed and dismissed under this rule, unless by order of the court.

2. But the defendant in error or appellee may, at his option, docket the case and file a copy of the record with the clerk of this court; and if the case is docketed and a copy of the record filed with the clerk of this court by the plaintiff in error or appellant within the period of time above limited and prescribed by this rule, or by the defendant in error or appellee at any time thereafter, the case shall stand for argument.

3. Upon the filing of the transcript of a record brought up by writ of error or appeal, the appearance of the counsel for the party docketing the case shall be entered.

10.

PRINTING RECORDS.

1. In all cases the plaintiff in error or appellant, on docketing a case and filing the record, shall make such cash deposit with the clerk for the payment of his fees as he may require, or otherwise satisfy him in that behalf.

2. The clerk shall cause an estimate to be made of the cost of printing the record, and of his fee for preparing it for the printer and supervising the printing, and shall notify to the party docketing the case the amount of the estimate. If he shall not pay it within a reasonable time, and for want of such payment the record shall not have been printed when a case is reached in the regular call of the docket, the case shall be dismissed.

3. Upon payment of the amount estimated by the clerk, thirty copies of the record shall be printed, under his supervision, for the use of the court and of counsel.

4. In cases of appellate jurisdiction the original transcript on file shall be taken by the clerk to the printer. But the clerk shall cause copies to be made for the printer of such original papers, sent up under rule 8, § 4, as are necessary to be printed; and of the whole record in cases of original jurisdiction.

5. The clerk shall supervise the printing, and see that the printed copy is properly indexed. He shall distribute the printed copies to the justices and the reporter, from time to time, as required, and a copy to the counsel for the respective parties.

6. If the actual cost of printing the record, together with the fee of the clerk, shall be less than the amount estimated and paid, the amount of the difference shall be refunded by the clerk to the party paying it. If the actual cost and clerk's fee shall exceed the estimate, the amount of the excess shall be paid to the clerk before the delivery of a printed copy to either party or his counsel.

7. In case of reversal, affirmance, or dismissal, with costs, the amount of the cost of printing the record and of the clerk's fee shall be taxed against the party against whom costs are given, and shall be inserted in the body of the mandate or other proper process.

8. Upon the clerk's producing satisfactory evidence, by affidavit or the acknowledgment of the parties or their sureties, of having served a copy of the bill of fees due by them, respectively, in this court, on such parties or their sureties, an attachment shall issue against such parties or sureties, respectively, to compel payment of said fees.

9. The plaintiff in error or appellant may, within ninety days after filing the record in this court, file with the clerk a statement of the errors on which he intends to rely, and of the parts of the record which he thinks necessary for the consideration thereof, with proof of service of the same on the adverse party. The adverse party, within ninety days thereafter, may designate in writing, filed with the clerk, additional parts of the record which he thinks material; and, if he shall not do so, he shall be held to have consented to a hearing on the parts designated by the plaintiff in error or appellant. If parts of the record shall be so designated by one or both of the parties, the clerk shall print those parts only; and the court will consider nothing but those parts of the record, and the errors so stated. If at the hearing it shall appear that any material part of the record has not been printed, the writ of error or appeal may be dismissed, or such other order made as the circumstances may appear to the court to require. If the defendant in error or appellee shall have caused unnecessary parts of the record to be printed, such order as to costs may be made as the court shall think proper.

The fees of the clerk under rule 24, § 7, shall be computed, as at present, on the folios in the record as filed, and shall be in full for the performance of his duties in the execution hereof.

11.

TRANSLATIONS.

Whenever any record transmitted to this court upon a writ of error or appeal shall contain any document, paper, testimony, or other proceedings in a foreign language, and the record does not also contain a translation of such document, paper, testimony, or other proceedings, made under the authority of the inferior court, or admitted to be correct, the record shall not be printed; but the case shall be reported to this court by the clerk, and the court will order that a translation be supplied and inserted in the record.

12.

FURTHER PROOF.

1. In all cases where further proof is ordered by the court, the depositions which may be taken shall be by a commission, to be issued from this court, or from any district court of the United States.

2. In all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, where new evidence shall be admissible in this court, the evidence by testimony of witnesses shall be taken under a commission to be issued from this court, or from any district court of the United States, under the direction of any judge thereof; and no such commission shall issue but upon interrogatories, to be filed by the party applying for the commission, and notice to the opposite party or his agent or attorney, accompanied with a copy of the interrogatories so filed, to file cross-interrogatories within twenty days from the service of such notice: Provided, however, that nothing in this rule shall prevent any party from giving oral testimony in open court in cases where by law it is admissible.

13.

OBJECTIONS TO EVIDENCE IN THE RECORD.

In all cases of equity or admiralty jurisdiction, heard in this court, no objection shall hereafter be allowed to be taken to the admissibility of any deposition, deed, grant, or other exhibit found in the record as evidence, unless objection was taken thereto in the court below and entered of record; but the same shall otherwise be deemed to have been admitted by consent.

14.

CERTIORARI.

No certiorari for diminution of the record will be hereafter awarded in any case, unless a motion therefor shall be made in writing, and the facts on which the same is founded shall, if not admitted by the other party, be verified by affidavit. And all motions for certiorari must be made at the first term of the entry of the case; otherwise, the same will not be granted, unless upon special cause shown to the court, accounting satisfactorily for the delay.

15.

DEATH OF A PARTY.

1. Whenever, pending a writ of error or appeal in this court, either party shall die, the proper representatives in the personalty or realty of the deceased party, according to the nature of the case, may voluntarily come in and be admitted parties to the suit, and thereupon the case shall be heard and determined as in other cases; and if such representatives shall not voluntarily become parties, then the other party may suggest the death on the record, and thereupon, on motion, obtain an order that unless such representatives shall become parties within the first ten days of the ensuing term, the party moving for such order, if defendant in error or appellee, shall be entitled to have the writ of error or appeal dismissed; and if the party so moving shall be plaintiff in error or appellant, he shall be entitled to open the record, and on hearing have the judgment or decree reversed, if it be erroneous: Provided, however, that a copy of every such order shall be printed in some newspaper of general circulation within the state, territory, or district from which the case is brought, for three successive weeks, at least sixty days before the beginning of the term of the Supreme Court then next ensuing.

2. When the death of a party is suggested, and the representatives of the deceased do not appear by the tenth day of the second term next succeeding the suggestion, and no measures are taken by the opposite party within that time to compel their appearance, the case shall abate.

3. When either party to a suit in a court of the United States shall desire to prosecute a writ of error or appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, from any final judgment or decree, rendered in such court, and at the time of suing out such writ of error or appeal the other party to the suit shall be dead and have no proper representative within the jurisdiction of the court which rendered such final judgment or decree, so that the suit cannot be revived in that court, but shall have a proper representative in some state or territory of the United States, the party desiring such writ of error or appeal may procure the same, and may have proceedings on such judgment or decree superseded or stayed in the same manner as is now allowed by law in other cases, and shall thereupon proceed with such writ of error or appeal as in other cases. And within thirty days after the commencement of the term to which such writ of error or appeal is returnable, the plaintiff in error or appellant shall make a suggestion to the court, supported by affidavit, that the said party was dead when the writ of error or appeal was taken or sued out, and had no proper representative within the jurisdiction of the court which rendered said judgment or decree, so that the suit could not be revived in that court, and that said party had a proper representative in some state or territory of the United States, and stating therein the name and character of such representative, and the state or territory in which such representative resides; and, upon such suggestion, he may, on motion, obtain an order that, unless such representative shall make himself a party within the first ten days of the ensuing term of the court, the plaintiff in error or appellant shall be entitled to open the record, and, on hearing, have the judgment or decree reversed, if the same be erroneous: Provided, however, that a proper citation reciting the substance of such order shall be served upon such representative, either personally or by being left at his residence, at least sixty days before the beginning of the term of the Supreme Court then next ensuing: And provided, also, that in every such case if the representative of the deceased party does not appear by the tenth day of the term next succeeding said suggestion, and the measures above provided to compel the appearance of such representative have not been taken within time as above required, by the opposite party, the case shall abate: And provided, also, that the said representative may at any time before or after said suggestion come in and be made a party to the suit, and thereupon the case shall proceed, and be heard and determined as in other cases.

16.

NO APPEARANCE OF PLAINTIFF IN ERROR OR APPELLANT.

Where no counsel appears and no brief has been filed for the plaintiff in error or appellant, when the case is called for trial, the defendant in error or appellee may have the plaintiff in error or appellant called and the writ of error or appeal dismissed, or may open the record and pray for an affirmance.

17.

NO APPEARANCE OF DEFENDANT IN ERROR OR APPELLEE.

Where the defendant in error or appellee fails to appear when the case is called for trial, the court may proceed to hear an argument on the part of the plaintiff in error or appellant, and to give judgment according to the right of the case.

18.

NO APPEARANCE OF EITHER PARTY.

When a case is reached in the regular call of the docket, and there is no appearance for either party, the case shall be dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff in error or appellant.

19.

NEITHER PARTY READY AT SECOND TERM.

When a case is called for argument at two successive terms, and upon the call at the second term neither party is prepared to argue it, it shall be dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff in error or appellant, unless sufficient cause is shown for further postponement.

20.

PRINTED ARGUMENTS.

1. In all cases brought here on writ of error, appeal, or otherwise, the court will receive printed arguments without regard to the number of the case on the docket, if the counsel on both sides shall choose to submit the same within the first ninety days of the term: and, in addition, appeals from the court of claims may be submitted by both parties within thirty days after they are docketed, but not after the first day of April; but thirty copies of the arguments, signed by attorneys or counselors of this court, must be first filed.

2. When a case is reached in the regular call of the docket, and a printed argument shall be filed for one or both parties, the case shall stand on the same footing as if there were an appearance by counsel.

3. When a case is taken up for trial upon the regular call of the docket, and argued orally in behalf of only one of the parties, no printed argument for the opposite party will be received, unless it is filed before the oral argument begins, and the court will proceed to consider and decide the case upon the ex parte argument.

4. No brief or argument will be received, either through the clerk or otherwise, after a case has been argued or submitted, except upon leave granted in open court after notice to opposing counsel.

21.

BRIEFS.

1. The counsel for plaintiff in error or appellant shall file with the clerk of the court, at least three weeks before the case is called for argument, thirty copies of a printed brief, one of which shall, on application, be furnished to each of the counsel engaged upon the opposite side.

2. This brief shall contain, in the order here stated—

(1) A concise abstract, or statement of the case, presenting succinctly the questions involved and the manner in which they are raised.

(2) A specification of the errors relied upon, which, in cases brought up by writ of error, shall set out separately and particularly each error asserted and intended to be urged; and in cases brought up by appeal the specification shall state, as particularly as may be, in what the decree is alleged to be erroneous. When the error alleged is to the admission or to the rejection of evidence, the specification shall quote the full substance of the evidence admitted or rejected. When the error alleged is to the charge of the court, the specification shall set out the part referred to totidem verbis, whether it be instructions given or instructions refused. When the error alleged is to a ruling upon the report of a master, the specification shall state the exception to the report and the action of the court upon it.

(3) A brief of the argument, exhibiting a clear statement of the points of law or fact to be discussed, with a reference to the pages of the record and the authorities relied upon in support of each point. When a statute of a state is cited, so much thereof as may be deemed necessary to the decision of the case shall be printed at length.

3. The counsel for a defendant in error or an appellee shall file with the clerk thirty printed copies of his argument, at least one week before the case is called for hearing. His brief shall be of like character with that required of the plaintiff in error or appellant, except that no specification of errors shall be required, and no statement of the case, unless that presented by the plaintiff in error or appellant is controverted.

4. When there is no assignment of errors, as required by § 997 of the Revised Statutes, counsel will not be heard, except at the request of the court; and errors not specified according to this rule will be disregarded; but the court, at its option, may notice a plain error not assigned or specified.

5. When, according to this rule, a plaintiff in error or an appellant is in default, the case may be dismissed on motion; and when a defendant in error or an appellee is in default, he will not be heard, except on consent of his adversary, and by request of the court.

6. When no oral argument is made for one of the parties, only one counsel will be heard for the adverse party.

7. No brief or printed argument, required by the foregoing sections, shall be filed by the clerk unless the same shall be accompanied by satisfactory proof of service upon counsel for the adverse party.

22.

ORAL ARGUMENTS.

1. The plaintiff in error or appellant in this court shall be entitled to open and conclude the argument of the case. But when there are cross appeals they shall be argued together as one case, and the plaintiff in the court below shall be entitled to open and conclude the argument.

2. Only two counsel will be heard for each party on the argument of a case.

3. One and one-half hours on each side will be allowed for the argument, and no more, without special leave of the court, granted before the argument begins. But in cases certified from the circuit court of appeals, cases involving solely the jurisdiction of the court below, and cases under the act of March 2, 1907, 34 Stat., 1246, forty-five minutes only on each side will be allowed for the argument unless the time be extended. The time thus allowed may be apportioned between the counsel on the same side, at their discretion; provided, always, that a fair opening of the case shall be made by the party having the opening and closing arguments.

23.

INTEREST.

1. In cases where a writ of error is prosecuted to this court, and the judgment of the inferior court is affirmed, the interest shall be calculated and levied, from the date of the judgment below until the same is paid, at the same rate that similar judgments bear interest in the courts of the state where such judgment is rendered.

2. In all cases where a writ of error shall delay the proceedings on the judgment of the inferior court, and shall appear to have been sued out merely for delay, damages at a rate not exceeding 10 per cent, in addition to interest, shall be awarded upon the amount of the judgment.

3. The same rule shall be applied to decrees for the payment of money in cases in equity, unless otherwise ordered by this court.

4. In cases in admiralty, damages and interest may be allowed if specially directed by the court.

24.

COSTS.

1. In all cases where any suit shall be dismissed in this court, costs shall be allowed to the defendant in error or appellee, unless otherwise agreed by the parties, except where the dismissal shall be for want of jurisdiction, when the costs incident to the motion to dismiss shall be allowed.

2. In all cases of affirmance of any judgment or decree in this court, costs shall be allowed to the defendant in error or appellee, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

3. In cases of reversal of any judgment or decree in this court, costs shall be allowed to the plaintiff in error or appellant, unless otherwise ordered by the court. The cost of the transcript of the record from the court below shall be a part of such costs, and be taxable in that court as costs in the case.

4. Neither of the foregoing sections shall apply to cases where the United States are a party; but in such cases no costs shall be allowed in this court for or against the United States.

5. In all cases of the dismissal of any suit in this court, it shall be the duty of the clerk to issue a mandate, or other proper process, in the nature of a procedendo, to the court below, for the purpose of informing such court of the proceedings in this court, so that further proceedings may be had in such court as to law and justice may appertain.

6. When costs are allowed in this court, it shall be the duty of the clerk to insert the amount thereof in the body of the mandate, or other proper process, sent to the court below, and annex to the same the bill of items taxed in detail.

7. In pursuance of the act of March 3, 1883, authorizing and empowering this court to prepare a table of fees to be charged by the clerk of this court, the following table is adopted:

For docketing a case and filing and indorsing the transcript of the record, $5.

For entering an appearance, 25 cents.

For entering a continuance, 25 cents.

For filing a motion, order, or other paper, 25 cents.

For entering any rule, or for making or copying any record or other paper, 20 cents per folio of each one hundred words.

For transferring each case to a subsequent docket and indexing the same, $1.

For entering a judgment or decree, $1.

For every search of the records of the court, $1.

For a certificate and seal, $2.

For receiving, keeping, and paying money in pursuance of any statute or order of court, 2 per cent on the amount so received, kept, and paid.

For an admission to the bar and certificate under seal, $10.

For preparing the record or a transcript thereof for the printer, indexing the same, supervising the printing, and distributing the printed copies to the justices, the reporter, the law library, and the parties or their counsel, 15 cents per folio; but when the necessary printed copies of the record, as printed for the use of the lower court, shall be furnished, the fee for supervising shall be 5 cents per folio.

For making a manuscript copy of the record, when required under rule 10, 20 cents per folio, but nothing in addition for supervising the printing.

For issuing a writ of error and accompanying papers, $5.

For a mandate or other process, $5.

For filing briefs, $5 for each party appearing.

For every printed copy of any opinion of the court or any justice thereof, certified under seal, $2.

25.

OPINIONS OF THE COURT.

1. All opinions delivered by the court shall, immediately upon the delivery thereof, be handed to the clerk to be printed. And it shall be the duty of the clerk to cause the same to be forthwith printed, and to deliver a copy to the reporter as soon as the same shall be printed.

2. The original opinions of the court shall be filed with the clerk of this court for preservation.

3. Opinions printed under the supervision of the justices delivering the same need not be copied by the clerk into a book of records; but at the end of each term the clerk shall cause such printed opinions to be bound in a substantial manner into one or more volumes, and when so bound they shall be deemed to have been recorded.

26.

CALL AND ORDER OF THE DOCKET.

1. The court, on the second day in each term, will commence calling the cases for argument in the order in which they stand on the docket, and proceed from day to day during the term in the same order (except as hereinafter provided); and if the parties, or either of them, shall be ready when the case is called, the same will be heard; and if neither party shall be ready to proceed in the argument, the case shall be continued to the next term of the court unless some good and satisfactory reason to the contrary shall be shown to the court.

2. Ten cases only shall be considered as liable to be called on each day during the term. But on the coming in of the court on each day the entire number of such ten cases will be called, with a view to the disposition of such of them as are not to be argued.

3. Criminal cases may be advanced by leave of the court on motion of either party.

4. Cases once adjudicated by this court upon the merits, and again brought up by writ of error or appeal, may be advanced by leave of the court on motion of either party.

5. Revenue and other cases in which the United States are concerned, which also involve or affect some matter of general public interest, or which may be entitled to precedence under the provisions of any act of Congress, may also by leave of the court be advanced on motion of the Attorney General.

6. All motions to advance cases must be printed, and must contain a brief statement of the matter involved, with the reasons for the application.

7. No other case will be taken up out of the order on the docket, or be set down for any particular day, except under special and peculiar circumstances to be shown to the court.

8. Two or more cases, involving the same question, may, by the leave of the court, be heard together, but they must be argued as one case.

9. If, after a case has been passed, the parties shall desire to have it heard, they may file with the clerk their joint request to that effect, and the case shall then be by him reinstated for call ten cases after that under argument, or next to be called at the end of the day the request is filed. If the parties will not unite in such a request, either may move to take up the case, and it shall then be assigned to such place upon the docket as the court may direct.

10. No stipulation to pass a case will be recognized as binding upon the court. A case can only be so passed upon application made and leave granted in open court.

27.

ADJOURNMENT.

The court will, at every term, announce on what day it will adjourn at least ten days before the time which shall be fixed upon, and the court will take up no case for argument, nor receive any case upon printed briefs, within three days next before the day fixed upon for adjournment.

28.

DISMISSING CASES IN VACATION.

Whenever the plaintiff and defendant in a writ of error pending in this court, or the appellant and appellee in an appeal, shall in vacation, by their attorneys of record, sign and file with the clerk an agreement in writing directing the case to be dismissed, and specifying the terms on which it is to be dismissed as to costs, and shall pay to the clerk any fees that may be due to him, it shall be the duty of the clerk to enter the case dismissed, and to give to either party requesting it a copy of the agreement filed; but no mandate or other process shall issue without an order of the court.

29.

SUPERSEDEAS.

Supersedeas bonds in the district courts and circuit courts of appeals must be taken, with good and sufficient security, that the plaintiff in error or appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, and answer all damages and costs if he fail to make his plea good. Such indemnity, where the judgment or decree is for the recovery of money not otherwise secured, must be for the whole amount of the judgment or decree, including just damages for delay, costs and interest on the appeal; but in all suits where the property in controversy necessarily follows the event of the suit, as in real actions, replevin, and in suits on mortgages, or where the property is in the custody of the marshal under admiralty process, as in ease of capture or seizure, or where the proceeds thereof, or a bond for the value thereof, is in the custody or control of the court, indemnity in all such cases is only required in an amount sufficient to secure the sum recovered for the use and detention of the property, and the costs of the suit, and just damages for delay, and costs and interest on the appeal.

56 L. ed.

30.

REHEARING.

A petition for rehearing after judgment can be presented only at the term at which judgment is entered, unless by special leave granted during the term; and must be printed and briefly and distinctly state its grounds, and be supported by certificate of counsel; and will not be granted, or permitted to be argued, unless a justice who concurred in the judgment desires it, and a majority of the court so determines.

31.

FORM OF PRINTED RECORDS AND BRIEFS.

All records, arguments, and briefs, printed for the use of the court, must be in such form and size that they can be conveniently bound together, so as to make an ordinary octavo volume; and, as well as all quotations contained therein, and the covers thereof, must be printed in clear type (never smaller than small pica) and on unglazed paper.

32.

WRITS OF ERROR AND APPEALS IN CASES INVOLVING JURISDICTION OF LOWER COURT.

Cases brought to this court by writ of error or appeal, where the only question in issue is the question of the jurisdiction of the court below, will be advanced on motion, and heard under the rules prescribed by rule 6, in regard to motions to dismiss writs of error and appeals.

33.

MODELS, DIAGRAMS, AND EXHIBITS OF MATERIAL.

1. Models, diagrams, and exhibits of material forming part of the evidence taken in the court below, in any case pending in this court, on writ of error or appeal, shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of this court at least one month before the case is heard or submitted.

2. All models, diagrams, and exhibits of material, placed in the custody of the marshal for the inspection of the court on the hearing of a case, must be taken away by the parties within one month after the case is decided. When this is not done, it shall be the duty of the marshal to notify the counsel in the case, by mail or otherwise, of the requirements of this rule; and if the articles are not removed within a reasonable time after the notice is given, he shall destroy them or make such other disposition of them as to him may seem best.

34.

CUSTODY OF PRISONERS ON HABEAS CORPUS.

1. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge declining to grant the writ of habeas corpus, the custody of the prisoner shall not be disturbed.

2. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge discharging the writ after it has been issued, the prisoner shall be remanded to the custody from which he was taken by the writ, or shall, for good cause shown, be detained in custody of the court or judge, or be enlarged upon recognizance as hereinafter provided.

3. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge discharging the prisoner, he shall be enlarged upon recognizance, with surety, for appearance to answer the judgment of the appellate court, except where, for special reasons, sureties ought not to be required.

35.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

1. Where an appeal or a writ of error is taken from a district court direct to this court, under § 238 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, chapter 231, the plaintiff in error or appellant shall file with the clerk of the court below, with his petition for the writ of error or appeal, an assignment of errors, which shall set out separately and particularly each error asserted and intended to be urged. No writ of error or appeal shall be allowed until such assignment of errors shall have been filed. When the error alleged is to the admission or to the rejection of evidence, the assignment of errors shall quote the full substance of the evidence admitted or rejected. When the error alleged is to the charge of the court, the assignment of errors shall set out the part referred to totidem verbis, whether it be in instructions given or in instructions refused. Such assignment of errors shall form part of the transcript of the record, and be printed with it. When this is not done counsel will not be heard, except at the request of the court; and errors not assigned according to this rule will be disregarded, but the court, at its option, may notice a plain error not assigned.

2. The plaintiff in error or appellant shall cause the record to be printed, according to the provisions of §§ 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 9, of rule 10.

36.

APPEALS AND WRITS OF ERROR FROM DISTRICT COURTS.

1. An appeal or a writ of error from a district court direct to this court, in the cases provided for in §§ 238 and 252 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, chapter 231, may be allowed, in term time or in vacation, by any justice of this court, or by any circuit judge within his circuit, or by any district judge within his district, and the proper security be taken and the citation signed by him, and he may also grant a supersedeas and stay of execution or of proceedings, pending such writ of error or appeal.

2. Where such writ of error is allowed in the case of a conviction of an infamous crime, or in any other criminal case in which it will lie under § 238, the district court, or any judge thereof, shall have power, after the citation is served, to admit the accused to bail in such amount as may be fixed.

37.

CASES FROM CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS.

1. Where, under § 239 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, chapter 231, a circuit court of appeals shall certify to this court a question or proposition of law concerning which it desires the instruction of this court for its proper decision, the certificate shall contain a proper statement of the facts on which such question or proposition of law arises.

2. If application is thereupon made to this court that the whole record and cause may be sent up to it for its consideration, the party making such application shall, as a part thereof, furnish this court with a certified copy of the whole of said record.

3. Where application is made to this court to require a case to be certified to it for its review and determination, a certified copy of the entire record of the case in the circuit court of appeals shall be furnished to this court by the applicant, as part of the application.

38.

INTEREST, COSTS, AND FEES.

The provisions of rules 23 and 24 of this court, in regard to interest and costs and fees, shall apply to writs of error and appeals and reviews under the provisions of §§ 238, 239, 240, and 241 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, chapter 231.

39.

MANDATES.

Mandates shall issue as of course after the expiration of thirty days from the day the judgment or decree is entered, unless the time is enlarged by order of the court, or of a justice thereof when the court is not in session, but during the term.

40.

PRACTICE IN CASES FROM CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS.

The provisions of these rules relating to the practice on direct writs of error to and appeals from the district courts shall also be deemed to relate to and cover the practice on writs of error to and appeals from the circuit courts of appeals.

INDEX TO RULES OF THE SUPREME COURT.

	Rules.	Sec.	Page.		Rules.	Sec.	Page.
Adjournment	27	—	1303	Exhibits of material	33	—	1303
Admiralty, record in	8	6	1298	Fees, table of clerk's	24	7	1302
Appeals in cases involving jurisdiction of district court	32	—	1303	attachment for	10	8	1298
Appeals under act of March 3, 1911	36	—	1304	security for	10	1	1298
Appearance of counsel	9	3	1298	Habeas corpus, custody of prisoners on	34	—	1303
for plaintiff in error or appellant, no	16	—	1300	Interest	23	—	1301 defendant in error or appellee, no	17	—	1300	in admiralty	23	4	1301
either party, no	18	—	1300	in equity	23	3	1301
Argument, oral	22	—	1301	at law	23	1	1301
order of	22	1	1301	under act of March 3, 1911	38	—	1304
time allowed for	22	3	1301	Jurisdiction—cases involving district court	32	—	1303
on motions	6	2	1296	Law library	7	—	1297
printed	20	—	1300	mode of obtaining books from, by counsel	7	1	1297
submission on	20	1	1300	clerk to deposit records in of conference-room	7	2	1297
not received after submission	20	4	1300	Mandate in case dismissed ..	24	5	1302
Assignment of errors	21	2, 4	1300	in vacation	28	—	1303
under act of March 3, 1911	35	1	1304	Mandates	39	—	1304
Attachment for clerk's fees ..	10	8	1298	Motion day	6	7	1297
Attorneys, admission of	2	1	1296	Motions	6	—	1296
oath of	2	2	1296	to be in writing	6	1	1296
Bail, when and how granted ..	36	2	1304	notice of	6	3, 4	1296
Bill of exceptions	4	—	1296	time allowed for argument ..	6	2	1296
Briefs	21	—	1300	to affirm	6	5	1296
contents of	21	2	1300	to dismiss	6	4	1296
time for filing by plaintiff in error or appellant	21	1	1300	Motions, notice, and service of briefs	6	4	1296
defendant in error or appellee	21	3	1301	submission of	6	4	1296
form of printed	31	—	1303	to advance	26	6	1302
not received after argument ..	20	4	1300	cases once adjudicated ..	26	4	1302
Cases involving same question may be heard together	26	8	1302	criminal cases	26	3	1302
passed, how restored to call for dismissal of, in vacation ..	26	9	1302	revenue cases	26	5	1302
Certiorari	14	—	1299	cases involving jurisdiction of district court ..	32	—	1303
Circuit courts of appeals, cases from, etc.	37	—	1304	Opinions of the Supreme Court court below to be annexed to record	25	—	1302
practice in	40	—	1304	to record	8	2	1297
Citation, service of	8	5	1297	Original papers not to be taken from court room or clerk's office	1	2	1295
Clerk	1	—	1295	from court below	8	4	1297
Clerk's fees, table of	24	7	1302	Parties, death of	15	—	1299
attachment for	10	8	1298	Plaintiff in error or appellant, no appearance of	16	—	1300
deposit for	10	1	1298	Practice	3	—	1296
Conference-room library	7	3	1297	Process, form of	5	1	1296
Costs of printing record	10	2, 6, 7	1298	service of	5	2, 3	1296
how taxed	24	—	1301	Record	8	—	1297
none recoverable in cases where United States is party	24	4	1301	return of	8	1	1297
Counsel, admission of	2	1	1296	designated record from court below	8	1	1297 appearance of	9	3	1298	to contain all necessary papers in full	8	3	1297
no appearance of	18	—	1300	opinion of court below ..	8	2	1297
two only to be heard on argument	22	2	1301	translations of papers in foreign language	11	—	1299
time allowed for argument ..	22	3	1301	printed under supervision of clerk	10	5	1298
motions	6	2	1296	printed form of	31	—	1303
Custody of prisoners on habeas corpus	34	—	1303	printing parts of	10	9	1298
Damages for delay	23	2	1301	cost of	10	2	1298
Death of a party	15	—	1299	certiorari for diminution of in admiralty cases	14	—	1299
defendant in error or appellee after judgment in lower court	15	3	1299	in cases coming up under act of March 3, 1911 ..	8	6	1298
Defendant, no appearance of ..	17	—	1300	how printed	37	—	1304
Deposit for clerk's fees	10	1	1298	Rehearing	35	2	1304
Dismissal in vacation	28	—	1303	Representatives of deceased parties appearing	30	—	1303
Docket, call of	26	—	1302	not appearing	15	1	1299
day-call	26	2	1302	Return to writ of error	15	2	1299
Docketing cases	9	—	1298	day	8	5	1297
by plaintiff in error or appellant	9	1	1298	Revenue cases advanced on motion	26	5	1302
defendant in error or appellee	9	2	1298	Second term, neither party ready for trial	19	—	1300
Errors, assignment of	21	4	1301	Security for clerk's fees	10	1	1298
specification of	21	2	1300	Subpoena, service of	5	3	1296
Evidence, new how taken	12	1	1299	Supersedeas	29	—	1303
in admiralty	12	2	1299	Translations	11	—	1299
In the record, objections to ..	13	—	1299	Writ of error, return to ..	8	—	1297
Exceptions, bill of	4	—	1296	in cases involving jurisdiction of district courts ..	32	—	1203
§ 6 L. ed.				under act of March 3, 1911 ..	36	—	1304

APPENDIX VI.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is ordered by the court that rule 36 of the rules of this court be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

36.

1. An appeal or a writ of error from a district court direct to this court, in the cases provided for in §§ 238 and 252 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, chapter 231, may be allowed, in term time or in vacation, by any justice of this court, or by any circuit judge assigned to the district court, or by any district judge within his district, and the proper security be taken and the citation signed by him, and he may also grant a supersedeas and stay of execution or of proceedings pending such writ of error or appeal.

2. Where such writ of error is allowed in the case of a conviction of an infamous crime, or in any other criminal case in which it will lie under § 238, the district court, or any judge thereof, or any justice of this court, or any circuit judge assigned to the district court, shall have power, after the citation is served, to admit the accused to bail in such amount as may be fixed.

February 26, 1912.

APPENDIX VII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is ordered that rule 21 of the Rules of Practice of this court be amended by adding thereto the following section:

"8. Every brief of more than twenty pages shall contain on its front fly leaves a subject index with page references, the subject index to be supplemented by a list of all cases referred to, alphabetically arranged, together with references to pages where the cases are cited."

April 1, 1912.

APPENDIX VIII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It ordered by the court that § 3 of rule 37 be amended so as to read as follows:

"3. Where an application is submitted to this court for a writ of certiorari to review a decision of a circuit court of appeals or any other court, it shall be necessary for the petitioner to furnish as an exhibit to the petition a certified copy of the entire transcript of record of the case, including the proceedings in the court to which the writ of certiorari is asked to be directed. The petition shall contain only a summary and short statement of the matter involved, and the general reasons relied on for the allowance of the writ. A failure to comply with this provision will be deemed a sufficient reason for denying the petition. Thirty printed copies of such petition and of any brief deemed necessary shall be filed. Notice of the date of submission of the petition, together with a copy of the petition and brief, if any, in support of the same, shall be served on the counsel for the respondent at least two weeks before such date in all cases except where the counsel to be notified resides west of the Rocky mountains, in which cases the time shall be at least three weeks. The brief for the respondent, if any, shall be filed at least three days before the date fixed for the submission of the petition. Oral argument will not be permitted on such petitions, and no petition will be received within three days next before the day fixed upon for the adjournment of the court for the term."

June 10, 1912.

APPENDIX IX.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER

It is ordered by the court that the mandates in all cases decided prior to January 1, 1912, which, under the law as it existed before that time, should have been directed to the circuit courts of the United States, be directed to the proper district courts of the United States.

January 11, 1912.

APPENDIX X.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

The Chief Justice said:

"Gentlemen of the Bar, it is my privilege to announce that the President of the United States has filled the vacancy on this Bench by the appointment of Mr. Mahlon Pitney, of New Jersey. Mr. Pitney is present and ready to take the oath of office. The clerk will read his commission."

The commission was then read and the oath administered by the clerk, and Mr. Justice Pitney took his seat on the Bench.

March 18, 1912.

APPENDIX XI.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

There having been an Associate Justice of this court appointed since the commencement of this term,

It is ordered that the following allotment be made of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of this court among the circuits, agreeably to the act of Congress in such case made and provided, and that such allotment be entered of record, viz.:

For the First Circuit, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Associate Justice.

For the Second Circuit, Charles E. Hughes, Associate Justice.

For the Third Circuit, Mahlon Pitney, Associate Justice.

For the Fourth Circuit, Edward D. White, Chief Justice.

For the Fifth Circuit, Joseph R. Lamar, Associate Justice.

For the Sixth Circuit, William R. Day, Associate Justice.

For the Seventh Circuit, Horace H. Lurton, Associate Justice.

For the Eighth Circuit, Willis Van Devanter, Associate Justice.

For the Ninth Circuit, Joseph McKenna, Associate Justice.

March 18, 1912.

APPENDIX XII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

The reporter having represented that, owing to the number of decisions at the present term, it would be impracticable to put the reports in one volume,

It is therefore now here ordered that he publish an additional volume in this year, pursuant to § 226 of the act entitled, "An Act to Codify, Revise, and Amend the Laws Relating to the Judiciary," approved March 3, 1911.

March 18, 1912.

APPENDIX XIII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

ORDER.

It is now here ordered by the court that all the cases on the docket not decided, and all the other business of the term not disposed of, be, and the same are hereby, continued until the next term.

June 10, 1912.

Ref 348.73 Un35

United States. Supreme Court.

Cases argued and decided in the Supreme Court of the

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

3 1867 00062 0109

